Mrs. Roots, at the request of the Bishop, sailed from this country on April 9. She was stopped in Japan by a cable from the Bishop. We now have a cable from Mrs. Roots saying that with the Bishop's permission she is proceeding to Shanghai, but her future movements are uncertain as yet.

Bishop Roots, writing on April 4, said:

"Really, I feel, after what I have been through, that we are in for something quite as bad as the Boxer year, and perhaps a good deal worse, in so far as the persecution of the Christian Church is concerned."

Bishop Graves, writing on April 18, says:

"On the morning of the 15th I ordained Mr. Wei Hsipeng to the priesthood in St. Peter's Church, Sinza. All our Chinese clergy in Shanghai were present, and Bishop Huntington, who ordained Mr. Wei deacon, acting for me last year, was also in the chancel and read the Gospel. The sermon was preached by the Rev. H. Y. Yao, rector of St. Paul's Church, Shanghai. His congregation has been ejected from the new church and they are holding services, as they used to, in the little chapel on Shantung Road."

So you see the life and work of the Church still go on, in spite of the conditions that give so much present anxiety.

National Conference on Social Service.

The seventh annual National Conference on Social Service of the Episcopal Church, held in connection with the National Conference of Social Work, meeting in Des Moines in May, made a good contribution to the social thinking and the social enthusiasm of its members, who now have the difficult task of communicating it to those whom they represented.

The names registered in the Church Conference, about one hundred and forty in all, were from more than thirty Dioceses, including Maine, Florida, Texas, Louisiana, North Dakota, Arizona and California.

The Church Conference consisted of three long afternoon meetings with papers and discussion; four luncheon meetings with speakers; and the church services, an early celebration each day and a service Saturday night led by Dean Robbins, who also preached at the later service on Sunday.

During the days when the Church Conference was held there were about fifty meetings of the Conference of Social Work, round tables, lectures and discussions.

Dr. John A. Lapp, president of the Conference on Social Work, told the Church Conference that there are twelve million people in this country who receive some form of relief or are precariously close to needing it. This cost three billion dollars in the United States last year. More than 90 per cent of these people are in need through causes which cannot be controlled by individuals or by small groups, causes such as sickness, war, insanity, unemployment, the fixing of wages according to supply and demand of commodities rather than according to the cost of living.

The motives for Christian social service are not something that may or may not be added on to Christian faith. They are implicit in Christian doctrine. Dean Lathrop's statement to the conference emphasized this.

A University professor, Dr. Stuart Queen, presented the idea that religion, as he understood it supplied no adequate motives for doing social work. The conference agreed that the motives he presented were certainly inadequate, but felt that they did not represent religion. Dr. Queen outlined what may be described as a mechanistic conception of spiritual life.

The Rev. E. S. White and a number of others replied to Dr. Queen's paper, suggesting among other things that love implies an intelligent diagnosis of men's ills and the cousequent treatment of them; that sin is the refusal of a Christian to mold his life after the example of his Lord; that modern social work agrees with the Christian belief in the value of the individual; that because we are all God's children we want as far as possible to enter into other men's lives, analyzing their difficulties and putting ourselves at their service. Dr. Queen was given the last word, but gallantly used it to summarize a number of points in which the two sides agreed.

Dean Robbins, at the service on Saturday night, spoke of the sending out of the seventy and their return (St. Luke 10) as one of the most significant passages for social workers, emphasizing the joyful confidence of our Lord. We may share His confidence as we share His life.

The "peaceful strife of science" as the moral equivalent of war was urged by Dean Robbins in his sermon Sunday morning.

Next year's conference will be held in Memphis, Tenn. probably in May.

Officers of the conference for the coming year are: Dean Lathrop, President; the Rev. Messrs. C. B. K. Weed, of New Orleans, and Cary Montague, of Richmond, Vice-Presidents; the Rev. LeRoy Burroughs, of Ames, Iowa, Secretary.

Mail To Mexico.

The Bishop of Mexico has much difficulty and expense in connection with paying duty on packages sent to him. Recently he paid several times the value of the contents of a package on which there was not only duty, but a fine because it had been sent first-class and not declared. It is best not to send packages. Money, which is always useful, is best sent as a United States check and not a postal money order.

Commencement Exercises at Two Church Institutions.

The thirty-fourth annual commencement of the Church Training and Deaconess House, one of the institutions of the Episcopal Church in Philadelphia for the training of Church workers and educating women to serve as Deaconesses, was held on Tuesday afternoon, May 31, in Old St. Peter's Church, Philadelphia. The Rev. E. M. Jefferys, rector of the church, recently appointed warden of the institution by Bishop Garland, had charge of the services. Dr. William H. Jefferys, Superintendent of the Philadelphia City Mission, made the address at the commencement exercises and Bishop Garland awarded the diplomas.

Dr. Charles E. Beury, President of Temple University, was the speaker at the fifth annual commencement of the Church Farm School, at Glen Loch, on Friday afternoon, June 3, at which Bishop Garland awarded the diplomas to the graduating class.

The Church Farm School is one of the Diocesan Institutions of the Episcopal Church, founded by the Rev. Charles W. Schreiner, its present Headmaster, to help boys who might otherwise not have a chance. The school now comprises approximately one hundred boys. The class day exercises were held on the school grounds along the Lincoln Highway beyond Paoli, Friday morning. The commencement exercises in the afternoon were held in "Greystock Hall", the largest of the group of school buildings.

Week of Prayer For the World Conference.

The week of May 29 was observed as a Week of Prayer for the World Conference on Faith and Order and noonday services were held every day during the week at St. John's Church. The rector, the Rev. Robert Johnston, conducted the service on Monday and other clergymen of the diocese took charge on the other days.

Reorganization of the Executive Council.

A reorganization of the departments of the Diocesan Executive Council has been effected in accordance with changes in the personnel of the Council itself and resolutions adopted by the recent Diocesan Convention. This reorganization temporarily discontinues the department of publicity, and this automatically makes it necessary to discontinue the publication of "The Church Militant", the diocesan paper. The name of the department of social service, institutions and city missions has been changed to the department of social welfare.

The Rev. D. W. Curran has been elected the executive secretary of the council and secretary of the field department and the department of missions.

The departments of the council are now arranged as follows:

Field department—the Rev. Dr. Z. B. Phillips, the Rev. C. M. Young, the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, the Rev. C. W. Whitmore, Dr. H. B. Bowen, Maj. Gen. John A. LeJeune, U. S. M. C.; the Rev. Clyde Brown, Dr. L. W. Glazebrook, E. L. Stock, William Stanley, Mrs. William D. Hurd.

Department of finance—H. L. Rust, Henry P. Blair, Stephen E. Kramer, Hugh T. Nelson, Harry K. Boss, Byron S. Adams, Dr. Thomas B. Symons.

Department of missions and church extension—the Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston, the Rev. Dr. D. W. Curran, Stephen T. Kramer, the Rev. Dr. Z. B. Phillips, the Rev. Thomas W. Cooke, the Rev. Clarence W. Whitmore, the Rev. Thomas J. Brown, the Rev. Dr. Thomas D. Windiate, Dr. Thomas B. Symons, Byron S. Adams, the Rev. Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, Dr. William C. Rives, E. L. Stock, Mrs. Alexander Mackay-Smith, Mrs. Archibald Small.

Department of religious education—the Rev. Dr. W. L. DeVries, the Rev. Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, William Stanley, the Rev. A. A. McCallum, the Rev. Dr. Ronalds Taylor, the Rev. Clarence P. Parker, the Rev. E. M. Thompson, Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson, Dr. A. T. Gregory, William C. Beck, the Rev. Gerald V. Berry, the Rev. Calvert E. Buck, Miss Emma W. Abbott, Miss Clara W. Herbert.

Department of social welfare—the Rev. Thomas W. Cooke, the Rev. Dr. Thomas D. Windiate, the Rev. C. M. Young, the Rev. Thomas J. Brown, Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen.

Dinner in Honor of Bishop Freeman.

About five hundred men attended the fellowship dinner in honor of Bishop Freeman on Thursday, May 26, at the City Club, arranged under the auspices of the Laymen's Organizations and Men's Clubs. The dinner was begun by a presentation of colors and an invocation by the Rev. George F. Dudley. Mr. Arthur C. Houghton, president of the Men's Club of St. Stephen's Church, was toastmaster, and Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen was honorary chairman. Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, delivered an address and this was followed by an address by Bishop Freeman. Dinner and addresses were followed by a short fellowship period, when men were given an opportunity to meet those from other parishes, and the whole occasion was regarded as such a success that it was voted to hold a similar dinner annually.

The Open-air Evensong services for the season at Washington Cathedral were scheduled to begin on Sunday, May 29, but on account of weather conditions, it was necessary to hold the service in Bethlehem Chapel. The sermon on this occasion was the bacclaureate sermon for St. Alban's School for Boys, and was preached by the Rev. C. H. Dickens, Chief Chaplain of the United States Navy. Immediately after the service the dedication of a window in St. Alban's School was conducted by Dean Bratenahl for the class of 1927. This is in accordance with the custom at St. Alban's of each graduating class dedicating a window in the school.

Daughters of the King.

The twentieth diocesan assembly of the Order of the Daughters of the King, in the diocese was held in Christ Church, Norfolk, on Thursday, May 19, 1927.

There were two celebrations of the Holy Communion, one at 7:30 A. M., at which the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of Christ Church, joined the Daughters of the King; and the other at ten o'clock, at which time the Rt. Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese, was the celebrant.

The Prayers of the Order were read by the Rev. Philip F. Tilghman, priest-in-charge of Christ Church, and a Quiet Hour Service was conducted by the Rev. Frank A. Ridout.

The Chapter reports showed the Daughters to be actively engaged in every department of the Church's work, and the report of the Extension Secretary told of the formation of two new Chapters during the past year.

The special features were an address by the Rt. Rev. A. C. Thomson, and a conference led by Mrs. A. A. Birney, of Washington, D. C., the National President of the Order.

Mrs. John A. Scott and Miss Blanche M. Mills were elected delegates to the next Synod, and all of the officers were unanimously reelected.

The sum of $25 was contributed to the American Red Cross, for the benefit of the flood sufferers.

The delegates to the Assembly and visitors were guests of Christ Church Chapter, at a supper which was served in the parish house.

The evening service was held in the Church at eight o'clock, the speakers on this occasion being the Rev. George Oscar Watts, rector of St. John's Church, Hampton, who has recently come into the diocese, and Bishop Tucker. The music was furnished by the vested choir, of men and boys, of Christ Church.

The next assembly will be held at St. Paul's Church, Norfolk.

The Church Army Crusaders.

Thirty Crusaders of the Church Army, known in England as Gypsy Evangelists, united, Sunday, May 22, at the invitation of the rector, the Rev. Henry Darlington, D. D., in an open-air vesper service on the building site of the new Church of the Heavenly Rest and Chapel of the Beloved Disciple.

These thirty young uniformed Soldiers of the Church, accompanied by the clergy and Boy Scout troop of Heavenly Rest, marched in procession from the Chapel of the Beloved Disciple, Sixty-seven East Eighty-ninth Street, where the Heavenly Rest Parish is at present holding its services, to the site of the new building, where they held a short song service on the builders' platform, which bridges the foundations for the new church. Following the song service, they each spoke for a few moments, telling a little of their own experiences by way of a service of witness.

Since arriving in this country two weeks ago, these young men have been scattered throughout New England, New York State and along the western banks of the Hudson, holding ten-day missions.

The open-air service was in charge of Captain Casey, assisted by Captains Greenwood and Sinfield.

The principal speaker was the Rev. Captain Prior, oldest Captain in the English Church Army and originator of the Pew Clinic system of Church service among undergraduates in Oxford and Cambridge.

Captain Prior outlined the purpose of the Church Army as a crusade to awaken the interest of laymen in their Church.

Immediately after the service of witness, the entire group gathered at the present Heavenly Rest Parish House, where they were guests of the men's organizations of the parish at lunch.

For the regular evening service at this church Captain B. Frank Mountford, executive head of the Church Army in America, preached on "The Menace of the City". Eight of the Church Army men sang with Captain Turner.

Other services by groups of the new American contingent of the Church Army on Sunday, were held in the morning at eleven o'clock, with the following leaders:

Church of the Holy Apostles, Captain T. Greenwood; Ascension Memorial Church, Captain Hunt; Zion Church, Dobbs' Ferry, N. Y., Captain W. Jarvis; St. Peter's Church, Captain George Turner.

Captain Casey conducted a service for the old people at the City Home in the Klondike Auditorium, at the invitation of Chaplain Sidney N. Ussher, of the Episcopal City Mission Society. Captain Mountford spoke at four o'clock at St. Thomas' Church.

In the evening the Rev. Captain P. Prior took the trumpeters from the Church of the Heavenly Rest to the Seamen's Church Institute.

While Captain Mountford was speaking at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Captain Casey spoke at Grace Church.

Among the personnel chosen for the American pilgrimage are eleven men who were here on the original crusade two years ago, and are well known among Church circles. They include Captains Casey, Mountford, Greenwood, Sinfield, Atkinson, Ward, Turner, Slater, Buchanan, Jarvis, and Rogers.

New members of the contingent include Captains Bloxham, Ramsey, Lewis, Forshaw, Cann, Usher, Williamson, Hunt, Barker, Harding, Seaton, Williams, Jackson, Gracey, Peters, Abraham, William, Conway and Wilde.

Florence Nightingale Memorial Service.

A week devoted to remembrance of the world's great nurses, notably Florence Nightingale, reached its climax in one of the most impressive services for which the Cathedral of St. John the Divine has ever been the setting, when more than two thousand nurses marched in procession in the Third Annual Florence Nightingale Memorial Service, held Sunday, May 15, under the auspices of St. Barnabas' Guild for Nurses.

Directing the procession was Miss Florence Johnson, head of Red Cross nurses in New York City, who was in charge of the Red Cross Nurses' Service of the Atlantic Division during the war and was responsible for equipment and mobilization of ten thousand nurses, receiving a Florence Nightingale Medal from the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Among the nursing organizations represented were those of the American Legion. Visiting Nurses' Association, Teachers' College and Red Cross, as well as training schools of all the major hospitals of Manhattan, Westchester and the Bronx.

The entire service was held under the auspices of St. Barnabas' Guild for Nurses, an organization designed to promote the social and spiritual well-being of the nurses in the cause of the highest professional and personal standards. Nurses of every faith are eligible.

At the service the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., Bishop of New York, at whose invitation the service was held, greeted the nurses.

The special speaker of the evening was the Rev. Robert Norwood, D. C. L., rector of St. Bartholomew's Church.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Cathedral Day.

"Cathedral Day" has come to be an important event each year for the Sunday Schools of this diocese. About three thousand children, from a large proportion of the parishes, were present at the Cathedral in Garden City to keep this annual festival, Saturday, May 21. Most of the children came in the morning, and brought their lunch. During the morning and early afternoon there were ball-games and other athletic contests on the playing field of St. Paul's School and elsewhere on the spacious Cathedral property. At two-thirty a great procession was organized, and the numerous schools, each with its own banner, marched about the stately Cathedral, and assembled before a platform that had been erected under the trees near the chancel end of the church. The size of the assembly made it necessary to have the service out of doors. A microphone and amplifier carried the voices of the speakers to all the throng. After a brief service, Dean Sargent made an appropriate speech of welcome, and Bishop Stires made a congratulatory address. He was enthusiastic over the increase of the children's missionary offerings from about $15,000 last year to more than $26,000 this year. Banners were presented as awards to the schools that excelled, and certificates to those ranking second and third, in several particulars, as follows:

First, for the largest missionary offering, to St. Paul's, Flatbush. Second, All Saints, Great Neck. Third, Grace, Jamaica.

Second, for the largest per capita offering, St. Mary's, Hampton Bays. Second, St. Paul's, Flatbush. Third, St. Andrew's, Belle Harbor.

Third, for the largest increase over last year, to Epiphany, Brooklyn, 6564 per cent increase. Second, St. Thomas, Farmingdale, 257 per cent. Third, St. Philip's, Dyker Heights, Brooklyn, 415 per cent.

Fourth, for best attendance record, St. Jude's, Brooklyn, whose average attendance throughout the year was 95 per cent of the total enrollment. Second, Trinity, Roslyn, 89 per cent. Third, Incarnation, Brooklyn, 87 per cent.

The function was under the auspices of the Diocesan Board of Religious Education. The Rev. Charles H. Ricker, rector of Christ Church, Manhasset, and Chairman of the Board, was in charge.

All Saints' Chapel, Great Neck, Consecrated.

All Saints' Chapel, in the Parish of All Saints' Church, Great Neck, was consecrated on Friday, May 20, by the Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D., who also preached. Assisting the Bishop were the rector of the parish, the Rev. Kirkland Huske; the vicar of the chapel, the Rev. Wm. Grime; the churchwardens and vestrymen of the parish; the Ven. Roy F. Duffield, Archdeacon of Queens and Nassau, and ten clergymen of the vicinity. This chapel was built in 1924, about two miles southwest of the parish church, in a newly developing residential neighborhood. The building is said to be copied after a church in Rye, England. It is of stone and stucco, and seats about two hundred and twenty-five. There is a fine vicarage, and ample space on the property for a parish house.

"Little Helpers'" Annual Service.

The annual service of the Little Helpers, the "babies' branch" of the Woman's Auxiliary, was held Sunday afternoon, May 22, in Christ Church, Brooklyn. The Rev. George C. Groves, rector, officiated, and Bishop Stires made the address. Many delegations of little tots were present, with lettered banners indicating their several parishes. An interesting exhibit was shown in the parish hall, indicating the various missionary enterprises that had been helped by a share of the offerings of the Little Helpers. The offering this year was $428, with more to come.

Annual Local Assembly of the Daughters of the King.

The Daughters of the King held their annual assembly for this diocese in the Church of the Ascension, Rockville Center, on Ascension Day. The rector of the parish, the Rev. Frederick H. Handsfield, celebrated Holy Communion, the Rev. J. V. Cooper, of Lynbrook, assisting, and the Rev. Joseph R. Alten, rector of St. Luke's Church, Sea Cliff, preached. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. F. H. Handsfield; vice-president, Mrs. William S. Pettit, of Trinity Parish, Hewlett; secretary, Miss Eugenia Jeffers, of St. Thomas, Brooklyn; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Payne, of the Church of the Nativity, Brooklyn.

Memorial to Dr. Alsop.

A window in memory of the late Rev. Reese F. Alsop, D. D., is to be placed this fall in St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, of which he was rector for many years. The window is being made by Messrs. James Powell and Sons, of Whitefriars, London. It is described as a missionary window, which is most appropriate since Dr. Alsop was for many years a member of the Board of Missions, and deeply interested in every missionary project.

Notable Service at St. George's, Flushing.

In a local celebration of the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. George's Parish in Flushing, following the recent joint thanksgiving service of the four colonial parishes of this diocese, a program of unusual interest was devised and carried out. At the morning service on Sunday, May 15, a procession was formed in which were representatives of many local patriotic, fraternal and religious organizations, together with clergy of three parishes which originated as missions of St. George's, and diocesan and national officers. The daughter churches of the parish are: "All Saints, Bayside; Grace, Whitestone; and St. John's, Murray Hill. The vice-president of the National Council, the president of the standing committee of this diocese, a representative of Great Britain and the rector of the parish each made a brief address, and the historical sermon was preached by the Rev. Rockland T. Homans, rector of Grace Church, Jamaica.

Spring Festival at the C. C. F.

The Church Charity Foundation was visited by several hundred members of the Diocese on Thursday, May 19, the occasion being the annual spring festival under the auspices of the Woman's Board. The day's program began with a brief service in St. John's Chapel, the Rev. J. Clarence Jones, S. T. D., delivering a brief address. Luncheon was served to nearly three hundred visitors in the Home for the Aged. Various sales tables were well patronized. Supper-time found many more visitors ready to be served. During the afternoon many people took the opportunity to view the new chapel (Walter Gibb Memorial) now nearing completion, and its beauty of proportion and detail were greatly admired. The proceeds of the day were for beautifying the grounds and for certain new cement walks, etc. About $2,000 is believed to have been realized.

Bishop Stires made an official visit to the C. C. F. on the same day, and in St. John's Chapel confirmed four pupil nurses, and five children; and one woman patient in St. John's Hospital.

Two Hundredth Anniversary of Queen Caroline Parish.

The two hundredth anniversary of the founding of Queen Caroline Parish, Howard County, was fittingly marked and celebrated at the mother church in the parish, Christ Church, May 27. Religious services were held in the morning, beginning with the celebration of the Holy Communion. Many of the diocesan clergy were in the procession. Over a score of patriotic and fraternal societies were represented in the exercises of the afternoon. The Rt. Rev. John G. Murray, D. D., the Rt. Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, D. D., and Governor Albert C. Riitchie were also present. The rector of the parish is the Rev. G. C. Montgomery.

Trinity Church, Ten Hills: An effort is being made at Trinity Church, Ten Hills, Baltimore, to liquidate the entire debt upon the parish house which will make possible an early consideration to the plans for building a new church. Trinity Church is in the center of one of the most promising fields of growth near Baltimore.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. F. A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop.

Death of Dr. Shields.

The Rev. Van Winder Shields, D. D., rector emeritus of St. John's Church, Jacksonville, Fla., died at his home in Jacksonville on Friday, May 13, the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, in his seventy-eighth year.

Funeral services were held from St. John's Church on Sunday afternoon, May 15, conducted by the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, Bishop of Florida, the Rev. Menard Doswell, present rector of St. John's, and the Rev. Ambler M. Blackford, of the Church Home for Children of St. John's Parish. All the clergy of Jacksonville and vicinity were in the procession.

Dr. Shields graduated from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., in 1876, and was ordained deacon the same year by the Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Mississippi, and priest on May 13, 1877, his first charge being at Emmanuel Church, Winona, and St. Clement's Church, Vaiden, Miss. Upon his ordination to the priesthood, he became rector of St. John's Church, Aberdeen, Miss., where he remained until 1879, then going to North Carolina as rector of St. James' Church, Kittrell. He went from there to Christ Church, New Bern, in 1881, and served that parish for eight years. He represented the Diocese of East Carolina in the General Conventions of 1886 and 1889.

In 1889 he became rector of St. John's Church, Jacksonville, and held this office until his retirement in 1924, a period of thirty-five years. He represented the Diocese of Florida at every General Convention from 1892 to 1922, and was president of the standing committee from 1890 until the time of his death, thirty-seven years in all.

The Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville.

The Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville, Florida, has achieved an enviable reputation, especially in regard to their Church School. They have the largest Church School of any Episcopal Church in the South, if not in the entire country. Although they have been carrying a heavy load in the reduction of their parish house debt, this year they decided that they must proceed with the building of a Church. The rector aasked for an Easter offering of $150,000 in cash or pledges to run for three years. The offering amounted to $126,650.23.

O God, Who as at this time didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people, by sending to them the light of Thy Holy Spirit; Grant us by the same Spirit to have a right judgment in all things, and evermore to rejoice in His holy comfort; through the merits of Christ Jesus Our Saviour, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the same Spirit, one God, world without end. Holy Ghost, We Seek Thy Coming.

F. B. Stone.

Holy Ghost, we seek Thy coming,
Blessed One, to hearts of ours,
Help us give complete surrender
Unto all Thy quickening powers;
Cast out all of self within us,
For Thyself Thy temples claim,
Use for Christ our every talent,
Glorifying Jesus' name.

In the past we've grieved Thee sorely,
Through unkindness, selfish sin,
Help us to grow gentler, sweeter,
Through Thy power and grace within.
Holy Ghost, we seek Thy coming
In Thy fulness, mighty power,
Shake our very depths of being,
Fill with love these hearts of ours.

Let us have in us the witness
The disciples had of old,
Speaking through us at Thy pleasure,
Making timid spirits bold.
Show the truth to us so clearly
Doubts can find again no room,
And our songs of praise and gladness
Nevermore be changed to gloom.

Filled with Thee, O Holy Spirit,
Christ through us can do His will,
And the things for which He made us
He can then in us fulfill;
Oh, we long for Him to use us,
Long for Him through us to heal,
Souls and bodies of His people;
Him within us living feel.

Another Comforter.

That the Holy Spirit is only the indwelling Christ is not the doctrine of St. Paul nor of the Johannine writers; He is a distinct manifestation of Deity—another Comforter, the same, yet not the same as our ever-living Lord. But why raise the question at all? The word "person" is apt to mislead the uninformed as a description of the relation of the Holy Spirit to God the Father on the one hand and to God the Son on the other. Our difficulty in using it arises from the fact that it does not mean in modern English what it meant to the Latins who first employed it as the equivalent of the Greek term that is so rendered in the Nicene Creed. The modern world attributes more and more importance to personality as such; I am not you, and you are not I; but the ancients did not think in this way. Personality as differentiated from its social background has been a slow growth, and our Lord was the first among religious teachers to stress its transcendent value. But the root of the word denoted an entity much less fundamental. The "persona" or mask assumed by an actor merely indicated the part he was playing for the time being; when he laid it aside he resumed his ordinary individuality. It cannot rightly be said that the three persons in the Godhead are no more than this—that is, that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are only the varying designations to be given to one and the same Divine Being in accordance with some non-essential mode of manifestation of a temporal kind. The distinction is much more radical than that, but it does not and cannot mean a distinction as profound as the word personality would suggest to our present-day habits of thought.

The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Christ; why should we not say so? He is also the Spirit of the Father; why should we not say so? Both are New Testament terms and have Apostolic sanction. But the Holy Spirit is also a mode of God separately apprehended. He is not to be thought of as a merely impersonal influence either, but as Himself, a living mind, will, and power ever available for us in time of need. The Holy Spirit was in the world before the Incarnation took place, but from the first Christian Pentecost onward there has been a marked intensification of His ways of revealing Himself and of the influence He has shown Himself able to exert. As Bishop Gore says in The Holy Spirit and the Church: "The first point that will strike us, when we seek frankly to appreciate the Bible teaching about the Holy Spirit is that it speaks of it or Him not as something which men naturally possess and only need to realize, but as a gift given, so to speak, from outside and (especially in the New Testament) under definite and objective conditions." This is surely true and is abundantly attested in the experience of holy men and women. The Holy Spirit under the Christian dispensation is not a gift which men enjoy in common, such as the gift of life or of a gregarious nature, but an experience to be bestowed and obtained in proportion to the sincerity wherewith we desire it and the use we are accustomed to make of it.—Rev. R. J. Campbell, D. D.

Mind Your Own Business!

Nancy was evidently very much annoyed.

"I felt like telling him to mind his own business", she said, as she poured her tale of woe into my sympathetic ear.

"And why didn't you?" I replied. "It's the best advice you can give to anybody; it seems a pity to have deprived him of it. Besides, it's a text, and you can never do much harm by quoting Scripture on suitable occasions."

"A text!" she exclaimed, in astonishment.

"Why, yes; didn't you know?" I answered. "I can see that its time I preached a sermon on it. Paul wrote to the Thessalonians telling them, in so many words, to mind their own business, and Jesus, without using the actual phrase, gave the same counsel to Peter. I shall be in no difficulty, therefore, about a starting-point for my sermon, and, as to divisions, they come of their own accord—

Firstly, I shall say, every man has a business.

Secondly, I shall say, every man must make it his business to attend to his business.

Thirdly, I shall say, no man can satisfactorily look after another man's business. He must mind his own."

My rough-and-ready sermonizing had its inevitable effect upon Nancy. She did not exactly go to sleep, but she was manifestly soothed and mollified.

"Dear me," she exclaimed, smilingly, as she put out her hand for her umbrella and prepared to go, "I had no idea that sermons were so quickly made!" And off she went.

But, as with most of the work that is done hastily and costlessly, nothing came of it. The sermon that I proposed to myself that evening, as I chatted with Nancy, has never been preached. I scarcely know why. The theme is important enough, in all conscience. The finest epitaph that could be graven upon any man's tomb would be the testimony: He knew how to mind his own business. And, even at the Day of Judgment, I doubt whether any man will receive nobler praise than that.

From the fact that Jesus told Peter to mind his own business I learn that life's greatest peril is the peril of distraction. It was the most momentous and memorable day in Peter's career. It was the day on which his great wrong was put right, as far as a wrong can ever be put right in this world. He had three times denied his Lord; and, to his delight, had been given the opportunity of three times confessing Him: "I love Thee"! "Thou knowest that I love Thee"! "Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee"! In response to that threefold avowal, Peter had been entrusted with a sublime commission. One would have expected that, having received such a charge from the divine lips, he would have gone apart to ponder the greatness of the grace by which he had been forgiven and the glory of the ministry to which he had been called. But, just at that moment, he caught sight of John. "Peter, seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?" And Jesus told him to mind his own business. "What is that to thee?" He asked, "follow thou Me"!

The least thing is apt to distract our attention from our main business if we are not taking it very seriously. On catching sight of John's face, Peter forgets all about his own forgiveness and his reinstatement in the ministry; his mind flies off at a tangent. What is to be John's mission in life? As if that mattered to Peter! I have often watched a weasel pursuing a rabbit. The rabbit is fast: the weasel is slow: but the weasel always gets his rabbit in the end. He allows nothing to deflect him. He may cross the scene of a score of other rabbits: many of them are much nearer to him than the rabbit that he is tracking down: he may even catch sight of some of them. But he takes no notice. The other rabbits may be fresh: the rabbit that he is tracking is already worried and spent: he knows that his only hope is to hold mercilessly to that one trail. We should all taste the joy of triumph more often if we adopted the same method. But, to our own undoing, we turn aside. Just as Peter gets his first glimpse of his own life-work, he catches sight of John. It is a small circumstance, but it is just enough to cause his mind to swerve. "And what shall this man do?" Peter's behavior called loudly for rebuke and he received it. Jesus told him to mind his own business.

There is all the difference in the world between an inquiring mind and an inquisitive mind. The one is often the enemy of the other. Peter is anxious to know what part he can play in hastening the Kingdom of God: he is to be commended; he is an inquiring mind. Peter is curious to know what part John is to play: he is merely inquisitive: he must be told to mind his own business. This kind of thing is very common.

I had great hopes of Arthur Cunningham. He got into the way of attending the church; seemed impressed: and I had many conversations with him. Like Peter, he was anxious about himself, anxious to be right: anxious to be of service. But it all came to nothing. Just as everything was promising well with him, he allowed his mind to become involved in a multitude of abstract questions. His curiosity was aroused as to the mystery of the beginning of things. How was the universe fashioned and furnished? Were the worlds created or evolved? Were the "days" of Genesis literal days or vast geologic ages? Now it is a fine thing for a young fellow to apply his mind to the stately and fascinating problems of the universe, just as it is a fine thing for Peter to interest himself in the future of his friend. But there is a time for everything. At that moment Peter's whole mind should have been focussed on his own future; and, at the period of which I am thinking, Arthur Cunningham's mind should have been focussed on his soul's salvation. It is no good shelving the question: What must I do to be saved? in order to investigate the latest theory of evolution. Like Peter, Arthur allowed an inquisitive mind to take the place of an enquiring mind. So did Effie Gray.

Effie became a member of my Young People's Class. One evening, she remained behind to speak with me. She was thinking of joining the church. I was delighted, and did all that I could to encourage her. Then, quite unaccountably, she cooled off. She not only said no more about joining the church: but she absented herself quite frequently from the class.

"Well, Effie," I said to her, one evening, "we never have a talk about things nowadays!"

"No," she replied, "I have been studying a good deal."

"Studying, Effie!" I replied, "that's good! And what is it that you are studying?"

"Well," she answered, a little diffidently, "for awhile I made a study of spiritualism; but I couldn't make much of that; so then I took up the study of prophecy. I've read quite a lot of books and compared their diagrams and charts; but it's very confusing. I can't reconcile the teaching of the little horn in Daniel with the teaching of the seventh seal in Revelation."

Poor Arthur! Poor Effie! They are finding that an inquisitive mind is a poor substitute for an enquiring mind. It is good to be interested, like Arthur, in the beginning of things; and it is good to be interested, like Effie, in the end of things; but, on the whole, it is better to leave the study of algebra until the multiplication table has been mastered. It is time for Peter to settle the affairs of John when his own relationship with his Lord has been clearly established and defined.

The beauty of it is that the man who minds his own business always finds his course perfectly clear. "What is that to thee? Follow thou Me!" said the Saviour. "Follow thou Me!" Could anything be more exquisitely simple? Could any instructions be more delightfully explicit? When life becomes a direct relationship between Himself and myself it is wonderful how plain my path appears.—Rev. F. W. Boreham, in Christian Index.

Come, Thou Spirit of Pure Love.

Many a gift did Christ impart,
Noblest of them all is love;
Love, a balm within the heart
That can all its pain remove;
Love, a star most bright and pure;
Love, a gem of priceless worth,
Richer than man knows on earth;
Love, like a beauty, strong to lure;
Love, like joy, makes man her thrall,
Strong to please and conquer all.
Love can raise us to that sphere
Use and beauty cannot sever;
Love can rais us to that spheer
Whence the soul tends heavenwards ever;
Though one spake with angel tongues
Bravest words of strength and fire,
If no love his heart inspire
They are but as fleeting songs;
All his eloquence shall pass,
As the noise of sounding brass.

Come, Thou Spirit of pure love,
Who doth forth from God proceed,
Never from my heart remove,
Let me all Thy impulse heed;
All that seeks self-profit first,
Rather than another's good,
Whether foe or link'd in blood,
Let me hold such thoughts accurst;
And my heart henceforward be Ruled, inspired, O love, by Thee!

Christ The All in All.

Jesus Christ is the heart of the Bible. He is the Shiloh in Genesis; the I Am in Exodus; the Star and Scepter in Numbers; the Rock in Deuteronomy; the Captain of the Lord's Host in Joshua; and the Redeemer in Job. He is David's Lord and Shepherd; in the Song of Songs He is the Beloved; in Isaiah He is the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, and the Prince of Peace. In Jeremiah He is the Lord our Righteousness; in Daniel He is the Messiah; in Zechariah He is the Branch; in Haggai He is the Desire of all nations; in Malachi He is the Messenger of the Covenant and the Sun of Righteousness, and in the Book of Revelation He is the Alpha and the Omega and also the Morning Star.—Dr. R. S. MacArthur.

Unexpected Blessings.

We can never tell how near we are to an unexpected blessing when we are performing a duty, even the humblest. Saul went out to find his father's lost asses and he found a kingdom and came back with the anointing oil on his brow. Columbus set sail only to find a shorter path to old, old China, but he stumbled upon rich and splendid young America. The larger purposes of God catch up all our little thoughts and deeds into his great plan and turn them to world-wide blessing. Little did the father of Matthew Henry, when at family worship he was making homely comments on the Word of God, know that he was training up a boy that would one day write commentaries that would long feed the world. Atoms are very little things, eluding the power of our strongest microscopes to bring them within the range of vision, but enough of them make the continents and the stars, and a single one of them may be a center around which revolve the constellations. The humblest act faithfully done may be the doorway into the greatest gift of God and the most far-reaching blessings for ourselves and for the world.—Presbyterian Banner.

A Prayer For Whitsunday.

O Thou Divine Spirit, let me find my strength in Thee. I need Thee, that I may be strong everywhere. I long to be independent of all circumstances, alike of the cloud and of the sunshine. I want a power to save me from sinking in despondency, and to rescue me from soaring in pride. I want both a pillar of cloud and a pillar of fire; a refuge from the night of adversity, and a shield from the day of adversity. I can find them in Thee. Thou hast proved Thy power both over the night and over the day. Come into my heart, and Thy power shall be my power. I shall be victorious over all circumstances, at home in all scenes, restful in all fortunes. I shall have power to tread upon scorpions, and they shall do me no hurt; the world shall be mine when Thy Spirit is in me.—George Matheson.

A Nurse's Prayer.

O Lord, my God! This work I undertake
Alone in Thy great name, and for Thy sake.
In ministering to suffering I would learn
The sympathy that in Thy heart did burn
For those who on life's weary way
Unto diseases divers are a prey.

Take, then, mine eyes, and teach them to perceive
The ablest way each sick one to relieve.
Guide Thou my hands, that e'en their touch may prove
The gentleness and aptness born of love.
Bless Thou my feet, and while they softly tread,
May faces smile on many a sufferer's bed.

Touch Thou my lips, guide Thou my tongue,
Give me a word in season for each one.
Clothe me with patient strength all tasks to bear,
Crown me with hope and love, which know no fear,
And faith, that coming face to face with death
Shall e'en inspire with joy the dying breath.

All through the arduous day my actions guide,
And through the lonely night watch by my side.
So shall I wake refreshed, with strength to pray,
"Work in me, through me, with me, Lord, this day"!

—Myra L. Sawyer, in The Missionary Messenger.

For the Young Folks

A Prayer at Whitsuntide.

Holy Spirit, Lord and Giver
Of that life wherein I move,
Lead me forth beside the river
Of the everlasting love.
Till the vision I am treading
Where the pure in heart have trod,
And the light has shone upon me
From the City of our God.

Holy Spirit, Guide and Guardian
To the glories of that place,
Lift Thou up Thy love upon me,
Through this mystery of grace.
Shine, O light, upon my darkness
Stilling all my soul's unrest;
In the silence of these moments
Be Thy Power manifest.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

How a Promise Came True.

M. L. G.

On the night when Jesus and His friends ate their last supper together before He was betrayed, He promised them that though He must leave them, they should not be long alone, but that there would come to them a Comforter—One to make them strong, One to bring to their remembrance the gracious words He had spoken, One to give them power to preach the Gospel and live it.

The friends of Jesus stayed there in Jerusalem, waiting for this promise to come true. And just ten days after they had seen Jesus for the last time, He sent the promised Spirit. Like wind He came, and like fire. And the heart of each of them burned with flame, like red coals that the wind fans into a blaze.

In the strength of the Holy Spirit those friends of Jesus set out to obey His last command, to preach the Gospel to every nation. The Church still labors at that great task, and still the Spirit fills those who follow Jesus in the way. He tells us not of Himself, but of Jesus, and if we long to know the best Friend better and to become more like Him, it is because the Spirit has lighted the flame in our hearts, too.

Pray for the Holy Spirit and wait for Him. Your body is meant to be His Temple, your mind and soul the channel through which His life can flow and touch others. This is what it means to be indeed a fellow-worker with God.

Winnie Unearths a Story.

Winnie picked up the bit of broken china. It was the prettiest piece she had ever seen, creamy white with a gay pattern of softly colored field flowers, dull blue and deep yellow and lavender and warm rose. She rubbed it against her pinafore and got off the last particle of sandy soil. She turned it over. On the back was a queer-looking signature and a date, "1826".

"Why, that's a hundred years old!" said Winnie. "I'd like to know whose it was, a hundred years ago." She left the new playhouse and went to show it to mother.

Mother turned it in her hands with a curious smile. "Did you find this under the dogwood trees?" she asked.

"Yes, mother, when I was sweeping the dead leaves away to make me a playhouse. See, it's a hundred years old! Who do you reckon it belonged to then?"

"It belonged to your great-grandmother, dear Winnie," said mother. "When she was married her brother in France sent her six of these plates. Fine china was rare and costly then, and she was very proud of them. She kept them all until she was old, then she gave one of them to each of her six daughters. My mother used hers for a cake plate. And she always let me pass the little iced cakes when she had a tea party. And I held that plate very carefully too, I can tell you!" Mother laughed softly. "I always wanted it for my playhouse, more than anything in the world! I never had a real tea set like yours, only bits of china that had been broken."

For the first time Winnie realized that once mother was a little girl herself. "Where was your playhouse, mother?" she asked eagerly.

"Come on," said mother, "I'll show you!" She took Winnie's hand, and together they went out through the back yard gate. They followed the small beckoning path down the little hill until they came to the brook. It was a noisy little brook, always in a hurry, and on the banks beside it grew blue and white violets and starry pink crow's-foot. They stepped across it and climbed the steep bank beyond and came to the sweet dogwood thicket.

"Right here's where I found it," said Winnie.

Mother nodded with that curious little smile on her lips again and a far-away look in her eyes. "It's where my playhouse was," she whispered. They sat down side by side.

"But how did you get the plate, mother?" persisted Winnie. "You never did tell me."

"I was so busy remembering things that I forgot it," said mother. "Well one day mother was having a big tea party for the minister and his wife They were going to China. He was a big, tall man, very gentle and kind and very near-sighted and awkward. Mother let me wear my red cashmere dress that day and my white apron with its ruffle all starched and fluted. I was going to pass the cakes as usual. I was much excited. And I loved to hear the ladies telling each other that I was 'Such a helpful child!' 'So graceful!' 'A perfect little lady!' I was making my way among the guests, and the minister was standing by the fireplace. But as I came up behind him, he turned to sit down, his foot caught in the hearthrug, and he fell sprawling, knocking me down at the same time. I got up, not hurt at all. He got up and said he wasn't hurt either, but terribly outdone, of course. But the lovely plate was broken into thirteen pieces!"

"Oh, dear!" cried Winnie. "I bet you were glad the preacher did it!"

"I was, dear Winnie!" said mother, laughing. "Of course no one could scold the minister. It was just laughed off, as if it was nothing. But when everybody had gone home, mother cried a little and gave me the pieces for my playhouse." Mother looked around her as if she was coming back from a far-away place. "And this is the very spot. Of course the trees were little then, and the ground was not so shaded, so grass and wild flowers grew under them. I had a board between those two trees for my china cupboard, and there I kept the broken plates."

"Mother," said Winnie curiously, "truly, weren't you kind of glad he broke it?"

"I'm afraid I was," admitted mother, "but I didn't let mother know it until he sent her a very beautiful new one from China!"—Christian Observer.

The Leopard Whom Nobody Loved.

Louis Tucker.

Once upon a time there was a leopard whom nobody loved. This made him very sad, for he was hungry for affection, but nobody cared until one day he met a strong-minded woman.

Her name was Nancy, but she was born under a sour star. Her head was blonde, her heart brunette, her eyes were ice, her nose above the snowline and she cried hail. She wore a brutal bonnet and a capable cape. She could kill time, murder mirth and execute music, and she could have taught Eve how to raise Cain.

When the leopard heard her cry hail, he gave up his original idea of eating her and tried to go away; but she saw him in the bushes and, hurrying hastily, she caught him around the neck with the crooked handle of her umbrella, and so he became a prisoner. She took off her veil, which nearly scared him into fits, and with it she blindfolded him; and then she made a bag out of one of her petticoats and put him in it; and then she borrowed a wheelbarrow and took him home.

When she got him to her home—she was a widow and lived alone—she tied his feet and cut his claws and bought a dog-muzzle and muzzled him so that he could not bite, and put a collar round his neck and chained him to one leg of the dining-room table. Then she put her arms round his neck and cried, because she had to treat him so badly; and then she fed him with hot mince-pies and gave him nothing else to eat until he finished them.

The next day a book-agent came to sell an illustrated copy of a book called "Ladies of the White House", so she showed him into the dining-room. The leopard stood upon his hindlegs and clanked his chain; and the book-agent left all his books and also left the house immediately, at once; and the woman who lived next door came in to see what was the matter, and she left too.

The circus people from whom the leopard had escaped heard of it, and they drove up to the door with a large empty cage to get him. But Mrs. Nancy said that if he ever had belonged to them, they had lost any right to him when they let him get away; and she didn't believe he was theirs anyhow. They got a policeman, but she unchained the leopard from the leg of the table and held the end of the chain in her hand; and the policeman left and stood outside the gate and rapped on the sidewalk with his stick until a lot more policemen came. Then the circus men telephoned for the circus manager and somebody saw the crowd and thought it was a fire and turned in a fire-alarm; so the engines got there about the same time the manager did. Mrs. Nancy stood on the front steps, with the end of the leopard's chain in her hand, and told them all what she thought of them. When the leopard growled at other people, she sicked him on; but when he growled at her, she boxed his ears. When the circus-manager saw that, he stopped arguing and trying to get the leopard back, and began instead to try and hire Mrs. Nancy to join the circus. And when the crowd understood, they all began to laugh and then to cheer and tell her to charge more. At last she agreed with him for a hundred dollars a week; and now, if you go to the right circus, you can see her perform, in a black velvet dress with yellow spangles, in a cage of leopards in the middle of the third ring; and she always puts her arm round one of the leopards and hugs him before she begins the performance.

Each By Name.

Never a little foolish lamb
Astray in the gloaming dim,
But the tender Shepherd knoweth its name,
And calleth it home to Him.

In the flock and the fold the sheep are His,
Nor a hill so gray and dun,
But the Shepherd counteth his lambkins there,
And watcheth them one by one.

Never a day so bleak and chill,
Nor a night so dark and drear,
But the tireless love of the Shepherd waits
For the sheep that are passing near.

Never weary, way-worn sheep
In the great world flock today
But may hear the call of the Shepherd's voice,
May follow Him and obey.

The Shepherd hath ransomed the great world flock,
He hath bought it for His own;
And He loveth and guardeth it one by one,
As were each in the world alone.

Spot, the Watch Cat.

Spot was an old cat. But he was very, very wise for his years. Even as a kitten he had shown that he was wise.

"We're just going over to Uncle Fred's for the evening," said Mrs. Smith to Bob. "Millie is safely in bed, and you may put Spot in his basket and go to bed at nine."

"All right, mother," said Bob, as he watched his father and mother go down the snowy road.

Now as Bob was nine years old, and Millie only three, he had a little studying to do after his sister had gone to bed. He worked till eight o'clock, and read till nine. Just as the clock was striking the last strike he jumped up from his book and went to the kitchen to look for Spot in his usual corner. Spot was not there. Bob looked behind the stove. There was no cat there, either. He looked in the broom cupboard. No cat there. So Bob began to call very softly so as not to waken Millie. Bob finally went to the shed to see if Spot had put himself to bed as he had done once or twice before. No Spot to be found anywhere.

At last, after much searching both outside and in, Bob decided that Spot had followed mother and daddy to Uncle Fred's, two miles down the country road.

"It would be just like Spot," Bob thought, as he prepared for bed. Then, with a look at Millie in her little crib, Bob turned off the light and hopped into his cot. He was quite sure Spot was all right anyway.

Bob felt as if he had been asleep only a few minutes when he was awakened by a sound. He listened.

"Meow," came the sound again, and before Bob knew it Spot had jumped up on his bed and was walking up toward his face.

"You rascal! Where did you come from?" whispered Bob, "and whatever is the matter? You should be asleep." But Spot meowed again, and scratched and jumped about as Bob had never seen him do before.

"What is the matter, Spot? Come here." But Spot would not keep still. And just then Bob smelled something funny.

"It smells like smoke, Spot," said Bob, and he choked with the funny feeling in his throat. The cat was meowing more than ever now. Bob jumped out of bed and ran into the hall. Out there the smell of smoke was stronger. His eyes were stinging, too. But he couldn't see the smoke, although the air looked blue and queer.

Bob rushed downstairs. There he saw the smoke coming from underneath the cellar door. He opened the door and was driven back by the force of the smoke which came up in big clouds. He tried to close the door, but could not. Then he rushed for the kitchen closet.

"Sled first!" Bob gave himself the order. He took the sled out into the road, shivering in his night-clothes. For he knew he had not time to spare.

When he got back to the house the fire was teeming up the cellar steps and the hall was full of smoke and flames.

"Millie, Millie," Bob now called with one thought only in his mind, "come downstairs to Bob, Millie". At the same time he fumbled up the smoky stairway as fast as he could manage it.

"Bob, Bob," called Millie, "I want mummy," and she began to cry.

Bob groped about until he found his weeping sister. Then with one hand he grabbed a blanket from the bed, wrapped it all about her as he took her in his arms and hurried down the stairs again through smoke and flame.

"Now we must run and tell mother and dad. Be brave, little sister," Bob encouraged. "Just show mummy how brave you can be."

"I want mummy, I want mummy, I want pussy," sobbed Millie, all in one breath.

"Oh, Millie," said Bob, with a sudden thought, "where is Spot? Have you seen him?"

"No-no," sobbed Millie. "I want Spot."

Thinking of Millie, Bob had quite forgotten Spot till now. Where could he be? He hadn't heard him meow since the first warning. Bob thought for just a second. Then he said, "Millie, will you promise to sit very, very still, if I go away a few minutes?"

"Yes," said Millie, "but I want Spot."

With a leap and a run, Bob was in the burning house once more. The fire was racing upstairs now. He could not get up if he tried. He rushed as near the fire as he could, and called out, "Spot! here, Spot!" as loudly as his stinging throat would let him. Just then something ran against his feet. Something big and bulky. Although he could not see, Bob grabbed for the moving object and caught Spot in his arms.

"Whatever are you carrying, Spot?" he said, as he stumbled to the door, and out to Millie on the sled.

"Oh," cried Millie in great joy, "Spot has dolly, Spot has dolly." And it was true. Between his teeth Spot had dolly's skirt held tightly.

"Now for mummy," said brave little Bob. And with Millie, Spot and dolly bundled in the sled, Bob ran a mile in the snow with nothing on but his winter night-clothes, to tell his mother and father that the house was burning down.

"I thought Spot had followed you to uncle's," Bob said, as he explained everything much later.

"Spot slept with dolly and me," lisped Millie.

"Oh," said mummy, "that explains how Spot saved all your lives. If he had been in the shed asleep, you might have been all burned."

Then daddy spoke; "When we build our house again, we'll make a special corner just for Spot. And it shall be somewhat inside the house. For Spot is our watch cat now, you know."—Junior World.

The Little Girl and the Conductor.

All night long the great through express train had been rushing along in the darkness, while men, women and children slept safely and were carried where they wished to go.

In one of the sleeping cars was a little girl, and when the conductor went through for the first early morning round this little girl was up and dressed. Her mother and grandmother, with whom she was traveling, were still in their berths.

"Good morning, conductor," said the little girl, looking up with a bright smile.

"Good morning," replied the conductor.

"I think we must have had a good conductor and a good engineer to take such good care of us all night," said the child.

The conductor forgot all about his long, hard night and how tired he was. All day long he kept thinking about that little girl.—Exchange.

What the Clock Says.

What does the clock say, loud and clear,
Up by the mantel high?
Hark! only two wee words I hear
While snug in bed am I.
While snug in bed am I.
The whole day long it sang "tick-tock!"
Now it has changed its tune, this clock.
"You're good! you're good!" it seems to say
When I have been quite good all day.

What does the clock say, loud and clear,
When lips have learned to pout?
How it should know I'm bad is queer,
I'm puzzled to find out.
And yet, when all the house is still,
A voice the whole room seems to fill.
"You're bad—quite bad!" I hear it say;
Who told it I was bad all day?

To know Christ is the way to grow in holiness. Christianity is not a religion of rules. It is the religion of the divine example. Try to follow the blessed steps of the most holy life. Take His advice. Ask yourself in the moment of perplexity or temptation, what would He do if He were here? Nothing else will so surely lead us into the way of holy living.—George Hodges.

Deaths

BROOKES: Entered into eternal rest on Wednesday, May 11, 1927, at University Hospital, Baltimore, Md., ALEXANDER POWELL BROOKES, JR., ten years old, only son of Alexander Powell and D. Elizabeth Watkins Brookes. Funeral services were conducted in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Va., by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall.

MRS. SARAH DABNEY EGGLESTON.

MRS. SARAH DABNEY EGGLESTON, age 88 years, wife of Captain John Randolph Eggleston, noted Confederate Veteran and Lieutenant on the "Merrimac", died at her home at Sewanee, Tenn., on May 15, 1927. Funeral services were held in All Saints Chapel and interment was made in the Sewanee Cemetery on May 16th.

Mrs. Eggleston was born and raised in Mississippi, having lived at Raymond, Hinds County, Mississippi, until 14 years ago, when she came to Sewanee. The deceased is survived by her two sisters, Mrs. Ida Dabney Armstrong, of Birmingham, Ala., and Lelia J. Dabney, of Sewanee.

"He giveth His beloved sleep"

REV. FRANCIS E. CLARK, D. D.

REV. DR. FRANCIS E. CLARK, known the world over as the "Father of Christian Endeavor", died at his home at Newton, Mass., May 26, 1927. The founder of the great young people's religious movement had been ill for several weeks. He was in his 76th year.

Dr. Clark resigned the presidency of the International Society of Christian Endeavor two years ago, but maintained his active interest in the work of the movement, which he founded forty-six years ago when he was pastor of the Williston Congregational Church, in Portland, Me.

He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. William F. Chase, of West Newton, and three sons, Professor Eugene F. Clark, of Dartmouth College; Harold Clark, head master of a school in New Jersey, and Sidney A. Clark, of Boston.

Born in Aylmer, Quebec, September 12, 1851, Dr. Clark was the son of New England parents. His father, Charles Carey Symmes a civil engineer and timber locater who had gone to Canada to seek his fortune, died when the son was three years old. Five years later his mother, who was Lydia Fletcher Clark, of Tewksbury, Mass., died and the boy was adopted by her brother, Rev. Edward Warren Clark, by whose name he afterward was known.

The founder of Christian Endeavor lived to see it become international, interdenominational and interracial, and grow from the first forty members to an organization with 80,000 individual societies with a membership of approximately 4,000,000 within eighty denominations. It is estimated that more than 25,000,000 women and men throughout the world have been members of the Christian Endeavor movement since its inception.

ORDINATIONS.

Correction.

In this column in our issue of May 21, it was stated that Mr. Humphrey Campbell Dixon was presented for ordination by the Rev. Paul Reinhardt. This is an error; as Mr. Dixon was presented by the Rev. Samuel H. Sayre, assistant at St. Paul's Church, Chicago, Mr. Dixon's home parish.

William Capers Munds of the Diocese of Ohio was ordained deacon by the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., acting for the Bishop of Ohio, in St. James' Church, Wilmington, N. C., on Sunday, May 8. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Kirk B. O'Ferrall, rector of Emmanuel Church, Cleveland, and the candidate was presented by Canon J. Reginald Mallett, of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland.

Mr. Munds, who is a student at Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio, will serve as curate in Emmanuel Church, Cleveland, after his graduation in June.

The Rev. Jesse Starnes Lockaby, deacon-in-charge of St. John's Church, Marion, N. C., was ordained priest in his parish church, Friday, April 8, 1927, by the Rt. Rev. Junius M. Horner, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Western North Carolina. The assisting clergy were the Rev. Benjamin S. Lassiter, rector-emeritus of St. John's, Marion; the Rev. S. R. Guignard, dean of the Morgantown Convocation; the Rev. J. W. C. Johnson, who presented Mr. Lockaby; the Rev. G. Floyd Rogers, of Trinity Church, Asheville, who preached the sermon, and the Rev. LeRoy A. Jahn, rector of Grace Church, Morganton.

Mr. Lockaby, after faithful service as a deacon in this parish, continues his ministry as rector.

On May 19, 1927, in the Oratory of Seabury Divinity School, Faribault, Minnesota, the Bishop of Minnesota, acting for the Bishop of Central New York, ordained Harold L. Andress as a deacon. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Dr. F. F. Kramer, and the Rev. Dr. F. H. Hallock preached the sermon.

On May 20, 1927, in St. Peter's Church, New Ulm, Bishop McElwain ordained Clarence Burnett Whitehead as a deacon. Archdeacon Couper presented the candidate and preached the sermon.

A service of ordination was held in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, Washington, D. C., on Ascension Day. Bishop Freeman ordained to the priesthood three deacons in the diocese as follows: the Rev. Hugh F. Clary, assistant at Ascension Church; the Rev. Robert J. Shores, assistant at St. Margaret's Church, and the Rev. Hulbert A. Woolfall, deacon-in-charge of St. Philip's Church, Laurel, Md. Two seminary students were ordained deacons by Bishop Freeman as follows: Mr. Mills Perkins, of St. Stephen's Parish, a student at Virginia Seminary, who has been lay reader in charge of the Chapel of the Redeemer, Glen Echo, Md., and Mr. Loren M. Gaviett, of St. James' Parish, Washington, a student of the General Theological Seminary, New York. At the same service the Rt. Rev. William L. Gravatt, D. D., Bishop of West Virginia, ordained to the priesthood the Rev. Edward Pinell, who has been a student at Virginia Theological Seminary and is attached to Bishop Gravatt's diocese. The sermon of this ordination service was preached by the Rev. W. Cosby Bell, of the Virginia Theological Seminary. In the afternoon of the same day a general confirmation service was held by the Bishop of Washington in Bethlehem Chapel. This service is planned each year for those candidates who were unable to be present at their own parish confirmation services.

DEATHS.

The Rev. Albert Corey Jones, rector of Grace Church, Hamden, Conn., since 1915, died at his home in Hamden on Tuesday, May 10. He was born in New Haven on June 5, 1873, and was a graduate of Yale University and Berkeley Divinity School.

Funeral services were conducted by Bishop Brewster, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Stewart Means, the Rev. Dr. John F. Plumb, and the Rev. Dr. John D. Skilton. Burial was in Hamden.

The family of Bishop Burleson, of South Dakota has suffered a severe bereavement in the death of Miss Laura C. Birchall, who had for twenty-five years been a member of his household, first when he was Dean in Fargo, then during his secretaryship in the Church Missions House, and through his episcopate in South Dakota. A devoted Churchwoman, a remarkable teacher of little children, a life-long participant in all forms of Church work, hers was a life made beautiful by loving and joyous service. She was called to her rest on Saturday, May 7, and was buried in the Bishop's family lot in Sioux Falls on May 11.

Bibles For The Blind!

It is estimated that there are over 100,000 Blind persons in the United States. In foreign lands the number of the Blind in proportion to the population is far greater than in this country.

The American Bible Society provides the Scriptures in 16 languages and systems for the Blind. For a single Bible in the Moon system 58 volumes are required. The cost of each volume varies from $4.00 to $8.00. The American Bible Society furnishes these books to the Blind for $1.00 and asks interested friends to make up the difference.

Will you share in this important service to the Blind?

Tall, swaying larkspur, blue
As Heaven's reflection in a mute, still pool—
A gay wind stirs your fairy petals cool
And fresh from evening's bath of dew.

To a red-gold butterfly, a robber bee;
Your blue, blue loveliness proves to me
There is a God, there is a God.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

A man cannot possibly be a gentleman if he lacks courtesy.

"Endurance is nobler than strength, and patience than beauty."

Sin in itself is more to be dreaded than its consequences.

God makes the prisons of life work together as antidotes.

The very fact that a Christian is here and not in Heaven proves that some work awaits him.

No Christian should lose heart. To lose heart is to lose hope. To lose hope is to lose faith. And to lose faith is a sin.—M. J. Macleod.

"When I stand before the throne,
Dressed in beauty not my own;
When I see Thee as Thou art,
Love Thee with unsinning heart,
Thou, Lord, shall I fully know,
Not till then how much I owe."

"We must never make the mistake of assuming that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is an American institution. It is for the world, and it is ours now to be a servant among the nations in carrying the blessed glad tidings and heal the broken peoples of earth."

"Perseverance," that's what we want! If we don't succeed today, we'll get at it all the harder tomorrow, and if we don't get it then, we'll go at it the next day, and every day of the week. If we don't succeed in January, we'll go at it in March, and if not in March, in April, and no let-up in summer.—D. L. Moody.

It's true we cannot reach Christ's fortieth day;
Yet to go part of that religious way
Is better than to rest:
We cannot reach our Saviour's purity;
Yet we are bid "Be holy e'en as He",
In both let's do our best.
—G. Herbert.

Out of the bitter which the disciples tasted when their Lord and Master spoke of His departure they were soon to taste the sweet. The cross was not far distant; neither was the resurrection. The sorrow that crushed them was but for a brief season of days. The joy that followed when they saw their risen Lord made the sorrow resplendent as does the sun the cloud which it illumines with its golden glory.

The value of prayer is not commensurate with its ease and fluency. As a cold climate produces a strong race, so coldness in prayer often preserves the soul from enervating self-deception and forces it to strike deep roots into the eternal Rock. The loneliness and emptiness of the soul that we often experience in the very act of prayer may be the hand of God, dilating the heart by hope deferred and unfulfilled desire until it receive the Presence it longs for. For most souls prayer, if taken seriously, is a business demanding high courage.—Selected.

AFTER THE FIRE, THE STILL SMALL VOICE

We are living in a time when the commonplace has become marvelous. The common air we breathe was little thought of a few years back as being rich in undiscovered possibilities. But now it has borne an aviator across the ocean, and it is vibrant with messages; and the rude hamlet listens in on the city's most gifted preachers, and its richest musical offerings. But the bane of the radio is static. Whatever the scientific content of this term may mean, the word itself has an application as being a foe to the Gospel. Static means coming to a stand. It has the idea of being stationary, fixed, immovable; and represents what we know as deadly inertia, a law in the spiritual as in the physical realm.

The false prophets were represented as dumb dogs, lying down, loving to slumber. To workers in the vineyard, the cry was: "Why stand ye idle all the day?" The dull apathy, which leads to a stagnancy producing a deadly miasma, that kills faith, is seen in the prophets searching Jerusalem with candles; for the men "settled oi their lees, saying: "The Lord will not do good, neither will He do evil". "He stirreth up the people." True—there is an incendiary note in the Gospel. He came to cast fire upon the earth. The firy energy that stirs out of sleep and from the rooted settled inertia brought about by the world's soporific. Do away with the static and the radio is wonderful. Do away with the spiritual static and the Gospel is broadcast over the earth. There are no stops signs in the Gospel ministry; they are all Go. If it is a demoniac healed, the command is Go home, and tell what great things the Lord hath done for you. If it is a leper healed, it is: Go show yourselves to the priest. If it is a post resurrection group of disciples, it is: Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every people. The Dead Sea is dead, because it has no outlet. We do not work on the storage battery plan, but on that of the trolley. If we are in touch with the moving current of life, there must be movement. Our Lord, Jesus Christ, went about doing good. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." No static here.

The Bishops' Crusade opened the eyes of the country when the staid, conservative Episcopal Church moved en masse to broadcast the Gospel. It has compelled the attention and interest of the Christian Church of America. Is it to be a guesture? Is it a flash out of the pan, a big parade, with marshalled hosts, with fan-fire of drum and panoply of outward might, only to "peter out" and lapse back into the dreary languid comfortable gospel of being at ease in Zion? "By their fruits ye shall know them." Our Church life seems to be becoming a succession of film reels that excite us for the moment until some new thing is invented. We live and move and have our being by reactions. It is a case of "after this man rose up Theudas"—he also perished. We have had the Men and Religion Movement, and the Nation Wide Campaign, and now the Bishops' Crusade. We are like the sickly crowd around the Pool of Bethesda, waiting for the moving of the water; or like the impotent man at the beautiful gate of the temple, living on doles of charity, but still impotent. Christianity has not come to maintain us in a state of weakness and helplessness, but to set us on our feet, and send us out to bear glad tidings.

"Son of man stand upon thy feet"—not wait continually to be pushed by the mechanics of some spectacular movement. The dry bones of a lopsided Christianity content to be busy with a system of dilletante, fastidious self-culture must be breathed upon by the Holy Spirit until they live and move, a mighty army, instinct with Divine power and fire to witness and be set in motion in a Crusade of love and pity for the lost.

Oh, let us conserve the ground gained by the Crusade! It is better not to know this perfect will of God, and after knowing it, to turn back to the old line of least resistance. We plead for an awakened Church to rise and combat the inertia—a foe originating from the enemy of souls to prevent the most effective weapon the Church has for defeating Satan, namely, winning souls for Christ. Hear the old veteran of the Gospel of the Grace of God, calling aloud to strive together for the faith of the Gospel. There must be no let-up. Great souls with lofty vision have left their mark because they continued. Daniel continued. As Paul says, "Having obtained the help of God, I continue". "These all continued in prayer." Hold on, stand fast, "Do the work of an evangelist, preach the Word." "Be instant in season and out of season."

The Bishops' Crusade was born from a sense of the deplorable needs of the Church. "It takes a high-souled man to lead the masses to a cleaner sty." Thank God for the vision that inspired it. Let it not fade away into the light of common day. It must be continued—that is, the follow-up work. The Crusade has done more than most of us realize. If nothing more, it has taught the supremacy of the spiritual. We realize again that to rebuild a broken order it is "not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit".

Evangelism has come to stay. The Commission on Evangelism is the most important in the whole Church. We must give them unstinted support. Let every Church see to it that it has an Evangelistic Committee—the picked men and women spiritually of the Church. Then by God's grace let pastor and people learn to do personal work by first surrendering to Christ and claiming the promise of the Holy Spirit, and then to study books on personal work. This is not something super-imposed; it is the normal fruitage of the presence of the Holy Spirit in a life. The evidence of the Spirit's presence is a desire to speak of and for Christ. "He shall take of Mine and shall show it unto you." And He is given "To them that obey Him". The sin of a self-satisfied Church, sodden with apathy, grown dull with respectability, must be confessed and put away. And then, claiming the enduement of the Spirit, the hunger for souls, the vision of a lost world, and the compassionate love of Christ, will constrain the Church to be about her work of seeking and saving the lost, and of keeping everlastingly at it with the Gospel. After the earthquake, the wind and fire—they were outward—came the still small voice—that was inward. We have had impressive outward visions of the power of the Spirit, moving eighty-six out of eighty-seven dioceses of our great Church to launch forth into the deep for souls. Now we trust the still small voice of God's Spirit, experienced inwardly, will move to action our clergy and laity, until, as of old, we shall see multitudes added to the Lord.

May we close with a renewed expression of appreciation to the Diocese of East Carolina in giving their Bishop to the Church for six months for the inspiring work of the Crusade. Few realize what a Herculean task it has been, making a demand on his strength to the point of imperiling his health. Thanks to his splendid leadership and the work of his associates, we believe no piece of work undertaken by the Church has been done so thoroughly and so economically and with more Apostolic zeal and simplicity. The way is blazed. The call is urgent. The vision is before us. We cannot turn back. The Lord Jesus is calling, and the cry must be: Full steam ahead. "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields." Poor of soul is he who is not moved to respond, and the danger of the curse of Neroz is his."

"Oft when the word is on me to deliver,
Lifts the illusion and the truth lies bare.
Desert or throng, the city or the river,
Melts in a lucid paradise of air.
Only like stars I see the souls thereunder,
Bound who should conquer, slaves who should be free,
Hearing their one hope with an empty wonder,
Sadly contented in a show of things.
Then with a rush the intolerable craving
Shivers throughout me like a trumpet call
Oh, to save these, perish for their saving,
Die for their life, be offered for them all!"

A LAY SERMON TO THE GIRL GRADUATE

This is the time of year when papers are filled with most interesting and attractive reading concerning the "sweet girl graduate". It is the time and season we all love best, a season of flowers, fans, young women looking their sweetest and prettiest—the season when strict college rules are suspended and the young, light-hearted misses feel free as birds. They skip and flutter about in light gauzy gowns, bright and gleeful, the pale cheek of the student, no longer transparent in its ethereal beauty, but flushed and rosy, as the purple current rushes healthfully through the system, painting the cheek, giving life and elasticity to limb, making her the charms and pride of our Southland—the beautiful "sweet girl graduate".

This is the happiest day of her life, the day of her triumph, the hour when years of toil in the school room end, and she is free. As she stands on the platform before an audience of friends and admirers, under the light of blazing jets, flowers banked in tiers at her feet, she is queenly in her beauty and triumphant in her glory. The diploma which she holds in her hand is the evidence, the history of work well done and is her ticket of admission to the royal association of educated women.

When the lights go out blooms and blossoms are gathered, and she leaves the hall proud and happy. Out under the starlight her heated brow is cooled, her excited brain is quieted and there is a slight reaction, a tinge of disappointment—the glare and glory, the subtle strains of music, the sensuous fragrance of flowers no longer excite and charm, and as she plucks a withered leaf and crumbles it in her hand, somehow she is despondent, disappointed. Her triumph was too short—in a few minutes she has outlived the anticipation of years.

Off yonder in some country home, at the hour when she stood in her beauty and glory reading her graduating essay, two aged people sit in the old farm house watching the clock, holding a program of the exercises in progress, counting the minutes, estimating the exact moment when their child shall claim and receive graduating honors. The old people are nervous and excited, they smile as they gaze at the name of their child, and tears of love fill their eyes. They can hardly sleep, they are happy. They forget sacrifices made to enable their daughter to obtain that of which they were deprived. They are glad that they economized and saved so that she might have the advantages of education.

When she returns to that home, how will she show appreciation for the great love which enabled her to become the accomplished woman? There are many ways. Her arm about the neck of the father, a kiss on the wrinkled brow, words of tenderness and thankfulness, aiding the mother in her household affairs, kindness and gentleness with the younger children, helping them with their studies and using education and cultivation in making that home bright and happy—these are some of the ways.

Possibly while educating and improving the mind she also gave the heart some cultivation, in the usual mild school girl form, a sort of just for fun way of exercising the love faculties in anticipation of the more serious and inevitable form which she expects sooner or later. As she has lived through the period which Byron describes as "the bread and butter time of life", her experience will enable her to size up the value of the man who proposes to walk at her side during the balance of her days.

But suppose, for instance, when she arrives at her home railway station with big trunk, a load of framed art gems the work of her magic hand, gowned in the latest fashion of fabric daintily fitted; and suppose she sees that fond old father in his plain homespun, the one mule wagon, everything so different from the fresh up-to-date fashionable boarding school which she has left behind; how does she feel? How will she act when right there, at that stateion, in the presence of the fond old father and neighbors whom she has known from babyhood, and in the presence of the patient mule that she used to ride from the field at the close of long summer days when she was a little barefooted, light-hearted, prattling child—right there she will display strength of character and her future life will be made or marred.

A warm, loving embrace of father, friendly greetings of neighbors and a pat on the neck and kind word for the mule, will show that she is not only the sweet girl graduate, but a woman, one and altogether lovely, more to be desired than pearls and rubies.

Leaving the school is beginning life. The young graduate has it in her power to mould such a life, that Solomon's description will apply:

"Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all. Her own works praise her in the gate."

The schools of our country send out graduates equipped for high aims and splendid futures. There are beautiful lives all over our country, graduates who have gone out from our schools, and as the years go by and one by one they pass away, they will leave a rich heritage and their works will follow them.

CHRISTIANITY vs. MODERN LIBERALISM

By the Reverend J. Gresham Machen, D. D.

of Princeton Theological Seminary

I WILL give you a few verses from the First Epistle to the Corinthians, fifteenth chapter, beginning with the first verse:

"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

"By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain.

"For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

"And that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

"And that He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve;

"After that, He was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

"After that He was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

"And last of all He was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

"For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God.

"But by the grace of God I am what I am; and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

"Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed."

I shall not try to settle the religious issue of the day, but try to be bold enough to present that issue as briefly and clearly as I can, that you may be aided in settling it for yourself.

But presenting the issue sharply and clearly is by no means a popular business at present. There are many people at the present time who, as Dr. Francis L. Patton has aptly put it, prefer to fight their intellectual battles in what may be called a condition of "low visibility".

Presenting the issue sharply is regarded by them as an impious proceeding. May it not discourage contributions to mission boards? May it not prevent Church consolidation and cause a poor showing in Church statistics?

But for my part I am glad to tell you that my sympathies are with those men, whether conservatives or radicals, who have a passion for light. The type of religion which delights in the pious sound of traditional phrases regardless of their meaning and shrinks from controversial matters, will never stand amid the shocks of life.

Liberalism a Misnomer.

When you get beneath the traditional phraseology used everywhere today to the real underlying issue, you discover that that great redemptive religion called Christianity is being attacked within the Church by a totally different type of religious thought and life, which is only the more opposed to Christianity because it is making use of traditional Christian phraseology. That modern non-redemptive religion which is attacking Christianity at its root is called by various names. It is called Modernism. It is called Liberalism.

All such names are unsatisfactory; the latter in particular is question-begging, because the movement is regarded as liberal only by its friends. To those opposed to it it seems to involve a narrow attention to certain facts, and a closing of the eyes to others that are equally vital.

But by whatever name the movement may be called, the root of the movement is found in Naturalism, and by that I mean the denial of any entrance of the creative power of God, as sharply distinguished from His works in nature, at the beginning of Christianity.

When I use the term "Naturalism" it is in a different way from that in which it is used by the philosophers, but in that non-philosophic sense it expresses fairly well what is really at the root of that which is called by a degradation of the original noble term, "liberal religion".

The Importance of Doctrine.

What then are the teachings of modern Naturalism as over against the teachings of Christianity? At the beginning of the discussion we are met with an objection which goes to the very roots of the matter. People will tell us that teachings are unimportant. They will tell us that even if the teachings of modern naturalistic Liberalism are entirely different from the teachings of Christianity, yet the two may turn out to be fundamentally the same, because teachings and doctrines are unimportant. All creeds they tell us are equally good for they all spring from Christian experience.

Well now, my friends, whether the objection is well founded or not, we ought to observe exactly what the objection means. I will tell you what it means, it means that we are falling back into a fundamental skepticism, because if all creeds are equally true, then since the creeds are contradictory one to another, it follows with inexorable logic that all are equally false, or at least equally uncertain. To say that all creeds are equally true is the same as to say that all creeds are equally false or equally uncertain; and when you say that creeds make little difference provided there be a unitary Christian experience, you are falling back into agnosticism which fifty or seventy-five years ago was regarded as the deadliest enemy of the Christian Church. That enemy has not been made a friend, but has been made only more dangerous, by being received within our walls.

Christianity they will tell us is a life and not a doctrine. Now that seems to be a devout and pious utterance, but it is radically false all the same, and to see that it is false you do not need even to be a Christian, you need have just common sense and common honesty. For when you say that Christianity is this or that, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history. You are not saying what you think ought to be true, but what you think actually is a fact. When people say that Christianity is a this or that—some have ventured the absurd assertion that Christianity is democracy—when you say Christianity is this or that, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history. It is just like saying that the Roman Empire under Nero was a free domocracy. It is possible that the Roman Empire under Nero might have been a great deal better if it had been a free democracy, but the question is whether as a matter of fact it was a free democracy or not. So when you say that Christianity is a life, not a doctrine, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history, because Christianity is an historical phenomenon exactly like the Roman Empire, like the kingdom of Prussia or the United States of America.

What Does the Charter Say?

Now before you can determine whether Christianity is this or that, you have to go back to the beginning of the Christian movement. At the beginning of the life of every corporation is the incorporation paper, commonly called the charter, and in this paper are set forth the objects of the corporation. It is conceivable that other objects may be more desirable than those set forth in the incorporation paper, but if the directors use the name and resources of that particular corporation to pursue these other objects, they are going ultra vires of the corporation. It is the same fundamentally with Christianity. It is conceivable that after further investigation we may have fresh views about it. It is conceivable that the founders of the Christian movement were wrong, and that we in the twentieth century can better their program. It is conceivable that they had no right to legislate for all subsequent generations. That is a matter for us to determine in the light of the evidence, but at any rate the founders of the Christian movement did have an inalienable right to legislate for all generations that should choose to bear this name of Christian.

Therefore, if you would honestly determine what can bear the name Christian, you have to go back to the beginnings of the Christian movement. Now the beginnings of the movement constitute a fairly definite historical phenomenon; there is a certain agreement as to what Christianity at its inception was, possible even between Christians and non-Christians, because we have certain sources of information which are admitted to come from the first Christian generation, like the passage we read today—sources which give us definite information about the beginnings of Christianity.

The Christian movement began a few days after the death of Jesus of Nazareth. I can see no good historical justification for calling anything that existed before the death of Jesus of Nazareth, Christianity. At any rate, to be cautious, I will say that if Christianity existed before that time it existed only in a preliminary stage. Evidently after the death of Jesus of Nazareth there was a strange new beginning among His disciples, and that new beginning began the movement which caused the spread of the Christian religion out into the world.

Now, what was the character of the movement at its beginning? For one thing, it was not merely a life as distinguished from a doctrine. Do not misunderstand me. It certainly was a strange new kind of life; anybody who came into contact with those early Christians recognized that they were living an entirely different sort of life from the people around them. It is perfectly clear that the first Christians were living a new type of life, a life of strange purity and strange unselfishness.

THE COLONIAL CHURCH IN VIRGINIA

A BOOK REVIEW

By the Reverend Joseph B. Dunn, D. D.

THIS volume consists of a history of the Church in the Colony up to the time of the Indian Massacre in 1622, and a series of biographical sketches of the first six Bishops of Virginia.

The initial chapters are printed from the manuscript of an unfinished history of the Virginia Church, a work which Dr. Goodwin had undertaken at the solicitation of many friends. We think there can be no question that had he been able to finish this work, it would have immediately taken front rank as an authoritative interpretation of the early period as well as of the later stages of the Church's part in the making of our nation.

The story of those first days as told by Dr. Goodwin could hardly hope to be more than a judicious editing of a mass of material which has long been the happy hunting-ground of historical critics. We believe that we have studied all that material. The testimony contained therein is as conflicting as that which might be heard in an Old Bailey trial, when a gang leader was on trial for the killing of a rival gangster. The case has been tried a hundred times; and will be settled about the same time that the commission appointed to decide the question of Hamlet's mental condition, makes its final report.

Captain John Smith is still the storm-center. He has been exalted as a sort of Hercules, or Jack the Giant Killer, by one jury; while another jury has branded him as a lying braggart, and a sycophant. Personally, we believe the truth to lie somewhat between these two estimates. To us he seems to have been a somewhat vulgar product of his age; a soldier of fortune who knew his trade as a soldier, faithful to his salt and the only man fitted to cope with the Indians; but withal hopelessly out of place and a constant irritant to the other leaders who could tolerate neither the authority nor comradeship of a man who was not a gentleman by birth.

The first fifty years of the Colony constitute a chapter in English history which will some day find a chronicler whose epic prose will furnish a means of recording the events of the most interesting era in English history. Here in Virginia England learned her first lessons in Empire. Those who came brought with them a charter which confirmed for them and for their successors "all the rights of free-born Englishmen". They were not a band of disgruntled exiles, but the soul of England in quest of high adventure. Their purpose was to build a better, broader England here. The best that was in England, either came or fostered the adventure. Those who came dimly sensed the knowledge that they were laying the foundations of the world's temple of liberty. Their program was written by the fingers of freedom. That university that was to have been built on land already cleared and cultivated for its erection, was to be for the sons of the adventurers, and for the training of Indian youths, who, when they should come of age and had been taught the responsibilities of liberty under law, should have conferred upon them "all the rights and privileges of English citizenship".

The rough pioneers who explored the rivers of Virginia in a long boat whose sail was made of the garments stripped from their bodies, stood amid the thwarts of their frail craft every morning at dawn, and chanted the psalter from the Church's service; while wandering savages peered through the rushes on the bank and listened to the strange war-song of the white man.

All the forces of nature seemed arrayed against them. Every ship that came by the Southern route brought in another visitation of yellow-fever; while a plague of rats destroyed the corn in their store-house as fast as it was gathered by barter or pillage from the Indians..

The almost insane jealousies among the leaders of this band of isolated and sorely tried adventurers, were the result of over-wrought nerves and desperate conditions; but the church-bell called to daily service, and the minister of Christ was ever busy in his work of calming the ugly passions of men. The prayer said morning and evening by the Captain of the Watch at Jamestown, is one of the great prayers in the liturgies of Christendom.

All this and much more is what Dr. Goodwin tells us in a narrative which has no need anywhere to make use of a superlative. The story as it comes from his pen is as self-restrained as the recital of a chapter in his family history by a reserved and cultured gentleman.

Chapter VI in Dr. Goodwin's book is a somewhat discursive summary of the inner life of the Church from the time of the surrender of the Company's Charter down to the Revolution. This chapter in our opinion is the best thing that has yet been written on the Colonial Church.

The sketches of the first six Bishops are as clear-cut as cameos, and are models of good taste and accurate delineation.

The list of the Colonial clergy appended to this volume contains a mass of biographical data extremely valuable and nowhere else available.

The volume deserves an honored place in the library of every man who is interested in the sources of our nation's life and ideals.

*The Colonial Church in Virginia, by the Rev. Edward Lewis Goodwin, D. D. Morehouse Publishing Co., Milwaukee.

"God, who speaks to man on every side,
Sending His voices from the outer world
Glorious in stars, and winds, and flowers, and waves,
And from the inner world of things unseen,
In hopes, and thoughts, and deep assurances—
Not seldom ceases outward speech awhile,
That the inner, isled in calm, may clearer sound."

—MacDonald.

"Nay, never falter, no great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty.
No good is certain but the steadfast mind,
The undivided will to seek the good;
'Tis that compels the elements and wings
A human music from the indifferent air.
The greatest gift a hero leaves his race
Is to have been a hero."

CHRISTIANITY AND THE COMMUNITY

"The Kingdom Come, Thy Will be done on earth"

COMMENTS ON CHILD TRAINING.

By Mary Evelyn Brydon, M. D.

Article XXII.—Christ's Commandments:

Last week I asked you to try to consider the difference between moral and Christian people. Did you do this? I hope you did, for if so you found plenty of food for thought.

It is well to start the study of a thing from the definition of it. Hence we go to Webster, and find as the gist of his long definition, that a moral man is one who conforms in his conduct to a sense of justice, of virtue and of right and wrong. You see nothing is said in the definition about Jesus Christ. On the contrary, according to the same authority, a Christian is one "who believes, or professes, or is assumed to believe, in Jesus Christ, and the truth as taught by Him—especially one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ". It is apparent here that one may be a "moral" person without being a Christian, but it is equally apparent that a person cannot be a Christian without also being a moral person.

Look keenly at your training of your own children. Which do you emphasize more, the moral virtues or the Christian virtues? Are you tending to substitute good citizenship, the Mosaic interpretation of the Ten Commandments, sportsmanship, fair-play, patriotism, etc., for Christ? Let me hasten to say that these virtues are absolutely essential in your teaching of your children, and you will find that I shall stress them vigorously when I take up the social and moral training of the child. But these moral virtues, essential as they are, do not and cannot take the place of Christ's teachings. The application of His teachings will eventually demonstrate these things in our lives, but these things without Him can not take His place in your children's. Get this straight.

Let us now see how our dear Lord interpreted the teaching of the Ten Commandments for us. After we have seen what interpretation He put upon the old Mosaic teachings we shall summarize them and endeavor to answer our own question as to the difference between a moral man and a Christian man.

I have already endeavored to show that each of the Ten Commandments has a specific teaching for you to use in the training of your children. I gave you one word for each Commandment, and, as you have not protested against these I assume that you have given at least a tentative assent to each word chosen to represent the Commandment under discussion. Continuing to use these chosen words, I shall try with the assistance of my kind advisors, to find Christ's interpretation for each, and I hope that we shall all find mutual benefit in this study.

Our Lord's favorite method of approach to such interpretations of the Old Testament as He discussed were often prefaced by "It hath been said by them of old time"—"but I say unto you". He knew that His hearers were well versed in the Mosaic teachings. He made no attempt to breaking down what they had already learned, but rather to interpret and strengthen it. This is a good pedagogical point for us mothers to take to heart in teaching our children; build the new instructions upon the old teachings. So we will take each Commandment in order and try to find out what He taught in regard to it.

The First Commandment—Belief.

Christ used the word "Believe" over and over again. He added to belief in God, "Believe also in Me". This is definite and you can't get away from that. You must therefore teach your child to believe in Jesus Christ. Get yourself a Red-Letter "Testament" and mark every word Jesus said about Himself. Then teach all He said to your child. You will also find that He interpreted the idea of God and Himself as the "Father and Son". It was our dear Lord Himself who taught us that we might go to God as we would to our earthly father and ask for everything that we needed to make us happy. But don't forget that He added that such asking should all be done "in His Name". We must go to the Father by way of the Son.

Teach your child therefore to go naturally to God as to a Father. Ask in his own words for his little wants. Let no thought of fear ever enter his little mind. Just the thought that his Father loves him, that He will always take care of him if he will open his little heart to Him, and that all his requests must be in the name of his Saviour who still lives to make intercession for him.

Therefore from the First Commandment if you want your child to be a moral man or woman when he grows up, teach him to believe in God; if you want him to be a Christian, teach him to believe in God as his Father and in Jesus Christ as God's Son and his own Saviour.

The Second Commandment—Worship.

By His example, both as a child and later as an adult, our Lord taught us that we must go to our place of worship to worship God. He showed us the place of prayer in the daily life and the necessity of being alone when we made most of our petitions to Him. But doubtless so did all the other good Jews of His time. What did Jesus add to the Second Commandment? In my opinion what He added was, Trust. Go into the temple and worship God as you were taught by Moses; ask for what you need to make you happy, for as your Father, God wants you to be happy. "You were taught," He probably said, "to join in the public prayers in the Synagogue, here is another prayer for you (the Lord's Prayer) to use when you pray." If you worship and pray and then believe that God will answer your prayers, you will receive what you asked for, if your all-wise Father thinks it will be best for you. But you must trust God to give it to you.

Like the Pharisees of old we still demand a sign. Teach your child to trust God without demanding a sign. Do you trust Him? Or do you ask and then say " know He will never hear me", "I don't deserve it, therefore, He never will", "I asked Him, but—". As long as there are any "buts" there is no trust. We are told to trust as a little child. Watch your child. Does he worry about where the next meal is to come from Does he come to you and ask anxiously, "Mother, where shall I sleep tonight", or, "Shall I have any clothes to put on tomorrow"? Never! Your child has implicit trust in you. He knows without thinking about it, that these things will be forthcoming at the proper time. He runs in and out of your house unconcernedly, he climbs to the top of the tallest tree, he walks serenely along the edge of the house gutter three stories in the air, and knows no fear. His mind is serene and at peace; he feels that he will be taken care of. Are there not angels in Heaven beholding the face of the Father whose special duty is to care for the children? Somehow the child knows this; he is fearless—until some ignorant and superstitious adult comes along and puts craven fear into his heart.

So study the child's mind and learn yourself to trust your Heavenly Father just as your little child trusts you. Then teach your growing child to trust Him also.

From the Second Commandment if you want your child to be merely a moral man teach him the worship of God; but if you want him to be a Christian teach him in addition to worship (prayer and praise) to trust to God for his care, for guidance and direction, and for all matters pertaining to his life.

THE AIMS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

Report of the Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, Secretary, to the National Conference at Des Moines, May 11, 1927.

(Concluded From Last Week.)

I have tried to work out very sketchily the inherent implication to us in our social life of one great doctrine of our Religion. Of course, they result immediately in activities. The reason why the Apostles became active as missionaries was not primarily because our Lord told them to be missionaries. It was because they were so utterly in love with Him that they looked at Him and in Him looked at their human brothers as He looked at them. "If any man would come after me, let him take up his Cross and follow me." So it is psychologically impossible for us to feel deeply the relationship to Him without following Him. Following Him means acting, doing things that imply a Cross. This works out into every department of life and creates the attitude of the Christian.

But, how am I going to get all this into the life of the Church?—to get the clergy and the people of the local parishes to accept this wider view of their Christian responsibility?

There is my problem. How am I going to meet it? I have to convert people, I have to convert leaders. The work must develop from the parish. It must grow from the local group. My problem is about what our Lord had to meet. And I have about adopted His methods.

First, we have to teach through activities. We have to supply projects that teach. For instance, the social activities of the community are not only methods of doing good. They are also means by which the person doing the good learns—or ought to learn—the problems—the injustices—the needs—of the community, and gets more and more an intelligent conviction of his responsibility in a community as a Christian.

We meet in this connection what I call the ameliorative activities. This is social work in community organizations. It is not new, it has always existed in the Church. The Charity Organization of the Church once upon a time expressed what is now done in community welfare organizations. There has been in the last generation a revolution in the methods of expression. Social Work in community activities is the re-crystallization after a revolution. Through these activities the Church must now make its expression in charity interests. Case work is the last step it seems to me. The people of the parish must accept their duties in relating themselves to these organizations and to recognize their responsibility to all community problems. These activities are a necessary result in life of the inherent social implications of doctrines, dogmas and creeds. It must be remembered, however, that they are only part. They are not the whole expression. They are, however, an important part, and must be done if the people of the Church are to live a Christian life.

The second project is the problem of the local jail. We have been suggesting this project for a number of years and we are beginning to get some activity in various parts of the country.

We have in our county jails 600,000 men, according to the census of 1923. In the lock-ups of the city, town and village there are probably 900,000 more.

The local jail as a reformative institution has a greater opportunity than any other state institution. To this jail comes every person charged with crime. Every young man, the first time he has ever been in jail, ever been accused by the state, lands in the city or county jail. He hears the steel doors clang and realizes that for the first time in his life he has lost his liberty. Certainly at this juncture the state, the Church, every reformative organization of the community ought to bring its influence to bear, to re-establish this young man in his proper social life. He needs help and he knows it.

Apparently, however, nobody else knows it. When he hears the steel door slam behind him, he wakens to the realization that he has a dozen, more or less, companions. He has been thrown into a gangway, which is the walk between cells (three or four on either side), all together holding some twelve or fourteen men. The cells are placed inside a building so that there is a wide space between the cell-block and the wall where the windows are. Consequently the gangway where he is has no natural light. It is lighted always by artificial light. It has no immediate outlet of fresh air. The group is apt to be the off-scouring of the city streets. They have nothing to do except to sit on the floor and play cards and swap stories; and the boy for the first time put in jail, day and night, day after day with no one else excepting this group to meet and talk to, naturally develops a feeling of loyalty to these men in the same position with him. They make a solid group. All the rest of the world is cut away. All that is left for him is the group of men in his gangway. And the companionship is not for a few hours; it is for day after day, with no direct sunlight, with no outside fresh air, with nothing to do, with no exercise, often for months at a time. Can any system be more fitted to make a criminal class? And we remember that over a million people every year are held in our lock-ups and county jails, and carry away what they learn there.

The department intends to press this project as aggressively as it can.

The third project is the county poor house. There are some 2,000 institutions of this kind in the counties of the United States, There are some 86,000 inmates. In the last year three studies have been published on these poor houses. They have covered all the states of the union and from them you can find out the conditions of the poor houses in the state where you come from. The department will send these three books gratis to any member of a social service department who will write for them. They will give you the information that you need in your own diocese for your own work. They are The American Poor House and Its Inmates, by Harry C. Evans; Paupers in Almshouses, U. S. Census Bureau, and The Cost of American Almshouses, Estelle M. Stewart, U. S. Department of Labor.

I commend these three projects:

(1) The community social work and activities in the town in which the parish is placed.

(2) The local jail.

(3) The poor farm.

The department urges the coöperation of the Diocesan departments in presenting to the parishes these three projects. Of course, realizing that the one fitting best the conditions is the one that they should choose. We need, however, continually to remember that the project itself, while important, is always a means to an end. It is the means by which persons doing the good learns, or ought to learn the problems, the injustices, the needs of his community and gets more and more an intelligent conviction of his responsibility in his community as a Christian. One of the cankers at the heart of much Christian living is the effort to surround oneself with people at least as comfortable and well to do and to know nothing of our brothers and sisters who are less fortunate through poverty, sickness or sin. It is part of the Christian life to suffer in helpful sympathy with those who are troubled.

When the mass of Christian people will undertake this part of the Christian life, they will go further and use their efforts to correct the social maladjustments that result in this suffering.

THE CHURCH AND THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Edited by the Reverend Karl Morgan Block, D. D.

SUGGESTIVE PROGRAMS.

FROM the Diocese of Southern Virginia come the two following programs which show the versatility of the Young People in accomplishing the elemental need of variety to create and sustain interest. Both of these programs, I am advised, originated among the Young People themselves, with the help of one of their councilors. The "Ask Me Another" craze suggests the use of an old-fashioned Bible bee, the second program.

The programs follow:

"Hymns."

After opening the League, etc., by President, the meeting is turned over to the Chairman of Group in charge of Program for the day. The program is:

Creed.

Bible Reading: Read "Venite" in Morning Prayer, which is part of Ninety-Fifth Psalm.

Hymns: (Different members of group give little talks or papers—not over two minutes each—on hymns assigned. A few verses of the hymn are sung by whole League after talk on it. A large card with name and number of hymn is held by the person talking. Play over only first line of each hymn before singing, except the last hymn, when play over whole verse.)

No. 538—"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus"—Verses 1 and 4.

No. 489—"Blessed be the Tie That Binds"—Verses 1 and 5.

No. 217—"Rock of Ages Cleft for Me"—Verses 1 and 3.

No. 560—"Golden Harps Are Sounding"—Verses 1 and 3.

No. 139—"Just As I Am"—Verses 1, 2 and 6.

No. 476—"From Greenland's Icy Mountains"—Verses 1 and 4.

No. 25—"All Praise to Thee, My God, This Night"—Verses 1, 2 and 7.

Benediction.

"The Ageless Hymns of the Living Church," published by the New York Sunday School Commission, No. 416 Lafayette Avenue, New York City, twenty cents a copy, was the book used for this program. The chapters were cut out, marked, and put in folders, or folder for each hymn.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except over the signature of the writer.

THE THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES.

Mr. Editor:

The statement has been made by Mr. Marsilliot, in The Chronicle of February, 1926, and repeated in his answer to Bishop Gailor, in The Chronicle for May, 1927, that "the Resolution passed by the General Convention (of 1925) provides that at its next session Article X (of the Constitution) shall be so amended as to exclude the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion from the Prayer Book".

I submit—and I am very glad to believe—that this statement of Mr. Marsilliot is not accurate. No resolution specifically and directly providing for an amendment to Article X of the Constitution of this Church was introduced or adopted by the General Convention of 1925. The resolution offered by Dr. Morehouse, and which was adopted, reads as follows: "Resolved, The House of Bishop concurring, That the Thirty-nine Articles, together with their titlepage be omitted from the Book of Common Prayer, and that reference to the Thirty-nine Articles in the Table of Contents be omitted, and that the proposed changes be made known to the several dioceses in order that they may be adopted by the next General Convention in accordance with the provisions or Article X of the Constitution."[1] This resolution, passed by the House of Deputies, was concurred in by the House of Bishops.[2]

I submit that in order to make the foregoing Resolution effective, provision should have been made in the language of the Resolution for amending Article X of the Constitution in accordance with the proposed change. But this was not done. Consequently—and for this many of us, I am sure, will be devoutly thankful—consequently, no final action in this matter can be taken by the Convention of 1928; inasmuch as no specific amendment to the Costitution has as yet been offered. Should such amendment be offered in the Convention of 1928, final action could not be taken before 1931.

Article X of the Constitution, as it now stands, reads as follows: "The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments and other rites and ceremonies of the Church, together with the Psalter . . . . . and Articles of Religion, as now established or hereafter amended by the authority of this Church, shall be in use in all the dioceses and missionary districts of this Church." My point, Mr. Editor, is that the action contemplated by Dr. Morehouse's resolution is incomplete and therefore inadequate, inasmuch as the question is not simply that of removing the Articles of Religion from the Prayer Book, but of altering the fundamental and organic law of this Church. To enact legislation for the purpose of removing the Articles from the Prayer Book without at the same time providing for a corresponding amendment of Article X of the Constitution, would be a futile proceeding, and could only land us in a legislative muddle. It is evident that Churchmen have not as yet deliberately faced the issues which are here involved. I repeat that it ought to be clearly understood that final action in reference to the Articles of Religion cannot be taken by the approaching

General Convention of 1928.

Now, turning to another phase of this question as to the status of the Thirty-nine Articles. It is a matter of record that they were established by this Church, acting through her Bishops, clergy and laity, in the General Convention of 1801. They have ever since that time been recognized, and are still recognized by the Constitution, as we have seen, in Article X. It is true, no doubt, that their status and authority does not entirely depend upon whether or not they are printed in the Prayer Book. But the practical question must be faced: If not printed in the Prayer Book, where are they to be printed? That brings up the further and final question, which is really at the root of this whole matter: Are the Thirty-nine Articles to remain established as a part of the teaching of this Church, or are they to be disestablished and flung into the discard? There is no doubt that this latter is the purpose of many who are advocating this change.

But to return to the question of where, if not in their present and time-honored place, are the Articles of Religion to be printed in time to come? As a part of the Constitution? That would hardly be a practicable solution. It would seem both unsuitable and awkward to print a rather lengthy set of articles (of religion) as part of another set of articles (of organic ecclesiastical law). Moreover, it would probably mean an alteration in the title-page of the Constitution and Canons. The dignity of the Articles of Religion, as an expression of the doctrinal teaching of this Church can only be secured by linking them up, as at present, with the Prayer Book, or with the Constitution. Which of these two methods is the preferable one? There can be no question whatever that the method now in use, and which, so far as I am aware, has always been in use in every branch of the Anglican Communion, is by far the most satisfactory: namely, that of setting forth the Articles as a part of, or as an appendix to; at any rate, of printing them within the covers of the Book of Common Prayer. Only thus can they be "known and read of all men". Do we wish, by printing them in the Journal of General Convention, in connection with the Constitution and Canons, to restrict their perusal mainly or chiefly to a privileged few, the members, namely, of the General Convention? Are they unprofitable for the clergy and laity in general? Mr. Editor, it comes to this: Are the Articles of Religion worth while, or are they not? Are we ready to abandon them, or do we wish to retain them as a part of our Anglican inheritance? Hastily and lightheartedly to pass a piece of ill-considered legislation, such as I believe this Resolution to be, means failure to face what is in reality a most serious issue.

Some, at least, of our Church people have borne witness to the value of the Articles of Religion to themselves personally. For myself, may I say that, not having been brought up in the Communion of this Church of ours, I was greatly helped on my way thither by reading their sober and well-considered statements of doctrine. They gave me assurance that on passing from the Communion of the Reformed Church in America to that of our own Church, I should not be abandoning principles which I held, and still hold dear—the principles, namely, of the Protestant Reformation. I believe that there are others who have had an experience similar to my own. If, by our historic Orders of the Ministry, we have points of contact and of understanding with Roman as well as with Eastern Catholicism, it seems to some of us as a matter of no less importance that through our Articles of Religion we have points of contact and of sympathy with Protestant Christendom. Let us beware how we cut asunder these latter bonds of understanding and of sympathy. I am sure that the effect of such a proceeding would be to hinder rather than to help the cause of Christian unity. We should be narrowing and impoverishing our Church; we might, indeed, be imperiling the allegiance of many of her most earnest and sincere members. Brethren and Fathers in the Lord, let us not act in this matter "unadvisedly or lightly". Rather, let us reconsider this whole question "reverently, . . . advisedly, soberly and in the fear of God".

THE CHURCH'S TIMID HESITATING MESSAGE.

Mr. Editor:

After a perusal of the able and convincing pamphlet of Hon. C. L. Marsilliot—"Shall the Protestant Episcopal Church Be Betrayed"?—the thoughtful reader is forced to the conclusion that within our Church there are two opposing and utterly irreconcilable forces. Our house is divided against itself. How long can it thus continue?

On the one side are those whose minds are so constituted that they forever turn their eyes longingly toward the great Roman Catholic communion, approving of almost all they see there save, perhaps, the authority of the Pope. Though virtuous and pious in their personal characters, they are hopelessly hostile and bitter toward the intellectual and spiritual atmosphere of the Protestant Reformation, and all that it stands for. Their path leads backward toward medievalism and an extreme elevation of the priestly influence—the end of which is inevitably priestcraft, superstition and stagnation. In our judgment, the Southern Churchman was right when it stated editorially last winter that a disagreeably large proportion of the clergy belong to this school of thought, or feel kindly toward it. We regret this deeply.

On the other hand are the great mass of the laity and a respectable number of clergy, who regard the Reformation as one of the great spiritual and intellectual landmarks of history, a second Pentecost. Now, bearing in mind the great gulf that separates the two schools of thought, and that the rift between them threatens to split our Church in two, is it not almost ludicrous (were it not so serious) to reflect that the Conference on Faith and Order, soon to meet at Lausanne, is intended to lay plans for the ultimate reunion of Christendom? The Episcopal Church, which has been instrumental in calling the Conference, is itself in danger of a new schism. The picture is a remarkable one.

Postponing thoughts upon these lines, we seek to show some of the dangers that menace our beloved communion on account of the efforts of those who have no sympathy with her true genius and Protestant spirit. It is possible to view the subject from several angles. Let us take but one. I refer to the present attitude and spirit of our Church toward the great non-Christian world at large. The Church's attitude is now, and for a considerable time has been, that of a timid, hesitating, apologetic Church, lacking a vigorous message, weak in both preaching, prayer, and faith, trying to attract new members by short services, fine music, and pleasant social gatherings. I shall speak now of but one of these three weaknesses, namely, that of preaching.

The Church's weakness is abundantly evident in her message to the world as contained in her preaching. For years, the pulpit of the Episcopal Church has lacked old-fashioned apostolic earnestness and fire, as well as scholarship and learning and a knowledge of the Bible. The spirit of Saint Peter's Pentecostal sermon that won 3,000 souls for the infant Church, of Saint Paul's indictment of world wickedness as shown in the opening chapter of Romans, of St. Jude's burning denunciation of ungodly men—these things are alien to a large part of the sermons that emanate from many Episcopal pulpits today. Instead of trying to save souls, there has been substituted the foolish judgment to come, or of another world, or of the worth of an individual soul. Much is said of the brotherhood of man, of organized charity, of the raising of money; and the world is often given to understand that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is, after all, an easy Gospel, and that the world itself is a pretty good world that has no great need of salvation.

The price we have paid for this sort of thing has been the loss of untold thousands of the vigorous, earnest, intellectual minds of the world, men who possess the true Protestant spirit of inquiry and progress, coupled with that profound reverence for the majesty of the maker of this world that has generally characterized the deepest and most earnest side of Protestantism. Is it any wonder that when a Church has become possessed of such a spirit, that Church is found trying to repeal the manly and outspoken confession of faith embodied in our Thirty-Nine Articles?

Now, what would be the effect upon the Church's life of a further step toward medievalism, and away from the great awakening of the Sixteenth Century? Would it not tend toward a still more marked belittling of the sermon, and toward a still more extravagant emphasis upon sacerdotalism? If you doubt this, think how small a place the sermon now possesses in most of the so-called "extreme" or "advanced" parishes, even though certain priests in such parishes may be fine preachers. The "mass" is everything in importance; the sermon quite secondary. The Pentecostal "gift of tongues" is no longer the thing of first importance. I use the expression "gift of tongues" to mean the gift of a mighty and living voice, the voice of those who are filled with the majesty of the thought that inspired the prophet Elijah in his declaration—"as the Lord God of Israel liveth before whom I stand"—no flattery, no shuffling, no apologies. The Bishops' Crusade has given us a fine suggestion of the new life that would come with such an awakening. God grant it may grow a hundred-fold. It may be the beginning of a better day.

But, if the Church would seek the path toward spiritual decay and death, let her follow the treacherous and deadly lead set by the New Orleans Convention when it lightly adopted the motion to strike out the Thirty-nine Articles from the Prayer Book, and thus turn her back upon the confession of her Protestant faith and spirit, which declares with Saint Paul that "faith cometh by hearing", and then asks, "How shall they hear without a preacher"?

STRANGE DOCTRINES.

Mr. Editor:

Those who read sermons in our Church papers and statements in the daily press, and hear views of theology (?) expressed by ordained teachers in our Church are often amazed. They are also grieved. These are strange doctrines.

I have received recently several sermons by a popular preacher in one of our largest churches. I give a few quotations:

"We are still talking like that, and we will go on talking until we leave miracles and supernatural nonsense, and accept Jesus as a man..." "I will be perfectly frank and admit that I say the Apostles' Creed only because I am expected to say it. It certainly does not mean what I believe. It is a lovely, quaint old hymn; but it is entirely inadequate to my modern feeling and yours." Again: "When I read the Sermon on the Mount I know that is my creed." As if that were all that the Christ had said! Is it not rather the code of conduct of Christians with themselves and others?

Another quotation: "And what is God? God is the beauty that I yearn for and yet have not found. Somewhere in this infinite universe, all that I love and all that loves me is gathered into some royal and supreme selfhood. Jesus saw distinctly into the heart of the mystery of the Universe and called it Father! . . . . He was smiling through (through human insults, etc.) up to the understanding central Selfhood to that ineffable beauty He called Father!"

Again. The instance of the earnest-minded young man, running to Him with the pressing question, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life"? Here is what the preacher says: "The winsomeness, the fun in the heart of Jesus broke through as the young man knelt down. He laughed at him for kneeling down. . . . And then suddenly, gaily, teasing him. . . . ." Then: "Why do you call me good? Now young man, do not make the mistake of saying I am God. I am not God." Not here; and nowhere else did Christ say that.

Compare St. John 20:26-29. Here the Christ not only accepted the brief creed of St. Thomas, but He commended it.

Also St. John 8:58, 59; and Hebrews 1:6.

One more extract. In preaching on the narrative of the great Supper—so full of pathos over the fate of those who shall not "taste of my supper"—"The fun, of course, begins to dance through the story when we realize what is the Master's thought!"

And all this from one who thus violates the vows taken twice when ordained to the ministry in the Protestant Episcopal Church! but continues in such ministry! Surely this is an age of iconoclasm. God grant it may be a passing age.

DIOCESAN COUNCILS AND CONVENTIONS

WEST VIRGINIA.

The fiftieth annual council of the Diocese of West Virginia assembled in Trinity Church, Morgantown, Wednesday, May 18. It opened with the service of Holy Communion, in which the celebrants were Bishops Gravatt and Strider. The council sermon was preached by the Rev. Paca Kennedy, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Virginia. Dr. Kennedy stressed the modern tendency to magnify the humanity of Christ at the expense of His divinity, mentioned a number of recent lives of Jesus, representative of separate viewpoints and stated that the only way to deal justly with His claims was to take in equal consideration both His humanity and divinity. Bishop Gravatt, after presenting his Diary, gave an account of the growth and development of the Church in West Virginia, of the difficulties that had to be overcome and how largely it was, due to the devotion and vision of its first Bishop, Bishop Peterkin, the fiftieth anniversary of whose election to the episcopate he suggested should be fittingly observed. A committee was appointed for that purpose. Bishop Strider gave a summary of his official acts and a comparison by decades of the work and growth of mission points in this diocese, showing how they justified themselves in every way.

The Rev. J. C. Ambler, Grafton, was elected Registrar of the Diocese. The council instituted a standing committee of five on evangelism. At the service on Wednesday night the sermon was preached by the Rev. Richard W. Trapnell, Wilmington, Delaware. His subject was Personal Evangelism.

On Thursday reports were read from the different committees and boards. Miss Etta Ambler was given opportunity to address the council concerning her work and also Mr. Harnick, of the Near East Relief. The application of St. Luke's, Welch, and St. John's, Gerry, to be admitted as McDowell parish was granted. The following were elected to the Standing Committee: the Rev. Messrs. C. H. Goodwin, J. L. Oldham, A. B. Mitchell; Mr. Forrest Brown, Judge F. Beckwith and Mr. C. A. Miller. Delegates elected to the Provincial Synod were: the Rev. Messrs. Horace Brown, J. H. A. Bomberger, W. P. Chrisman, J. S. Alfriend; Messrs. R. L. Bland, C. A. Miller, J. M. White and W. C. Gardiner.

The council appropriated $500 to be used at the discretion of the rector of Trinity Church, Morgantown, the Rev. W. G. Geherie, in relation to student work at the University of West Virginia, Morgantown.

Mr. S. G. Cargill was elected Executive Secretary of the diocese for the ensuing year.

At the final service Thursday night an address was given by Dr. John E. Winters, of the Psychology Department of the University on the Needs of a Transient Age.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Rural Work was stressed at the forty-third annual convocation of the Church in North Dakota, held in Fargo. Conferences on this subject were led by the Rev. H. W. Foreman, National Secretary for Rural Work.

On May 16 all convocation business was cleared away and the rest of the time, until the eighteenth, was used in conferences on religious education, foreign-born work, field service and rural work. Miss Frances H. Withers, Mr. Percy J. Knapp, and the Rev. Harwood Sturtevant of Racine, Wis., conducted the conference periods.

The Bishop was the celebrant at the opening service on Sunday, May 15. The officers of convocation were re-elected, except the Rev. T. A. Simpson, of Valley City, was elected registrar.

MINNESOTA.

"Our Church was never in better condition than it is now," was the statement of the Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, D. D., Presiding Bishop of the Church, while guest during the seventieth annual council of the diocese held in St. Paul's Church, Minneapolis, May 24 and 25. "I am looking forward to a great revival which I expect will, in the near future, bring many new members into the Church, and which will bring back former members to this fold. Professing members will become practicing members," further asserted the Presiding Bishop. These remarks were made in commenting upon the splendid report made by the Diocesan Commission on Evangelism in regard to the Bishops' Crusade held in the Diocese of Minnesota. This report was one of the high lights of the convention.

Nearly three hundred clerical and lay delegates were present to greet the Presiding Bishop of the Church and to honor the Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. Frank Arthur McElwain, D. D., on the double occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of his consecration as a bishop and the tenth anniversary of his election as Bishop of Minnesota. At a dinner attended by more than six hundred persons on the evening of the first day of the convention held in honor of both the Presiding Bishop and the Bishop of the Diocese, Bishop McElwain was presented with a pastoral staff by the clergy of the diocese.

In commenting upon the budget quota of $38,700 assigned to the diocese by the National Council, Bishop McElwain, in his annual address, pleaded for a closing of the gap between the actual payments of approximately $30,000, and the full amount assigned, stating that the task is not too great a one for the resources of the diocese.

A new field department is being organized and plans were laid before the delegates for a year-round program of education in regard to the Church's Program. Previously the heads of the various departments of the Bishop and Directorate have had the responsibility of the Church's Program, but now, with the new field department, headed by the Rev. A. E. Knickerbocker, one of the Associate Secretaries of the field department of the National Council and representative of the Sixth Province on the National Council, great things are expected.

The Rev. Walter B. Keiter was re-elected secretary, and Mr. John C. Wade treasurer of the diocese.

The entire Standing Committee was reelected. Mr. James A. Latta of Minneapolis, for many years a member of the Standing Committee, died during the past year, and his place was filled by the Bishop in the appointment of Mr. B. F. Beardsley, who was re-elected.

Delegates to the Provincial Synod elected were the Rev. Messrs. A. E. Knickerbocker, P. E. Osgood, D. D., F. D. Butler, Frank Zoubek and G. C. Menefee, and Messrs. C. J. Gutgesell, C. B. Lyon, R. A. Moore, M. C. Lightner, C. A. Rasmussen and C. M. Morse.

Summer Schools and Conferences

SEWANEE SUMMER TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Sewanee Summer Training School for Church Workers will be held at Sewanee, Tennessee, from July 26 to August 24, the first two weeks to be given to the Young People's Division, and the last two to the Adult Division and the School of the Prophets.

Bishop Juhan, of Florida, known as the "Young People's Bishop", will be in charge of the Young People's Division, with the Rev. Melville Johnson and Mrs. W. J. Cranston as chief counsellors. There will be an unusually strong faculty of young people's workers.

The Adult Division will be directed by Bishop Green, of Mississippi. The deans of departments are as follows: Dr Homer W. Starr, Social Service; Dr. W. J. Loaring Clark, Missions; Dr. Gardiner L. Tucker, Religious Education; Mrs. John R. Wheeler, Women's Organizations. Thirty-seven courses will be offered, under an able faculty which includes Dr. Burton Scott Easton and Dr. Charles H. Boynton, of the General Theological Seminary; Dr. John W. Wood and Miss Laura Boyer, of the National Department of Missions; Mr. Leon G. Palmer, General Secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; Dr. Chas. L. Wells, Dean of the Sewanee Theological School; the Rev. Harold Holt, of Ohio, and the Rev. H. H. Lumpkin, of Wisconsin.

The School of the Prophets will be under Bishop Penick, Coadjutor of North Carolina.

Full program and information may be had on application to Miss Emma Twiggs, Executive Secretary, 531 North Twentieth Street, Birmingham, Alabama.

THE CORNELL CONFERENCE.

The Church Regional Conference on Rural Church and Social Work will hold its fourth annual session at Ithaca, N. Y., from July 11 to 23, inclusive. This conference is an extension of that held annually at Madison, Wisconsin, and is fostered by the National Department for Rural Work.

The purpose of this conference is educational, for clergy actually engaged in rural work, and those whose work is so strangely placed as to have rural possibilities.

The time and place of this conference are arranged to include attendance at the School for Town and Country Ministers conducted by the Agricultural Department of Cornell University, for which an excellent faculty of experts in rural study has been assembled.

The conference group will room and dine together to promote fellowship and exchange of ideas, to make possible a program of daily devotions, and to reduce expenses. The Rev. Herbert Hawkins, of the Order of the Holy Cross, on furlough from Liberia, will be the conference chaplain.

No registration fee is required: one registration includes both the Cornell School and the Church Regional Conference.

The Rev. C. R. Allison, of Warsaw, N. Y., is conference director, and the Rev. William J. Vincent is registrar, to whom all inquiries should be addressed.

RACINE SCHOOL OF RELIGION.

The Racine School of Religion will begin its third year on July 12 and end on August 2, 1927. In the summer of 1926 men and women came for the purpose of studying theology. Within the group there were wide differences of conviction and custom in religious thinking and living. Seventeen dioceses were represented within the membership of twenty-five, and almost as many schools of thought as dioceses, but this is normal in the Episcopal Church, and in no way prevented a strong feeling of fellowship.

The School does not exhibit a stiffly academic atmosphere nor a rigorously conventional one. The students come for the purpose of work, and the three weeks are well spent. In addition to the intellectual and spiritual opportunities, the Racine Campus is a perfect place in mid-summer, and it could be considered as sort of a vacation.

A vital part of the School is the intimate personal contact with the faculty. There is always a time and a place for personal interviews, for recreation and friendly conversation. Every day is full of activity without a too exhaustive program. One has the happy privilege of choice for the whole afternoon, and the student body chooses plenty of time for serious reading and study, in response to its inspiring leaders.

Leaflets giving detailed information of the School, the facilities at Taylor Hall, and the recreational feature, can be secured by applying to Mrs. George Biller, Taylor Hall, Racine, Wisconsin.

THE WELLESLEY CONFERENCE AND SCHOOL.

The Conference for Church Work and Summer School for Church Music, will be held June 27-July 7, 1927.

Through the courtesy of the President and Authorities, the Conference and School will again occupy the buildings of Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.

The Conference for Church Work, established on a permanent basis in 1910, is intended for instruction and training in the spirit and method of Church Work, and every department has been given a place on the program. Among the courses and conferences listed are those on Church History, Personal Religion, Young People's Work, The Bible, Missions and Church Extension, Religious Education and Social Service.

The School for Church Music will include classes on Anthem Studies, Plainsong, Choir Training and Hymns For the Church.

The President of the Corporation is the Rt. Rev. James DeW. Perry, D. D; Director in Residence, the Rt. Rev. Charles L. Slattery, D. D.; Chaplain, the Rev. George L. Richardson, D. D.; Dean of the Faculty, the Rev. Charles H. Boynton, Ph. D., D. D.; Dean of the Music School, Thompson Stone; Advisor in the Young People's Fellowship, the Rev. Nathanael B. Groton.

For information regarding registration, etc., write to Mrs. Grace H. Caddoo, 37 Gleason St., Dorchester, Mass.

Important Meeting of the House of Bishops

The House of Bishops, meeting in New York City on June 1 and 2, with sixty-nine present, eight more than necessary for a quorum, accepted the resignations of Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, Bishop Thurston of Oklahoma, and Bishop Thomas of Wyoming. The House elected as Missionary Bishop of the District of Oklahoma, the Rev. Thomas Casady, now rector of All Saints' Church, Omaha, Neb. The Rev. Percy H. Silver, D. D., rector of the Church of the Incarnation, New York City, was elected Missionary Bishop of Wyoming. Bishop Slattery, as coadjutor succeeds Bishop Lawrence. Bishop Thurston resigns on account of ill health; Bishop Thomas is to become chairman of the Board of Overseers of the Philadelphia Divinity School.

The session began with a celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The bishops were guests of Bishop Manning for lunch. The business sessions of the House were held in the Synod House, on Wednesday. On Thursday, the bishops moved down to Calvary Church.

The House unanimously adopted a statement on China, recommended by the special committee on foreign missions:

"Regarding conditions in China, the committee feels it is impossible to make any statement other than to record its conviction that there should be no thought of lessening our work in China when the way shall be opened for its full resumption, and to express its gratitude to God for the splendid fidelity and bravery manifested by our clergy and lay workers and by the native Christians. Your committee has full faith that the Church's work in China will be continued with unabated zeal and increased efficiency if and when a stable government shall be established."

On Mexico, the committee reported the following, upon which similar action was taken: "The committee recommends that this House records and expresses its high appreciation of the distinguished and effective service rendered by the Bishop of Mexico during the troubled conditions prevailing in that Republic."

A request was received for the election of a white missionary bishop for Tohoku, Japan, but action was deferred.

Bishop Hall presented a report on the status of resigned bishops who later accept a cure, which was ordered printed for the use of the members of the House, and will receive further consideration.

A resolution was adopted expressing

"to the Bishops of Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas, and through them to their clergy and people, our deep sympathy with them in the disaster that is falling upon them in the great flood. We have full confidence that the people in the Church will in addition to their gifts to all sufferers in the flood, make liberal contributions toward the upbuilding of the work which has been damaged or destroyed".

The House also expressed to the Bishop of East Carolina "its profound and grateful appreciation of his most valuable service as chairman of the National Commission on Evangelism. His deep spirit of consecration, his spiritual wisdom, his loving personality, have contributed greatly to the success of the Bishops' Crusade. We expressly hope that he will continue to serve the National Commission as its chairman until the next General Convention, and that steps will be taken to continue the Crusade and make the Commission on Evangelism a permanent and integral part of the Church organization".

The House acted favorably on a recommendation that the work in Santo Domingo be transferred from the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Porto Rico to that of the Bishop of Haiti.

Three of the eight bishops who have been consecrated since last General Convention, Bishop Stires of Long Island, Bishop Mitchell of Arizona, and Bishop Coadjutor Helfenstein of Maryland, were present and were welcomed by Bishop Murray, who told that he hoped they either had or would attain "the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job, and the charity of St. John".

Bishop Darst, Chairman of the National Commission on Evangelism, informed the House of Bishops that it would be impossible for him to accept the proposition which had been made by the Commission that he continue actively in charge of the follow-up campaign of the Bishops' Crusade during a period of four years. Bishop Darst said that he was inclined at first to give favorable consideration to the plan, but that after consulting with members of the House of Bishops and with the leaders among the clergy and laity of his diocese, he found that the work of his diocese absolutely precluded the possibility of his separating himself from it for so long a period. The Bishop has consented, however, to continue actively in charge until the meeting of the next General Convention in October, 1928, and following that, to give as much of his time and counsel as he finds possible. The Executive Committee of the Commission in the meantime will endeavor to work out their plans in accordance with this decision.

Church Intelligence

Religious Activities in China.

Bishop Graves, writing on May 2 from Shanghai, says:

"I confirmed a class of fifteen yesterday at St. Paul's. Owing to the troubles, they are not able to carry on their services in the new church and so have gone back to their old quarters in Shantung Road temporarily. It was a good service and the church was full. I always appreciate the work of the English Church Missionary Society when I confirm a class at this church. The congregation, you will remember, was originally CMS and was transferred to us. You can see the traces of the thorough work that was done in the way the rector, the Rev. H. Y. Yao, preaches and the way the congregation follows the Lessons and Epistle and Gospel in their Bibles. I suppose people at home can hardly realize that in the midst of these terrible times a Bishop can confirm and celebrate Holy Communion for a congregation of Christian Chinese. It is a great encouragement even to us out here to have worship go on and the life of the Church continue in spite of all that has happened.

"On the St. John's Compound there are various religious activities which are exceptional. Every Sunday a parade service of the British troops is held in the assembly room at St. John's. Both the Devons and the Bedford-Hertfordshire regiments attend and there are between four and five hundred men. The Roman Catholics of the Devons have a service each Sunday at nine and the non-Conformists of the two regiments have a service at the same place at a later hour.

"Our six o'clock Sunday evening service at St. John's is very much larger than usual because of the people from Hankow and Anking, and we have a choir of men and ladies from up river and from our own mission which adds greatly to the heartiness of the service.

"I am in constant touch by mail with the Chinese at Nanking, Yangchow, Zangzok, Wusih and Soochow. Where the clergy have been able to stay or have returned, services go on much as usual, and in the other places the catechists do what they can to keep things going. Nothing has encouraged me more than the way in which our Chinese have shouldered responsibilities."

Flood Conditions In Louisiana.

A recent thanksgiving mass meeting for escape from the flood, in Alexandria, La., brought Romanists, Jews, Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, B'Nai Brith, Ku Klux and K. of C., side by side on one platform. The Rev. W. S. Slack, rector of St. James' Church, writes:

"Oldtimers may recall overflows of the '50's, '60's and '70's, later generations those of the '80's, '90's and nearer times, but never in the history of Louisiana as a state has there been such widespread devastation as will be recorded as having taken place in 1927.

"Not a single parish on the west bank of the Mississippi or on either side of the Ouachita, Red or Atchafalaya, but has felt its fatal embrace and if prophecies fail not, this year will see the termination of all efforts to raise sugar on a large scale in the "Sugar Bowl" of the U. S. A. While cane will be raised in small quantities throughout the South, for syrup, as a sugar crop this flood has written "finis", and the cultivation of cane on a large scale will be as much a thing of the past as is that of indigo which formed one of the chief products of the earlier settlers of the State.

"What will take the place of sugar remains to be seen, but the breaking up of the old baronial estates on which in ante-bellum and post-bellum times the planter reigned almost a feudal lord will be soon only a recollection to be embalmed in history and legend. If it be followed by the influx of a thrifty class of men and women who will 'stick to the farm' and be content, as were our immigrant ancestors to live by, on and through, the farm, success will be in store for us, and the richest lands in these United States will soon be in flower as the rose.

"The times of transition will be hard, but there is in store for us an inevitable return to the lands, if we are to survive as a nation. With such broad expanse of territory as is ours, we cannot remain an urban people. The fields must be cultivated, the people must live on the lands, and the future will be bright for us when we realize it fully. This flood may prove a blessing in disguise if the nation awakes to its responsibility and undertakes the curbing of the mighty power of 'The Father of Waters'. It is an engineering scheme and we have the men and the money. We now need to apply the brains and the effort, and by God's help success will crown our efforts."

The Du Bose School.

Du Bose Memorial Training School, Monteagle, Tenn., has just received from the will of J. D. and S. B. Patten, of Cleveland, Tenn., two thousand dollars toward the endowment of the school.

The students work among the mountain people of Tennessee, going to communities where there is no church or organization holding services. They would like to get, if possible, a little portable organ, "that could be moved about on one shoulder."

New Dean at St. Stephen's College.

Upon nomination of the president and faculty, the trustees of St. Stephen's College have appointed as dean of the college, to succeed Dean Edwin C. Upton, retired, Professor Lyford Paterson Edwards, Ph. D., of the Department of Social Sciences. After taking honors in Classics at McGill University, Dr. Edwards went to Chicago, where he was graduated in 1908 from the Western Theological Seminary. He was ordained by Bishop Anderson and for several years was rector of St. Matthew's Church, Evanston, Ill. He was made Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy by the University of Chicago and became a member of the faculty of Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, whence he came to St. Stephen's College in 1919.

At the same time the faculty elected as its chairman for the coming year Lucius Rogers Shero, Ph. D., Hoffmann Professor of Greek. He is the son of that Dr. Shero who was for some time president of Racine College and is an honor graduate of Oxford University. He has been at Annandale for seven years.

The college has announced the promotion of Associate Professor Joseph Edward Harry, Ph. D., to be Professor of Classics.

John T. Krumpelmann, Ph. D., has been elected Associate Professor of Germanic Language and Literature, to come into residence in September. Dr. Krumpelmann is now Associate Professor of the same subject in the University of North Carolina. He is a Master of Tulane University and a Doctor of Harvard University, in which institution he held a traveling fellowship in 1924-25. He is the author of "Bayard Taylor: Interpreter of Germany to America".

The entire faculty at St. Stephen's remains intact for the coming academic year.

The Rev. Charles Clingman Declines Coadjutorship, Diocese of Lexington.

The Rev. Charles Clingman, rector of the Church of the Advent, Birmingham, Alabama, who was elected Bishop-Coadjutor of the Diocese of Lexington, at the special council, held May 10, at Trinity Church, Covington (the Rev. J. D. Gibson, rector), has caused great disappointment throughout the diocese by declining the Coadjutorship. Mr. Clingman felt that the call to stay in Birmingham was more urgent and imperative.

Bishop Burton, Bishop of Lexington, has met with reluctant acquiescence in his request that no further action be taken in matter until regular annual council which meets on February 14, 1928, at the parish of the Rev. Wm. S. Blackshear, St. John's, Versailles, Kentucky.

Mission at Ocean View.

Mr. E. C. Mercer, the lay evangelist, conducted a series of meetings at Ocean View, from May 15 to May 29. These meetings were under the auspices of the five churches of Ocean View, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Christian and Episcopal. The meetings which were held in a large tent were well attended, as many as one thousand being present at some. The Rev. John Gass, of Charleston, West Virginia, was with Mr. Mercer for one week and his sermons were well received.

These meetings are held each year and this is the first time that the speakers have been Episcopalians.

Diocesan Convention, Young People's Service League.

The fourth annual convention of the Young People's Service League of the diocese was held in St. James' Church, Richmond, the Rev. G. Freeland Peter, D. D., rector, on May 20 and 21.

The convention began with a reception in St. James' Parish House on Friday evening, and addresses were made by Mr. Harry Hodges, of St. James Y. P. S. L., and Bishop Brown. The closing service was a Corporate Celebration of the Holy Communion on Sunday morning and a special service with the Rev. Dr. Peter as the preacher.

The business of the convention was transacted at the meetings on Saturday, consisting of reports of officers, a round table discussion of problems of the Service League, and inspiring address by the Rev. Newton Middleton, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Norfolk. Officers elected were: Mr. Martin Mason, President, Clarendon, Va.; Miss Mary Nichols, Alexandria; Mr. Asa Fuchs, Charlottesville, and Mr. Thomas Reed, Richmond, as Vice-Presidents; Miss Natalie Saunders, Richmond, Secretary, and Miss Crystal Brown, Charlottesville, Treasurer.

"Walker" Church Tablet Unveiled.

On Wednesday afternoon, June 1, at Grace Church, Cismont, a tablet was unveiled, marking the foundation stones of the old "Walker" Church, whose records date from 1742. The occasion was made the annual pilgrimage of Virginia Colonial Dames and members of the organization from various sections of the State attended the exercises. The Rev. G. MacL. Brydon, historiographer of the diocese, was the principal speaker, his subject being the influence of the Colonial Church in Virginia.

The tablet, on a native boulder, contains the following inscription:

Here Was the Doorway of the Colonial Church, Given By the Walkers and Served By the Maurys For Their Kinsfolk and Friends. The Builders of Old Albemarle. Erected By The Blue Ridge Committee of the Colonial Dames of America in the State of Virginia 1927.

The old church, and the present-day parish, received its name from Dr. Thomas Walker, first explorer of Kentucky and friend and aide of Washington, who lived in the parish, and whose family gave the land upon which the church stands. The best known rectors of the Colonial period were the Rev. James Maury, and his son, the Rev. Matthew Maury, descendants of a Huguenot family, who held the charge between them from 1754 to 1808. In addition to their pastoral work, they kept a classical school, one of the most famous in Virginia in its day, in which Thomas Jefferson, and many others who became leading men in Virginia, received their early training. Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury, "The Pathfinder of the Seas" was the grandson of one and the nephew of the other of these ministers.

The Bishops' Crusade in Christchurch Parish.

A successful Crusade Mission was held in Christchurch Parish, Middlesex County, the Rev. A. Campbell Tucker, rector, the week of May 3, by the Rev. R. Cary Montague. Mr. Montague spoke in the afternoon and again in the evening, alternating the services between Christ Church and Epiphany, Urbanna. Mr. Montague also spoke at four schools in the parish, and held a children's service in Epiphany Friday afternoon.

The question box was used with inteest, many questions being asked at each service.

Mr. Montague also spoke to the boys of Christchurch School several times during his stay in the parish.

Epiphany Church.

The Rev. R. Cary Montague, City Missionary of Richmond, will have charge of the services at Epiphany Church, Barton Heights, Richmond, during the summer, and until a rector is secured. The Rev. J. H. Gibboney, who recently resigned the rectorship of Epiphany, has purchased a home in Wytheville, and will take up his residence there in the near future.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Summer Appointments.

Bishop Jett is making arrangements for the supplying of vacant churches this summer by students of Virginia Seminary.

Mr. J. J. Ambler, Jr., will take St. John's, Waynesboro, and the Church of the Good Shepherd at Folly Mills.

Mr. Lloyd W. Clark will supply the churches at Buena Vista, Glasgow and Natural Bridge Station.

Mr. John A. Winslow will assist Dean H. H. Young in the Associate Missions field; having his headquarters at Dante.

Church Unity at Wytheville.

The Young People's Society of St. John's Church, Wytheville, the Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, rector, exchanged visits during the month of May with the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church.

St. John's recently contributed a pulpit and twenty pews toward the furnishing of the new building at Christ Church, Pearisburg.

The Rev. James A. Figg, of Christiansburg, conducted a mission during the week of May 30 to June 3, at St. Peter's-in-the-Mountains, near Callaway in Frank County, where Miss Caryetta L. Davis is the missionary in charge.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Conference of The College of Preachers.

The third annual Conference of the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, will be held from June 13 to June 18, inclusive, on Mt. St. Alban. Clergymen, representing many states, will be in attendance, though enrollment is necessarily limited on account of limited quarters. Accommodations for out-of-town students are provided in Whitby Hall and St. Alban's School for Boys. All services in connection with the conference will be held in Bethlehem Chapel, except compline, which will be in the little sanctuary. Conferences, lectures and group discussions will be held in Whitby Hall, unless otherwise announced. This conference, the third of its kind, is in a sense preparatory to the permanent organization of the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral, which will be, it is expected, a sort of post-graduate school for the training and equipping of preachers. When it becomes possible to erect the necessary buildings, the work will be permanent, and active all through the year with a resident head. For the present, sessions must be held after the close of the Cathedral schools in order that accommodations may be had for the clergymen attending from out of town.

A spiritual healing service for the sick and afflicted will be held each Sunday night at eight o'clock in St. Paul's Church, Twenty-Third Street. The clergyman in charge will be the Rev. William Thomas Reynolds and the services will be similar to those conducted in Washington by Mr. Hickson, several years ago.

Commission on Evangelism.

Bishop Murray has reappointed the members of the Diocesan Commission on Evangelism and instructed them to proceed with renewed zeal in outlining forward work now to be undertaken. Over twenty-five parochial missions have been held in the diocese to date, and there are over fifteen more scheduled for the summer and fall months.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Closing Exercises of Schools and Diocesan Organizations.

This is the season for closing exercises of schools, and also of various diocesan organizations whose operations are suspended in the summer time. Commencement at the Cathedral Schools, and the end of the season for the Woman's Auxiliary, belong in this category. Not all the life of the diocese, however, becomes dormant in summer; in certain respects the summer is the most active period of the year.

St. Paul's School Commencement.

This was commencement week at the Cathedral School of St. Paul, Garden City. Next week the girls' school, St. Mary's, have their commencement.

On Sunday, May 29, at the morning service in the Cathedral of the Incarnation, the Very Rev. Dean Sargent preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of St. Paul's School.

Wednesday was commencement day. After a brief service in the school chapel, the exercises were held in the gymnasium. Dean Sargent announced the honors. Bishop Stires made the address and presented the diplomas to the graduating class, which numbered thirteen.

Woman's Auxiliary Out-of-Town Meeting.

The annual out-of-town meeting of the Long Island Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held Tuesday, May 31, at the Church of the Resurrection, Richmond Hill. The Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D. celebrated Holy Communion, assisted by the Very Rev. G. P. T. Sargent, Dean of the Cathedral, and the Rev. Arthur R. Cummings, rector of the church. The Bishop also preached.

In the afternoon the Rev. Mr. Murakami, of Japan, made an appeal for his work, which touched the hearts of all present. Dean Sargent followed with a strong plea for the missionary work of the Church.

Two hundred and fifty people received the Holy Communion; over four hundred and fifty were present before the day ended.

The morning offering will be given to the "Corporate Gift" of the Woman's Auxiliary, and the afternoon's to Mr. Murakami for his work. Both were good amounts.

The English Church Army.

On Tuesday, May 31, nine members of the English Church Army visited All Saints' Church, Richmond Hill. They arrived at noon and, after luncheon, and a short service in the church, men went to a prominent street corner for an out-door service. After dinner at six o'clock they proceeded to several other points and held similar services. They returned to the church at eight o'clock, and held an interesting service. Several of the men spoke, one giving a short account of the history and development of the Army; another giving a talk on Personal Religion, while Captain Kamm delivered a sermon which touched the hearts of all who heard him. The nine men spent the night in All Saints' Parish House. There was a celebration of the Holy Communion at seven o'clock on Wednesday. The out-door services were interesting. The procession was led by the Rev. Henry W. Armstrong, priest-in-charge of All Saints, and the American flag and the Union Jack were carried by the Army.

Ground Broken for New Church.

The Ven. Archdeacon Duffield broke ground recently for a new building for St. John's Mission, Springfield Gardens. The choirs of Grace Church, Jamaica, and of St. Gabriel's, Hollis, were present, with the rectors of those parishes and other clergy. This mission was begun in 1925, and is in charge of the Rev. W. Gordon Craig. The building now to be erected will later be a parish house, but the assembly hall will for the time being answer for a church.

Death of a Prominent Churchman.

"The Big Four" was not a railroad system, but the four great-hearted men who undertook as the executive committee, heading up a small army of other devoted Churchmen, to properly arrange for the entertainment of the General Convention and associated organizations of the Tpiscopal Church in Cincinnati in 1910. Of this group two survive. Col. William Cooper Proctor is in such a vigorous condition that he recently headed Cincinnati's successful community chest campaign in which two millions was raised. Mr. W. S. Rowe, still a leader in financial affairs, is President of the First National Bank. Mr. Clifford B. Wright, also a financier, passed away several years ago. The leader of the four, Mr. W. Kesley Schoepf, died May 6, after a brief illness, the culmination of a period of failing health, which he had borne bravely and uncomplainingly.

Mr. Schoepf was a man to whom the Church owes much. He was a born organizer. Son of an eminent soldier he was one to whom duty was supreme. Those who remember the Convention of 1910 will recall the generous scale upon which the hospitality was planned. Mr. Schoepf, with his own hands and brain worked on every detail. His personal power, his kindliness, his generosity, and his great grasp of detail as well as principles were everywhere in evidence.

Bishop Vincent, twenty years Mr. Schoepf's senior, and to whom he had been such a help, had the burial service assisted by the Rev. A. N. Slayton, rector of Calvary Church, Clifton. A gathering of men of affairs from all the largest Eastern cities and from that Western metropolis, Chicago, was present to do him honor.

As former head of the great united street railways of the city, he was remembered with real affection by the men who had worked under his leadership, and who had come to know him better as years passed.

The great tragedy of the passing of this great man is that he had plans for the service of his beloved city which would have meant much in terms of human betterment, but which he was destined never to carry out.

Altar and Sanctuary Dedicated at Trinity Church, Miami.

On May 22, an altar and sanctuary, gifts to the Church by the children of Mrs. Julia Frances Rand, were dedicated by Bishop Cameron Mann, assisted by the rector, the Rev. Robert T. Phillips, D. D., in connection with the confirmation service, at which twenty persons were presented, including a granddaughter of Mrs. Rand.

The altar and the entire sanctuary are of Italian marble, exquisitely carved, their striking beauty being simplicity and strength of line.

Six silver candlesticks and a cross, of fifteenth century workmanship, the gift of Alfred T. Barton, were also consecrated.

Bishop Mann has gone North, to stay several months. His address will be, until further notice, The Church Missions House, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

During his absence from the diocese, Bishop Wing will be the Ecclesiastical Authority.

Devoted Churchwoman Dies.

With the death of Miss Mary Wagner Haccaw, of Savannah, on May 7, the Church lost one of the most consecrated workers in the Diocese. For nearly a half century she had devoted her life to the education of children, teaching in the public schools of Savannah.

For a long time Miss Maccaw was a member of Christ Church and began a Churchwoman's Sewing Guild in the souther nsection of the city. This movement grew and Miss Maccaw was asked by Bishop Beckwith in 1890 to organize this sewing class into a mission. Slowly, but surely, this mission grew, Collect for St. Barnabas the Apostle.

O Lord God Almighty, Who didst endue Thy Holy Apostle Barnabas with singular gifts of the Holy Ghost; Leave us not, we beseech Thee, destitute of Thy manifold gifts, nor yet of grace to use them always to Thy honor and glory; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Collect for Trinity Sunday.

Almighty and everlasting God, Who hast given unto us Thy servants grace, by the confession of a true faith, to acknowledge the glory of the eternal Trinity, and in the power of the Divine Majesty to worship The Unity; We beseech Thee that Thou wouldst keep us steadfast in this faith, and evermore defend us from all adversities, who livest and reignest, one God, world without and. Amen.

Prayer.

God of all nations,
We pray for all the peoples of the earth,
For those who are consumed in mutual hatred and bitterness,
For those who make bloody war upon their neighbors,
For those who tyrannously oppress,
For those who groan under cruelty and subjection.
We pray Thee for all those who bear rule and responsibility,
For child races and dying races,
For outcast tribes, the backward and downtrodden,
For the ignorant, wretched, and enslaved.
We beseech Thee to teach mankind to live together in peace,
No man exploiting the weak, no man hating the strong,
Each race working out its own destiny,
Unfettered, self-respecting, fearless.
Teach us to be worthy of freedom,
Free from social wrong, free from individual oppression and contempt,
Pure of heart and hand, despising none, defrauding none,
Giving to all men in all the dealings of life
The honor we owe to those who are our children,
Whatever their color, their race, or their caste.

THE PARABLES OF SAFED THE SAGE.

The Parable of the Sins I Have Saved.

There came unto me a man who desired my Advice, and he did not come Any Too Soon. And I said unto him, Thou hast acted Unwisely.

And he said, I am afraid that what thou sayest is true. Tell me wherein has, along with the others, always made my Fault Lieth. And I told him the best I could.

And he said, I verily believe thou art right. I will amend my ways.

Then we talked of other things, and he spake as one who was free from Care. And when he left me, he seemed Happy.

And I got to thinking it over, and I said, I did not Rub It in enough. I should have been More Severe.

And I sat down and wrote him an Epistle, and said unto him, Forget not that thou hast much whereof to Repent, and I told him again Two or Three things.

Now I had other letters to Mail, and it chanced when I picked them up that I overlooked that one. And I returned to mine house, and saw it still unmailed. And I said, let me look again at that Letter.

And when I read it over, I said, How will that sound when he readeth it, and peradventure handeth it across the Table to his Wife?

And I said, Verily, it was of the Lord and not of mine own wisdom that this Letter had not gone out in the Mail.

And I tore it across, and then again across, and threw it into the Fire.

And I said, I have rarely repented of a harsh word that I left unspoken or a harsh letter that I did not mail.

And when I next met that man, he said unto me, I thank thee for what thou didst say, and I thank thee yet more for what thou mightest have said that would have been true, but which I was in the Mood to Resent. And because thou wast kind to me, and hurt me no more than was Necessary, behold I have resolved to be a Better Man.

And I went unto my home, and I said, O my God, I have much to thank Thee for, but just now I thank Thee for the times when I stopped just short of Making a Fool of Myself. For surely it is no Credit to me that having done that man a Good Turn I did not Ruin it all by Overdoing it.—Exchange.

What Christ Taught.

For centuries Christendom has debated as to who Christ was. It is about time that it considered more carefully what Christ taught. This morning we begin a series of sermons under the general topics of "What Christ Taught," and for one specific subject we take the Parable of the Pearl of Great Price, found in St. Matthew 13:45-46.

This is an unique chapter of parables described as being told by Christ from a most unconventional pulpit, namely from a boat, while the congregation sat on the shore. But then Christ was always simple, and unconventional and His choice of illustrations was the same —such as would at once find a response in the hearts of the people. How homely were His similes at this time to explain His teaching. A sower planting his seed; a grain of mustard seed springing up into a big plant by the road side; a bit of leaven for the dough; a treasure hid in the field (no banks in those days); a merchantman finding his ideal pearl; the landing of the fishing net—these formed the basis of His sermon on that wonderful day.

Of these the Pearl of Great Price has a great appeal, for it enshrines a great thought. Christ's message to humanity was the kingdom of God, and He was always seeking for examples out of common life to bring home its meaning to His hearers. So in this parable He is seeking goodly pearls, who when He had found one pearl of great price went and sold all that He had and bought it.

While the Holy Land had no pearl fishery, yet pearls were highly prized in Galilee and the people were as familiar with them and talked of them as we do of diamonds. In fact, the pearl was the most highly valued gem of the Orient and lustrous pearls were greatly in demand. Happy and envied was the person who possessed a valuable pearl. Christ, therefore, when He likened the Kingdom of God to a Pearl of Great Price, and spoke of a merchant who sold all that he had to buy it, was giving a graphic illustration that the Kingdom of God was the most desirable thing in human life and that it is worth the sacrifice of everything else to possess it. Indeed after twenty centuries it is interesting to note that humanity is coming to recognize this. The Kingdom is now the dominant note of our modern Christian life and preaching.

What do we mean by the Kingdom Christ gave us? The simplest definition is in the Lord's Prayer when He prayed that God's will would be done on earth, as it was in heaven. Whenever God's will is being done, there is the Kingdom, and so far as we are concerned in this life, earth is the place where this will is to be carried out. Last Sunday we thought for a moment of what this would mean in the elimination of wrong doing from our civilization and the bringing about of a decent order of society. Today we are to be more concerned with the Kingdom from the personal rather than its social aspect.

Considering the Kingdom from one angle as within, what is the teaching of the Pearl of Great Price? It is that the doing of God's will is the most important thing in life and that we must sacrifice everything that would keep His will from having its fullest play. What this may mean can best be illustrated from the nature of the pearl itself. It owes its origin to the fact that some little grain of sand or other element, or a little boring worm gets within the shell and sets up an irritation. The oyster, in self defense, immediately sets out to render this intruding occupant harmless. This it does by secreting the beautiful fluid which we call nacre and which hardens into a lustrous color. Layer after layer is applied until in time the beautiful pearl is formed.

We must be pearl makers ourselves. Life has its many errors, trials, disappointments, sorrows, temptations and sins. Every time these come into our life they present a tendency. Every time they present a tendency, to withdraw life from its main course and to thwart God's will. But the Kingdom is the pearl of great price which we must build up in ourselves. So we must each be pearl makers, every intruder of every sort must be met at once with a reaction. If we allow lodgment in our lives without proper insulation, it will cause us trouble. So we must make pearls of all our difficulties. We must take each one of them and apply to them a pearly dress transforming them from sordid to beautiful realities until all the traits of your characters are beautiful pearls.

But not only must we be pearl makers for ourselves, but we can be pearl makers for others—we can show them how they, too, can transform their lives and cover all their shortcomings with the nacre of Christian love until they are pearls of great price. Then, when each of us makes our character a pearl and we help our neighbor to do the same, the Kingdom of God will be come.

And indeed if we can do this, if we can transform our characters into pearls—the world will seek to buy. No one can really look on a good character without an inward desire to imitate. No one can look at the pearl which Christ made of His character without wanting to purchase it. But the price does not come low. The merchantman sold all that he had. It will take many sacrifices for us to make pearls from our lives, but the result is worth while.

In conclusion there is a story of a pearl of great price which has its lesson. One lovely pearl it is said lies buried beneath the waters of a canal at Venice. This wonderful pearl was found in the sixteenth century by a certain Venetian Jew pearl trader. On it he set a value so high that nobody was willing to buy it. Finally he invited all the gem dealers in Venice to meet him on the Rialto. Then he offered them this glorious gem. The dealers, thinking he would lower the price, refused to buy. Then to their horror the Jew turned and threw the pearl into the Grand canal.

God, however, does not throw the Kingdom away, but it can only be purchased at a price. Nor does God lower this price, for His price is the complete giving of ourselves to Him and to His service. Then, when His price is paid, it is He Himself who in us covers all that is amiss in life with the lustrous nacre of Himself and builds up in us the Pearl of Great Price, the Kingdom of God.—Dean Edwin S. Lane.

The little boy who slipped away from me
Upon the Unknown Road so quietly,
Has not gone far, for lo! I have him still
In every young birch tree upon the hill,
And every flower. When the meadow grass
Dips in the wind his happy footsteps pass!
He looks at me through every baby's eyes,
And music brings him close in sweet disguise.
I hear his laughter when the stars swing low,
And sunshine is the smile I used to know.
My little boy and I can never part—
He hides (as once before) against my heart!

Adolescent Unbelief.

I have had a most interesting letter from a girl who had been advised to write to me by her clergyman. She writes, she says, to tell me about her "religious, or as I fear you will regard them, irreligious beliefs". She goes on to say, rather pathetically as it seems to me—"I am sure I am not naturally irreligious. I want to know and to love God. I should be only too glad if I could come to a true faith. But I simply cannot believe the things I am taught. The unreality of it all revolts me. The stuffy stodginess of what passes for religion, here in the town where I live, does not attract me. I fear you will be shocked." I wrote back to say that I was so far from being shocked that I was delighted with her letter. I was, I said, rather surprised that she sould be suffering from adolescent unbelief so early—she is some years younger than most young people suffering in this way—but that her evident keenness, and her vivid interest in religion, were the best possible preparation for getting that most precious of all possessions, a religion of one's own. Now, as religious unsettlement is very widespread today (as it has been, I suspect, in every age in which young people have been encouraged to think at all), it may be worth while to look into the whole question. What is this adolescent unbelief? And how is it best treated?

Obviously no one is born with a ready-made religion of his own. Yet religion is the most intensely personal of all things. You may wear another person's cast-off clothes; you can never wear another person's second-hand religion. Does this mean that it is no good offering religious instruction to, and inculcating religious habits in, young people? I believe this absurd view was actually entertained by some extreme Calvinists in past generations, though fortunately innate commensense and natural parental love were generally too strong for a faulty religious system. But, without running to such extremes, I am sure we need to recognize the fundamental difference between the second-hand religion which can only say, "Lord, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have told us, what Thou hast done in their time of old", and the vivid first-hand religion which can say, "Now we believe; not because any man hath told us. For we ourserves have heard Him and know."

We should not merely recognize this difference: we should impress it upon our young people. If any one is allowed to grow up utterly without religion, there is a terrible danger lest he lose the power to know or to care about spiritual things. And even if he is converted in later life he will have a thousand bad habits to overcome, and a thousand good habits of the religious life to acquire. Of course, the enthusiasm of his conversion may carry the convert through all this tremendous work. But he will be heavily handicapped. The reason why so many notable converts at Missions and Revivals, fall away so soon afterwards is that they are not put into the way of acquiring settled habits of religion.

So young people should be trained in religious habits and practices, but warned that all this is at best but a religion of discipline, a second-hand religion; and that they must look forward to the time when vital religious experience will yield for them a religion of their own. Some young people pass from the one to the other naturally and with little trouble or distress. Some suffer grievously from those religious growing pains which I have called adolescent unbelief. But if they are really in earnest they come, sooner or later, to the knowledge of the truth.

Searching Out Christians.

An English Missionary in Japan writes that an important piece of work is the searching out of Christians who have drifted away from the Church.

"One of the problems of the Japanese Church is the number of lapsed Christians. Every Church has on its register a list of communicants and then, to its sorrow, a list of people who have not been heard of for three years or more. In many cases these names have been sent to the Church from other places, but the people have not presented themselves, and the addresses being often insufficient, the people cannot be traced. Often they have not completely lost their faith; if, after considerable difficulty, one succeeds in finding them, they confess that they are soul-hungry, and they can be brought back to the Church.

"In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the cause of this slipping away from the Church life is undoubtedly insufficient instruction in the Faith. Distance from Church, shortage of Church workers, or some other cause has led to their receiving little preparation for Baptism and Confirmation, and often no teaching afterwards. They have not realized the Church as the Body of Christ and, therefore, think little of their responsibility as members of the Church. Insufficient teaching about the Sacraments has resulted in their not feeling the necessity of receiving Christ's Life in the Holy Communion, so when they move to a new place they have no Christian friends, there is nothing to draw them to Church."

Within Themselves.

Candace was one of those always-look-on-the-dark-side creatures. Her small son, Leon, was drawing pictures on his tablet, by her side.

"Leon has ability," she sighed. "But of course, the poor child will never have the opportunity to develop it, now that we've lost everything."

"Such talk!" Aunt Martha scolded.

Candace said nothing, but looked curious.

"My dear," her aunt expostulated, "opportunity lies within ourselves. The child is lucky to have to develop the ability himself, instead of having everything done for him. Too much pampering often ruins one."

"Oh,' Caudice looked surprised, "I—never thought of our misfortune in that light. Perhaps it may prove a benefit to Leon."

"Well, it isn't anything to fret about," Aunt Martha laughed. "And, Candace, never talk anything but encouragement to a child. Never! If the young, pliable mind hears only, 'He can't,' in time he will be an 'I can't,' regardless of ability."

"Sure, Mother," Leon piped up, "when you tell me I can do a thing, I always do it!"

"See?" smiled Aunt Martha. "That's the best proof in the world!"

"And I wonder why it took me so long to see it," said Candace. "I remember going to hear a great violinist one night. As soon as he started to play, he found that his violin had been stolen and a cheap one substituted. 'I will show you,' he told the audience, 'that the music is not all in the violin.' And he played, oh, how he played! It was marvelous! The violinist was desperately poor, but he became one of the greatest musicians of his day. Well, I guess I've been pretty blind, and to think I had forgotten that incident! I'll turn over a new leaf."

And she did. Could any of the rest of us who have the look-on-the-dark-side spirit be persuaded to turn over a new leaf, I wonder?—Helen Gregg Green.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

Jesus the Son of God.

M. L. G.

One day, many years ago, two gentlemen were talking about the Bible, especially the books that tell the life of Jesus. "I don't believe a word of it," said one. The other answered that he did not, either, but to tell the truth, he knew very little of it, for he had never been interested enough to study it for himself. So they agreed to wait a year. The gentleman who knew so little was to make a thorough study of the Gospels, then they were to write together a book that would show to the world how impossible and untrue it all was.

The man began his study, and soon he grew so absorbed that he forgot for what purpose he had undertaken it. The wonderful story of Jesus unfolded itself to his eager mind, and he who began his reading an unbeliever, ended it an earnest disciple of his divine Master. He did write a book; wrote it that others might see Jesus as Lord and God, as he had come to do. That book is Ben-Hur.

So to any heart and mind that comes to Jesus not too much clouded with doubt and sin, the Best Friend manifests Himself. He never rebuked people for believing too much, not even when Thomas, with all doubt gone, cried out, "My Lord and my God". For this is the glorious truth He has shown us by His blessed Life and Death, His Resurrection, His Ascension, His Living Presence now in the soul of each of His followers—that He who is Friend is Lord, and that the Brother of men is their God.

The Panther's Eyes.

"And," said grandfather slowly, "I found myself looking straight into the green eyes of a panther."

Jack and Tom shuddered, but they were anxious for more.

"Right on this very spot?" asked Billy, scarcely believing it.

That was how grandfather's story had started. The boys were lamenting because there were no woods in this part of the country. It didn't seem possible that there ever had been woods in Ohio, although history told them that not so many years ago, as time runs, the whole state was covered with dark forests as far as the eye could reach. Of course, they were right across the river from Kentucky—the dark and bloody ground of its Indian name. But motor cars were speeding to and fro, street cars rumbled along, and those days seemed very remote indeed.

"Grandfather," Jack had asked, "do you remember when there were woods here?"

"Do I?" thought grandfather aloud. "Why, I remember—"

That was the signal for a story and the three boys dropped on the floor to listen.

"I remember," said grandfather, "when I was a very small boy, our farmhouse stood on the only cleared spot along the river. Of course, I mean near by. You could go through the woods and find other farms, but it was a long, dark trip at night, that few cared to take.

"It happened late one afternoon that my mother had a call to go to one of the farms up the river to nurse a neighbor, as we had to call those on the farms about, who had been taken very ill. My father was away at the nearest town, selling the farm products, but was expected home before dark. Mother hated to leave us. I was just ten, and my little sister Beth was only four. But the call was urgent and neighbors who could nurse were few and my mother was a splendid nurse. Of course, little boys in those days had to take a great many responsibilities that would not be expected of boys now, and I seemed much older than Jack here. So mother went away, cautioning me to stay at the house until my father came home.

We had a quiet, pleasant time, I doing the chores about the house, and little Beth trotting after me. It was soon dusk and almost time for father, when I heard a terrible howling and moaning out at the far fence. In those days a howling noise was something to shudder at, for there were still a few wild animals about."

"Right here in Ohio?" marveled Tom, looking as if he almost wished those days back again.

"Yes, indeed. Not the bears and wolves of an earlier time, but a few panthers and wildcats still roamed the woods. But I knew better than to think that this was a panther, so close to the house. No, it was Sport, my good shepherd dog, who had got his paw under a fence post while he was trying to crawl through after a rabbit. I was in a fix! Sport was almost my best friend, and I couldn't let him suffer. But mother had said not to leave the house."

The boys nodded their sympathy with this worried little boy of long ago.

"Sport's howls grew worse, and they actually seemed to be calling, 'Little master, why don't you help me'? and I could resist no longer. I set Beth in her little rocker, gave her an apple, and told her not to move. Then I ran out to the far fence.

"I was glad I had come, for Sport looked up with such glad, trusting eyes, that I could not have failed him. But the rail was heavy and to drag it off his foot without twisting the poor foot was very hard. So I took longer than I knew, and it was dark when I hurried to the house, Sport hobbling after me. And when I went tearing in, calling, 'Here I am, Beth', I found an empty rocking chair. My little sister was gone."

The boys gave a great sigh of terror. Instead of the cozy modern bungalow with its polished floors and comfortable rugs, they found themselves standing inside a barren farm cottage, staring at a little rough hewn rocker empty. The darkness dropped about them and far off an eerie cry rang through the still black woods.

"I was beside myself with terror and shame. Of course, Beth was too little to mind. She had decided to hunt me and help Sport too, and she had wandered off perhaps into the black woods, a baby alone, looking for the big brother who had always taken care of her. Of course, I had only one idea, to find her.

"I tied Sport securely to the porch rail, for I did not want to have him hamper me by following on his lame foot. I was to wish that he had come with me, before that terrible night ended, but I was glad later that he had not, he would certainly have met his death."

"Oh, grandpa," gasped Jack. "What happened?"

"There were little shoe tracks in the mud near the house and to my horror they pointed out to the woods. I could only see them dimly, for I had lighted the lamp to make sure that Beth was not about the house and its light gave a feeble brightness for a few steps. Then I plunged out into the dark alone.

" 'Beth, oh, Beth,' I called, and again, 'Beth, oh, Beth! Beth!'

"Stumbling, calling and crying as I ran, I suddenly stopped short. I heard a baby crying. It was a queer sound, and not like Beth—the strange moan of it sent shivers over my body, but, of course, I thought it was Beth, and I ran on, determined to find her and stop her frightened sobbing.

"The wail came again and again. It seemed nearer. Finally, I thought that I was upon it. And then, as suddenly as it had begun, it stopped. And I saw two green eyes glowing before me."

At this point Tom became so overcome that he had to climb up on grandfather's lap, and even Billy and Jack were not too proud to come quite close to his chair.

"As soon as the crying had stopped I knew what it was. The story had long been told through the countryside that panthers cried like human babies and many a farmer had searched thinking that he heard a lost child, only to find traces of a panther in the morning. And here was I, a little boy, with a panther's green eyes glowing right in front of me.

"I would have turned and run and probably lost my life, for a panther is a coward, but it will attack if you run away from it. But against a tree trunk I saw a little red calico dress. And a little voice said, 'Brother, oh, brother', and there was Beth. She had stopped crying to listen to the other baby, she told me, and all by accident I had found her.

"In a moment I had her caught against me and had whispered to her not to move. Then I stood with my back to the tree looking straight into those green eyes before me. For we had all heard that if you look straight at an animal, it cannot attack you, unless it finds you from the rear. And with the tree behind me, I had only to stand and outface the beast and we were safe.

"I do not know what gave me courage, unless it was the faith and trust of little Beth who felt that everything would be all right now that brother had come. I prayed a little to myself, and felt better. And then, still gazing into those green eyes, I began to call."

"But didn't he spring then?" asked Jack, worriedly.

"No; I had thought that a sudden shout might startle him into leaping on us, so I began with just a low sing-song. Then it grew louder and louder, until I was chanting in a high voice, 'Pap', that's what I called father, 'Oh, pap! pap! oh, pap'! Over and over and over in the same high sing-song voice.

"I grew very tired and hoarse, and my back ached against the tree and the arm that held little Beth became numb and sore. But finally I lost all sense of time. Then something happened. The green eyes left me. The beast sprang—but away from us. A man running through the bushes had frightened the panther away. It was my father, and the next thing I knew, I was lying in my own trundle bed with father and mother bending above me.

"Father had returned and had gone to hunt me, and heard my call in time to save us both. And they were so glad to see us alive that they did not scold me for failing in my duty. My own conscience and my suffering had done that."

Billy gave a great sigh.

"And that all happened right here where we live, and to you, grandpa?"

Grandpa chuckled.

"It all happened right here," he answered. "But not to me. Word for word, it is the story that my own grandpa told to me many times over when I was a little boy. But I remember the woods, although the panthers were gone when I roamed them, and I lived in the same house and I saw my Aunt Elizabeth's little chair that had stood empty when my grandfather came in that night. So it is all true, and how would you like those days back again, Tom?"

The boys looked out at the hurrying motor cars and paved streets and shivered a little. It was all so different now from the great woods which covered the land. And yet—it must have been exciting in those brave old far-off days.—Junior World.

The Lady and the Pie, or Know Thyself.

By Hannah More.

(The lines following are published at the request of the President of the Southern Churchman Company.)

A worthy squire of sober life,
Had a conceited, boasting wife;
Of him she daily made complaint;
Herself she thought a very saint.
She loved to load mankind with blame,
And on their errors build her fame.
Her favorite subject of dispute
Was Eve, and the forbidden fruit.
"Had I been Eve", she often cried,
"Man had not fall'n, nor woman died;
I still had kept the orders given,
Nor for an apple lost my balance:
To gratify my curious mind,
I ne'er had ruined all mankind;
Nor from a vain desire to know,
Entailed on all my race such woe".
The Squire replied, "I fear 'tis true,
The same ill spirit lives in you:
Tempted alike, I dare believe,
You would have disobeyed, like Eve".
The lady stormed, and still denied
Both curiosity and pride.

The Squire, some future day at dinner,
Resolved to try this boastful sinner;
He grieved such vanity possessed her,
And thus in serious terms addressed her.

"Madam, the usual splendid feast
With which our wedding-day is graced,
With you I must not share today,
For business summons me away.
Of all the dainties I've prepared,
I beg not any may be spared:
Indulge in every costly dish;
Enjoy, 'tis what I really wish;
Only observe one prohibition,
Nor think it a severe condition:
On one small dish, which covered stands,
You must not dare to lay your hands.
Go—disobey not, on your life,
Or henceforth you're no more my wife."

The treat was served, the squire was gone,
The murm'ring lady dined alone:
She saw whate'er could grace a feast,
Or charm the eye, or please the taste;
But while she ranged from this to that,
From ven'son haunch to turtle fat,
On one small dish she changed to light,
By a deep cover hid from sight:
"Oh, here it is—yet not for me!
I must not taste, nay, dare not see.
Why place it there; or why forbid
That I so much as lift the lid?
Prohibited of this to eat,
I care not for the sumptuous treat.
I wonder if 'tis fowl or fish;
To know what's there I merely wish.
I'll look—O no, I lose forever,
If I'm betrayed, my husband's favor.
I own I think it vastly hard,
Nay, tyranny, to be debarred.
John, you may go—the wine's decanted;
I'll ring, or call you, when you're wanted."
Now left alone, she waits no longer,
Temptation presses more and stronger:
"I'll peep—the harm can ne'er be much,
For though I peep, I will not touch;
Why I'm forbid to lift this cover
One glance will tell, and then 'tis over.
My husband's absent, so is John.
My peeping never can be known.'
Trembling, she yielded to her wish,
And raised the cover from the dish:
She starts—for lo, an open pie,
From which six living sparrows fly.
She calls, she screams with wild surprise,
"Haste, John, and catch these birds", she cries;
John hears not, but to crown her shame,
In at her call her husband came.
Sternly he frowned, as thus he spoke;
"Thus is your vowed allegiance broke!
Self-ign'rance led you to believe
You did not share the sin of Eve.
Like hers, how blest was your condition;
Like heaven's, how small my prohibition!
Yet you, though fed with every dainty,
Sat pining in the midst of plenty.
This dish, thus singled from the rest,
Of your obedience was the test;
Your mind, unbroke by self-denial,
Could not sustain this slender trial.
Humility from hence be taught;
Learn candor to another's fault.
Go; know, I like Eve, from this sad dinner,
You're both a vain and curious sinner.'

Barter Money.

Betty Lou and Aunt Addie were going to the store. It was a very warm afternoon in August, and some people might have thought a trip to the store a dull thing. Not Betty Lou! She had helped collect the barter. Eleven dozen eggs and a two-pound rooster and a fat setting hen all were stowed neatly under the buggy seat. Old Dolly was hitched at the back gate. Aunt Addie got her palm leaf fan and her umbrella, and Betty Lou scrambled excitedly into her pink-sprigged, starchy calico dress and her fresh sunbonnet. "Now!" she said. "We're ready!"

They were nearly to the gate when Aunt Addie remembered that she hadn't locked the smokehouse door. Back she went, Betty Lou squirming with impatience inside her starched dress. She unhitched Dolly and got in, holding the reins to be ready. Aunt Addie was nearly to the gate again when back she went to water the young chickens. "O dear!" said Betty Lou, despairing. But the third time Aunt Addie got to the gate she came on through. She got into the buggy. She settled herself with care. She opened her umbrella, and then she said, puffing slightly: "Now, get up, Dolly!"

She let Betty Lou drive. They jogged along the country road. Betty Lou was sure there was no other road on earth so sweet. In the first place, it didn't run straight ahead, but was a winding, beckoning, follow-me kind of road, bordered with honeysuckle and Black-eyed Susans that always reminded Betty Lou of gypsies, brown and barefoot and laughing. There were trees, too, that joined hands in places over the road, so that driving under was like playing London bridge.

It was a long way to the store, four miles. And though now and then Aunt Addie complained of the heat and the dust, Betty Lou was full of bliss. One dozen of the eggs were hers to trade for what she liked, because each day she went to the loft and the haystack and all the out-of-the-way places to get the eggs for Aunt Addie. Eggs were twenty-three cents a dozen. Betty Lou debated how to spend it. A pink hair ribbon would be nice. Or a set of jacks and a ball, and all-day suckers. Her mind floated in a delicious, dreamy way, unwilling to decide yet which thing to buy. Out of the drowsiness Aunt Addie spoke. "Yonder's Hedda," she said. "She's out on the porch today." Betty Lou leaned out across Aunt Addie and waved her hand and called: "Hedda! Hedda! Hello!" A little hand fluttered from the porch.

"She's better!" said Betty Lou excitedly. "'Cause it's the first time they've let her sit out on the porch!" Hedda was nine, and Betty Lou was only seven, but you would have thought it was the other way round if you had seen them. For Betty Lou was plump and rosy and big and strong, and Hedda was small and white and thin and weak. She had had measles and then whooping cough. And though the whooping cough finally went away, the cough remained and Hedda went from bad to worse all summer. Betty Lou's small round face grew solemn while she thought about it.

The store smelled like peppermint and tobacco and coal oil and new shoes. While Aunt Addie bargained for her things, Betty Lou saw everything there was to be seen. "Now it's your time, Betty Lou," said Aunt Addie at last. Betty Lou's mind by then was made up. She bought three oranges. That was a dime. Then she bought a box of wax coloring pencils and a little drawing book. That was another dime. "And three all-day suckers," said Betty Lou, pointing to the lemon-colored ones. That was three cents more. Twenty-three cents in all. She politely offered a sucker to Aunt Addie, but she didn't care for suckers. So Betty Lou sucked blissfully all the way to Hedda's house, using two of them. The third one she gave to Hedda, along with the oranges and the drawing book and crayons.

When Hedda saw what Betty Lou had brought her, her thin little face lighted up like a candle and a tinge of color crept into her cheeks. She smiled up at Betty Lou, and that smile was worth to Betty Lou at least half a dozen bright pink hair ribbons and any number of balls and jacks, it made her so happy. —Christian Observer.

and in 1920 became the parish of Saint Michael and All Angel's, which now has a membership of one hundred and sixty-five. Recently the parish has put on a drive for a new church, the realization of the dream of Miss Maccaw. Over $12,000 has been raised towards this new edifice.

Since the beginning of the mission in 1890, Miss Maccaw has been a devoted worker, both in the Church School and the Church. She was the President of the local Chapter of the Daughters of the King at the time of her death. All secular matters in her life were secondary to the upbuilding of the Church.

The funeral services were held at Christ Church, Savannah, the Rev. Henry Bell Hodgins, the rector of Saint Milchael and All Angel's, officiating.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. F. A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop.

Meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Florida Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary met in the St. George Hotel, St. Augustine.

Immediately after the communion service of the diocesan council, in which the Auxiliary and the Daughters of the King were asked to participate, the women of the Auxiliary and other visiting Churchwomen, listened to the president's address and to the reports of the various district presidents, department chairmen and special committees as well as the several diocesan officers.

The president, Miss Margaret G. Weed, opened the meeting with appropriate prayers and the roll call showed a total of some one hundred and ten women in attendance.

Owing to the fact that the Bishop of the Diocese had included the women of the Auxiliary in his annual address to the council, he only made a short talk to the separate session of the women. In closing his address the Bishop voiced his great appreciation for the financial support they had given to the diocese during the past year. Final action was taken on the Constitution and By-Laws; these were presented by Mrs. J. D. Holmes, of Jacksonville. Three slight amendments to the document tentatively adopted last year were made and the Constitution and By-Laws were ratified unanimously. An amendment of interest is the provision that hereafter the annual report of the Woman's Auxiliary shall be published as a part of the Diocesan Journal, same being Bishop Juhan's suggestion.

This constitution provides for an election of diocesan officers at the meeting immediately following the triennial conventions of the National Auxiliary, hence there was no election at this time.

Joint Meeting of Clericus and S. S. Institute.

A meeting of the Wheeling Clericus and the Ohio Valley Sunday-School Institute was held May 24, at St. Paul's Church, Steubenville, Ohio. At the election of officers of the Institute the Rev. William Sidener was elected President, the Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, Vice-President; the Rev. C. W. Sydnor, Secretary-Treasurer. After the reading of reports from the different Sunday Schools in West Virginia and Ohio, comprising the Institute, there were addresses by Miss Virginia Zimmerman, Executive Secretary of Religious Education, Diocese of Ohio and the Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, rector St. Matthew's Church, Wheeling, W. Va.

Knights Templar Attend Service: An outstanding event in the parish life of St. Matthias, Grafton, was the recent attendance at service of the Knights Templar and the address to them by Bishop Gravatt, of which order he is Grand Prelate of West Virginia.

St. Matthew's, Wheeling: The new rector of this church, the Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, has formed a Young People's League, which has increased to sixty-five members and much enthusiasm is shown.

St. Paul's, Weston: The Knights Templar of St. John's Commandery of Weston visited St. Paul's Church, Weston, Easter Sunday. The sermon was preached by the rector, the Rev. J. S. Alfriend.

The Rev. F. C. Roberts, of Chester, is again holding services, after having undergone an operation in a Pittsburgh Hospital.

The Rev. C. H. Goodwin, of Zion Church, Charles Town, has returned home greatly improved in health after a three months' leave of absence, part of which he spent in Arkansas.

KILLS THEM QUICK!

A Personal Letter to Readers of The "Southern Churchman"

Dear Friends:—

I have some very important and valuable news for you, something I am satisfied is going to please you very much and will be greatly appreciated by you.

Do you know we have a common enemy, an unscrupulous enemy, who is constantly working night and day destroying our property? We owe it to ourselves and to each other to unite in fighting and destroying this enemy completely. This enemy is small, it is true, but O, how MITEY"! He lives on the fat of the land and his name is M-I-T-E.

Any one who has ever raised poultry knows what an unpleasant task it is to grease, powder or dip the poultry to rid them of Mites and Lice.

I have discovered what I believe to be the simplest, easiest and surest way to quickly destroy every one of these vermin and keep the chickens free from them at all times.

By adding one or two small tablets to the fowls' drinking water each day, you can quickly destroy every one of these Mites and Lice on your chickens. Every one who has ever had to fight the Mites can realize and appreciate what a Godsend this is to the poultry raiser. Guaranteed harmless to chickens, young or old, as well as all other domestic fowls and animals. It will not make the eggs or meat taste differently.

In order to prove to your entire satisfaction that I have the best preparation for quickly getting rid of all Mites and Chicken Lice on your poultry in a very few days, without any hard work, I am going to give you an opportunity to secure TWO regular full size ONE DOLLAR packages of my famous MINERAL TABLETS FREE OF CHARGE.

Each packages contains about One Hundred tablets. It is positively guaranteed to do everything claimed for it or money refunded.

If you will write me within one week from date you receive the paper containing this offer, enclosing one dollar for one large regular full size $1.00 package of my Mineral Tablets for getting rid of Mites and Chicken Lice, I will send you by return mail postpaid, THREE regular full size One Dollar packages of these tablets. In other words, you buy one $1.00 package and I throw in Two extra One Dollar packages for good measure, with the understanding, you are to keep one of the free packages for yourself and hand the other to a friend or neighbor.

Mites are one of the greatest enemies that a poultry raiser has to contend with. Tens of Thousands of little chicks die every year from no other cause than Mites or Lice.

Tens of thousands of poultry raisers will tell you they could easily make all kinds of money every year if they could find some practical method for easily and quickly getting ride of Mites and Chicken Lice.

I am offering you a cheap, simple and practical method for doing all this, and ask that you give it a fair trial, for I know that once you do, you are going to be mighty glad that I called your attention to this great discovery which will give poultry raisers a chance to make money.

A flock of poultry infested with Mites or Lice will never be worth their keep and the task of getting rid of these vermin heretofore has been anything but pleasant. Now, by the use of my wonderful tablets, all of this disagreeable work is done away with.

You crush the tablets in the fowl's drinking water and in a few days the Mites and Lice will have all disappeared.

After you have used these wonderful tablets I will appreciate it if you will tell all your friends and neighbors about them and the wonderful work they have accomplished for you. I am anxious to get these tablets into the hands of every poultry raiser in the country and that is why I am offering TWO regular full size ONE DOLLAR PACKAGES FREE with an order for one $1.00 package, provided you send me your order within one week from date you receive this offer. Just mail me your order this very day with one dollar and get in now on this Great Special Introductory Offer before it is too late.

I also give you my permission to let as many of your friends in on this special offer as you see fit, they may give you their order, and for every one dollar you send me for Mineral Tablets I will send THREE regular full size one dollar packages. I will fill all orders promptly and send same postpaid. It is understood each party receiving two free packages is to hand one free package to a friend or neighbor who keeps poultry and has not yet had an opportunity to try out this wonderful discovery.

The above Mineral Tablets have been thoroughly tested and will positively do everything claimed for them and every one keeping poultry should try them at once and see what a blessing they are to poultry keepers.

Address all orders to
ALLEN WATSON, Poultryman,
Box 638 Farmingdale, So. Dak., U. S. A.

So many nice letters are continually being received from readers of this paper telling us how well pleased they are with the results received from above Mite and Lice Destroyer tablets that we believe every one keeping poultry should take advantage of the amazing liberal offer to secure three regular full size one dollar packages for the price of one. These tablets are proving a regular Godsend to those who are keeping poultry and are a blessing that is certainly being appreciated everywhere by poultry raisers who have given them a trial.

Remember you would pay one dollar a package for the same kind of tablets anywhere else if you were fortunate enough to find them on sale. (Adv.)

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS FRUSTRA NISI 1835

Vol. 92. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 18, 1927. No. 24.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES"

The Revelation of the Bible is Complete :: Its Doctrines Immutable :: Its Truth is Invincible :: And its Authority is Absolute :: :: ::

"The Southern Churchman holds to the historic faith of the Church as expressed in the common creed of evangelical Christendom. We cherish the faith of our fathers as expressed in the Prayer Book and particularly in the Thirty-Nine Articles of Religion. In regard to some disputed points of doctrine we wish it understood that we accept the Deity of Christ, Virgin Birth of Christ, the personality of the Holy Ghost, the supernatural and plenary authority of Holy Scripture, the substitutionary atonement, the necessity of the new birth, the second coming of Christ.

We hold forth the Word of God as our supreme standard and guide and seek to conform our acts to its plainly expressed teachings, making it the supreme authority in creed and conduct.

In accordance with Scripture we believe that the supreme work of the Church is to win souls for Christ, and we give the first place to evangelism. We make a strong appeal to the unsaved to accept the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour, believing that no one is a member of the Church who is not born again and that they have become members of Christ, children of God and inheritors of the kingdom of Heaven through the sacrifice and death of Christ, Who made on the Cross a full, perfect and sufficient sacrifice, oblation and satisfaction for the sins of the world; and redeems every one who is convinced of his need of a Saviour, and accepts Jesus Christ's invitation: 'Come Unto Me.'

We believe that a Church ought to be a praying Church, a Bible reading and Bible studying Church, a soul winning Church, a witnessing Church, a giving Church."

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

You should not expect to gain without sacrifice that which cost Christ all His life.

"Thy will be done" is the keynote to which every prayer must be tuned. —Fenelon.

Not until we expect more of ourselves than we do of others can we really influence them.

"Through all the depths of sin and loss,
Sinks the plummet of Thy Cross."

We should cross no man's path without hailing him, and if he needs, giving him supplies.—Henry Ward Beecher.

To get a man's money for the Church and not the man is a decided spiritual failure.—Rev. Wm. Porkess.

We are all one family, and the nearer we are to Christ on earth, the nearer we are to those who are with Him in the Church above.—Bishop B. D. Tucker.

Do you expect that religion is so cheap that without giving time you can find fellowship with God? You cannot; this pearl is worth everything.—Andrew Murray.

Absolute submission to one whose power and love we can absolutely trust is not servitude, but freedom of the highest kind—freedom from worry and care.

As a face is made beautiful by the soul's shining through it, so the world is beautiful by the shining through of a loving God. Happy the man who has eyes to see the shining.

Scientists tell us that there is a place up in space above the earth where a stone weighing a ton would weigh nothing. The attraction from other bodies at that height would overcome the attraction of the earth, and you could hold this immense stone on your finger. There is a place high up in the spiritual realm where our burdens become light. The closer we are to God, the lighter our sorrows are; the closer we are to earth, the heavier they rest upon us.—Exchange.

TRIFLES

I.

Sorrow and pain and fear are decreed, wisely, as parts of every mature human person. Without them we could not mature. They accompany our birth into the world and departure from it. As no ground can be fertile lacking moisture, our lives destitute of tears would be barren and unfruitful. If we could imagine man or woman never knowing cause for weeping or sighing, anguish or bitterness, feeling no sorrows and unacquainted with grief, we would have a creature hideously incomplete, colorless, flavorless, inevitably useless because unable to understand the burdens and cares of others or to comprehend the spirit or the significances of the New Testament.

As the scars of the veteran soldier attest incontestably his valor and his value to his cause, so the scars of many wounds on our souls and hearts should testify for us that we have been warriors unflagging and unafraid, active and courageous in the eternal battle of right against wrong, the ceaseless struggle for fulfillment of the purposes of God, universal fidelity to His commands and the betterment of mankind. The more we try to do the more the failures and disappointments we must endure, the more obstacles and disheartening delays we must encounter. It is for all of us to choose always whether we shall fight faithfully under the banner of the Lord of Hosts, true to the duties, temporal and spiritual, involved in assuming full shares in the working of the Divine plan—duties which are our primal responsibilities, highest privileges and richest inheritance. We may so serve and dare, or we may desert shamefully to the common enemy, or, fearing wounds and shrinking from labor, skulk pitifully to the rear, disgraced and craven under the All Seeing Eye.

It is as much part of the duty of the loyal soldier to guard himself from unnecessary and useless injury as to forget himself when the facing of danger is necessary. Wounds received in righteous combat are honorable, certificates of nobility. Those self-inflicted or taken in wanton or purposeless strife, as are so many of our sorest wounds, merit only contempt. It is the unhappy truth that the vast majority of the hurts from which we suffer most cruelly are self-inflicted and kept bleeding and torturing, sapping our spiritual, mental and physical vitalities, by our own deliberate folly, our refusal to apply the ever-healing ointment of generous forgiveness, self-sacrifice and magnanimity. Most of the world's tragedy, known and hidden, is cultivated and nourished from trifles and could be avoided and prevented by obedience to the teachings of the Saviour and the commands of God, which are sublime common sense, given us by Infinite and Omnipotent Authority, but applicable to every homely and daily incident and circumstance of our lives.

Death is unpreventable, but the sting and desolation of it for the soul going forth and the souls left lingering here are alleviated and sweetened when the memories fading with the failing breath and those remaining with the living are tender and beautiful, soothing as soft harmonies of music, undisturbed by harsh echoes of ugly discords developed from trifles or by the throbbing of the scars of unnecessary wounds. Misfortunes, great and small, come to all of us, the best and worst of us. All of us are alike prone to exaggerate and amplify the little troubles, to aggravate and embitter the heavier by filling our minds with hosts of attendant trifles, unworthy of serious consideration. Yet death and actual disaster are but small parts of the miseries from which many, perhaps most, of us suffer.

The supreme proof of moral courage is ability and readiness to be sternly honest with ourselves. When we develop that capacity we may be astonished to realize how many of the things, occurrences and affairs over which we fret and worry and afflict ourselves with agonies are trivial and trifling. We let our tempers flare and reasons be dethroned, make ourselves ridiculous and repulsive. A casual blunder, oversight or neglect by wife or husband, a lapse by a child, an employee or servant, none of them involving permanent ruin, a mislaid book or newspaper, a badly cooked or delayed meal, an ill-fitting garment, a misplaced tool, a forgotten errand, bring torrents of wrath bursting forth and the loud voice of lamentation. Words are said and things done to bite and burn and be brooded on long after the occasion is forgotten. A delayed letter, defeat of a favored candidate or party, or—far more intensely resented—victory or success for somebody disliked; a moment of rudeness, probably from a person likewise unbalanced by a trifle, a social slight or failure, none of real consequence—these and a thousand other like trifles are made deep wounds, leaving on us inglorious scars and giving us provocation for inflicting wounds, frequently on the innocent and inoffensive. The soldier who murders or maltreats his prisoners or the non-combatants is denounced justly as a savage, violating rules of civilized warfare. Yet, with trifles as pretexts, we wound and bruise those whose happiness and peace are entrusted to our keeping and who can not escape us; and call ourselves civilized and, some of us, Christians. Analysis of the bitterest family wrangles and quarrels, of the fiercest strifes among men and women, often shows absurd beginnings, long tragedies of heartache and hate, pain, estrangements, even murder and prison, rooted in what should be comedy, argument and contentions on trifles without import, not at all concerning the furious disputants.

So many wounds must be taken and scars borne by those who strive to be and to do and therefore must suffer. Certainly the part of wisdom for all of us is to pray earnestly and labor devoutly that we may avoid the crime and escape the penalties of horribly magnifying trifles to tragedies. Do not some of the most rigidly righteous and boastfully sober of us, in our dealing with the trifles of life, incur for ourselves the contempt and abhorrence expressed in Proverbs for the degraded drunkard who has woe and wounds without cause and by inflicting them on others invite even more detestation?

AUTHENTICITY OF THE BIBLE

By the Late Bishop McIlwaine

ARTICLE III.

WE proceed to the second century. Here we meet with Turtullian, a native of Carthage, born about the year 150, within fifty years of the last of the Apostles, and renowned in his day as a learned, vigorous, and voluminous writer in the defense of Christianity. His works abound in quotations of the most direct kind, and with long extracts from all the books of the New Testament, except four of the minor epistles, which, as he nowhere professes to give a formal catalogue, he may easily be supposed to have passed upquoted, without entertaining any opinion unfavorable to their authenticity. Turtullian's quotations occupy nearly thirty folio pages. "There are more and larger quotations of the small volume of the New Testament in this one Christian author, than of all the works of Cicero and in all the writers of all characters for several ages."

The same is true with regard to Irenaeus and Clement of Alexandria, both writers of the second century. In what spirit these early Christians regarded the authority of the New Testament books, may be judged from the manner of their quotations. Irenaeus writes: "As the blessed Paul says in the epistle to the Ephesians, 5:30, 'For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones'." And so Clement, "The blessed Paul in the first epistle to the Corinthians, 'Brethren, be not children in understanding'."

It deserves to be specially noticed, that in this early age, the book of Revelation is expressly ascribed to St. John. The testimony of Irenaeus to this effect is so full and strong, that it may justly be considered as putting its authenticity entirely beyond reasonable dispute.

There is abundant evidence that, in the second century, the books of the New Testament were open to all, and well known to the world. In Tertullian's Apology, addressed to the Roman presidents, he challenges an inspection of the Scriptures. "Look into the words of God, our Scriptures, which we ourselves do not conceal, and many accidents bring into the way of those who are not of our religion." In this appeal he calls the attention of the heathen rulers to the epistles and gospels, as constituting the "words of God, our Scriptures".

There is good reason to believe that in the time of Tertullian, the very autographs of original letters of the apostles were in the possession of those churches to which they had been especially directed. "If," says this ancient writer, "you be willing to exercise your curiosity profitably in the business of your salvation, visit the apostolical churches, in which the very chairs of the apostles still preside; in which their very authentic letters are recited, sounding forth the voice and representing the countenance of each one of them. Is Achaia near you? You have Corinth. If you are not far from Macedonia, you have Philippi, you have Thessalonica," etc. If Tertullian did mean that the original manuscripts, but only authentic copies of the epistles to the Corinthians, Philippians, etc., were to be seen by application to those churches, why send inquirers thither? Could an authentic copy of the epistles to the Philippians be seen nowhere but at Philippi? or of that to the Corinthians, nowhere but at Corinth?

The quotations from the New Testament, in the writings of the second century are so numerous, that were the sacred volume lost, a large part of it might be collected from them alone. Passing by the testimonies of Melite, Bishop of Sardis, who wrote a commentary on the book of Revelation, and that of Hegesippus, converted from Judaism, and of Tatian, who composed a harmony of the gospels, all born about the time of the death of St. John, we come to Justin Martyr, born about ten years prior to that event. Before his conversion from heathenism, he studied philosophy in the schools of the Stoics, Peripatetics, Pythagoreans, and Platonics. After becoming a Christian, he occupied a high standing in learned writing and holy living. His remaining works contain numerous quotations from, as well as allusions to, the four gospels, which he uniformly represents as containing "the genuine and authentic accounts of Jesus Christ and of His doctrine". The same is true in relation in regard to the Acts of the Apostles and the greater part of the epistles. The book of Revelation is expressly said by Justin to have been written by John, one of the apostles of Christ". Having lived before the death of that apostle, he had the best opportunity of knowing.

We finish the second century with Papias, Bishop of Hieropolis in Asia, whom Irenaeus speaks of as a hearer of John, and a disciple of Polycarp, a pupil of John the Apostle. How he obtained his information will appear from the only fragment of his writings remaining. It is found in Eusebius. "If at any time I met with one who had conversed with the elders, I inquired after the sayings of the elders; what Andrew or what Peter said; or what Philip, Thomas, or James, had said; what John or Matthew, or what any of the other disciples of the Lord were wont to say." Thus we have a witness who lived near enough to the beginning to inquire of those who had conversed with the apostles, if not to listen to St. John himself. Too little remains of his writings to furnish many testimonies, especially as he had it not in view to confirm the authenticity of any part of the Scripture; but still he gives a very valuable testimony to the gospels of Matthew and Mark, and the first epistle of Peter and John. He alludes to the Acts and the book of Revelation.

Thus we have ascended to the apostolic age. But we may reach still higher. We have in our possession the well-authenticated writings of five of the individuals and fathers in the primitive Church, who, because they were contemporary with the apostles, are called apostolical fathers. Three of them, Barnabas, Clement and Hermes, are mentioned by name in the New Testament; the fourth, Polycarp, was an immediate disciple of St. John; the fifth, Ignatius, enjoyed the privilege of frequent intercourse with the apostles. There is scarcely a book of the New Testament which one of these writers has not either quoted or alluded to. Though what is extant of their works is very little, it contains more than two hundred and twenty quotations, or allusions to the writings of our sacred volume, in which they are uniformly treated with the reverence belonging to inspired books, and entitled, "The Sacred Scriptures", "The Oracles of the Lord". Their testimony having been given incidentaly, without any view to its being testimony, does not apply to all the books. They had no design of enumerating for posterity, or for their contemporaries, the books of the Scripture. There was no controversy on that subject in their age. It would have seemed a needless waste of words had they attempted to decide a question which no one asked. It is very natural therefore that considering the brevity of their remaining works and the incidental character of their quotations, that some of the shorter writings of the New Testament should not be alluded to; while the fact that by one or another almost every book is quoted or alluded to, and that the whole number of quotations or allusions is upward of two hundred and twenty, accompanied with every mark of reverence and submission, is a most impressive proof that the authenticity and inspired authority of the New Testament books was then notorious and unquestioned among Christians.

Thus we have ascended the line of testimony into the presence of the apostles. Our evidence has been collected from only a few of the many witnesses that might have been cited. It has been derived from writers of different times, and and of countries widely separated—from philosophers, rhetoricians, and divines, all men of acuteness and learning in their days, all concurring in their testimony that the books of the New Testament were equally known in distant regions, and received as authentic by men and Churches that had no intercourse with one another. The argument is now reduced to this. The apostles and disciples of Christ are known to have left some writings. That those writings have been lost, none can give a reason for believing. It is not pretended that any other volume than that of the New Testament contains them. The books contained in this volume were considered to be the writings of the apostles, by the whole Christian Church, as far back as those who were their contemporaries and companions, being continually quoted and alluded to as such. It was impossible that such witnesses should be deceived. Contemporaries and companions must have known whether they were quoting the genuine works of the apostles, or only forgeries pretending to their names. Our evidence, therefore, is complete. What I have presented exceeds, above measure, the evidence for the authenticity of any other ancient book. Should the fiftieth part of it be required for the proof of the authenticity of any book of ancient Grecian or Roman origin, it could not abide the trial.

CHRISTIANITY vs. MODERN LIBERALISM

By the Reverend J. Gresham Machen, D. D.

of Princeton Theological Seminary

II.

BUT how was that type of life produced? I will tell you the way modern leaders of the Church would have expected it to be produced. They would have expected the first Christian missionaries to go forward and say: "We have been in contact with a wonderful person, namely, Jesus of Nazareth, and our lives have been changed by that contact. We call upon you, our hearers, to submit yourselves to the contagion through us with the life of Jesus of Nazareth."

That is just what people are saying today. That is what modern men would have expected the first Christian missionaries to say, but as a matter of historical fact they said nothing of the kind. They produced a new type of life not by exhortation, not by the contagion of personal influence, but by the proclamation of a piece of news; they produced it by the account of something that had recently happened.

That seemed a strange thing to the people of those days—to change men's lives not by telling them to be good, but by giving them an account of things that had happened. It seems strange today, it is what Paul called the foolishness of the message. It seemed to be an absolutely foolish way of trying to change the lives of men, but to the historian it is perfectly plain that that is the way they went at it.

Do you want me to tell you what the first Christian movement was in Jerusalem? They did not say, "Submit yourselves to the spell of Jesus Christ and be children of God the way Jesus was the Son of God", but they said, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; He was buried; He has been raised on the third day according to the Scriptures". It was an account of things that had happened and an account of the meaning of the happenings, and when you get those historical facts with the meaning of the facts you have Christian doctrine. Christ died—that is history. Christ died for our sins—that is doctrine. We have that at the very basis of all Christian work; it was there in Christianity in the first century, and today Christianity, as then, is founded upon the account of something that happened.

What I mean can be summed up in the first chapter of Acts—the eighth verse—"Ye shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth".

Now it is a complete misinterpretation of these words if you say that the witness is merely to what Christ has done for you in your own souls. That is not the way the words are meant. Paramount is the witness to the plain historical fact of the resurrection of Christ. If there is some skeptic here, I do not need to argue with him about the historical value of the book of Acts, or whether Jesus really spoke these words, because all historians, whether Christians or not, ought to admit that it is a good summary of what the Christian movement at its very beginning was; it was a campaign of witnessing, an account of historical facts; Christ died; He was buried; He has been raised.

The Christian Worker a Christian Witness.

Well then, if the Christian worker is fundamentally a witness, it is important, despite modern impressions about it, that the Christian worker should tell the truth. When a witness gets up on the witness stand it makes little difference what the cut of his coat is, or whether his sentences are nicely turned; the important thing is that he should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. That is the important thing for the Christian preacher and Christian worker today. Do not misunderstand me. It is a sad thing if you tell the truth with your lips and if your life belies your message, because then the more true the message the greater your sin, for you are bringing despite upon the truth. On the other hand, it is a sad thing when a man uses the gifts God has given him in order to proclaim things which are false. Therefore, the first thing is that we should tell the story which is at the basis of Christianity and tell it straight, and full, and plain.

It does make a vast deal of difference what our teachings are, and it is the fundamental business of the Christian Church today to set forth the teaching of Christianity truly and plainly in opposition to the teachings of the modern rivals of Christianity. And the chief modern rival of Christianity is not Mohammedanism or Buddhism, but naturalistic Liberalism, which is almost dominant in our large ecclesiastical bodies today.

What then, briefly, are the teachings of Christianity over against the teachings of Liberalism? We have just said that Christianity is an account of something that happened, not something that always was true, but something that happened about 1900 years ago, when God saved man through the atoning death of the Lord Jesus Christ.

But before you can understand that gospel, that account of something that happened, you must know first something of God, and second something about man. These are the two great presuppositions of the gospel message, and it is these presuppositions, as well as the gospel message, to which modern Liberalism is diametrically opposed.

It is opposed to Christianity in its view of God and in its attitude toward God. Now in the Christian view of God there are many elements, but one element is absolutely fundamental, and gives consistency to all the rest. It is the awful transcendence of God, the awful separateness of God; and it is that element in the Christian presentation of God upon which despite is being cast everywhere in the modern liberal Church, because it regards God as fundamentally just another name for the great process of nature as it is. We find ourselves in the midst of a vast process, and to that vast process is applied the name of God. That is what people mean by the immanence of God.

Now do not misunderstand me. God according to the Christian view is immanent in the world. God is everywhere—"closer to us than breathing", but immanent in the world not because He is identified with the world but because He is the Creator of it and upholds the things which He has made. The fundamental thing in the Christian notion of God is the sharp distinction between all created things and the Creator who is the explanation of all mysteries.

It is strange that men can call that a new vision of God which obscures the distinction between God and man, and involves God even in the sin of the world! How men can call such a view of God a new revelation is strange, because pantheism as it is called, is just as old as the hills, and has always been with us to blight the religious life of man. Modern Liberalism even when not consistently pantheistic, is at any rate pantheizing since it seeks to obliterate the sharp distinction between God and man, and involves God in the sin of mankind. Very different is the holy and living God of the Bible and of Christian faith!

Liberalism Denies Sin!

In the second place, modern Liberalism differs from Christianity in its view of man. It differs because it obliterates the distinction between man and God in the way I have said, but it differs in a more fundamental manner still. At the very basis of modern Liberalism in the Church is a loss of the consciousness of sin. You can examine the religious literature of the present day, the Sunday-school lesson helps and the sermons, and you will find that the characteristic thought through the whole of them is a profound satisfaction with human goodness. The modern preacher has no words too strong to express his scorn of the Christian view of the awfulness of sin.

A few months ago I stopped in a distant city and went to what seemed to be the leading church. It was the day when the new Sunday-school teachers were inducted into their office; and the preacher preached a sermon about Christian education and told his people, especially those who were to train the young, that formerly there had been a terrible view that children were lost in sin and needed a Redeemer. And he got a laugh from his congregation by quoting the old theologians about the awfulness of sin under which all men were born in this world and the need of redemption in order to escape the righteous judgment of God. He said, "People really used to believe that all children were born in sin and needed the Saviour, Jesus, but we have learned in these days that it is our duty as Christian teachers merely by the teaching of Jesus to draw out the good that is already in them".

The question arose in my mind why he quoted the theologians, why he indulged simply in the vulgar ridicule of when he wanted to cast ridicule upon the doctrine of the retributive justice of God; because he could have raised a better laugh if he had quoted the words of Jesus!

Jesus said more awful things about the terribleness of sin and the retributive justice of God than any man, and it is exceedingly strange how men at the present time who claim to have Jesus as Master (they speak of Him always as "the Master", but they do not speak of Him as Lord or Saviour), who claim to have Jesus as their authority in the sphere of religion, will proceed in the same breath to cast despite upon the things which are at the very center of His teaching, and at the very center of Christianity, as is the awfulness of the guilt of sin.

Do you want me to tell you what the fundamental fault with the Church today is? It is this—the modern preacher, whether in the Sunday-school class, or in the home or in the pulpit, is feverishly engaged in an absolutely impossible task. He is engaged in calling the "righteous" to repentance, in trying to bring men into the Church, and at the same time permit them to retain their pride in their own goodness. Even our Lord did not succeed in calling the righteous to repentance, and probably we shall be no more successful than He. At the very basis of Christian preaching is the mystery of the consciousness of sin and that is produced by the Holy Spirit, and when a man comes under the conviction of sin his whole attitude is changed.

These are the two presuppositions of the Christian message—the Christian view of the awful holiness of God and the Christian view of the terrible guilt of sin. God could only bring sinful man into His presence through the atoning death of Jesus Christ our Lord, but the account of that gospel is found in the Bible and with regard to the Bible modern Liberalism differs fundamentally from Christianity.

HOW ARE WE SAVED?

A PRESBYTERIAN elder was introducing his Jewish friend to a Presbyterian minister. After saying some very handsome things about his friend, he exclaimed: "If he does not go to Heaven, I do not expect to get there!"

Perhaps the Presbyterian elder was only indulging in a bit of pleasantry to please his Jewish friend. But the incident leaves one wondering whether the elder had thought through the way of salvation and whether he had considered the part which Jesus Christ has in our salvation. The words of Peter, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, come to me: "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

There have been for a good many centuries three views of salvation. First of all, there are those who teach that we are saved by character. In other words, we save ourselves. A few years ago a church advertised its creed every Saturday morning in a daily paper, which I see and the first article in that creed was salvation by character. The theologians call this view Pelagianism, because it was expounded by a man named Pelagius about fifteen hundred years ago.

This view seems to be growing in popularity. Many of the books which are being written on Religious Education seem to hold it. There is no place left for regeneration or for the redemptive work of Christ. We are all born the children of God and all that we need is development and nurture. The late Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Smith suggested once that those who hold this view would probably want to revise the first question of the Shorter Catechism, so as to make it read: "What is the chief end of God? God's chief end is to glorify man and develop him forever."

Christianity has the highest ideals for character to be found in all the world, but it teaches that character is the result of salvation and not the cause of it. Those who hold to the view of salvation by character have no place for the atoning death of Jesus Christ on the cross. Did the Presbyterian elder hold this view?

In the second place, there are many who believe that salvation is effected by the cooperation of God and man. This view is known as Semi-Pelagianism. It seems to be a correct view at first glance, but when we go a little deeper we see that it is a mistaken view. The Bible represents the unregenerate man as dead in trespasses and sins. The dead have no power to cooperate, until God gives them that power. Jesus stood at the grave of Lazarus and with a loud voice called to him to come forth. But he had no power to come forth, until it was given to him from God. Those who are born again "are born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God". And God's way of salvation is through Jesus Christ.

The third view is that salvation is by grace. In other words, eternal life is the gift of God. The Bible teaches us that salvation and everything connected with it from beginning to end is a gracious gift from God.

When we try to start at the beginning of our salvation we cannot find it. The beginning was away back somewhere in the eternity of the past. In Ephesians we are told that we were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the World. Let us start back as far as we can and see how everything connected with our salvation is a gift from God.

First of all, He gave His only begotten Son. I do not suppose that any mortal man will ever understand the full meaning of that statement. His Son, Jesus Christ, loved us and lived for us and died for us. He bore our sins in His own body on the tree. The iniquity of us all was laid upon Him. By His stripes we are healed. All the theories put together do not exhaust the meaning of the atonement. By His life and by His death Jesus Christ took away everything that would separate between us and the Father. He wrought out a complete plan of salvation. He is the way and the only way back to God.

Our Heavenly Father gives the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him. Thus the Holy Spirit is a gift from God, and it is the Holy Spirit who applies to our hearts the redemption purchased by Christ. Without the work of the Holy Spirit there is no salvation for unless we are born of the Spirit we cannot enter the Kingdom of God. When you begin to study the work of the Holy Spirit you soon discover that the Holy Spirit does nearly everything for the Christian.

The Bible teaches that repentance is a gift from God. In the eleventh chapter of Acts we are told that, when the Apostles heard of the conversion of Cornelius, they rejoiced because God had granted repentance to the Gentiles.

Regeneration is a gift. It is a work of the Holy Spirit.

Faith is a gift. When Peter made his great confession, Jesus said: "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." In Ephesians the Apostle Paul says: "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."

The power to confess Christ is a gift. In first Corinthians we are told that no man can say that Jesus is Lord, but by the Holy Spirit.

Power to live the Christian life is a gift. We are strengthened with might by His Spirit. It is He that worketh in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure.

The Apostle Paul sums it all up when he says: "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ Our Lord."

From time to time we meet some man who claims to be a self-made man. He began as a very poor boy and has become very rich and he has made it all himself. There is some doubt as to whether there is such a thing as a self-made man in this world. It is perfectly clear that there will be no self-made saints in heaven. We will not hear any boasting there. The redeemed will give all the glory to God. We are saved by grace.

If we know the way of salvation, and what it has cost Jesus Christ, we will not lightly assure one who has definitely rejected Jesus Christ that he is going to be saved. "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

WALTER L. LINGLE.

In the Presbyterian of The South.

"Many people say they are interested in religion but not in going to Church, which is very odd. For people interested in books are invariably interested in going to libraries and book-shops; people interested in pictures are always interested in going to art galleries; people interested in music constantly frequent symphony halls. I wonder if such people are really interested in religion."—Dean Hodges.

BISHOP MANNING'S CONVENTION ADDRESS

GRACE be unto you and peace, from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ" into whose Church and fellowship we have been called, whose Gospel we are commanded to preach, and in whose divine power we believe and trust.

The past year in our diocese has been marked by a great volume of active work not, we trust, wholly unfruitful in the sight of Him who is "the Head over all things to the Church", and in whose Name all our work is done. . .

Evangelistic Work in Motor Car by Church Army.

I am happy to say that during this summer members of the Church Army, whose inspiring evangelistic work is known to many of you, will travel through the outlying parts of our diocese in a diocesan missionary van preaching and holding services in the towns and villages, by the road side, or wherever opportunity offers. The van, which has been given by a generous Church-woman of our diocese, will operate on both sides of the river and I ask for these true missionaries, wherever they go, the prayers, the cooperation, and the warmest welcome of our clergy and people. . . Thirty Church Army Crusaders will go out to their summer campaigns, one detachment going to Rhode Island and two detachments to the Diocese of Long Island. It is most generous of the English Church Army to send these tried and trained workers over to us. Contributions will, I am sure, be made gladly to defray their expenses and I am hoping that their presence among us will inspire and call forth a Church Army movement of our own here in our own Church.

The Cathedral, Its Progress and Its Meaning.

In reference to the Cathedral I need only speak briefly; the evidence of its progress you can see for yourselves. . . There are three facts in regard to the Cathedral which account for the unequalled appeal which it makes to people of every sort and which we should constantly emphasize and keep in view:

First—The completed Cathedral will stand as a witness for God and for His Son Christ our Lord, the power of which is already felt throughout our land and which will strengthen the whole cause of religion.

Second—Although it is the Cathedral of this diocese, as every one understands, it is in a unique sense a House of Prayer for all People, and a mighty influence for human fellowship and brotherhood. We had a striking illustration of this recently when men of different faiths spoke together from its pulpit in behalf of the Fund for the Relief of the Jews in Central Europe. That service in the Cathedral, though one among many others, has had a profound and far-reaching influence. I have had messages about it from many parts of this country and from Europe, and among them very beautiful and touching letters from Jewish Rabbis.

Third—The Cathedral will be one of the greatest expressions of art, and architecture the world has ever produced. I wonder if we fully realize that in helping to build the Cathedral of St. John the Divine we are taking part in one of the two or three greatest undertakings of its kind in the history of the world. . . .

The funds now paid in, or pledged, for the construction of the Cathedral, will complete the Nave, erect a part of the Women's Transept, and build the lower stage of the West Front up to the point of thirty-nine feet for which the contract is now let. It would be a misfortune for the work of construction to stop. To allow it to do so would considerably increase the ultimate building costs. I hope that those who realize what the Cathedral means to this city will not let the building operations cease. . .

World Conference on Faith and Order.

The other event to which I wish to refer is the assembling of the World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne in August of this year. It has been my privilege to be associated with this movement from its beginning. At the meeting of the General Convention in Cincinnati, in 1910, as the result of a speech made by Bishop Brent at one of the night meetings, and acting at the suggestion of that devoted layman, the late Robert H. Gardiner, to whom this movement owes its life and development far more than to any other, I offered the resolution which proposed the appointment of a Joint Committee of both Houses to consider and report upon the possibility of an effort by this Church to bring about a World Conference for the consideration of questions of Faith and Order. A day or two later I presented to the House the report of the Joint Committee which was unanimously adopted and as I returned from the platform Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, sitting as the senior member of the New York deputation, informed me that he wished to give the sum of $100,000, to aid this undertaking which, with his consent, I immediately announced, the announcement being received with great enthusiasm. And now, after many years, the World Conference is to assemble, or rather a World Conference, for it will probably be the first of a series of such meetings. The purpose of the Conference is not to arrange terms of reunion between the different Communions. This, of course, it could not do. Only the Communions themselves, acting through their own governing councils, could take such action. The aim of the World Conference is the frank discussion of differences, in the spirit of love and brotherhood, with the hope that through such discussion misunderstandings may be removed, differing positions may be more clearly and justly understood, and the way may be opened for definite steps towards reunion. In what other way can differences be explained and removed, except through conference?

Certainly it should stir our souls to see the Christian Churches of the world, after centuries of estrangement, sending their representatives to meet not for controversy but for conference, to face their differences honestly but in the spirit of sympathy and love with the desire that our Lord's own prayer for the visible oneness of His followers may be fulfilled. The invitation includes all Christian Communions throughout the world, both Catholic and Protestant, which confess our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour. Practically all the great Christian Communions of the world have identified themselves with this movement, with the exception of the Roman Catholic Church, which, though receiving the invitation in a friendly spirit, has not yet felt that it could take part in the Conference.

The all important thing in the Conference will be the spirit in which it shall meet. Only in the spirit and atmosphere of prayer can such a gathering hope to do its work. I call upon the clergy and people of this diocese to offer their earnest prayers for the World Conference. I hope that Christians of all names will send up their prayers for God's blessing on this undertaking. I see no reason why any Church should refrain from participation in this movement. No Church will compromise its principles or endanger its faith by conferring with others, and this meeting is limited strictly to conference and mutual explanation of positions with the hope of creating better understanding. But if the Roman Catholic Church decides that it cannot send representatives, I hope that great Communion may still have part with us by offering up its prayers for the Conference along with ours. What an influence it would have upon the world if during the time of this Conference prayer for Christian reunion and for God's guidance for all those seeking it, should be publicly offered in St. Peter's, Rome; in Canterbury and York, in the Cathedrals of St. Patrick and St. John the Divine in this city, and the Churches which they represent at the altars of all the Churches of the East and in every Protestant Church, at the same time. And why should such prayers not be offered by all of us? Whatever their differences, Christians can lift up their prayers together that these differences may be healed. The prayer for the World Conference which we publish and circulate is, in fact, one that is used in all Roman Catholic Churches, and it is one in which Christians of every name can unite:

> "O Lord Jesus Christ, Who saidst unto Thine Apostles 'Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you'; regard not our sins but the faith of Thy Church and grant her that peace and unity which is agreeable to Thy will, Who livest and reignest with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God forever and ever. Amen."

If that simple prayer publicly offered for the World Conference should now go up from every Cathedral and Church in Christendom, the very offering of this common petition would draw us all nearer to God, and to each other, and who can say what great movement of the spirit such united prayer would bring. Surely all Christians, Catholic and Protestant, may be asked to pray that this Conference, looking towards reunion, may be guided by the Holy Spirit and that the Church may be brought to that peace and unity which is in accordance with God's will. We know how the life of the Church is enfeebled and her message is weakened by our present differences and divisions. The practical losses and evils of these divisions in the Church are great, but the spiritual losses resulting from them are far greater. The faith of the whole Church is weakened and impaired by them. Confused by the controversies of the Churches men fail to hear the Divine message of the Church. In the battle against evil, against the anti-Christian forces which are at work in the intellectual world, against the frank return to the old paganism which we see in our modern life, we need the power of a united Christian testimony. The divisions among Christians are giving woeful advantage to the forces of evil and unbelief.

The question which the world is now asking is no secondary or minor one; it is the question whether Christianity is from above, whether Jesus Christ reigns on the Throne of God and still lives among us, whether He is in truth the world's Redeemer and Lord. It is this question which demands the answer of a united testimony. What we all need is truer fellowship with Christ. It is lack of holiness in the lives of Christians which is the chief obstacle to the unity of the Church. If all of us were fully converted to Christ the way to unity would not be hard to find.

The fact that we need to realize is that we are already one in Christ. Whatever our differences, we Christians are all brothers, and therein lies the sin of our divisions. We are one in the life that joins us to Christ, and more fully than we realize we are one also in faith. We all believe in One Lord Jesus Christ, "Who for us men and for our salvation came down from heaven and was incarnate by the Holy Ghost of the Virgin Mary, and was made man". Roman Catholics and Anglicans, Protestants and Easterns, we are all one in this. We all believe in the Lord Christ, we all pray to Him, and trust in His divine power. We all lift up our prayers and praises to Him in words which have been used by Christians through the whole life of the Church on earth, and which are echoed not only in our Creed, but in every act and utterance of our worship, "Thou only, O Christ, with the Holy Ghost, art Most High in the glory of God the Father".

And this is the Christian Gospel. To this our own Prayer Book bears witness on every page. The Christian Religion is belief in, and fellowship with, Christ our Divine Lord. From this all else that we believe follows. Holding this common faith in Christ it must be possible for us, with God's help, to find the way to visible fellowship and unity.

Effects of Bishops' Crusade and Its Call Especially to the Clergy.

In conclusion let me say this to all of you, and especially to my brethren of the clergy. We have all had much in mind this year the Bishops' Crusade and I believe that it has been of true help to many of us. It was a call to all of us back to humble and personal faith in Christ, and it was a call that we needed to hear. There has not been in our preaching the fire, from above that came down upon the Church at Pentecost. We have not been hearing enough in our pulpits of the power of Jesus Christ to save men from sin. We have not been hearing enough of our need to repent, and to seek the Divine forgiveness for our worldliness and folly, our self conceit, our spiritual indifference and negligence, and our deliberate sin. We have been thinking of the Gospel as if it were something needful for others, but not needful for ourselves. There has been among us a lack of humility, and of a sense of our own spiritual need, and where these are absent Christ cannot come. It was this which the Bishops' Crusade was intended to bring home to us, and which I trust many of us have felt. What the Church needs today is to be brought face to face with Jesus Christ. The lives of those men and women in the New Testament were not changed by faith in the Sermon on the Mount; they were changed by faith in Jesus Christ the Son of God. And that faith alone has power to change the world and to draw us from sin and self sufficiency.

I trust that the impulse of that Crusade has been felt in some degree by all of us and that it will show itself in renewed faith, in more real prayer, more helpful lives, and more faithful preaching of Jesus Christ in every parish and mission in our diocese.

"HE WOULD NOT GO IN"

By Philip Mauro

The Parable of The Prodigal Son (Luke 15) is the best known of all the parables of Christ; and it is surpassingly wonderful from every point of view. But in order to grasp its main lesson, and to appreciate its great climax, it is needful to observe that it was addressed directly to the Pharisees and Scribes, and that it was the Lord's answer to their indignant complaint, "This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them" (v. 2). Thereupon, "He spake this parable to them".

Christ's willingness to associate with sinners had from the first excited the astonishment and indignation of the Pharisees. Early in His ministry they had asked His disciples, "Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners"? and from the standpoint of their doctrine it was a most natural question (Matt. 9:11).

Now, to get the force of the parable it must be noticed that the elder son in the parable asks substantially this very question. For, as he drew near the house, and heard the sound of the music and rejoicings inside, "he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant" (v. 26). Therefore we should give close attention to the verses that follow (twenty-seven to the end of the parable), because they give us the Divine explanation of what was such a sore puzzle to the Pharisees.

The servant replied: "Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound." We call attention to the fact that this reply mentions both the points of the complaint the Pharisees had made—receiving sinners, and eating with them.

These few words contain a surpassingly wonderful revelation. They tell us, and in a way that carries conviction of its truth, that God's joy, in which all heaven shares, is over the recovery of one sinner, more than over ninety and nine just persons (such as the Pharisees esteemed themselves to be) who need no repentance.

But it is not of this truth, great as it is, that we wish now to speak. Our present purpose is to call attention to several remarkable features in the concluding verses of the parable, where its climax is found.

The situation is this: the son who is inside the house, enjoying the feasting and merry-making (of which indeed he is the cause) is the one who had declared his badness and unworthiness; whereas the son who is without is he who loudly proclaimed his goodness and worthiness. Let it be noted that he was outside by his own will and choice; for the door was open to him also, and a share in the festivity was freely offered to him. But he chose to remain outside and to find fault with what his father had done. "He was angry and would not go in." So his behavior corresponded perfectly with that of the Pharisees, and with that of all men to the present day who feel no need of God's salvation, and therefore refuse to enter into the Kingdom of God by Christ, Who is "the Door".

The elder son complained because his father had not bestowed upon him the means whereby he might make merry with his own associates. The father did not, indeed, bring the joy outside to where that son was; but he came out himself and entreated him to enter. Likewise God does not bring heaven's joys outside to men who turn away from Him and complain of His way of saving sinners; but He comes out to them, in the Person of Christ, and by His servants, beseeching all men everywhere to come in and partake of the gospel feast (Isaiah 25:6; Luke 14: 15-24).

"To the Jew First.

We believe there is a special application of this part of the parable to the Jewish people. They had been a chosen people, "nigh unto God", even as the elder son had remained with his father; whereas the Gentiles had gone "far off", like the younger son. But now the publicans and sinners and Gentiles too, were entering into the Kingdom; whereas the leaders and the mass of the nation rejected the Saviour Whom, in fulfilment of His promise, God had sent to them. They were "angry and would not go in". Nevertheless, like the father in the parable, God continues until now entreating them to enter.

A Story That Is Left Unfinished.

This brings us to one of the most striking features of the parable, namely, that it does not tell how the matter ended. It leaves us wondering whether or not that elder son yielded to his father's entreaties, and to the persuasion of the sounds of music and festivity that came from within, or whether he hardened his heart, and—to his own loss—persisted in his refusal to enter. How did it end? This is an interesting question indeed, though we cannot find the answer. But it suggests a far more important question for such of our readers as are yet in the outside place, who know not what David speaks of as "the blessedness of the man whose iniquity is forgiven, and whose sin is covered" (Psalm 32:1). If you, dear reader, are one of these, the momentous question is, how will the story end with you when the last chapter shall have been written? See the door of God's mercy which has been kept wide open until now for you! and behold Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, slain and risen again that all things might be made ready for your salvation and your eternal joy in the Father's House! Hearken also to the sounds from within of the music and the rejoicings which have already "begun" and will never end! And above all, listen to the loving entreaties of the God of all grace, Who is urging you, even by the lines you are now reading, "to come in".

For, however the story may end in your case, be sure of this, that at this critical moment you are precisely in the position of that son who "would not go in".

THE SEVEN FINALITIES OF FAITH: By A. Z. Conrad, Ph. D., D. D. The Sunday School Times Company, Philadelphia.

Dr. Conrad has uncovered the bed-rock foundations of Christian faith.

We strongly recommend this book, especially to any who may be shaken by the modern assault on the old faith. While perfectly conversant with the position of the liberal school of theology and in full light of modern contentions, he shows with compelling logic not only the futility of its aims, but its dire results in practice. Amid the groping darkness of the modernist he sets forth in bold relief the seven finalities of faith shining, if anything, with increased lustre and surer light. God is, God created, God spake, God came, God redeemed, God is here, God is coming again. The book is constructive and positive as he says he aims to be. It exalts Christ. The chapter on evolution is especially good. He holds that you cannot "accept the Bible and at the same time accept Organic Evolution. They are mutually contradictory." And he tells us he spent ten years in the study of evolution. With regard to prehistoric man he quotes Chesterton as saying: "All this guess work has nothing to do with anybody—we are not willing to have passed off on us a lot of irrational rubbish." He well points out that "the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ can never successfully advance half rationalistic and half evangelical. He quotes Dr. C. K. Anderson asking: "Can the Christian Church make the great change of belief which the acceptance of Modernism would involve and remain the Christian Church?" He answers in the negative. There is much food for thought in his chapter on socializing Christianity. Religious education is tending toward socialism and being substituted for regeneration, and then for Christian education. The effort to democratize God would leave Him as valueless to the world as a totem pole.

The book is very readable, captivating in style and a real contribution to the cause of Christ today. We hope it will have a wide sale.

A UNIQUE BOOK.

There has recently been published by The Standard Press, Louisville, Ky., a rather unique book of three hundred and eighty-four pages, entitled "Wings". It is compiled and edited by Dr. Gordon Hurlbutt. The undertaking has been costly to him, necessitating an outlay of $6,000; $1,800 of this amount, in money prizes of varying sums, was offered for the three hundred best stories of actual experiences in the lives of ministers, limiting the length of the story to five hundred words. The competition was thrown open to all denominations in this country and in Canada. Nine judges were appointed to examine the best of the many received, up to the number of three hundred. The result has been the securing of quite a list of prominent contributors. Dr. Hurlbutt has succeeded in bringing out a book that should prove of great value to minister, to home, and to lay Christian worker alike. In the arrangement of the data he has further demonstrated unusual ability. The following eight clergymen of the Episcopal Communion are among the prize authors: the Rev. Messrs. Percy T. Fenn, Syracuse, N. Y.; Thomas LeRoy Parker, Iona, Mich.; William Porkess, Wilkinsburg, Pa.; Capers C. Satterlee, Clemson, S. C.; James Archibold Mitchell, Baltimore, Md.; Edward M. Mellichampe, Sewanee, Tenn.; William Sterling Claiborne, Sewanee, Tenn.; and A. C. D. Noe, Erwin, N. C.

Work Among Negros

The Commission on Work Among Negroes in its report to the Department of Religious Education of the Province of Sewanee, says in part:

"The white people of the Church are largely unaware of the isolation of those of the colored race and ignorant of the many advantages that the white people have of which the colored people are deprived. The leaders in every department of work and those who are most intelligent and the best informed are largely white. All white people have constant contact with this element and are unconsciously benefited thereby. From much of this the colored man is cut off. He thus works at a very serious disadvantage. As far as possible it would seem only fair to give him a more even chance in doing his share of the work.

"We admit the colored delegates to our Diocesan Conventions and then they go off and manage their own affairs as separately as if they were different dioceses. They organize their own departments, carry on their work independently and report the aggregate to the conventions. Except for a few suffragan bishops and a few other rare instances, they are not represented in the General Conventions, in any Executive Council, on any important committee, or in any of the departments, national, provincial or diocesan, so far as we know. This is perhaps largely inevitable.

"It is generally accepted, in our province at least, that for racial friendship there must be a certain degree of racial separation. But there need not be here mutual ignorance of the wants, ambitions, plans, ideas and necessities of the two parts of the whole.

"The colored work is an important part of the whole work of the Church. It cannot succeed if the only point of contact is once a year at the Diocesan Convention, while for the other three hundred and sixty odd days we think of that work as being as foreign as Africa. The white people (and this includes practically all that lead, instruct and plan) should learn the ideas of the colored people directly from them. The colored people should have, as nearly as possible, the same chance to learn all about the Church's activities that the white people have.

"Your Commission beg leave to add certain other suggestions. (The suggestions referred to were revised and were presented in the form of resolutions in the Commission's report of August 5, 1926, a year later as follows):

"Resolved, That with regard to Work Among Negroes the Department of Religious Education of the Province of Sewanee makes the following recommendations, partly for the general work and partly for the particular work of Religious Education.

"First, That our colored brethren be urged to cultivate and practice greater responsibility for supporting their own Church work as a necessary condition of their own healthy growth, a result that should follow naturally from their increasing prosperity and the best means of ensuring their own self-respect.

"Second, That our white brethren be urged to assume a greater responsibility for their own colored brethren who live and labor with them here in the South, sharing with them our increased and increasing prosperity and ceasing to think of this part of our work as being the responsibility of the rest of the National Church, or, as the common phrase is 'of the North' since the rest of our country has its own serious problem of the foreign-born, from which we in the South are largely free.

"Third, That our people, and especially the clergy, try to realize that the Church is not an association of congregations, but is for all the people within any given field and that our work should therefore reach out to the members of all races in the departments of missions, social service, and religious education.

"Fourth, That our white brethren should do all in their power to encourage the churches for colored people where such are established and where no such churches are established, should do everything possible to extend religious privileges to the otherwise shepherdless colored people.

"Fifth, That our white brethren, laity as well as clergy, should try to maintain Sunday Schools for our colored people where there are not sufficient facilities provided by the colored people themselves.

"Sixth, That since the colored people are cut off from many of the sources of information which are open to the white people, the colored people should ask the authorities and leaders in the several departments of our work to give them the benefit of their knowledge and guidance, and that these advantages should be freely extended when they are desird.

"Seventh, That when feasible and agreeable to all concerned, some method should be adopted whereby our colored brethren should have some representation in the official bodies that conduct the various parts of our common work so that information shall come in from all sides and flow out again to every member of the Church.

GEO. W. LAY,
Chairman of the Commission.

ST. JOHN'S KETCHIKAN, THE FIRST PARISH IN ALASKA

St. John's Church, Ketchikan, Alaska, is the only parish in our Northern Territory. It has been under the Board of Missions since its establishment until September 1, 1926, when it became a self-supporting parish.

Incidentally, this thriving young parish is the only church of any denomination in the vast Territory of Alaska which broadcasts its services. The services are broadcast over Station KGBU, two hundred and twenty-nine meters, each Sunday. Letters of appreciation of the sermons and music have been received from such distant places as Orlando, Florida; Troy, New York; Nome, Alaska.

The Rev. Henry R. Sanborn is responsible for the splendid healthy growth of his church. Under the direction of his Bishop, the Rt. Rev. P. T. Rowe, D. D., he has, in one year, changed St. John's from a pitiful, rundown mission church to a thriving, bustling parish. The Yates Hospital has been made over into the Parish Hall of St. John's, which as become a civic center for Ketchikan. Each Friday night a dancing party is given for the high-school children of the city. Tuesdays the Business and Professional Women's Club has its dinners, business and social sessions. Their club rooms are in the parish hall. This organization was fostered in Ketchikan by Mr. Sanborn. Thursdays the Camp Fire Girls have their meetings, while the choir practices in the church. This choir consists of twenty trained adult voices and must be heard on the air to be properly appreciated.

A very industrious Guild has purchased new vestments for the entire choir, purchased a piano for the parish hall, installed an electric range in their kitchen, attractively furnished their big rooms in the parish hall, purchased all new altar equipment, and it is the Guild which prepares and serves the dinners for the Business and Professional Women's Club.

During the past year, the entire Church plant, consisting of a good-sized church, large rectory, and parish hall, which was formerly a memorial hospital, has been completely renovated and rebuilt. The plant is on one of the most valuable pieces of property in Ketchikan, being located in the heart of the business district.

The Rev. Henry R. Sanborn has recently been appointed Archdeacon for all of Southern Alaska and is actively engaged in assisting Bishop Rowe in establishing new Church activities throughout the district.

A new mission church, St. Elizabeth's, of the same size as the mother church, St. John's, is being built in Ketchikan for the natives. Both a rectory and parish hall are also being constructed for these ardent Christians.

St. Elizabeth's has its own native vestry and elects one of its members to sit on the parish vestry. The native vestry and some of the mission's most active workers are to be seen in the accompanying photograph.

Mr. Mather is in charge of St. Elizabeth's, the sacraments being administered by the Rev. H. R. Sanborn.

On Sunday, May 29, 1927, the Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, D. D., Bishop of Alaska, ordained to the diaconate Paul James Mather. Mr. Mather, a Tsimpshean Indian, is the first native of Southeastern Alaska to be ordained as deacon in the Episcopal Church. He was born on August 11, 1878, at old Metlakatla, a village composed of two thousand Indians, situated near Port Simpson in Northern British Columbia.

With his father and the Father Duncan colony, he moved to new Metlakatla on Annette Island, Alaska. This town is situated fifteen miles from the City of Ketchikan.

Baptized into the Church by a priest of the Church of England, he has always maintained a close identification with it. He was later confirmed by Bishop Rowe, who recently ordained him.

His preparation for the diaconate has been done under the direction and guidance of the Rev. H. R. Sanborn, rector of St. John's Church.

Banquet For Bishop Rowe, Archdeacon Sanborn, and Native Vestry of St. Elizabeth's Mission. Given By Mr. Mather Following His Ordination.

St. John's claims two distinctions: that of becoming the first parish in Alaska, and the fact that it presented the first native Alaskan for Holy Orders in the Episcopal Church.

Church Intelligence

The Council of the Brazilian Church

The twenty-ninth annual council of the Brazilian Episcopal Church opened Wednesday morning, April 27, in Trinity Church, Porto Alegre. The council began with the service of Holy Communion, the Rt. Rev. William M. M. Thomas, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of Southern Brazil, being the celebrant, and the sermon being preached by the Rev. Timotheo da Silva. The keynote of the sermon was the need of more and better Christian education for the people of Brazil. Immediately after this service the council was called to order by Bishop Thomas, who presided at all of the meetings. The business sessions of the council closed Saturday with the meeting devoted to the Sunday Schools, but the council was not formally dispersed until after the service on Sunday morning, May 1.

The Rev. H. R. Sanborn.

While nothing of a particularly radical character was accomplished, many matters of vital importance to the future of the Brazilian Church were discussed. Ideas were exchanged on many subjects and while unanimity of opinion was not looked for, there was evident throughout a spirit of unity of purpose. Revised statutes for the incorporation of the National Church were offered by the committee on that work. After long and thorough discussion they were adopted. Steps were taken also for the assumption, by the Missionary Society of the Brazilian Church, of the evangelistic work among the large Japanese Colony in the interior of the State of Sao Paulo. Already a devoted Japanese clergyman is working among these people; but it is felt that this work should be enlarged and sustained by the National Church.

On the night of the first day of the Council there was a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. The various reports read that night showed that the women of Brazil are not behind in their work for God's Kingdom among their own.

Probably the two most important resolutions of the council were those which dealt with the Prayer Book and the establishment of a hospital. For several years it has been impossible to procure Prayer Books in Portuguese, the last edition having been exhausted some time ago. The Committee on Prayer Book Revision was instructed to have published within the next year a new edition in which only the language will be changed. In certain parts the Portuguese needs correction, and it is this task which has been entrusted to a committee composed of the best Portuguese scholars in the Church. The publication of this new Prayer Book will meet a keenly felt need.

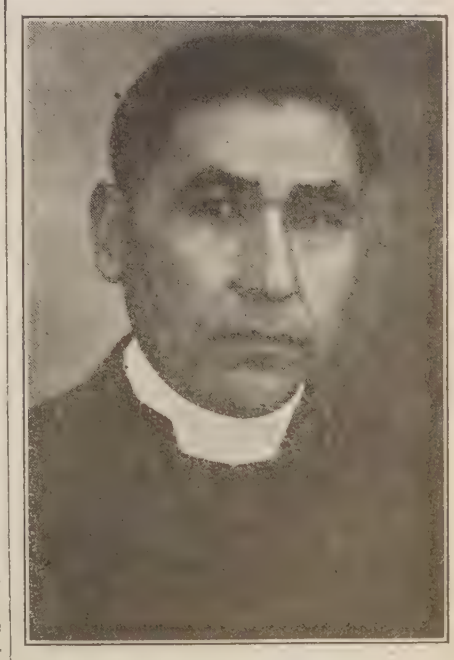
For several years the sense of the need of an Evangelical Hospital has been growing. Inasmuch as practically all the unfortuantes in this land must become mendicants, all—Brazilians and Americans—feel very sorely the great need of having a hospital which shall be charitable after the manner of Christ and scientific along the lines of modern medical methods. A fund for this purpose has been started and is slowly growing, but still is too inadequate for such an undertaking. The council urged that all the churches work for the enlargement of this fund—so that in the near future the hospital may become a reality.

At the closing service of the council on "Council Sunday" two deacons, the Rev. Rodolpho Centeno Rasmussen and the Rev. Henry D. Gasson, were ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Thomas. The sermon on this occasion, preached by the Rev. Nemesio De Almeida, was one of the most striking utterances of the council.

The progress of God's Kingdom does not come because of what goes on in council meetings; men's lives are seldom changed and never set on fire by the resolutions there adopted.

Somehow councils must always deal with organization and externals. The twenty-ninth council of the Brazilian Episcopal Church was no exception. It would have bored some men to the point of tears. But to those who took part in it, it meant infinitely more than the drawing up of statutes or the printing of a Prayer Book. For they had come from far-off places—some a day's journey, "others" a week's—places isolated and away from the stream of the world; come to exchange whatever experience one more year's struggle for Christ had taught them; and gone back to their work in the knowledge that they were not alone.

In just one unfortunate way was this council unique. The seat of the last of the pioneers was vacant. Since the last council Bishop Kinsolving and Dr. Morris have had to withdraw. It was these two men who years ago came out to a land unknown, and founded the Brazil Mission. And the history of its progress is the story and vindication of their life and faith and sacrifice. And to us who remain they have left a heritage and a responsibility. As the Rev. Nemesio De Almeida said in his ordination sermon: "The last of the pioneers has gone. It is now up to us to say whether or not the future of the Brazilian Church shall be written in the spirit which they had learned from Christ, and which they have left here among us all."



Fiftieth Anniversary of the Lenten Offering.

A total of $546,642 for the 1927 Lenten Offering was announced at the service in Philadelphia, June 5, marking the fiftieth anniversary since the first Lenten Offering was taken.

Reports were read, either by diocesan representatives or by Miss Withers, from every home diocese and district except Southern Virginia, and from every district overseas except China, Japan and Brazil. Mexico, $705, and Liberia, $500, were among the striking reports. Pennsylvania was well in the lead with $79,000. The total is roughly an eleven per cent increase over last year.

The Academy of Music was filled for the inspiring service, and as a large proportion of the congregation were children, their voices in the many hymns were delightful. An altar-like table on the stage held a cross and two jars of peonies of a splendid Whitsuntide red.

On the stage were twelve or more bishops, a number of clergy, and several choirs, aided by the Fireman's Band in the orchestra pit. Dr. Patton's Negro singers from Fort Valley and Lawrenceville were a credit to themselves and their schools. Members of the Pennsylvania Brotherhood of St. Andrew served as ushers. Bishop Garland welcomed the gathering to the diocese in which the offering was originated by John Marston. Bishop Murray made the principal address, emphasizing the personal responsibility of us all to carry forward what had been begun and carried on so well. Bishop Overs brought to mind the little Liberian children who earned their offerings by shooing the birds all day long off the rice fields, and told many stories illustrating not only the need, but the great possibilities of the total offering.

After his address the total was announced, and the service ended with prayers, a benediction and hymn.

Credit is due the local committee for much hard work in arranging the event.

The bishops, members of the National Council, and other visitors were entertained at tea at Bishop Garland's house, late in the afternoon.

Commencement at The Virginia Seminary.

The one hundred and fourth commencement of the Theological Seminary in Virginia, was held at the Seminary, near Alexandria, June 7, 8 and 9. This commencement also marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of Dean Berryman Green's connection with the institution.

A large class was graduated, many of them receiving the degree of B. D., which means a man must maintain an average of eighty-five and write an appropriate thesis. The Seminary also awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity to three of its alumni who have had conspicuous records in the Church.

The opening service was held Wednesday night in the chapel, with the annual missionary address delivered by Dr. John W. Wood of the Department of Missions. It was a masterly summing up of the history and meaning of the movements that are making such drastic happenings in China. The service was in charge of the Rev. R. A. Magill, a returned missionary to China.

The commencement exercises were presided over by the Rt. Rev. William Cabell Brown, D. D., Bishop of Virginia, and President of the Board of Trustees. The address to the graduating class was delivered by the Rt. Rev. Thomas Campbell Darst, D. D., who dwelt on the problems immediately facing the Church, and the discouragements which would be encountered, but could be overcome in the ministry.

At the Alumni Luncheon, the subject of the various speakers was, of course, Dean Green. The toastmaster was the Rt. Rev. Ernest Milmore Stires, D. D., Bishop of Long Island, who attended the Seminary with Dr. Green. He called on Bishop Jett, Dr. W. Russell Bowie, Bishop Wing and the Rev. C. W. Sheerin. Bishop Jett was a fellow student with Dean Green and the others represented former pupils of varying years during Dean Green's time at the Seminary. It was brought out that over four hundred men had gone into the ministry during the twenty-five years, and forty had gone to the mission field, and fifteen had become bishops. The Dean in a characteristically modest speech replied to the tributes. He was presented with a purse by the Maryland clergy.

At the ordination service on Friday, six men were made deacons and three advanced to the priesthood. The sermon was preached by Bishop Stires, who also ordained his own son, Ernest Van R. Stires, to the diaconate. Bishop Tucker of Southern Virginia and Bishop St. George Tucker also took part in the service, which was in charge of Bishop Brown of Virginia.

The graduating class with their dioceses was as follows: Gilbert Appelhof, Michigan; Laurance Brent, Virginia; T. M. Burleson, South Dakota; S. B. Capers, West Texas; W. T. Capers, West Texas; H. V. Clary, Washington; J. L. Cole, Vermont; K. H. K. Den, Anking; W. H. Folk, Upper South Carolina; D. C. George, Southern Virginia; G. H. Harris, Atlanta; R. S. Hubbard, Massachusetts; E. H. Jones, West Texas; H. J. Lewis, East Carolina; G. Y. L. Lieo, Hankow; F. F. Lynch, Maryland; J. P. H. Mason, Virginia; E. M. Pennell, West Virginia; M. M. Perkins, Washington; R. J. Plumb, Connecticut; W. L. Ribble, Southern Virginia; E. Van R. Stires, Long Island; F. P. Thornton, Southern Virginia; Paul Ueda, Tokyo; M. L. Wanner, Pennsylvania; H. A. Woolfall, Washington.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was awarded to the following: The Rev. Flournoy Bouldin, professor at the Bishop Payne Divinity School, Petersburg, Va.; the Rev. Joseph Courtney Jones, rector of Emmanuel Church, Webster Groves, Missouri; the Rt. Rev. John Durham Wing, Jr., Bishop Coadjutor of Southern Florida.

Deacons ordained: Gilbert Appelhof, Laurance Brent, David C. George, John P. H. Mason, Ernest VanR. Stires, Foxhall P. Thornton.

Priests ordained: Carter H. Harrison, Columbia, Va.; William H. Laird, Richmond, Va.; Harold D. W. Peters, Northumberland County, Va.

A Good Statement.

No records broken this year up to June 1, but nothing to be ashamed of.

The total to June 1 last year, $1,102,814.30.

The total to June 1 this year $1,038,500.34.

Decrease, $64,313.96.

Last year forty-four dioceses and districts had paid the full proportion of their budget quotas to date, this year forty-two are on the honor column.

With this good start let us make special efforts to educate our people as to the necessity of taking care of their Church obligations during the summer. Some parish treasurers need a reminder also.

A good summer to you all.

LEWIS B. FRANKLIN,
Treasurer.

China News.

A cable received from Bishop Graves states:

That the following missionaries sailed on June 4 for the United States, via Europe:

Miss J. K. Cook of Shanghai, Mr. E. P. Miller and family of Hankow, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Shultz and family of Shanghai.

That the following have been transferred to Manila for work in the Philippine Islands:

Miss M. E. S. Dawson of Hankow, Mother Anita Mary of Hankow, Miss B. M. Beard of Anking, Miss Lila S. Stroman of Anking.

That the following have gone to the Philippine Islands for the summer. They will probably stay at Baguio:

Mrs. D. T. Huntington and children and Miss M. K. Monteiro of Anking.

That the following sailed from Shanghai on June 4 on the Empress of Canada, due in Van couver June 19:

Dr. and Mrs. L. B. Ridgely of Hankow, Miss Henrietta Gardiner (volunteer work) of Hankow, Deaconess Edith Hart of Hankow, the Rev. A. C. Lichtenberger and family of Hankow, Deaconess E. W. Riebe of Hankow, Miss H. F. Gosline of Hankow, Miss Theodora Young of Shanghai.

A recent cable from Bishop Roots states:

That Boone University and St. Hilda's School were occupied for one day by soldiers, but are now vacated. The Bishop reports the damage small.

That the Church General Hospital is caring for Chinese soldiers wounded in the fighting in the Province of Honan. The Rockefeller Foundation through its resident vice-president in China, Mr. Roger S. Greene, has kindly provided the salary of an additional physician for six months in order to assist in this emergency.

That great political uneasiness exists in the Hankow area, but that officials are friendly.

A cable to the Foreign Department of the Young Men's Christian Association, dated June 2 and signed by Bishop Roots and A. M. Guttery, the Association Secretary in Hankow, requests:

That an appeal be made at once to the American Red Cross for aid in dealing with the emergency situation created by the fighting in Honan. Eight thousand wounded soldiers are reported in Hankow. A very large number arriving daily—existing agencies overwhelmed.

In recent letters, both Bishop Graves and Bishop Roots have spoken with gratitude of the fine way in which the Chinese clergy and lay workers are carrying on Church work wherever they are permitted by local authorities so to do.

It was a great pleasure to send to the Bishops in China the following cable based upon a statement considered and approved by the House of Bishops at its meeting in New York on June 1:

"House of Bishops June 1 recorded conviction should be no thought lessening work China when way is opened for full resumption; express gratitude to God for splendid fidelity and bravery manifested by clergy, lay workers and native Christians; has full faith Church's work China will be continued with unabated zeal and increased efficiency if and when stable government established."

Berkeley Divinity School.

The seventy-first commencement exercises of Berkeley Divinity School, located in Middletown, Conn., were held on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 7 and 8. Henry Goddard Leach, Editor of the Forum and Chairman of the Berkeley Associates, delivered the main address on Wednesday morning in the chapel, at which time Bishop Chauncey B. Brewster presented the diplomas to the graduating class. Honorary degrees were also conferred at this time.

The Rt. Rev. William Walter Webb, Bishop of Milwaukee and alumnus of the class of 1885, preached at the alumni service held on Tuesday afternoon, immediately preceding which the senior class reception was held on the lawn. The Very Rev. Howard Chandler Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, delivered the chief address at the Berkeley Dinner, held that evening. There were also speeches by the visiting alumni, included among whom were Bishop Edward H. Coley of the Central New York Diocese, the Rev. Frederick C. Grant of the Berkeley faculty, who is to become Dean of the Western Seminary in Chicago; Burton Mansfield, Chancellor of the Diocese, the Rev. John N. Lewis of Waterbury, a trustee of Berkeley; Frederick P. Goddard, member of the graduating class; Henry Goodard Leach and the Rev. William Palmer Ladd,

Dean of Berkeley. The Rt. Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, D. D., Bishop of Connecticut, presided.

The contemplated removal of Berkeley Divinity School from the site it has occupied for nearly three-quarters of a century in Middletown, to New Haven, where its students may enjoy the additional advantages of proximity to the libraries, museums and courses of study at Yale University were outlined in a report given on Tuesday morning by Presley N. Guthrie, Jr., of Greenwich, on behalf of the committee in charge of this important step in the history of the school. Dean William Palmer Ladd, D. D., also spoke at this meeting. The annual meeting of the associate alumni preceded this report.

In the graduating class are: Seward Henry Bean, Grand Rapids, Mich.; George Lakin Fitzgerald, Milford, Mass.; Phillips Brooks Franklin, Pittsfield, Mass.; Frederick Percy Goddard, Seymour, Conn.; Leonard Octavius Melville, Hartford, Conn., and John Andrew Totman, Dorchester, Mass. Mr. Bean has been awarded the John Henry Watson Fellowship and will spend a year in graduate study at Cambridge University, England. Mr. Fitzgerald will do work in the Diocese of Rhode Island; Mr. Franklin in the Diocese of Western Massachusetts; Mr. Goddard has volunteered for mission work in Texas, and Mr. Melville will be rector of Church of Our Saviour, Plainville, Conn.

Warning.

A man calling himself a Russian priest, by the name of Rev. Anthony J. Romzra, claiming to have, or to have had, parishes in Cleveland, Columbus, Ohio, and Greenburg, Pa., is begging money from our clergy.

We are informed by the Russian ecclesiastical authority that this man is not in good standing, and we hereby warn our clergy against him.

He carries Russian documents, of which we know the history, and also some authentic documents from some of our own gullible clergy.

Honor to a Country Parson.

One of the most interesting occurrences in the recent Council of Southwestern Virginia, held in Covington, was a testimonial of the love and esteem in which the Rev. Frank Mezick is held by his fellow members of the Council. Having taken charge of Nelson Parish, Nelson County, in September 1902, Mr. Mezick is about to complete a quarter-century of service as the beloved rector of that parish, which includes Trinity Church near Arrington, Grace Church at Massies Mill and Christ Church at Norwood.

During the session of council a resolution was offered by the Rev. G. Otis Meade and adopted by a rising vote, describing Mr. Mezick's faithful, effective service, the high place he holds as a member of his diocese, as the shepherd of his flock and as a citizen of his community.

Following this the Rev. Carleton Barnwell expressing most fittingly the feeling of Mr. Mezick's many friends in the Council, presented him with a purse of gold. To all of this Mr. Mezick made a touching response.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Sunday School at Grace Church, Massies Mill, which some time ago was discontinued, has been reopened, with bright prospects for the future. Mr. James C. Bentz is the Superintendent, and Mr. R. A. Mahone is Secretary and Treasurer.

Reduced Railway Rates to Summer School at Sweet Briar.

Practically all of the railroads which will be used by members of the Virginia Summer School of Religious Education, to be held at Sweet Briar, Va., June 20 to July 2, are cooperating with the officials of the school by granting reduced rates (fare and a half for the round trip) from points in the States of Virginia and North Carolina and from Washington, D. C. In order to take advantage of these rates, however, it is necessary for the individuals, in purchasing tickets, to present identification coupons furnished by some one of the three "Registration Officers"—the Rev. W. E. Cox, 2110 Grove Avenue, Richmond, for the Diocese of Virginia; the Rev. E. R. Carter, D. D., 415 High Street, Petersburg, for Southern Virginia, and Mr. Thomas A. Scott, Box 1068, Roanoke, for Southwestern Virginia, and all points outside the State of Virginia.

Attendance at Summer Schools.

The Department of Religious Education of the Executive Council of the Diocese of Washington has arranged, at a recent meeting, to assist financially such teachers in the Church Schools of the Diocese as desire to attend the Church Summer Schools in nearby places. This arrangement will be carried out by the cooperation of the rectors, Sunday-school Superintendents, diocesan officers and Mr. William C. Beck, treasurer of the Department of Religious Education.

Summer Schools accessible to Washington are the Peninsula Summer School at Ocean City, Md.; the Sweetbriar Conference, Sweetbriar College, Va.; the Blue Mountain Conference, Hood College, Frederick, Md., and the Lawrenceville Conference for Colored Church Workers at St. Paul's School, Lawrenceville, Va.

Graduation Exercises.

Mt. St. Alban has been a busy place during the last few weeks, with graduation and its attendant activities of the two Cathedral schools, the National Cathedral School for Girls and St. Alban's School for Boys.

A feature of unusual interest in connection with the Girls' School was the annual flag raising ceremony, when Miss Alice Straton of Memphis, Tenn., was declared the winner of the school flag used during her senior year and won by reason of her high scholarship average during the year. Miss Tillie Todd De Van of New York was awarded the Thomas Hyde prize and also declared Bishop's Scholar, because she has been on the honor roll for five years, a distinction only by two other girsl in the history of the school. The address of the occasion was delivered by Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army, who also presented the flag.

Earlier in the same day, final exercises in connection with graduation took place in St. Alban's School for Boys, and prizes were awarded. A high general average had been attained by the boys, while a few were, as usual, outstanding in their excellence. The Thomas Hyde Medal for the best all-round boy by the vote of the faculty was awarded to George Churchill Francis, while Thomas Grevill won six special awards as follows: Form prize, Charles C. Glover, medal for excellence in mathematics; first prize in prize-speaking contest, Walden Myer, language medal, the medal for English and the Satterlee medal for general high average.

Christ Church Troop.

Boy Scout Troop No. 3, Washington, D. C., better known as Christ Church Troop has become indeed a distinguished troop and was the recipient on Friday evening, June 10, of many honors and distinctions. The winner of the President's cup earlier in the year, and winner of the year championship of the District of Columbia, this troop stands out in an unusual way, because nearly all of its good work has been accomplished in one year. At the meeting Friday evening, in Christ Church Parish Hall, attended by many parents and friends and the Scout Commission of the District, the championship pennant was awarded and attached to the Scout Flag and the silver cup given by the Evening Star, was presented by Mr. Noyes of the Star. Gifts of appreciation were given also by the boys and their parents to Lieutenant Balke, the troop leader, who has done splendid work in bringing the troop to its present state of efficiency. Troop 3 was also assigned to a special post of honor when doing duty in connection with the parade and celebration of Colonel Lindbergh's arrival on Saturday. The troop was also assigned to duty on Sunday afternoon, June 12, in connection with the Flag Day exercises to be held on the steps of the capitol building. Troop 3, which meets always in Christ Church Parish Hall, has been encouraged and aided to its present state of honor by the rector of the church, the Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, and its success is a source of gratification to the entire parish.

The Rev. W. Geiger Irwin, who for several weeks has had under consideration a call from St. Andrew's Church, Richmond, to become its rector, has announced his acceptance. Mr. Irwin came to St. Andrew's as assistant to the late Rev. J. Francis Ribble, D. D., and was given special charge of the Men's Bible Class, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the work among boys and St. Andrew's Mission.

Mr. Irwin is a native of Baltimore, Md., where he received his early education. He entered the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1913 and was graduated in 1916, when he was ordained by Bishop John G. Murray. His first charge was St. Peter's Church, Ellicott City, Maryland, a suburb of Baltimore.

It was evident from the reports and the displays at the District Girls' Friendly Society Rally held on May 14, in Fargo, that the organization is working splendidly in the five fields of service. The officers were reelected. The Fargo Branch won the District Banner.

A beautiful window was dedicated in Grace Church, Jamestown, by Bishop Tyler, Sunday, May 22. It is a memorial to the late Hon. Benjamin S. Rector Installed in The Armenian Church.

The Rev. Bedros Hagopian on Trinity Sunday was installed as rector of the Armenian Church of St. Gregory the Illuminator, in New York. It will be recalled that after his graduation from the General Theological Seminary in 1926, he was elected rector of this parish, probably the strongest Armenian congregation in the country, and was sent to Jerusalem for a year's study in the Armenian Seminary, his ordination taking place in Jerusalem last March.

The ceremony of installation, conducted by Archbishop Tirayre, was long and impressive. The liturgy was beautifully sung by a choir of young men and women. Mr. Hagopian, after an introductory address in English, preached in Armenian. The church was filled, the great majority being men. Canon Jones, representing the Bishop of New York, Dr. Emhardt and Dr. Lau were among a number of clergy present, all of whom were later entertained at dinner.

The Armenians have had this church building since 1920, before which time, as its architecture shows, it was a "meeting-house", the former platform now a chancel, the high altar and its many candles facing square pews and a gallery. Pinned to the inner door of the church is a pathetic list of missing Armenians about whom information is sought by relatives and friends abroad.

Memorial Windows.

The school for boys at Pawling, Dr. Frederick L. Gamage, Headmaster, has recently erected a memorial chapel and now is to receive a gift of a four-light sanctuary window. The subject is the Sermon on the Mount, and the Six Acts of Mercy, the design of which has been created by James H. Hogan, of the Powells' (Whitefriars), London, England.

The children's corner in the Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, the Rev. M. L. Brown, rector, is to be further enriched by the placing of a Nativity window in memory of a young man whose life was given in the World War. It is to be unveiled on All Saints' Day, and is being made by Powell's of Whitefriars.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Rt. Rev. T. J. Garland D. D., Bishop.

A Progressive Parish.

Upwards of three hundred homes of Episcopalians in the southeastern section of South Philadelphia, were closed Sunday, June 12, from early morning until late at night, during which period the congregation of St. John's Church, commemorated the fifteenth anniversary of the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry's rectorship of the parish.

Fifteen years ago Bishop Rhinelander, then head of the diocese, was preparing to shut the doors of St. John's. The neighborhood changed and the influx of many non-English speaking families, it was reported, left no field of work for the church.

Mr. McHenry, who, then as now, is General Secretary of the Philadelphia City Mission, asked to be given an opportunity to prove there was a work. On Trinity Sunday of 1912 he began services with a congregation of seven. Today the parish has a communicant enrollment of more than eight hundred and a Sunday School of more than four hundred, virtually all living in the neighborhood of the church. For more than three years it has been a self-supporting congregation. In addition to meeting its own financial requirements the congregation and Sunday School have given many thousands of dollars to missionary work outside of the parish, including the Japanese Earthquake Relief Fund; the Divinity School fund for $1,000,000; the $3,500,000 campaign for diocesan missions and institutions and the Lenten Offering for General Missions. The congregation is now preparing to erect a commodious parish house. Through the efforts of the rector a mission has been started further to the south and is under the parochial care of Mr. McHenry.

As it was Trinity Sunday the parishioners set the day aside to commemorate their rector's fifteenth anniversary and his leadership in the development of the parish. There was a special service in the morning; a parish dinner, Sunday-school anniversary services in the afternoon followed by a parish supper and in the evening Bishop Garland was the preacher and administered the rite of Confirmation to a class presented by the rector.

Brotherhood Meeting.

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Diocesan Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was held at Calvary Church, Conshohocken, on Saturday afternoon and evening, June 4. Past-President Robert Read presided over the Junior Assembly, and President Percival H. Granger over the Senior Assembly. Leon C. Palmer, General Secretary of the Brotherhood, addressed the Juniors on "Four Square Manhood" taking as his text St. Luke 2:52, and presenting the ideal of well-balanced physical, mental, social and religious development as illustrated in our Lord's youth. After the Junior Conference, Evensong was said, with an address by the Rev. Stanley West, Chaplain of the Assembly.

After a delightful supper, served by the ladies of the parish, Mr. Franklin Spencer Edmonds, former General Secretary of the Brotherhood, spoke on the subject "Putting First Things First".

Special attention was called to Camp Bonsall with its four successive camping periods for boys between June 28 and September 5, by H. O. Merrill, director of the choir camp, and to the Week-End Conference for Brotherhood men at Camp Bonsall on July 9 and 10, by Charles Cain, Executive Secretary of the Brotherhood, who stated that Captain Casey of the Church Army would be a guest of the Brotherhood at this gathering.

The Rev. Edward M. Jefferys, rector of St. Peter's Church, Philadelphia, has been elected President of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, to succeed to the vacancy created in that office through the death of the Rev. James DeWolf Perry, who for forty years was a member of the Standing Committee and for twenty-seven of those years its President. Dr. Jefferys has been a member of the Standing Committee for twenty years and is the Senior Presbyter member.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Ordination of Bishop Stires' Son.

The affectionate interest of the people of this diocese followed their bishop, the Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D., to Alexandria, Va., this week, when he went to ordain his son, Ernest VanRensselaer Stires. The ordination took place in the same chapel where Bishop Stires himself was ordained deacon. Young Mr. Stires is one of four students of this year's class to whom the degree of Bachelor of Divinity was awarded upon graduation. He will undertake work in his father's diocese, in one of the numerous recently created centers of population in the rapidly growing Borough of Queens.

The House of St. Giles the Cripple held the annual spring party at the convalescents' home in Garden City, last week. Many of the children took part in an interesting program, and a number of visitors was present.

The work of St. Giles' is two-fold. The Hospital in Brooklyn is a fine institution for the care of orthopaedic cases, and its facilities are the best possible. Its capacity is about fifty. Many patients are treated without charge, and few pay as much as the actual per capita cost. In Garden City is a fine home and school for convalescent cases, with a capacity of forty-five or six. The buildings are new, fire-proof, and excellently planned. The endowment has reached almost a half million dollars. The institution enjoys the support of many people of the diocese, and many others as well.

St. Gabriel's Parish House, Hollis, was opened Wednesday night, June 8. A large gathering of parishioners marked the occasion. The building is the first unit of a projected group of substantial and beautiful buildings for this growing parish. It is a large stone building, entirely fire-proof in construction, erected at a cost of about $70,000 beside furnishings. The assembly room will seat about four hundred, and below it is a basement of similar size, suitable for Boy Scouts, dinners, gymnasium use, etc. There are also attractive smaller meeting rooms for women's societies, and parish clubs. The Rev. Clifford W. French is rector.

Memorial Windows Consecrated.

On Whitsunday, in the Church of the Ascension, Montgomery, a group of three windows in the chancel, were consecrated. The windows are of remarkable beauty, and together tell the story of the Ascension. They were executed by the George Hardy Payne Studios, of Paterson, New Jersey, and are authentically copied from the twelfth century windows of the Cathedral in Poiteres, France.

The windows are a gift to this church, which has recently been completed, by Mrs. Anna Randolph Willcox, of Jacksonville, Fla., and are memorials to her mother and sister, Mrs. Sarah Nicolson Randolph, and Mrs. Mary Randolph Cobbs, respectively. The Rev. Peerce N. McDonald is rector of this church.

Convocation of West Tennessee.

Historic St. Matthew's Church, Covington, was the host the week of June 4 of the convocation of West Tennessee. Practically all of the parishes and missions were in attendance. There was much interest manifested and favorable reports of the various activities of the Church were made.

An excellent sermon was preached by Dr. Charles F. Blaisdell, of Memphis, the dean of the West Tennessee convocation, Monday evening, the Evening Prayer being read by the Rev. Alfred Loring-Clark, of Memphis.

A summary of the history of the Church from the Day of Pentecost to the present day was given by the dean of St. Mary's Cathedral, of Memphis, which was instructive as well as interesting, as was the address of the Rev. Charles Noyes Tyndell, rector of St. Luke's, Memphis, on the Book of Common Prayer and the customs of the Church.

The evening session was devoted principally to a discussion of the work of the various women's organizations.

Mrs. William Marsh, of Memphis, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of West Tennessee, and Mrs. John R. Wheeler, of Nashville, delivered interesting addresses. A satisfactory condition and gratifying growth was shown in the various women's departments by reports submitted by their representatives.

Archdeacon B. F. Root's report showed that all of the church properties are in fine condition and much has been accomplished in the work among the small missions of the Church.

The convocation adjourned Tuesday night to meet in Memphis next October.

The Annual Pilgrimage to St. John's Church, near Columbia, which every year draws hundreds of Church people from all parts of Middle Tennessee, was made Sunday, June 5.

St. John's Church is the second oldest Episcopal Church in the State.

Bishop Thomas F. Gailor celebrated Communion and preached, after which there was a short memorial service at the grave of the Rt. Rev. James Otey, the first bishop of Tennessee, who is buried in the church yard.

Lych Gate Dedicated.

There was dedicated on Sunday, June 5, a carved oak Lych Gate to commemorate the ten years of continual service of the Rev. Dr. Henry B. Bryan, D. D., as rector of Grace Church (Van Vorst), Jersey City, and also to commemorate the eightieth anniversary of the organization of the parish.

The Lych Gate is gothic in style, and was designed by Mr. Charles R. Lamb, and executed by the J. and R. Lamb Studios, New York City.

Memorial Window.

There is now being placed in Calvary Church, Summit, the Rev. Walter O. Kinsolving, rector, a three-light window in memory of Heyward Hall McAllister. This completes the windows on the southside of the aisle. The work was executed by James Powell and Sons (Whitefriars), Ltd., London, England.

Presentation of Lenten Offering.

The ninth annual service for the presentation of the Lenten offerings of the Church Schools in York and Lancaster Counties, was held in St. James' Church, Lancaster, the Rev. Clifford G. Twombly, D. D., rector, on Sunday, May 22. The singing was led by a vested choir of over two hundred voices. The speakers were the Rev. John K. Shyrock, principal of St. Paul's High School for Boys, Anking, China, and Bishop Darlington, who presented the banners to the two schools having the highest per capita offering. The banner for schools having over one hundred scholars was presented to St. John's Church School, York, the Rev. Paul S. Atkins, rector, whose offering was $851.15, with a per capita of $3.61. St. John's Church has held the banner seven times during the nine years. For the past two years it has been in possession of St. James' Church School, Lancaster. The banner for schools having less than one hundred enrollment went for the ninth time to All Saints' Church, Paradise, the Rev. Frederick M. Barton, rector, whose offering was $95.54 and per capita $6.63. The total offering presented at the service was $2,757.65. The two winning schools were each permitted to select a delegate to represent the diocese at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Lenten offering, in Philadelphia, June 5.

Shippensburg Episcopal Home for the Aged was formally opened in connection with the spring meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Archdeaconry of Harrisburg, on Tuesday, May 17. The trustees have temporarily rented the unused rectory of St. Andrew's Shippensburg, which adjoins the church building. The prayer of dedication was said by the Rev. George D. Graeff, of Chambersburg, who has charge of St. Andrew's, Shippensburg. The home opened with an endowment of $20,000, given by Mrs. Phillips, of Shippensburg, and Mr. Athertown, of Philipsburg.

New Parish Houses: Work has been started on the new parish house for St. John's, Marietta, the Rev. Charles E. Borghaus, rector. Trinity Parish, Shamokin, is building a commodious new parish house. Not including the equipment it will cost about $40,000. The rector is the Ven. P. H. Ashetон-Martin.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rt. Rev. T. DuB. Bratton, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. M. Green, D. D., Coadjutor.

Saint Andrew's Parish, Jackson, Active in Flood Relief Work.

The same splendid spirit that always guides and governs Saint Andrew's women into paths of kind deeds, has again manifested itself in the flood relief work, that has been effectively done in this parish.

At the first cry of distress from the flooded district of Mississippi, Saint Andrew's Relief Group was organized at the call of the rector, the Rev. Walter B. Capers, D. D. With an efficient force of officers it went promptly to work; making, collecting, and distributing clothes and other articles as emergency arose.

The first call for help from the organization was the immediate need of garments for children and infants. The fact that on one ship bringing its cargo of several hundred persons from Greenville to Vicksburg, six infants first saw the light of day; and the further fact that thousands of mothers were driven from their homes without having opportunity to make provision for even a change of clothing for themselves and children indicates the imperative need of the hour. In response Saint Andrew's Relief Group gathered materials and made several hundred garments for infants and children.

By this time the refugees were huddled by the thousands on the levees and exposed to the rain and cold night winds. Then came the call for covering and dozens of blankets and other coverings were gathered from the parish, packed and forwarded quickly by the Relief Group workers. Then dresses for the women, clothing for the men and boys, and finally household linen was the next necessity that must be furnished. In response the women, with the cooperation of the men of the parish, were quick to answer the call.

The fact that for the past week the Saint Andrew's Group has received no call for assistance from the flooded area is a happy omen that the flood has assuaged and the waters in this section are receding.

Collect for First Sunday After Trinity.

O God, the strength of all those who put their trust in Thee: Mercifully accept our prayers; and because, through the weakness of our mortal nature, we can do no good thing without Thee, grant us the help of Thy grace, that in keeping Thy commandments we may please Thee both in will and deed; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Collect for St. John Baptist's Day.

Almighty God, by Whose providence Thy servant, John Baptist, was wonderfully born, and sent to prepare the way of Thy Son, Our Saviour, by preaching repentance; Make us so to follow his doctrine and holy life that we may truly repent according to his preaching; and after his example constantly speak the truth, boldly rebuke vice, and patiently suffer for the truth's sake; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

The Cargoes Of My Years.

Harold V. Smedberg.

O spreading billows of Time's dep'ning sea,
That ever seek to catch me and submerge,
What freights of dread or glory bring thou me
Upon thy strong and onward-sweeping surge?
Riches, perchance; or fame with brazen horn
To trumpet to the nations of my worth?
A throne, mayhap, with purple to be worn
Among the loved and mighty of the earth?

It may be, argosies of shame and death
Float to me, slow and silent, on the tide;
That gnawing pain and desp'rate, hard won breath
Will be my flotsam in the years that bide.
Nay, answer not! I keep my courage bright,
And hold my soul in close converse with Him,
Who joyed and suffered; rose to realms of light;
Yet left for Man the Light that naught can dim.

Oncoming years! Whate'er you carry me
To bless or ban, upon Time's pulsing breast,
Let me take humbly, gallantly,
Sure that what my God sends is always best.
Whatever comes, let me not drift afar
From Him, who saved all by His holy blood;
But—be my cargo scaffold, staff or star—
Years, bring me nearer to my loving God!

Communion with God An Assurance of Immortality.

I stood on a hillside a few evenings ago, head uncovered, looking toward the West. What a wonderful sunset! Such gorgeous colors, magnificent, dazzling, majestic, inspiring! I was filled with a sense of the might and power and grandeur of the Lord God Almighty". I was lifted up, awed.

A continuous chirping in a nearby hedge broke the spell that had come over me. A pair of brown wrens were building their "love nest" in the angles of a green-bramble. The tender, spring foliage and pretty blossoms of the trailing arbutus formed lovely patterns among the brown leaves with which the ground was thickly covered, while wood violets bloomed profusely along the edge of the thicket, making the border for a carpet more lovely than any that covers the floors of the habitations of man.

I sat down upon the ground and reclined upon my right elbow. The sun was just disappearing beyond the western horizon. Twilight and approaching darkness, and quiet over all! The stars began to shine. A sense of God, of communion with God, of sweet fellowship, filled my soul.

"Closer is He than breathing,
And nearer than hands and feet."

There came into my mind the questions Emerson asks: "Why does the horizon hold me fast, with my joy and grief, in this center? Why hear I the same sense from countless different voices, and read one never quite expressed fact in endless picture-language? . . . . Every sensible object—animal, rock, river, air, nay space and time—subsists not for itself, nor finally to a material end—but as a picture-language to tell another story of beings and duties. . . . There is no comet, rock, stratum fossil, fish, quadruped, spider, or fungus that "does not speak in this "picture-language" to those who "have ears to hear".

Many find comfort in cataloguing arguments to prove the immortality of the soul. Communion with God through the picture language all about and through meditation is the greatest of all arguments, and the one argument that all may know and understand, for faith in a hereafter. Certainly the reading of the Bible and prayer are necessary. But these fail if they do not bring sense of communion and fellowship with God; and it is this experience, this assurance, that removes all doubts and makes perfect our faith in a hereafter.

The following is taken from the pages of my scrapbook marked Easter Clippings:

"For the religious man there is one argument for immortality that must always come first. It rests upon the reality of the communion which he enjoys here upon earth with the living God. That experience, so rich in its joy and strength, so self-evidencing, so proof against the changes of the years, is in itself a pledge of its own continuance. It is eternal life in the present. A bond such as the religious man knows does not look as if it could ever be broken. A vision such as he has seen will not be blotted out by the shadow of death.

"Such a man has eternity in his heart. He is conscious of powers which demand for their exercise something more than the earthly sense, and with the growing experience of that real life, which gives him his measure of reality, there comes a growing appeal for the life beyond death. This is his chief evidence; other arguments confirm it, but without this all other arguments are inconclusive.

"That is why so many of the most convinced believers in immortality are little concerned with the evidences of survival which are brought forward by Sir Oliver Lodge and others. They consider these matters a legitimate field for purely scientific research. But they are not generally interested in survival by itself. Indeed, there are conditions under which a religious man would not desire to survive. The one thing which he seeks is the continuance under new conditions and in a nobler fashion of the communion with God, which is his secret here. . . . He only knows that love such as he has is deathless, and the God, in whom he has trusted, is not the God of the dead but of the living."—Southern Christian Advocate.

From Experience.

All of us like to hear from the man who has "been there". Let any one in a group bring into the general conversation about a distant land the fact that he has been there, and instantly attention turns to him. For surely he knows. He has had a first-hand experience. So it is in our exploration of Bible truth. As Sir William Ramsay has said, "The man who really knows is the man who has discovered truth for himself, and not the man who has been taught results". If we know what truth we know because we have gone to its source in the Word of God to find it, our message will come to our Sunday-school class or our congregation with the same ringing note of certitude that brings us to full attention when Paul declares, "I know whom I have believed".—S. S. Times.

The Meaning of the Bishops' Crusade.

The Crusade was not intended or expected to consist only of the services provided in the original plan. These were intended to be only the beginning of a spiritual effort, which should continue for months or years and reach every soul in the Church and all others who might in any way be influenced. As I understand it, the motive which suggested the Crusade was to emphasize the need of, and to result in, an Evangelical revival in the Church, and by the Church, and of course, such a result could not be expected to be attained in so brief a time as was allotted to the Crusade. That could do no more possibly than open the door, and arouse the attention of priests and people. It could only originate a movement which should continue and should give increasing strength to our awakened consciousness of duty and to stir us all up into a conviction that the Church was not doing its duty to the world. The deplorable condition of the people of our country, with respect to religion, where so many millions are not connected with any religious communion, and when so vast a number of children are growing up in a pagan atmosphere, and the tragic condition of the whole world, is a tremendous and appealing challenge to the Church. In what sense can we say that this is a Christian country? In what sense can we speak of the nations which are ordinarily so described, as contributing "Christendom"? Millions are living as pagans; many, I hope, manifesting at any rate the virtues of paganism; many also the views of paganism.

Is it not also true that in our Church, with its million or more communicants, there are entirely too many who regard but lightly their privileges and are indifferent to their responsibilities as Christians? There is scarcely a parish which has not on its roll the names of communicants who are largely strangers to the Church's worship and work, to whom prayer and personal religion are, if practiced at all, merely casual incidents in their lives, to whom God is a far distant stranger, a notion of the head and not a blessed Companion and Friend. These facts constitute our problem and challenge us to a greater degree of devotion and high endeavor to preach and live the Gospel of our Blessed Lord. To meet the challenge will require more than a passing period of activity. It will require constant energy and industry; constant prayer and intercession on the part of both priest and godly laymen.

But the first requirement will be to deepen and enrich our own spiritual lives by living more with God and gaining thereby the greater power which can only come from a growing and deepening Christian life. We cannot teach what we do not know. We cannot inspire others with a spirit which we do not possess. The measure of every man's power is the measure of his own character—the sincerity and reality of his own spiritual experience. We cannot lead others to God unless we ourselves know and walk in the way that leads to Him. And once again, we are all, especially we of the ministry, subject to the deadening effects of too superficial a familiarity with the outward forms and exercises of religion. Poverty of religious opportunities is hardly more conducive to insensibility than too great an abundance of opportunities participated in without spiritual earnestness. May I say to you, my brethren of the clergy, that you and I need to exercise more diligence in the study of God's Word, more thoughtful reading to keep our minds and hearts nurtured and growing in truth and wisdom; more prayer and meditation; more quiet and silence in communion with God. And this, not merely that we may save our own souls, but that we may be finer instruments for the Spirit to use in His Ministry of life and salvation. I desire to impress this with special emphasis upon my younger brethren. Our souls become dry and dessicated and our ministrations lifeless and unimpressive unless we are constantly refreshed at the fountain of the Water of life.

But, this is all equally true of you, my lay brethren. Each one of you is a priest unto God. You all constitute a royal priesthood. Some of you are alive to the duty of Evangelism. I pray God's blessing upon you in your renewed consecration. The real power of the Church is in its laity. They constitute its great body. Their spiritual life constitutes the spiritual momentum of the Church. Compare the six thousand of the clergy with the million or more of lay communicants. How can so small a number of priests accomplish the results which require the energy and spiritual force of such a body of men and women, living with God, and consecrated to His service? And so, I say to you, "See ye to it that you go forth to the conflict clad in the whole armour of God, with the breastplate of righteousness, the shield of faith, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God". Do valiant service for your Lord in season and out of season, as He gives you ability and opportunity. Let us all in lowliness of mind, in the spirit of love, and with undaunted faith be content to serve for Christ's sake in the armageddon of truth against falsehood, of righteousness against unrighteousness, of unity and peace against division and strife. In this conflict are our brethren for whom Christ died, being mislead and deceived, debauched and corrupted, and their souls lost in worldliness and sin.—From The Convention Address of Bishop F. F. Reese.

Calvary.

Friendless and faint, with martyred steps and slow,
Faint for the flesh, but for the spirit free,
Stung by the mob that came to see the show,
The Master toiled along to Calvary;
We jibed Him, as He went, with hound-glee,
Till His dim eyes for us did overflow,
We cursed His vengeless hands thrice wretchedly—
And this was nineteen hundred years ago.

But after nineteen hundred years the shame
Still clings, and we have not made good the loss
That outraged faith has entered in His name.
Ah, when shall come love's courage to be strong!
Tell me, O Lord—tell me, O Lord, how long
Are we to keep Christ writhing on the Cross!

(From "The Radiant Tree", by Edwin Arlington Robinson.)

The Spirit of Christ.

It was to be one of the marks of the New Covenant that each of its members should walk in personal communion with God. "They shall teach no more every man his neighbour, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least to the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity." The personal fellowship with and knowledge of God through the Holy Spirit was to be the fruit of the pardon of sin. The Spirit of God's own Son, sent into our hearts to do each moment a work as Divine as the work of the Son in redeeming us, to displace our material life and replace it by the life of Christ in power, to make the Son of God divinely and consciously present with us always—this was what the Father had promised as the distinctive blessing of the New Testament. The fellowship of God as the Three in One was now to be within us; the Spirit revealing the Son in us, and through Him the Father.

In the Old Testament we are told of the Spirit of God coming upon men and working on them in special times and ways, working from above and without, inwards. In the New Testament we find the Holy Spirit entering and dwelling within them, working from within, outwards and upwards.

Where God is to dwell, He must have a habitation. He had to create a body before He could breathe the spirit of life into Adam. So in Israel the tabernacle and the temple had to be built and completed before God could come down and take possession. And even so is a new heart given and a new spirit put within us, as the indispensable condition of the indwelling of God's own Spirit. We find this distinction in David's prayer: "Create in me a clean heart, O God! and renew a right spirit within me"; then, "Take not Thy Holy Spirit from me". The same truth is indicated in the words, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit": there we find the Divine Spirit begetting, and the new spirit begotten by Him. So the two are also distinguished, "God's Spirit beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God". Our spirit is the renewed regenerate spirit; dwelling in this, and yet to be distinguished from it, is God's Holy Spirit, witnessing in, with, and through it.

"It is the Spirit that quickeneth"; in these words and the corresponding ones of Paul, "the Spirit giveth life", we find the nearest approach to what may be called a definition of the Spirit. (Comp. I. Cor. xv. 45: "a life-giving Spirit.") The Spirit always acts, in the first place, whether in nature or grace, as a Life-giving principle. It is of the deepest importance to keep firm hold on this truth. His work in the believer, of Sealing, Sanctifying, Enlightening, and Strengthening, is all rooted in this: it is as He is known and honored, as place is given to Him, as He is waited on as the Inner Life of the soul, that His other gracious workings can be experienced. These are but the outgrowth of the Life; it is in the power of the Life within that they can be enjoyed. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth."

The dispensation of the Spirit is the dispensation of the inner life. In the dispensation of the Word, or the Son, beginning as it did with the creation of man in God's image, continued as it was through all the preparatory stages down to Christ's appearing in the flesh, all was more external and preparatory. There were at times special and mighty workings of the Spirit; but the indwelling was unknown; man had not yet become a habitation of God in the Spirit. Through the Incarnation this was now to be attained. The eternal life was to become the very life of man, hiding itself within his very being and consciousness, and clothing itself in the forms of a human will and life. Just as it is through the Spirit that God is what he is; just as in the Father and the Son, the Spirit is the principle in which their personality has its root and consciousness, so this Spirit of the Divine life is now to be in us, in the deepest sense of the word, the principle of our life, the root of our personality, too, the very life of our being and consciousness. He is to be one with us in the absoluteness of a Divine immanence, dwelling in us, even as the Father in the Son, and the Son in the Father.—Andrew Murray, in "The Spirit of Christ".

Divine Paradox.

Julia Walcott Cockcroft,

From otherwhere, the whence I came,
Brought I not so much as name,
And witherwhere, I hence shall go,
As little take; yet this I know:

God's Thoughts.

God has a thought of the maple,
You may read that thought in the tree,
Would you know His thought of the granite?
Then look at the granite and see.
His thought for the spring grass
Is told by the cool green sod.
The rose unfolding its petals,
Discloses the mind of God.
His thought of the butterfly
Is writ on the insect's wings.
The word He spoke to the sky-lark
You hear when it soars and sings.
We think that we are more than birds,
More than the tree and the sod,
Yet say, are we living our lives
As close to the thought of God?

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

A Life For Jesus.

M. L. G.

A poor old man, sick and crippled, said to the writer the other day, "I have been following Satan for many years; now I'm trying to learn to follow Jesus".

Now that poor man's heart is a rich treasure in the sight of his Lord. All the wealth of the world cannot equal it. It will outlast the stars, and grow through eternity in the likeness of the Master, more and more glorious.

Yet there was a sadness in what he said; and the sadness came from the knowledge that though he may give so rich a gift to Jesus, there is another he may not give—the gift of his life.

What may not Jesus do with a life! Long years of faithful service, the witness of daily living so that men take knowledge that one has been with Jesus, the souls turned to righteousness through unconscious influence, the nobility of great thoughts, the strength of great purpose, the fragrance of a soul possessed by His Holy Spirit—these things mark the life given early to His keeping. Such an one I knew, whose spirit burned brighter as his body grew old. He did not have to learn to follow Jesus then, for that path was well-worn, and the easiest for him as his feet grew weary with the long journey home.

And such a gift is yours, children, yours to give to Jesus now, as it never will be later. Let Him have all—the young days and the old. There are some things old people cannot do for Him. He needs you all, and none are too young for His service.

Buttons.

Tommy Hudson was one of six children. He had two sisters and three brothers. Tommy's mother made it a rule that the boys should sew on their own buttons when they came off. Tommy knew just how full his mother's hands were and just how hard she had to work. He tried not to grumble, but he did hate to sew on buttons.

One afternoon when he was coming home from school a button came off of his coat. It was a big button and had two holes in it. Tommy did not think it would be such very hard work to sew on that button. But somehow he forgot to make a knot in his thread and it slipped right through. That made him vexed, and he gave the thread a jerk when he drew it through the button again. There was a snap and the thread broke. He had to make another knot and start again. He wanted to throw the button on the floor.

"I wish buttons had never been made," he growled to himself.

He spoke so loud that his young uncle, who was reading, heard him and laughed. "What would you do without buttons, Tommy?" he asked. "Cheer up! I know just how you feel, though, and just what a job sewing on buttons seems at first. I had to sew on my buttons when I was in the army. I hated it until I got used to it. Now I never think anything about finding fault when a button comes off. I just sew it on."

Tommy's eyes brightened. He was very proud of his uncle and of the medal his uncle sometimes wore. Somehow it comforted him to think that soldiers had to sew on their buttons as well as he did. He unsnarled his thread and began to whistle. This time the button went on without any trouble.

He had just finished fastening his thread when his mother came into the room. She smiled when she saw what he was doing. "Tommy, do you know they are going to have a button-sewing contest at the church social tonight?" she asked. "The men and boys are going to see who can sew on the most buttons in five minutes. Dr. Slade says if a boy wins he will give him a new jackknife."

Tommy drew a quick breath. He wanted that knife. His own knife was an old one that had belonged to one of his older brothers. It had lost one blade and part of its other blade. "I'm going to try hard to win," he told his mother. "I'm ashamed of my old knife."

"You can try, anyway," said his mother encouragingly. "You have sewed on your own buttons so well lately you ought to be able to sew pretty fast."

Tommy went to the social that evening with his heart making funny little jumps whenever he thought of the button-sewing contest. The buttons proved to be of all shapes and sizes. There were great big coat buttons with accommodatingly large holes, and there were tiny little buttons so small Tommy wondered how he was going to hold onto them. All the buttons were divided as equally as possible, and each boy was given a strip of stiff cloth, a paper of needles and some thread.

Tommy went to work in the most business-like way in the world. One of the little girls whispered to one of the other little girls that Tommy could sew as well as any girl. Tommy heard, and his ears got a little red, but he sewed on and never turned his head or giggled even a little bit or tried to see how far the other boys had gotten with their buttons. Pretty soon all the little girls were jumping up and down with excitement and calling to their friends to hurry and win.

How the people laughed as the needles flew! But Tommy was too busy to laugh. He sewed on the small buttons first. Some of them had four holes. He wanted to look up and see how the others were doing, but he did not dare to spare the time. Once his thread caught, but he straightened it out as quickly and gently as possible. It would never do to have it knot or break. The little buttons bothered him the most. But they bothered the others, too. Some of the boys dropped them and had to stop and pick them up. Tommy managed to get them all sewed on without dropping any. The big buttons were almost exactly like those on his coat. His fingers fairly flew when he came to these. He knew just how to thrust the needle through the big holes. He sewed on the last button just as a little bell tinkled.

"Time is up," called the judge. "Tommy Hudson wins. He has sewed every button on."

"He shall have the prize," declared Dr. Slade, and he laid in Tommy's hands a brand new jackknife with two shining blades. "You certainly know how to sew on buttons, Tommy," he added.

"I—I wouldn't if I hadn't had to sew on buttons at home," said Tommy happily.

His hand closed over the new knife. He did not know when he had felt so happy. There were worse things in the world than buttons.—Christian Observer.

Kindness Always Pays.

Emily M. Woolfork.

A little valley—a wooden bridge—the quiet trees all around—a little gray form slipping through the leaves.

Tomasia was a squirrel who had a home in a tall tree. She had learned to know some ladies who lived near, because they were always kind and fed her nuts. So jealous she was that she fought all the other squirrels who were named Faith, Michigan, Erie and Sally.

One day it was windy and cold, and Tomasia would not come down. She liked to lie safely in her nest and let the wind rock her to sleep. The nest was just across the little valley and when her friends called she always came. When she reached the stream she crossed on some wood and leaves and then a large rock and up the bank. She would eat some of the nuts and some she buried, always putting a leaf over where the nut was buried.

Sally and Erie lived in an old stump. They liked to be nearer the ground. There were two old stumps in the valley and whenever Sally heard the ladies coming she always climbed on one of the stumps and waited for her nuts. She grew very gentle and in winter had a thick warm coat, because these squirrels lived within sight of cold Lake Michigan and they often were in deep snow.

There was only one thing that made Tomasia really unhappy. She was afraid of three pigeons that sometimes went down in the valley looking for food. They would never have hurt her but Tomasia did not know this, because when they spread their wings it made a whirring sound and not having wings herself she could not understand it.

The squirrels like Christmas, so Nature when she sends the snow, leaves the beautiful scarlet berries and the thorn apples and snow berries, so that Tomasia and Sally and all of the furred creatures may have their Christmas in the woods made bright.

The pleasure that these little creatures have given these ladies has fully repaid their kindness, and now Tomasia has several babies and as they grow larger her friends hope that she will let them see her family.

Silver.

Slowly, silently, now the moon
Walks the night in her silver shoon;
This way, and that, she peers, and sees
Silver fruit upon silver trees;
One by one the casements catch
Her beams beneath the silvery thatch;
Couched in his kennel, like a dog,
With paws of silver sleeps the dog;
From their shadowy cote the white breasts peep
Of doves in a silver-feathered sleep;
A harvest mouse goes scampering by,
With silver claws, and silver eye;
And moveless fish in the water gleam,
By silver reeds in a silver stream.

When John Had To Decide.

"Mother," said John Roberts, one Friday morning as he started off to school, "I've never asked Billy Dobson out here to spend a Saturday, and he wants to come so bad. May I ask him?"

"What sort of a boy is he?" asked the mother.

"Well, he seems to be a good hearted chap," answered John, a little nervously, remembering some of the things he didn't like about Billy; "but he looks kind of neglected, and I know he wants to come the worst kind."

John's mother smiled. She knew he was to be trusted, so she said: "Certainly, dear; bring him out if his mother is willing."

"His mother is dead," said John, choking over the words as he thought of their meaning.

And then John's mother stooped and kissed his hair as she said: "Be sure to bring Billy with you tonight, if they will let him come."

That was how Billy came to be at Oak Ridge, for that was the name of John's home. Friday night John's father played games with them, and his mother read them a story. When she went up to show Billy his room she had made everything ready for him as carefully as if he had been her own boy.

Saturday morning the boys were raking the leaves in the yard when they broke the rake, and John's mother said they could go to the store and get another one.

John telephoned to the store, and the man told them that the rake would cost thirty-five cents; but his mother didn't have the change, so she gave him a dollar to get the rake.

When they got to the store the man found he had made a mistake and the price of the rake was twenty-five cents instead of thirty-five.

"What are you going to do with the other ten cents?" Billy asked eagerly, and John replied shortly: "Take it home. What do you think?"

"I wouldn't," said Billy; "you bet I wouldn't. Your mother thinks the rake cost thirty-five cents, and she wouldn't care, and besides, she won't ask anything about it."

For answer John laughed good-naturedly in order to keep from saying anything rude to Billy, and then turned to go home.

"Aw, come on, kid; I want some candy," said Billy, beginning to whine.

But John kept on his way.

Then Billy tried a new game. He went up to the storekeeper and said: "Give me ten cents worth of stick candy."

The storekeeper gave it to him, and when Billy got the bag he stuck a piece of candy into his mouth at once and said: "John's got the money to pay for it."

John looked up and heard what Billy had said and saw what he had done. He knew that if he asked his mother for the ten cents she would gladly give it to him, and he also knew that she would not ask about it anyway; but John was honorable to the very core of his being. He knew that Billy was his guest and that he was partly responsible for Billy's doing on that account, and he didn't want the storekeeper to take the candy back and so lose what Billy had eaten. Just for a minute then he remembered that, no matter how kind his mother might be about the matter, the money he carried was not his own; so he said to the merchant: "I am sorry that Billy ordered the candy, Mr. White, for I have no money of my own with me; but if you will charge it to me, I will pay you out of my next week's allowance."

"Certainly, John," said the merchant; "I am very glad to do it for you."

Billy was listening and thinking all of this time, and when they were safely outside of the store he said: "John, I'm ashamed of myself, and I'll bring you that money to school on Monday," and he did.

Billy wanted to be as trustworthy as John was, and that is one way that a friend can help a friend.—Boys and Girls.

The Fairy's Robe.

There was a fairy, wise and good,
Once on a time, as I've heard say,
Who took the bits of happiness
That foolish folks had thrown away
And wove them in a wondrous loom,
Till she had made a Robe of Joy,
Whose shining folds were never dimmed,
And which no time could e'er destroy.
Then all the people cried: "Alack!
Lend us, we pray, this wondrous dress,
That we may say that we have known
At least a borrowed happiness."
The fairy smiled. "Go, look," she said,
"Along your path and you will find
That, though a few stray joys I took,
Yet plenty still remain behind!"

—Priscilla Leonard.

Patient Indians.

The Bishop of Mexico writes:

"One carries away from every visit to the Nopala field an impression of the worth-whileness of our work among courteous, kindly and sympathetic people, who live under conditions which would be regarded as a decided hardship by our friends in the States. Sunday afternoon, we visited the Springs in Nopala. Any one not conversant with conditions on the tableland of Mexico can not realize the hardship and difficulties entailed by the lack of water during the dry season.

"At Nopala, we saw patient Indians, sitting for hours on the edge of the deep spring, waiting for the few drops of water to trickle in over the stones from time to time. As the depth of the water would warrant it, they would let down cocoa cans on strings and pull up perhaps a gill or half a gill of water at a time. After half a day's labor, the patient drawer of water is rewarded by a bucket of water which he carries away to some far distant point in the mountains. Mrs. Salinas told us that the Indians sit by the sides of the Spring all through the night in order to have water for the day. However, the rainy season is near at hand, and soon the Springs will flow once more in abundance.

"On our way home we passed through a lovely shower which was quickly lapped up by the parched earth. In a few months the tableland will be green and there will be more comfort for these faithful Indians, who so richly deserve it."

Meanings of Our State Names.

Alabama, Indian; "here we rest".

Arizona, Aztec; "silver bearing".

Arkansas, "Kansas", the Indian name for "smoky water", with the French prefix "arc", bow or bend in the principal river.

California (caliente forno), Spanish for "hot furnace", in allusion to the climate.

Colorado, Spanish: meaning "colored", from the red color of the Colorado River.

Connecticut, Indian: "long river".

Delaware, named in honor of Lord Delaware.

Florida, named by Ponce de Leon, who discovered it in 1512, on Easter Day, the Spanish Pascua de Flores, or "Feast of Flowers".

Georgia, in honor of George II of England.

Idaho, Indian: meaning unknown.

Illinois, from the Indian "illini", men, and the French suffix "ois", together signifying "tribe of men".

Indiana. Indian land.

Iowa, Indian: "beautiful land".

Kansas, Indian: "smoky water".

Kentucky, Indian: for "at the head of the river"; or "the dark and bloody ground".

Louisiana, for Louis XIV of France.

Maine, from the province of Maine, in France.

Maryland, for Henrietta Maria, queen of Charles I of England.

My Little House.

I want to have a little house,
With sunlight on the floor,
A chimney with a rosy hearth,
And lilacs by the door;
With windows looking east and west,
And a crooked apple tree,
And room beside a garden fence
For hollyhocks to be.

Oh, all my life I've wandered 'round,
But the heart is quick at knowing
I stroof and its own little garden
Where flowers are growing;
And when I find that little house,
At noon, or dusk, or dawn,
I'll walk right in and light the fire,
And ut the kettle on.

A Christian as he grows older must grow more humble. A servant of Christ, as he serves must hide himself more and more, speak less of what he has done in service; obliterate himself. When it was necessary for the great apostle to speak of himself, he always did it with humility. "I labored more abundantly than they all," he writes, and adds, "yet not I but the grace of God which was with me." Seeking in ministry the praise from the side of men, the applause of others, or to become great in the eyes of others, is a deadly thing. God grant us all "to be clothed with humility".—A. C. Gabelein.

The Rev. Grant Knauff has taken charge of St. Andrew's Church, Carbondale, Ill., and associated work in the Diocese of Springfield.

The University of the South awarded the degree of Doctor of Civil Law to Mr. Lewis B. Franklin on June 14.

ORDINATIONS.

The Rev. Russell S. Carleton was ordained to the priesthood in St. Mark's Church, Starke, Florida, on Thursday, May 26, by the Rt. Rev. Frank A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop of Florida. Mr. Carleton was presented by the Rev. Wm. S. Stoney and the sermon was preached by Bishop Juhan. Mr. Carleton is in charge of St. Mark's Church, Starke, and Christ Church, Cedar Key, Florida.

On Ascension Day, May 26, 1927, in Christ Church, St. Paul, Minnesota, Bishop McElwain advanced the Rev. Frank C. Greene to the priesthood. The Rev. W. S. Howard presented the ordinand and preached the sermon.

The Rev. Garrett Reiff Stearly was ordained to the Priesthood by Bishop Stearly on the morning of Ascension Day, at Trinity Cathedral, Newark, N. J. He was presented by the Very Rev. Arthur Dumper, D. D., who also read the Epistle, while Bishop Lines read the Gospel and joined in the Laying on of Hands. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Samuel Shoemaker, of Calvary Church, New YoYrk City. Mr. Stearly served as assistant at St. Stephen's Church, ersey City, during the past year, and upon May 1 became a member of the staff of Calvary Church, New York.

On May 17, 1927, Mr. Walter C. Klein was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Talbot, of Bethlehem. Bishop Sterrett celebrated the Holy Communion, Prof. Gavin preached the sermon on "Service", and the Rev. Alex. Pflaum said the Litany. Mr. Klein is a graduate of Lehigh and Columbia Universities. At this coming commencement he will receive a Ph. D from Columbia and the degree of S. T. B. from the General Theological Seminary.

On Tuesday, May 17, in St. Paul's Church, Arapahoe, Nebraska, Mr. Harry E. Nelson was ordained deacon by the Rt. Rev. George Allen Beecher, D. D., Bishop of Western Nebraska. The candidate was presented by the Rev. William D. Morrow, D. C. L., and the sermon preached by the Rev. John J. Lanier, D. D., rector of St. Thomas' Church, Norton, Kansas. Bishop Beecher was the celebrant, assisted by the Very Rev. Francis R. Lee. The Rev. James N. MacKenzie read the Epistle and the Gospel was read by Mr. Nelson. The other clergy taking part in the service were the Rev. J. C. Ferrier, and the Ven. Samuel E. Wells.

Mr. Nelson will continue as deacon in charge of St. Paul's Mission, Arapahoe, Nebraska. He was formerly a Universalist minister.

On May 8, 1927, in St. Mary's Church, St. Paul, Minn., Bishop McElwain advanced the Rev. Paul R. Palmer to the priesthood. The ordained was presented by the Rev. Frank Zoubek, and the Rev. C. W. Sprouse preached the sermon.

On Tuesday, May 31, in St. Paul's Church Brooklyn, N. Y., the Rev. Howard Irving Johnson, deacon of the Diocese of Quincy, was ordained priest by the Rt. Rev. Edward Fawcett, D. D., Bishop of Quincy, acting by permission of the Bishop of Long Island. The Rev. Andrew C. Wilson, former rector of St. Paul's, presented the candidate, and the Rev. Granville M. Williams, S. S. J. E., present rector, preached the sermon. There was a large congregation present. The Rev. Mr. Johnson, who has been a member of this parish for several years, and has served in the parish as deacon for two years, will continue his ministry here for a few months. He has been appointed to duty in St. Alban's Church, Quincy, Ill., but will not be needed there until the autumn.

Mr. Johnson's preparation for Holy Orders has been out of the usual course. Being already in business when his vacation came to him, he undertook his studies while still engaged in business, and after several years' study under the direction of his rector and of the Rev. Professor Gavin of the General Theological Seminary, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Fawcett two years ago. His advancement to the priesthood brings much satisfaction to many friends as well as to the candidate himself.

On May 19, at St. John's Church, Youngstown, Ohio, the Rev. Russell Ensell Francis was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Warren Lincoln Rogers, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Ohio. The presenter was the Rev. L. W. S. Stryker; and the preacher the Rev. Canon Jno. R. Stalker. Twenty-six clergymen were present, representing the Mahoning Valley Region.

In Trinity Church, Toledo, on May 31, the Rev. Ray Alvin Evans was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Warren Lincoln Rogers, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Ohio. The Rev. E. F. Talmadge presented the candidate and the sermon was preoched by the Rev. Canon ohn R. Stalker. Eighteen clergymen were present, representing the Toledo Region.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES"

The Revelation of the Bible is Complete :: Its Doctrines Immutable :: Its Truth is Invincible :: And its Authority is Absolute :: :: ::

Bishop W. T. Manning, of the Episcopal Church, ha well said: "The present movement does not mean only rejection of the Virgin Birth, or this or that miracle of the Gospel. As Bishop Gore has so avly shown, it has its roots in a determined presupposition against the possibility of miracle, against the supernatural as such, and so against the very message of the Gospel as declared in the New Testament. A Christ who was not born of the Virgin, who did not rise in the body on the third day, and did not ascend into Heaven,is not the Christ in whom this Church believes and has always believed."

Mocking-Bird.

Gene Scott Wright.

On a mock-orange spray a mocking-bird swings,
Swings at the dawning of day;
In abandon of joy he cheerily sings,
Sings all my gloom-thoughts away.

Through the desolate night I have mournfully wept,
Wept as I numbered my woes;
And hearkened the storm-wind that savagely swept,
Swept away hope of repose.

Where was the bird in the darkness of night,
Night that was scourged by the gale?
With heart unafraid, he waited for light,
thgiLha memebhrdluopuopuopuopu
Light that he knew would not fail.

And now at the dawning he merrily swings,
Swings on his mock-orange spray;
Forgetting the tempest, he jubilant sings,
Sings all my gloom-thoughts away.

For darkness is over, and bright banners stream,
Stream to the zenith of blue:
In the morning of joy my grief seems a dream,
Dream that will never come true.

O rare mocking-bird, there's a spirit of light
Enshrined in your delicate frame;
Sing on—sing forever—to endless delight,
O mocking-bird, Joy is your name!

"God is the one who does the persevering, even in His saints. 'He giveth power to the faint.' When men hold out to the end they feel, as St. Paul did, that it is not they, but 'God worketh in them'. If there were no divine voice saying, 'I am with you until the end', there would be no perseverance unto the end. Well we know how journeys tend to drag and grow weary at the last. Who of us has not at some time had the pleasant relief of a friend's coming into the train at the end of a tedious day's travel, and passing away quickly in interest of conversation the weary finish of the journey. Perhaps this is why the Bible is so full of promises about the end of life's journey. God seems to make it clear that He is going to meet us and go with us even more fully and personally there. God will make Himself in closer fellowship the companion of that 'long last mile'."

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

A slave boy in Arrica became the first African bishop, Bishop Crowther (consecrated in 1864, died in 1891). His son is now an archdeacon and at the age of eighty-two travels up and down the country preaching and giving guidance to many churches in the great Niger-Delta.—London Diocesan Magazine.

When I shall wake in that fair morn of morns,
After whose dawning never night returns,
And with whose glory day eternal burns
I shall be satisfied.
—Bonar.

We are beginning to cease to talk about foreign missions, and to realize there is but one mission, as there is one world, and one God and Father of us all; one Church and one great adventure here at home and overseas. There is nothing foreign about God and a pure desire."

That search is not after a lost treasure, nor does it imply ignorance of where its object is to be found. We seek that which we know and which we may be assured of finding. Therefore there need be no tremors of uncertainty in our quest and the blessedness of the search is as real as, though different from, the blessedness of the possession which ends it.—Alexander Maclaren.

"The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." No lesser gospel than this will ever satisfy the craving of the human spirit for knowledge of and union with that which is its source and goal. Christ was neither philosopher nor scientist, but the revealer of the character of that which was from the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. And His alone is the hand that can lift us to participation in that eternal blessedness for which we are constituted and for which in our darkness we unquenchably yearn.

SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 92. RICHMOND, VA., JUNE 25, 1927. No. 25.

LOOKING BACKWARD

The Churchman in a recent issue accuses The Southern Churchman, under its new management, of looking backward. We do not deny it. Every true evangelical in the service of Holy Communion looks four ways: back to the Cross; ahead to the Crown; up to the Throne, and around to all Christians. Our one desire is to be looking off unto Jesus, the Author and Perfecter of our faith. But what we ask is the outlook of the Modernist Quo Vadis.

Our consideration is to concern itself with the underlying causes of the present revolt against the Government of God. Perhaps to many the theological strife in the Church seems like a matter of private opinion and interpretation, and, like Gallio, they care for none of these things. But life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are involved in the question of the authenticity and integrity of the Bible. People in the Mississippi Valley have been working like Trojans to bolster up the levees that stood between their homes and the destroying flood. Loosen the underpinning, tamper with the foundational truth of the Inspired Word of God, and you have let loose a destroying flood of unbelief and wickedness. Mr. Spurgeon said the inspiration of Scripture is the Thermopile of Christendom.

Theology is said to be the queen of sciences. No man can be indifferent to it if he cares for the maintenance of peace and happiness, and standards of justice and righteousness. The Church of God was once rent by strife over a diphthong, a small thing, surely; but the underlying question was whether the Holy Ghost proceeded from the Father only, or the Father and the Son. A small point, you say; yes, but look at the results as shown in the Eastern Church denying the truth of this double procession and remaining in a fossilized state through the ages, unblessed by revivals or any visitation of the Holy Spirit.

Analysis of causes must not overlook the seeming remote causes. Matters of belief on vital questions determine the course of practical every-day life. What is it, then, we ask, which is plunging the world deeper and deeper into chaos and misery, and the slough of immorality? Let us mount the watch tower like Habakuk. Watchman, what of the night?

Dr. James M. Gray has written an able essay on "Modernism, a Revolt Against Christianity and a Foe to Good Government". He shows conclusively that it is striking at our system of education. The Rev. John H. Hopkins, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, New York, says: "More than ninety per cent of the instructors in American Colleges are atheists." No wonder, then, that the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism has flourishing societies among the boys and girls of some of the schools, with clubs calling themselves the society of the godless or of the damned.

Modernism is striking at our system of religion as well as at our political system. We shall see this as we consider some recent happenings in this country. As to religion, a man is known by the company he keeps. What an exposure of camouflaged religion we have when ex-President Taft, a Unitarian, said: "Our religion is not growing because there are too many men in Christian pulpits preaching one doctrine. Dr. Ernest Gordon, in his great book, "The Leaven of the Sadducees", tells of Andover College, founded by rock-ribbed orthodox Christians with most rigid requirements, that would insure its continuance in the path of fidelity to the old faith, captured by the Modernists and merged with Harvard Divinity School, which is Unitarian.

During the upheaval caused by Dr. Stickney Grant's camouflaged unbelief in New York, Jews and Unitarians applauded his utterances. Bishop William M. Brown, our deposed Bishop, started on the Modernist road and is now thick with Bolshevist societies; and the International Labor Defense recently sang a song at one of their meetings. One verse ran as follows:

"Now, Bishop Brown, we welcome you, we need you in the van,
We are proud to call you brother, for you've done the best you can,
Since you left the cause of Christ to battle for the cause of man.
For the truth goes marching on.
Brotherhood and Revolution.
Brotherhood and Revolution, etc., etc.,
For the truth goes marching on."

The recent Church Congress has shocked us with utterances practically endorsing companionable marriages and sex promiscuity. Note this, and then consider that Judge Cooper says that seventy-five per cent of the crimes today are committed by youths under twenty-five. Also note the steady increase of suicides, especially child suicide.

Now is there any connection between this condition of things and the liberal thought of today, of which The Churchman is an exponent? To quote Dr. Horsch: "A newer ethics has resulted from a new theology. The rejection of the inspiration of Scripture has destroyed not only the foundation of the faith, but of sound morality as well. Modern thought based on the doctrine of divine immanence, however, not only accepts the view that all things have become holy, but we are told that all acts of men are holy as well. 'If God alone is and everything is God (or is the expression of an immanent God) vice is as divine as virture, sin has no meaning, and goodness no worth', says Alfred E. Garvie."

Dr. R. J. Campbell said in a sermon: "Sin itself is a quest for God, a blundering quest, but a quest for all that." Dr. A. C. Dixon, when preaching in London during the World War, charged the war to evolution. An interned German officer happened to be in the congregation. After service he asked for an interview, and said, with indignation: "You were right, but you did not tell us where we got it from"; referring to Darwin, who was English. How could Darkin ever be compared to John the Baptist when he fomented a theory that was taken up by Nietzsche, who preached its correlate that might makes right, and this obsessed the minds of the war lords, and the world was plunged into war. Nietzsche died hopelessly insane, and the war took ten million lives.

Darrow defended the youthful murderers in Chicago on the ground that they had been reading Nietzsche, and thus their deed was a product of the evolutionary hypotheses. So Dr. Conrad well says: "Modernism is the monoxide gas of religion." So much of this insidious and deadly gas, in other words pusilanimous piffle, is furnished by some supposedly forward-looking Church periodicals that "a recent poll of prominent men of letters revealed the fact that only one or two out of a dozen had anything that could be called a definite Christian faith".

For the Southern Churchman to turn from teaching a theology that, as has been shown, has resulted so disastrously to the world, back to the paths of the old faith that produced men of the type of General Robert E. Lee, must indeed be tragic as far as Satan is concerned; but the harbinger of a day, bright with promise, and hailed with thanksgiving by all whose expectation is from God.

Yes, it is enough—modern theology is looking downward; it came from the bottomless pit which Apollyon presides over, and it is looking to the hole of the pit whence it emanated. As the Serpent in Genesis began with a question, and then in his degraded form makes a question mark as he moves upon his belly, so this father of lies has placed the question mark over everything today. Modern theology is looking toward Sodom, the city of destruction. Supporters of God's Word are looking for a "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God".

The Southern Churchman has nailed its colors to the mast. We know whom we have believed. We know that His Word is settled forever in heaven. And we know that only by fidelity to His authoritative Word may we so pass the waves of this troublesome world and finally come to the land of evrlasting life, there to reign with God, world without end, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

We are presenting this week a page entitled: "Aids to Devotion," in the hope that it may prove helpful. If it is desired, this may be continued; if not regularly, at least from time to time. The only way we can tell whether it is helpful is for you to say so. We would be glad to hear from those interested and also we will appreciate any suggestions as to how we may make The Southern Churchman more helpful and interesting. We can only say that any suggestion that would in any way invalidate or weaken the present doctrinal stand of this paper would be useless. At the present time we cannot illustrate the paper as we would like to; but we hope that all friends will assist us in enlarging the circulation, and thus enable us to improve it.

AUTHENTICITY OF THE BIBLE

By the Late Bishop McIlvaine

IV.

BEFORE relinquishing this department of evidence, there are certain very important particulars which, though embraced in what has already been advanced, require a more special notice.

It is worthy of distinct remark, that when the books of the New Testament have been quoted or alluded to by those whose testimony has been adduced, they are treated with supreme regard, as possessing an authority belonging to no other books, and as conclusive in questions of religion. For example, Irenaeus, born about A. D. 97, calls them "Divine Oracles"; "Scriptures of the Lord". He says that the Gospel "was committed to writing, by the will of God, that it might be, for time to come, the foundation and pillar of our faith". "He fled to the gospels, which he believed no less than if Christ had been speaking to him; and to the writings of the apostles, whom he esteemed as the presbytery of the wwhole Christian Church." Origen, born about A. D. 184, says: "Christians believe Jesus to be the Son of God, in a sense not to be explained and made known to men, by any but by that Scripture alone, which is inspired by the Holy Ghost; that is, the evangelic and apostolic Scripture, as also that of the law and the prophets." Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, born about the end of the second century, earnestly exhorts "all in general, but especially Christian ministers, in all doubtful matters to have recourse to the gospel and epistles of the apostles, as to the fountain where may be found the true doctrine of Christ". "The precepts of the gospel," he says, "are to be considered as the lessons of God to us; as the foundation of our hope, and the support of our faith."

The books of the New Testament were united at a very early period in a distinct volume. Not to mention, in evidence of this, that all the earliest writers, the gospels and epistles are spoken of as constituting a well-known collection of sacred authorities, divided into those two parts; we have Tertullian, born only fifty years after the death of St. John, calling the collection of the gospels an "Evangelical Instrument"; the whole volume, the "New Testament"; and the two parts, the "Gospels and Epistles".

The books of the New Testament were, at a very early period, publicly read and expounded in the congregations of Christians. Chrysostom, born about A. D. 347, testifies that "the gospels, when written, were not hid in a corner or buried in obscurity, but made known to all the world before, enemies as well as others, even as they are now". Irenaeus, about two hundred years earlier, says, that in his time, "all the Scriptures, both prophecies and gospels, are open and clear, and may be heard of all". Still earlier, we find Justin Martyr giving the Emperor an account of the Christian worship, in which it is written, "the memoirs of the Apostles or the writings of the prophets are read, according as the time allows; and when the reader is ended, the president makes a discourse, exhorting to the imitation of so excellent things". The custom here mentioned is evidently spoken of as notorious and universal. This was about the year 140. But a practice thus general and familiar could hardly have grown up in less than forty years before the writing of this last witness. Thus we reach the life of St. John, and may therefore consider it as satisfactorily proved, that at a period as early as the last year of St. John, the Scriptures of the New Testament were publicly read and expounded in the Churches of Christians. Such is the natural inference from many passages in the works of Augustine, of the fourth century. For example, "the canonical books of the Scripture being read everywhere, the miracles therein recorded are well-known to all people". "The epistles of Peter and Paul are daily recited to the people. And to what people? And to how many people? Listen to the Psalm, 'Their sound has gone out into all the earth'." Again, "The genuineness and integrity of the same Scriptures may be relied on, which have been spread all over the world, and which from the time of their publication were in the highest esteem, and have been carefully kept in the churches".

During the primitive ages of Christianity, commentaries were written upon the books of the New Testament; harmonies of them were formed, copies diligently compared, and translations made into different languages. In proof of these assertions, it is needless, after the citations already made, to call up testimony. It may be found abundantly in Paley's Evidences; where it is well said, that "no greater proof can be given of the esteem in which these ancient books were holden by the ancient Christians, or of the sense then entertained of their value and importance, than the industry bestowed upon them. Moreover, it shows that they were then considered as ancient books. Men do not write comments upon publications of their own times; therefore the testimonies cited under this head afford an evidence which carries the evangelic writings much beyond the age of the testimonies themselves, and to that of their reputed authors". There is but a single example of a Christian writer during the three first centuries, composing comments upon any other books besides those in the New Testament. Clement of Alexandria is mentioned by Eusebius as having written short notes upon an Apocryphal book called the Revelation of St. Peter; but that he did not consider it as having authority, may be inferred from the fact mentioned by Usebius, that in his other works it was nowhere quoted.

From the view we have taken of the primitive testimony, it appears that the agreement of the ancient Church as to what were the authentic books of the New Testament is complete. Out of the twelve catalogues, the earliest of which was furnished by Origen, living within a hundred years of St. John, and all of which were drawn up either by solemn councils or distinguished heads of the Church, residing in various and widely remote parts of the world, out of twelve, seven, including the earliest, agree exactly with our New Testament list; three others differ only in the omission of the book of Revelation, for which they had a special reason for not implicating its authenticity; and in the two which remained the books omitted, and spoken of as doubtful in the estimation of some, were acknowledged and quoted as authentic by the framers of the catalogues. The fathers, in all their writings and of all ages and countries, appeal to the same Scriptures as infallible authority. The consent of the ancient church was therefore universal. So far as the argument for the divine revelation of the gospel is connected with the authenticity of any of the books, it was without exception. The books omitted in some writers and catalogues, have no essential reference to the great question whether Gospel of Christ is of divine revelation.

The agreement among the various sects of heretics in the earliest centuries, is as entire as that of the orthodox fathers. The authenticity of the books of the New Testament was acknowledged even by those to whose sectarian interests their authority was extremely detrimental. Instead of venturing to dispute their having been written by their reputed authors, they sought refuge in arbitrary interpretations of such passages as opposed their favorite views. Some among the Gnostics, for example, unable to escape the apostolic character of the sacred books, maintained the necessity of giving an allegorical turn to their declarations. And when, in the course of time, heretics did undertake to question the authenticity of some portions of the New Testament, their accusation was not based upon any historical or testimonial objections, but confined to some trifling and pretended internal cause of exception, which only their own conveniences could discover. Some of these later heretics, being opposed to the doctrine of the influences of the Holy Spirit, denied the Gospel of St. John, because it contains the promise of that Divine Teacher and Comforter. But with regard to those of an earlier date, Irenaeus of the second century writes: "So great is the certainty with regard to our gospels, that even the heretics themselves bear testimony in their favor; and all acknowledging them, each endeavors to establish from them his own opinions." Origen, on account as well as of his candor and acquaintance with the heresies of his time and as of the early age in which he lived, should be considered a competent witness on this head. He states that the heretics endeavored to impose upon people by alleging texts of the Scripture for their particular tenets, though they quoted them in a very unfair and mutilated manner; and that they appealed to them because they were the only writings whose authority was universally allowed. Testimony more impressive than this, to the apostolic authorship of the New Testament books, cannot be demanded.

The several heads of evidence which have now been made out in proof of the authenticity of the New Testament, cannot be pretended to with regard to any of those writings which are called Apocryphal Scriptures. To some who are aware that in the early ages of Christianity there existed a variety of apocryphal gospels and other compositions pretending to have been written by the apostles, it may be difficult to imagine by what rule the true works of the inspired writers were separated, without embarrassment and with sufficient confidence, from all mere pretenders to that high original. But it greatly enhances one's sense of the prodigious weight of evidence in support of the true Scriptures, to learn how broad and unquestionable was the distinction.

R A H A B

By W. H. Parker

Hebrews 11:31; James 2:25; Joshua 2 and 6.

SIGNIFICANT and emphatic are the statements of Scripture concerning "Rahab the Harlot". Five times she is identified by this name and she takes her place not only with the uttermost sinners of the Bible, but as one of the outstanding marvels of the grace of God. She is the only woman named among the illustrious heroes of faith in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Hers is the name of a degraded woman who by a simple and humble faith set in motion far-reaching consequences, being saved herself and bringing others with her.

We read, "Her house was upon the wall and she dwelt upon the wall". This was a vantage point from a worldly point of view and a good location for her sinful calling and no doubt it was so esteemed by those "with whom she had her conversation in times past, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and who were by nature the children of wrath even as she" (Eph. 2:3). But likewise, be it noted, impending judgment made the wall the most dangerous spot in doomed Jericho, for when on the seventh day there arose the mighty shout and the trumpets sound (Deut. 6:20 and Heb. 11:30) "the wall fell down flat". But not the harlot's house! Crashing ruin there was on both sides of her but her house "fell not", for by faith Rahab had "obtained a good report". A divinely drawn picture of the promise to the believer, "A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee" (Ps. 91:7). Now it is worth-while to observe exactly what is written concerning the salvation of this woman. There is no manner of doubt about the spiritual meaning of Rahab's history. Joshua had said, "Rahab, the harlot, shall live", and his word being given, it is recorded that "Joshua saved Rahab alive and all that she had and she came to dwell in Israel unto this day". From the crumbling wall of the world's defenses and false security she was "brought out" and came to dwell in the place of peace and safety with the people of God. Sir William Robertson Nicoll has said: "The words of the Old Testament are strangely prepared to hold the glory of the New. The intense utterances on death and life scattered through the Old Testament have another meaning to those who have heard the Lord saying, 'he that believeth on me shall never die'." And so in the New Testament we find this narrative of Rahab illumined, new meanings uncovered, the whole story shining with gospel truth. For "all these things happened unto them for examples: and they are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the ages are come" (1 Cor. 10:11).

"By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with the unbelieving" (Heb. 11:31). So first of all we have this amazing fact stated—Rahab did not perish because of faith and we have the same fact pictured for us in her fascinating story. We must bear in mind that Rahab was formerly just like the other people who lived in Jericho, she did not believe in Jehovah of Israel. She had gods of her own whom she worshipped, prayed to, trusted in and openly confessed. She was precisely like every one today who does not know God in Christ. "An alien from the commonwealth of Israel, and a stranger from the covenants of promise; having no hope and without God in the world, being afar off and not made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. 2:12, 13). It was not her degrading calling that made her an "alien" and "afar off". She was born an "alien" and "afar off", like every one of us and she lived in a city where every one was an unbeliever and "afar off". In the third chapter of Hebrews we learn why unbelief is such a deadly thing. It hardens the heart, it causes men and women to depart from God and it shuts them out of His Rest, both here and hereafter. Unbelievers do not know God and neither did Rahab. But she had been hearing about Him, and what she heard caused her to transfer her confidence from her self from her false gods, from her friends, and from the massive wall on which she dwelt, to Jehovah of Israel whom she had never seen (not even an image of Him), but had only heard of. In speaking of it she said, they had heard in Jericho of Jehovah's mighty works and of His words. Faith came, it came the way faith always comes, "faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God". Jesus said, "take heed how ye hear". Rahab's friends and neighbors heard as well as she, but on they went, unheeding, straight to judgment. Whenever we hear the Word of God faith is on its way to us. "Faith cometh by hearing," "take heed how ye hear." Pride will block faith out, pride of intellect, pride of character, pride of achievement, "except ye become as little children ye shall in no wise enter in". It is a hard saying for many whose necks are stiffened in pride. Pride listens to God's Word patronizingly, critically, unbelievingly. It is so humiliating to ask for mercy. A protest is now being made in one of the prominent denominations by some who object to the expression in one of their prayers, "God be merciful to us miserable sinners and offenders". But why the objection? Rather let us say:

Depth of mercy, can there be
Mercy still reserved for me
Can my God His wrath forbear?
Me the chief of sinners spare?

Rahab heard, she believed herself to be in danger and faith impelled her to ask for mercy. It was the ever recurring mystery and miracle of the operation of the Holy Spirit on a soul dead in trespasses and sins.

Listen to her pray—"Jehovah, your God He is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath, now therefore I pray you, swear unto me by Jehovah and give me a true token that ye will save alive my father and my mother and my brethren and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death". Prayer is faith breathing and its first cry is for mercy. "The Most High delighteth in mercy." "The eye of Jehovah is upon them that fear Him that hope in His mercy." We can all be sure of two things. If we don't ask for mercy we won't get it and if we do ask for it in Jesus' Name, we will get it. Rahab got it and the man praying in the temple got it and the malefactor who died hard by the Saviour got it. Rahab besought mercy and "perished not". What a word—may it be so recorded of each one of us, "She perished not". Rahab's faith gave her a new conception of God, "I know Jehovah hath given you the land—Jehovah your God, He is God in heaven above and on earth beneath". A startling confession and admission from an outcast women who all her life had been bowing down to idols. And let me ask you, who taught her to pray for others? Where and how did she learn to do that? Surely not from her fallen nature, nor her false gods nor her foolish friends. The Spirit of God can teach a regenerated soul more in a moment of time than all the high-browed higher critics can learn in a million years.

"The Holy Ghost whom the Father will send in My Name, He shall teach you all things." "He shall bring all things. To your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26). The Scripture speaks of the "obedience of faith". Rahab was told to do certain things. What was her answer. "According to your words so be it." But even better than that, she obeyed.

The Apostle James, writing under inspiration, says: "Seest thou how faith wrought with works, likewise was not Rahab justified by works?" (James 2). Faith cannot be justified by words ,but by works or obedience. Rahab's faith, and yours and mine, must stand the test, not of emotion or profession, but of obedience. Faith is always saying: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy saved us." Faith is a gift, by which God puts the motive power into us to obey Him.

Now Rahab's house on the wall had openings on both sides. One was a door into the street. The other was a window on the other side toward the open country. "Terror had fallen" on the city, but it was the fear of unbelief (not the godly fear that worketh repentance). They strove to oppose the God of Israel and fought against Him to the last (Josh. 24:11). The King sent word, "Bring out the men who have come into thy house". They did not know that Rahab had changed her allegiance and when she shut the door on the soldiers it was never opened again for any to go out (although happily some came in). "And it shall come to pass (said the messengers) that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street his blood shall be upon his head". The doors opened into the city toward unbelief and, therefere, toward coming death and judgment. Nineteen days later the blow fell when the trumpets sounded. But Rahab's household was now one of faith. Long before this Jehovah had said of His own people, "I have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine" (Lev. 20:26). This household was separated, "None shall go out of the doors of the house into the street". What, then, shall be the way of escape?

The book of James, second chapter, tells us there was "another way". There was a window on the other side. Light came in there and fresh pure breezes from over Jordan. It looked toward the hills and the camp of the chosen people where Jehovah dwelt. In that direction lay safety but the window was not broad and easy like the door.

When Rahab had shut the door into the street she mounted quickly to the roof. She seemed to sense the coming day when it would be too late. "Before the messengers were lain down she came up unto them upon the roof" (Josh. 2:8). "Swear unto me by Jehovah and give me a true token—that ye will deliver our lives from death." The messengers answered, "Our lives for yours", as much as to say, if we live, you shall live; from now on there is a covenant of life between us and the token shall be a "scarlet line". "Then she let them down 'another way' by a 'scarlet line' through the window." "And the messengers said, "Behold when we come into the land thou shalt bind in the window the line of scarlet by which thou hast let us down. And thou shalt gather to thee in the house, thy father and thy mother and thy brethren and all thy father's household; and it shall be that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be on his head" (Josh. 2:18, 19). "And she said according to your words so be it, and she bound the scarlet line in the window." Faith accepted the "token" and obeyed the order.

For "three days" in the mountains hidden from view, lost to friend and foe, buried from sight and probably given up by their friends, the messengers lay unseen. But on the "third day" they "returned" to Joshua. Because they still lived Rahab's salvation was assured. It was a momentous event for the little flock. Their faith had not been in vain. Their redemption was drawing nigh.

The "Scarlet Token".

The little company gathered in Rahab's house on the wall of Jericho watched and waited. Bound in the window was the "true token" the "scarlet line" (Scarlet for sacrifice, the line for safety. Safety by sacrifice). They had the sure promise and they were still trusting. What a difference! Years later the Spirit of God describing a house such as this, before the great change came to it, used these words: "Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death" (Prov. 7:27). But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound" (Rom. 5:20). The house was now transformed. It had become a house of prayer and praise.

"By faith Rahab, the harlot, perished not with the unbelievers." What did the "scarlet token" signify? It was a token that Rahab and her household were now joined to Israel. No longer "aliens", no longer "afar off". It meant that every soul in the house on the wall with the scarlet token bound in the window was under the protection of Jehovah. That every one of them was accepted by the God of Israel in the one and only way He had appointed and ordained, the way of sacrifice.

The scarlet token symbolized the scarlet flow of sacrifice with acceptance and safety thereby. Years before in Egypt Jehovah had said, "The blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where you are and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy" (Exodus 12:13).

Rahab and her household were now under the covenant of promise. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission" (Heb. 9:22). "But it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins." The scarlet token has given way to the true, "The blood of the everlasting covenant, for now once in the end of the ages hath Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself" (Heb. 9:26).

"By his own blood He entered in once into the holy place having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb. 9:12).

His blood has answered for Rahab's sins, for Christ is "as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Heb. 13:8). Is "the blood" of infinite value answering for your sins? Is your house of life sheltered by the scarlet token? If so, all is well, for "I say unto you he that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).

"By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with the unbelievers" (Heb. 11:31).

CHRISTIANITY vs. MODERN LIBERALISM

By the Reverend J. Gresham Machen, D. D.
of Princeton Theological Seminary

III.

The Bible Absolutely Unique.

THE Christian view of the Bible of course makes the contents of the Bible absolutely unique. You might have all the ideas of the Bible in some other book, but you would have no Christianity; because Christianity is an account not merely of things that always were true, but an account of something that happened, and unless the thing really happened then we are still hopeless under the guilt of sin. It all depends upon the question whether, as a matter of fact, the eternal Son of God did take our sins upon Him and die instead of us on the cross.

According to the Christian view of the Bible it not only contains an account of something that happened, but contains a true account, and thus there is added to the Christian doctrine of revelation the Christian doctrine of the inspiration of the Word of God, and upon that doctrine despite is everywhere being cast today. Men are always talking about the "mechanical" view of inspiration, which makes the Biblical writers little more than stenographers. But as a matter of fact the Christian doctrine of inspiration does not deny the human characteristics of the Biblical writers, nor display any lack of interest in the human means that these writers had for gathering their information, but it holds that by the Spirit of God these writers were preserved from the errors which are found in other books, and thus gave to us the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

The Seat of Authority According to Liberalism.

But what does modern Liberalism substitute for the authority of the Bible? Sometimes a totally false impression is produced that it substitutes the authority of Jesus.

That is altogether false, because when asked what they consider the authority of Jesus, we discover that modern Liberalism rejects a great many of the recorded words of Jesus. It does not believe that Jesus ever spoke some of them, because in His recorded words in the gospels are some things most hateful to it. Modern Liberalism says that not everything recorded of Jesus in the Gospels was spoken by Jesus, and we must sort out the words which were spoken by Him and reject the rest.

But suppose we press it further. We shall discover that even in the reduced Jesus of modern liberal reconstruction there are some things abhorrent to the Liberal Church, and modern Liberals if pinned down to it will say that they do not believe everything Jesus said was true, but they will say they are still Christians, they are still His followers, because they still hold to the central life purpose of Jesus.

Well, what was the central life purpose of Jesus? According to the Gospel of Mark the central life purpose of Jesus is found in His atoning death. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and give His life a ransom for (instead of) many."

These words are of course abhorrent to the Liberal Church. But when you ask what the central life purpose of Jesus was, you will find you are in the mire dispute, and that they will accept as authoritative only a few of the sayings of Jesus, not because they are His sayings, but because they happen to agree with their own opinions. The real authority of the modern Liberal is not Jesus, but it is, as men say, "Christian experience".

But what do you mean by Christian experience? What do you mean by Christian experience as authority? Surely you do not mean merely a majority vote of the organized Church. Do you mean, then, individual experience? But this is endlessly diverse, and therefore what you will have substituted for the true authority of the Word of God, is no authority at all but the shifting emotions of sinful men.

But people say what a foolish thing it is to depend upon a book. It all depends upon the book, my friends. The Reformation of the sixteenth century was founded upon the authority of a Book! May that Book again set aflame the world, and may the present bondage give place again to the glorious freedom of the sons of God!

The Christian View of Christ.

When you come to the contents of the Bible everything points to the central figure—Jesus Christ. What is thought of Christ, first, by the modern Liberal Church and second, by Christian men?

At this point a further perplexity arises, for ask the modern Liberal preacher his view of Christ, and he will say with great conviction, "I believe in the deity of Christ, I believe that Jesus is God".

We hear much like that today. People say, "Why, after all, this great preacher is most orthodox because he believes in the deity of Christ, and those who are objecting to his presence as a leader in the Church, are mere uncharitable heresy hunters.

Do you not see, my friends, that, when they say Jesus is God, the value of that utterance depends upon what they mean by God? That little word "God" is not a bit more beautiful than any other English word. The value of it depends altogether upon what you mean by it, and when the modern liberal preacher says he believes Christ is God, he may mean God exists in all the world, God exists wherever life pulsates through humanity, and only appears fuller and plainer than any other place in the life of Jesus.

That is what is often meant, and of course that is very far from the Christian faith. Very often when he says Jesus is God, he means to use the term in this way: "We have given up," he says, "the old notion that there is a Creator and Ruler of the world. We know nothing about that—that is metaphysical. The word 'God' is useful merely as expressing the highest object of men's desires." So when they say Jesus is God they do not mean that Jesus is the supreme ruler of the world, but simply that Jesus, though a man like the rest of men, is the highest thing we know.

Such men are further removed from the Christian faith than Unitarians. Unitarians at least believe in God, wherever these men speak highly of Jesus, call Jesus God, only because they think low of God, not because they think high of Jesus.

In another way also such men are inferior to Unitarians, inferior in the plain matter of honesty. When they say, Jesus is God, the truthfulness of that utterance depends altogether upon the audience addressed. I do not mean to deny that such liberal preachers do believe in the very core of their hearts that Jesus is God, they certainly mean that. But the great trouble is, they know perfectly well those words are going to be taken by the simple-minded hearers whom they address in a way totally different from the way in which they mean it. They are offending therefore against the fundamental principles of truthfulness of language. The assertion, "I believe that Jesus is God", is truthful before an audience of theologically trained persons who understand the modern way of thinking about God, but if it be addressed to a simple minded people, then the language is untruthful and all the best motives in the world cannot possibly excuse it. Nothing can possibly excuse language which is not in accordance with facts.

Simplicity of the Cross.

Liberalism is different from Christianity also as to salvation. What is the way of salvation according to the Christian account? Two aspects are to be distinguished. In the first place, the basis is a very simple thing. Men talk about the theory of the atonement as though it were a subtle thing, but you can put it in words of one syllable. We deserve eternal death. The Lord Jesus Christ, because He loved us, died instead of us on the Cross.

That certainly is not incomprehensive. It is mysterious in its depth of grace, but it is a thing that a child can understand. Do you want me to tell you what is difficult? It is not the simple Bible presentation of the death of Christ, but the manifold modern effort to get rid of that simple presentation of the Cross in the interests of human pride.

The modern liberals pour out the vials of their scorn upon the Bible presentation of the Cross of Christ. They speak of it with disgust as involving a "trick" intended to placate an "alienated God". Thus they pour out their scorn upon a thing so holy that in the presence of it the Christian heart melts in gratitude too deep for words.

People talk about Christian experience. My friends, where can Christian experience be found if not at the Cross of Christ, at that blessed place where a man knows that in a great mystery the guilt of his sin was taken by the Holy One, and borne instead of him on the Cross?

The very nerve of the Christian view of the Cross is that God Himself makes the sacrifice for our salvation. Where can love be found except at the Cross of Christ, the one who died, the just for the unjust? "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." There, and there alone, is to be a found the love that is love indeed.

The New Birth.

This work of Christ is applied by the Holy Spirit of God in the new birth. You will hear very little about the new birth in modern preaching. Modern missionaries will tell you, you must give up the thought of winning individual converts in mission lands. For the new birth they are inclined to substitute "the social gospel". But at the very centre of Christianity are the words, "Ye must be born again".

Justification by Faith.

That is the work of the Spirit of God, the application of the work of Christ. But in applying the work of Christ the Spirit makes use of faith. People who have found salvation know what it means.

Liberals talk about faith in Jesus, but they mean simply admiration of Jesus. They talk about it as if the basis of the Christ life were "make Jesus Master in your life". The Y. M. C. A., in recent years, has put the declaration of purpose to live the Christ life as something being on a par with the reception of the salvation which is found in the Cross of Christ. I do not see but that that is the exact opposite of faith. That means that you are trusting in your own works. Faith means not that you do something, but that you receive first the gracious gift of God. When the Lord Jesus has died for you you accept it without work of your own. You accept the gracious thing He did. And then by God's help the good life follows.

Victory Assured.

Christianity is fighting a great battle today. It is one of three great crises in the history of the Christian Church. One came in the second century when Christianity was almost engulfed by paganism in the Church in the form of Gnosticism. There was another in the middle ages when legalism was almost dominant in the Church, similar to the modern legalism which appears in the Liberal Church. Christianity today is fighting a great battle, but I, for my part, am looking for ultimate victory. God will not desert His Church.

AIDS TO DEVOTION

PRAYER.

O Thou beloved and lovely One! What words
Can speak Thy worth? What words can ever tell
All that Thou art, since Thou art all in all?
Dear bleeding Lamb, blest fountain where I cleanse
My sin-stained soul! O river of my peace,
Rock of my rest, shelter from every storm,
Light of my darkness, joy of my distress,
Balm of my wounded spirit! Morning star
Of all my future! Crown of all my hopes!
O day spring from on high, whose early light,
Has beamed upon me, banishing my night
With dawn of Glory! Son of righteousness!
Rise, O for ever rise! For ever shine
Brighter and brighter! From all weeping eyes
Remove all tears, and over all Thy saints
And over earth and heaven; and o'er the bounds
Of utmost time, and o'er the boundless depths
Of all eternity, pour out the light,
The flood, the sea of glory—the full sea
Of all Thy glory inexhaustible,
Pour out forever and for evermore!
And o'er the earth renewed and azure heaven
Unshadowed, and the realms of endless peace,
Spread the high noontide of the hallowed day
Of God—the Sabbath of eternity!

A POWERFUL PLEA FOR PRAYER FOR REVIVAL.

By Dr. R. A. Torrey.

"Wilt Thou not revive us again: that Thy people may rejoice in Thee?"—Psa. 85:6.

"It is time for Thee, Lord, to work: for they have made void Thy law."—Psa. 119:126.

One of the most insistent cries that goes up today from the heart of any one who loves the Lord Jesus Christ, and who is at the same time open-eyed as to the condition of affairs in the world today, is the cry of the Psalmist of old, "Wilt Thou not revive us again: that Thy people may rejoice in Thee"? The great need of the hour is revival—a true, God-sent revival; not a revival gotten up by man's machinery, but a revival sent down from God Himself in answer to the prayers of people who know and meet the conditions of prevailing prayer.

The condition of the churches throughout our land and other lands today would be appalling if we did not believe in a God who answers prayer—yes, if we did not know that God does answer prayer, and did not know from the Word of God itself and from the experience of the real Church throughout the centuries that God especially delights to answer prayer for revival.

As I travel from one end of this land to the other, and have opportunity to see for myself the condition of the churches; as I read the various religious periodicals of the various denominations; as I talk with men and women in positions of influence and power in the Church, my heart would be sick, yes, nigh unto despair, if I did not know God and did not know that He answers prayer. The gross error that is being taught by many professedly orthodox ministers; the absence of the real, living Gospel from the preaching of many who do not preach error, but who are certainly not preaching the truth in its simplicity, in its fulness, and in the power of the Holy Ghost; the unconcern of apparently the great mass of the membership of our churches regarding the lost at home and abroad; the rapidly growing compromise with the world on the part of a very large proportion of the membership of our churches, the neglect of real prayer and the openly avowed disbelief in prayer on the part of not a few; the inactivity in real soul-winning work on the part of an overwhelming majority of the members of our evangelical churches today, cannot but fill any intelligent and properly instructed Christian with a sorrow that almost breaks the heart.

But while the state of the churches is bad enough, that of the outside world would, of course, be far more discouraging, disheartening and overwhelming if one did not believe in a God who answers prayer. There is no time to go into details, nor do we need to, for the facts are well known, even though so many are deliberately shutting their eyes to them and loudly proclaiming their "optimism"—an optimism that has no basis in fact, but simply in the wishes of those who proclaim it. To mention only one of many things: Conditions in our universities, in our colleges, in our high schools and our grade schools, not merely the religious conditions, but the moral conditions, are terrible beyond expression. I could not put into print things that have come under my personal observation as to the slump, not only in the modesty, but in the moral decency, not only among our young men and boys, but among our young women and girls. These facts are brought to me wherever I go, East or West, North or South.

But shall we despair, or throw up our hands and say nothing can be done? No, not for one moment. God does answer prayer; that has been demonstrated time and time again, and time and time again throughout the centuries when conditions were in many ways as bad as they are today or worse. God has heard prayer, and He is just the same today. I know that God answers prayer for revival—deep, thorough, widespread, miracle-working revival, as well as I know that I exist. When Mr. Alexander and I started around the world in December, 1901, there were five thousand people who had covenanted to pray for us every day. When we reached Australia, ten thousand took it up and prayed for us every day. When we reached England, forty thousand people had taken it up, AND GOD HEARD. All the way around the world wonders were wrought, not merely through us, but through a large number of others whom God raised up in answer to prayer, and I believe He will do like things, or far greater things, again.

Pray, pray, PRAY! Pray definitely; pray intensely; pray persistently; meet the conditions of prevailing prayer and BE SURE YOU PRAY THROUGH.

Pray for Revival!

EMBLEMS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Dr. Henry W. Frost.

The Spirit's nature and office are set forth by the following emblem:

1. Oil, 1 Sam. 16:13; Zech. 4:1-6.
2. Water, John 3:5; 7:38, 39.
3. Fire, Matt. 3:11; Acts 2:3.
4. Wind, John 3:8; Acts 2:2, 4.
5. Dove, Matt. 3:16.
6. Cloven tongues, Acts 2:1-4.
7. Seal, Eph. 1:13; 4:30.

A meditation upon these passages will be fruitful—consider the use of oil in lubricating making for smooth running and rasping noise of friction—its use on troubled waters to calm them and consider how all this is needed in the Church. It is more unction that will make the Church function. Think of the cleansing power of water and of the outflowing river of blessing from every spirit-filled Christian. Consider how fire is back of the manifold and gigantic mechanical power that makes present-day world hum with activity. Wind is a disseminator of life—carries pollen, makes for health, inscrutable, invincible, indispensable. The dove speaks of gentleness and purity. Finds no rest in world under judgment; comes back to Noah while the raven like our evil nature is content to dwell in a world of floating corpses. Cloven tongues, power for testimony and witnessing. The Seal, a mark of ownership, the pledge of our salvation, the title deed to abiding places above.

GOSPEL EFFORT IN DOCKS.

One of the sweetest sights of the day was a talk to about a dozen young men, five of whom definitely received Jesus as Saviour and Pilot of their life. This has been the sort of work which has been going on during these special visits to men off to China. Will you please join me in prayer; first for over eight hundred men who have desired the Gospel decision letter, etc.—a letter is just to hand from one dear young fellow who has been blessed by the Gospel decision letter. He writes to say that it has led him to decision for Christ. Then comes burning words from a young fellow eager to live for Christ; and the longing is expressed that he may become a missionary some day. I was interested to read his account of Army life; listen to a few extracts from his letter.

"I am glad that I have become a Christian. I always kneel down by my bed and say my prayers in the presence of my unsaved comrades. Boots are often thrown at me, but I just carry on, and when I have finished I pick up the boots and quietly return them to the owners. etc." Intercessors, what growth in Grace for a four-months babe in Christ. Please remember him in your prayers. I am keeping in very close touch with this newly-born happy soul who has begged me to help with prayer and correspondence.

Because you have prayed for the Lord's dear servant who sailed on the H. M. T. "K—. C—". I feel you should know that it has been my great joy to welcome him home at the termination of the voyage with the C—. Gds. I did enjoy the stories he related of answered prayer, and especially the thanksgiving prayer we had together in that very cabin which had been so often crowded with precious souls seeking blessing from God. Satan had been very busy during the outward voyage, he is a masterpiece in making mischief; but there are limitations to his satanic power, he walks on very dangerous ground when he defies and challenges the Lord of Hosts! May I here say to the Lord's own dear servants who may read these lines, that if your life and mine is welded to God we can trust Him absolutely to deliver us from enemies without and within. Forward Christian Comrade, with God's encouragement flooding every avenue of your being; you may be feeble, but yet armed with a fearless and confident faith which so honors God that he finds it a real delight to do wonders, first in, and then through you.—W. G. Clarke, Missioner, Southampton, England.

DIOCESE OF UPPER SOUTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

THE fourth annual Young People's Convention of the Diocese of Upper South Carolina was held at the Church of the Advent, Spartanburg, April 29 and 30. Outstanding features were the banquet served on Friday evening to two hundred and fifty young people and the Corporate Communion and Presentation Service at 11:30 A. M. on Saturday.

At the banquet the Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. Kirkman G. Finlay, D. D., was toastmaster, and the program was one of serious interest lighted up with fun and humor.

The Corporate Communion and Presentation was a most impressive service. The schools entered the church with military precision, under their own banners. At the presentation these banners escorted the offerings to the chancel and were held at attention outside of the sanctuary while the offerings were presented at the altar by the Bishop. It was a service of solemn beauty and unique spiritual appeal.

The Offering.

The offering of the Church Schools marks an advance over any previous year. With the addition of a few delayed offerings, the amount will be more than $5,200—despite a year of great agricultural depression in a large part of the diocese.

Awards.

Fifteen Church Schools reached or passed the goals suggested for them and received certificates placing them upon the honor roll of the diocese. Beautiful banners were awarded as follows:

1. For the largest offering, Christ Church, Greenville; amount $1,216.14. (The Church of the Advent, Spartanburg, was a close second with $1,161.10.)

2. For the largest offering in the second division, schools with a membership of from fifty to one hundred, St. Thaddeus', Aiken; amount $201.82.

3. For the largest offering in the third division, schools with a membership less than fifty, St. Stephen's, Ridgeway; amount $273.42.

4. For the largest per capita offering, St. Stephen's, Ridgeway; amount $8.82.

5. For the largest percentage of attendance in proportion to distance traveled, St. Mark's, Chester; enrollment thirty-one, attendance twenty-four, distance fifty-five miles.

Scholarships.

The Bishop's Scholarship in the Young People's Camp for the largest per capita offering was won by St. Stephen's, Ridgeway, and the scholarship in the Valle Crucis Summer School, offered by Mrs. Alexander Long, for the largest percentage of teachers and officers in the convention in proportion to distance, was won by St. Mark's, Chester, with a record of eighty-nine per cent.

National Diploma.

A feature of the convention was the presentation to Miss Edith Main, of Spartanburg, of a diploma from the National Department of Religious Education in recognition of her successful completion of all the courses required for admission into the first class of the National Accredited Teachers' Association.

Program.

Speakers from within the Diocese, as well as outside, combined to present a program full of interest and bristling with ideas. Those from outside the diocese were Mrs. Frank N. Challen, Executive Secretary of the Young People's Service League of the Diocese of North Carolina, and Miss Charlotte E. Forsyth, Director of Religious Education of the Diocese of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Challen, as former Secretary of the Young People's Service League in Upper South Carolina was accorded a warm welcome, and Miss Forsyth was enthusiastically received on account of her thorough knowledge, conspicuous ability and attractive personality.

THIRD ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SERVICE LEAGUE OF THE PROVINCE OF WASHINGTON.

The third annual conference of the Young People's Service League of the Province of Washington was held in Pittsburgh, May 13, 14 and 15 and delegates were present from the thirteen dioceses represented in the province. The conference began with registration in Trinity Church at five o'clock, supper at six, followed by a service in the church at 7:45 P. M., at which the Rev. Mr. F. Lauderburn, chairman of the Young People's Work in the Diocese of Pittsburgh, was the speaker. After this service the young people retired to the parish house, where the Young People's Service League of Trinity presented Booth Tarkington's play, "The Ghost Story", in a most creditable way. It was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The rest of the evening was spent by those present in getting acquainted with each other.

Between two hundred and fifty and three hundred young people were present. Saturday, the conference was transferred from Trinity to St. Andrew's in the East End of Pittsburgh. The opening address was made by the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, at which time he extended a most hearty welcome to the visiting delegates and expressed his great pleasure in having this, the third conference of Young People, in Pittsburgh. A short business meeting followed and then the Young People divided into groups for conference work. Dr. Meade led a group, his subject being "Objective in Young People's Work". The objectives were grouped under four headings: "Worship, Service, Study and Fellowship". Miss Wishart, of New York, led another group in "The Method of Discussion", while Dr. Ackley also of New York, led those who were officers and advisors of the Young People's Leagues in a conference on "The Requisites of Good Leadership". At eleven o'clock the groups assembled together and Dr. Ackley addressed the group, emphasizing the part Young People can play in the Church's Program. At twelve o'clock, members of the Young People's Service League of St. Andrew's conducted a noon-day service in the church, after which we returned to the parish house for lunch, which was served by the members of this League. Truly the spirit of good fellowship and hospitality were displayed at this time. After dinner summaries of the findings of the conference groups were reported and officers for year 1927-28 were elected. A new corps of officers were chosen: William Barlow and Anne Marsh, of Pittsburgh, being elected President and Secretary, respectively. The dioceses represented made reports of the progress of the Young People's Movement in their respective locations and Miss Smith reported the findings of the National Conference held in Racine, Michigan, in January, to which she was a provincial delegate. After the business was transacted, Miss Clarice Lambright, adult adviser of the Young People in the Diocese of New York, addressed the Young People, taking for her subject. "Our Problems". She has a most pleasing personality and is in deepest sympathy with the Young People's Movement, viewing the work of the Young People from every angle. Her address lasted an hour, but every one felt it far too short for the splendid things she uttered, and for the advice she offered in helping to solve some of the problems confronting the Young People. After this the Young People enjoyed a sight-seeing trip over the city, seeing all places of interest. At six-thirty the group assembled at the Rittenhouse Hotel where a banquet and social evening were enjoyed until 11:30 o'clock.

Sunday a Corporate Communion Service was held in the Church of the Ascension, after which one hundred and twenty-nine of the Young People sat down to breakfast in the parish house. At eleven o'clock the closing service took place in the same church. The Rev. H. Boyd Edwards preached a most inspiring sermon to the Young People.

It was a most delightful, interesting and instructive conference from the opening to the close and the spirit of good fellowship was very much in evidence. It was quite noticeable that the Young People were very anxious to be of more service in their own parishes from the numerous questions asked and in each case helpful information suggested.

The Provincial Conference in 1928 is to be in Wheeling and the adopted slogan, "See You In Wheeling", as a farewell to each other speaks loud enough for the genuine friendly spirit of the Pittsburgh Conference.

"THE AWAKENING OF YOUTH."

At the fourth annual convention of the Young People's Service League, which came to a close on Sunday, May 22, the Rev. Newton Middleton, Church of the Good Shepherd, Norfolk, Va., gave the Young People a very inspiring address. He said we had heard a great deal about the Revolt of Youth, but why not change it and make it The Awakening of Youth. He took this for his subject. He said we have two forces today—Youth and Middle Age—in the Churches, for we have no more old people, and that the older people would lend their sympathies to youth, but he liked to believe that youth is eager to take its place. He stated that the older people should throw their responsibilities on youth and then let youth realize that it must "paddle its own canoe".

Youth is willing and eager to serve and handle the responsibility. He closed his thoughts with the wish that we should all be Josiahs and Sauls—To be strong and of a good courage.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except over the signature of the writer.

"CATHOLIC PROPAGANDA."

Mr. Editor:

In your issue of May 28, under the title "Catholic Propaganda", in connection with the teaching the Mass at Christ Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., the writer made this statement:

> "Obviously, the idea is to lead the people, by gradual process, to call the Holy Communion Mass, get them accustomed to the use of that term, and then the next step will be the substitution of the Roman Missal for our Protestant Episcopal Holy Communion."

This statement was based upon expressions heretofore emanating from the "Catholic" Party.

Now comes some documentary evidence which even the most enthusiastic "Catholic" cannot controvert.

I trust your subscribers will read attentively the following announcement, which appeared in the April number of the "Holy Cross Magazine", a publication issued by the monastic Order of the Holy Cross:

> "Father Anderson made a short visit to Holy Cross last month. He came to New York to read the page proofs of the new Breviary which will be in use in our Community in the future. The book which we have been using, 'The Day Office of the Church of England', is now out of print, and no more copies can be had. THE NEW BREVIARY IS THE PRESENT ROMAN BREVIARY DONE IN ENGLISH, WITH THE PRAYER BOOK VERSION OF THE PSALMS, AND IN MOST CASES THE AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION OF THE DIVINE SCRIPTURES. THE ROMAN BREVIARY IS THE FRUIT OF MANY YEARS OF PATIENT WORK BY THE MOST COMPETENT LITURGICAL SCHOLARS IN THE ROMAN COMMUNION. The Day Offices are simplified and a large number of Psalms are in use. Copies of this new Breviary will be ready for sale by Easter."

In other words, this monastic Order of the Holy Cross is printing, distributing and teaching the use in the Protestant Episcopal Church of a Breviary, or Prayer Book, which it says is the present Roman Catholic Breviary, or Prayer Book, translated into English.

Article X of the Constitution of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America specifically provides that its standard of worship SHALL be as set out in the Prayer Book authorized by its General Convention.

Notwithstanding this plain Constitutional enactment, and in open contempt, defiance and violation of its provisions, this monastic Order of the Holy Cross, composed of men who have received ordination in this Church, and who solemnly swore to conform to its Doctrine, Discipline and Worship, has announced its purpose to print and use in this Church a Roman Catholic Prayer Book.

If this is what the bishops, clergy and laity of the Protestant Episcopal Church want, there is a very simple way to bring it about, and that will be to sit quietly by, see the Constitutional law of the Church boldly overridden and trampled upon, and supinely submit to the dictates of those who find their principal occupation in undermining its very foundations.

This is a plain, simple, unvarnished statement of the situation in which Protestant Episcopalians now find themselves.

The impression seems to have gone abroad in many quarters that, under the law of this Church, the laity have no right to insist that that law shall not be set at naught; but a reading of the Constitution and Canons will readily dispel that fallacy; and developments now point unerringly to the fact, that unless the laity rise in their might to defend that which is their rightful spiritual heritage, the Protestant Episcopal Church, as we and our fathers have known it, will soon be a thing of the past.

Which will it be?

It is strictly up to the laity of the Church.

FOR THE RELIEF OF FLOOD SUFFERERS.

Mr. Editor:

The flood conditions in the Mississippi Delta have been greatly aggravated by a second rise which is now pouring through the gap at Mounds Landing. There is no prospect of relief from floood water before the early part of or the middle of July, so that planting operations will have to be abandoned in a large part of this territory. The water is still standing in certain parts of the city of Greenville and the other towns in the southern part of the Delta are still largely inundated. In Washington County, of which Greenville is the seat, the Red Cross is still feeding 43,000 of the 52,000 population, even after many people have left. The matter of feeding the people and caring for them in most instances will continue for at least twelve months on account of the almost absolute prostration of business and agriculture. The Church has suffered very severely in that capacity of its members to maintain the support of parish and missionary work. Much of the Church property has been injured. At Yazoo City, several thousand dollars will be required to restore the Church edifice which was flooded to the depth of two or more feet. The Church property in Greenville suffered less damage. Probably $1,500 will be sufficient for the restoration of St. James' property and the property of the Colored congregation of the Redeemer. At Mayersville, Rolling Fork and Hollandale there has also been a limited amount of damage not yet estimated, because of the flood waters in those places. The rector of St. James' Church of Greenville, desires to express his gratitude to all who have sent gifts for the relief of flood sufferers.

PHILIP DAVIDSON.
Rector, St. James Church.

Greenville, Miss.
June 11, 1927.

The Rev. Charles E. Woodson, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, requests those sending clothing for the flood sufferers to him, to send them care of Mr. Walter Jolly, Rolling Fork, Mississippi, so as to avoid reshipping them. The letters, of course, should be sent to his home address, 1115 Main Street, Vicksburg, Mississippi.

ENDORSEMENT.

Mr. Editor:

I was so impressed by a letter in The Southern Churchman of June 11 on The Thirty-Nine Articles, by William S. Bishop, of Washington, D. C., that I feel constrained to add my endorsement. I am not writing for publication, for I am too obscure a person to have any influence in such matters, but I come of a long line of Churchmen, and it seems to me that that idea destroys the most vital part of the Episcopal Church. I have been greatly disturbed over the plan of taking The Thirty-Nine Articles out of the Prayer Book ever since the proposal was made at the meeting of the General Convention in New Orleans, and I feel sure that thousands of other Churchmen and women feel the same way. Pardon my taking up your valuable time, but I could not help adding my hearty approval of Mr. Bishop's letter.

Outgoing Missionaries Conference.

Almost every foreign field was represented in the fourth annual conference of outgoing missionaries held at the Church Missions House, June 11 to 14. This informal gathering is of definite value in the preparation of the outgoing missionaries, while the missionaries on furlough and the Missions House staff are mutually benefited by the chance to exchange points of view. The situation as a whole, the "call of the world", the missionaries' relation to native people and to fellow workers, special points about their methods and their physical, mental and spiritual equipment, were presented and discussed by returned workers. The functioning of the home departments of the Church and their relation to the missionary staff were outlined by executive secretaries.

The discussion about China was naturally of great interest as the returned China group was large. No new appointments for that country were present as no appointments are now being made, nor, unfortunately, were there any for Liberia. Miss Louise Hammond arrived from Nanking just in time for the final session and held the conference fairly breathless with an account of her experience in Nanking during the recent serious outbreak there. She spoke in high praise of the Chinese clergy and people. Miss Hammond is a distinguished person in her knowledge of Chinese art and music. She exhibited some Chinese paintings of New Testament scenes, and recited Chinese poems in the Chinese manner.

Another unusual contribution was a brief address by Mr. James L. Sibley, of the Education Commission representing seven mission boards, including our own, which has been studying Liberia with a view to raising the whole level of educational work in that country. His talk, though based on his Liberia experience, was applicable to almost any foreign field as he outlined the fourfold requirements of mission work, dealing with religion, education, home life and agriculture or industry, and the relation of central mission stations, training native leaders, to the out-stations where native leaders work among their own people.

Dean and Mrs. Fosbroke entertained the conference with a delightful garden party on the lawn of the General Seminary. Through the kind offices of the Episcopal Actors' Guild, members of the conference were the guests of Walter Hampden at his play, Caponsacchi.

School of Community Leadership.

The subject of Community Leadership was the topic stressed at the meeting of rural clergy and others, held at Manhattan, Kans., June 6-10.

The principal speaker for this occasion was Dr. C. J. Galpin, who is in charge of Farm Population and Rural Life Studies, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Dr. Galpin brought out in a striking way the mental outlook of the farmer, comparing him to a prince in charge of his principality. He also asserted that the country was a far better place in which to raise a family than the city, and that the children raised on farms had a better chance for health and success throughout life.

Notable speakers from the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist denominations, as well as Fr. Lucky, President of the Roman Catholic National Rural Life Conference, each told what their particular group was doing for the rural community.

Representatives of the clergy of the Episcopal Church were present from Nebraska, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas. Among these the speakers were as follows: Bishop Wise, of Kansas; Archdeacon Coles, of Salina; Dr. H. P. J. Selinger, of Western Nebraska, and Archdeacon Pierce, of North Texas.

Great credit is due the officials of the school, particularly Dr. F. D. Farrell, President of Kansas State Agricultural College, and Dr. Walter Burr, who attended to the program arrangements.

Archdeacon L. W. Smith was in charge of the Episcopal Group and Archdeacon Christian of Kansas, spiritual leader and host.

The College of Preachers.

"You don't build a sermon; you move a sermon," Professor Charles S. Baldwin, of Columbia University, told clergymen from eighteen states and the District of Columbia at the third annual summer conference of the College of Preachers held at the Washington Cathedral, June 13 to 18.

"The trouble with many sermons is in the body. They don't move smoothly from the introduction to the conclusion," said Professor Baldwin. "There are 1,000 approaches for a sermon, but only one principle. And that is to begin where they are and land them where you are."

Professor Baldwin's lectures were an interesting feature of this year's conference, which laid special emphasis on the technique of preaching. Other lecturers were the Rev. Professor W. C. Woods, Ph. D., of the Kent School, Conn., who spoke on "Evolution and the Incarnation", the Rev. Leonard Hodgson, M. A., of the General Theological Seminary, New York City, whose subject was "Preaching the Atonement", and the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., Bishop of East Carolina, who had as his topic, "Follow Up the Bishops' Crusade".

The Rt. Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, D. D., LL. D., D. C. L., former Bishop of Pennsylvania and canon of Washington Cathedral, was conference director. He was assisted by the Rev. William L. DeVries, D. D., Ph. D., chancellor of Washington Cathedral and assistant conference director, and the Rev. C. E. Buck, rector of Washington Parish, and conference registrar.

Thie gathering was the third in preparation for the permanent establishment of the College of Preachers at Washington Cathedral for the purpose of promoting the prophetic ministry of the Church by providing post-graduate training for younger clergy of special promise.

In addition to the lectures there were group discussions under the direction of older clergymen who attended the conference as leaders and guides. The problems of methods of various types of ministry were considered at these group gatherings. There also were sermons by rectors, attending the conference as students, at the Evening Prayer services in the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral.

Laymen's Pilgrimage to Jamestown and Williamsburg.

The Brotherhood men of Richmond and Norfolk again led the Laymen's Pilgrimage to Jamestown and Williamsburg, June 11 and 12, one hundred and twenty-five laymen of the three dioceses in Virginia taking part. President Chandler of the College of William and Mary was the host. The Rev. W. A. R. Goodwin, of Old Bruton Parish, Williamsburg, conducted the preparation Saturday night and celebrated the Holy Communion at the Hunter Memorial Shrine at Jamestown Island Sunday morning, the conference being held at William and Mary College. This annual Pilgrimage has grown from twenty-four men in 1922 to its present proportions.

Mr. Richard P. Winston, of St. James' Chapter, Richmond, was unanimously elected State Chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Winston appointed Mr. Delemater Davis, of Norfolk, and Mr. Frank C. Wood, of Richmond, sub-chairmen for Virginia and the District of Columbia.

St. Stephen's College.

Eighteen men, the largest class ever to be graduated from St. Stephen's College, Annandale-on-Hudson, received their Bachelor's degrees on commencement day, June 15. Of these four men are going into teaching, two into research graduate work, four into business, five into the ministry, one into law and two are uncertain about their careers. The honors man of the class is Mr. George A. Shrigley, who received an honors degree in the Department of English. Mr. Shrigley has also been head of the undergraduate self-governing body during this past year.

The exercises opened with the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, June 12, delivered by the Rt. Rev. Samuel B. Booth, Bishop Coadjutor of Vermont. The class held its exercises on Monday morning, June 13, and that evening the College Dramatic Club presented three plays. On Tuesday, June 14, there were the commencement dance, the president's tea and reunion dinners of the fraternities and other groups. On Wednesday, June 15, the Alumni Association met at ten o'clock and the Corporation at eleven. The sixty-eighth annual convocation for the conferring of degrees and the awarding of prizes was held in the afternoon. The chief address was delivered by President Bernard Iddings Bell, of the College, on the subject, "What Constitutes a College Education"?

Bishop William T. Manning, in accordance with a resolution adopted unanimously at the last diocesan convention, has appointed a special committee of five laymen and five clergymen to devise ways and means for bringing about a larger interest within the diocese of New York in St. Stephen's College, Annandale. The rapid development in the educational world of this institution has far outstripped the interest and support of Church people and the committee has therefore come into existence. It consists of: The Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Chairman; the Very Rev. Dr. Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral; the Rev. Dr. Ray, rector of the Little Church Around the Corner; the Dev. Dr. Milo Gates, Vicar of the Church of the Intercession; the Rev. Dr. Silver, rector of the Church of the Incarnation; and Messrs. Walter Jennings, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Robert Fulton Cutting, Robert S. Brewster, and John R. Walker, M. D.

Madison Summer School for Rural Clergy.

The Madison Summer School for Rural Clergy will open with a dinner at the University Y. M. C. A., 740 Langdon Street, June 27. Both clergy and women are invited to this dinner. The lectures will be held in Agricultural Hall and are open to both clergy and women.

The clergy will occupy two fraternity houses, Zeta Psi, at 1820 Summit Avenue, and Theta Xi, at 168 Prospect Street.

The clergy will register at Zeta Psi House and will be assigned rooms upon arrival. All mail for the clergy should be directed care of Zeta Psi House.

The women will live at Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity House, 1726 Hoyt Street.

The services will be in charge of the Rev. Bertram Brown and will consist of daily celebrations of the Holy Communion for each group in its own Fraternity House, vespers at night and Corporate Communion in Grace Church on Sunday morning, July 3. The Rt. Rev. T. C. Darst, D. D., will be celebrant at the Corporate Communion and will preach at the late service.

The Rural Fellowship will hold its annual meeting at Zeta Psi House, Tuesday afternoon, July 5.

An exhibit of maps, charts, books, programs, etc., appertaining to Rural Work will be on view at Zeta Psi House. For this exhibit every one attending is asked to bring such material as may be of interest or benefit to those who may be present.

All registrations should be made through the Secretary for Rural Work, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, New York.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett, D. D., Bishop.

Reorganization of the Executive Board.

Under the three year rotation system two clergymen and two laymen are automatically dropped from the membership of the Executive Board of this diocese at each session of the annual council. This year those whose terms expired were the Rev. Messrs. Carleton Barnwell of St. Paul's, Lynchburg, and Frank Mezick, of Nelson Parish, Arrington, and Messrs. John A. Muse, of Dante, and Kennon C. Whittle, of Martinsville. Elected to succeed these and to serve for three years were the Rev. Messrs. Thomas Moore Browne, of St. John's, Lynchburg, and John J. Gravatt, Jr., of Trinity, Staunton, and Col. Wm. M. Brodie, of Blacksburg, and Mr. C. Edwin Michael, of Roanoke.

At the meeting of the Executive Board on June 16 Bishop Jett announced his appointment of the personnel of the several departments for the coming conciliar year as follows: the first named being the chairman in each instance:

Field Department—Mr. R. L. Peirce, Mr. C. Edwin Michael, the Rev. Thos. M. Browne, the Rev. John J. Gravatt, Jr.

Religious Education—The Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, the Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., Mr. C. F. Cocke, Col. W. M. Brodie.

Social Service—The Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., the Rev. Claudius F. Smith, Mr. W. C. Rierson, Mr. C. M. Hunter.

Finance—Mr. R. T. Watts, Jr., Mr. C. M. Hunter, the Rev. G. Otis Mead, the Rev. Thomas M. Browne, Mr. C. F. Cocke.

Publicity—The Rev. G. Otis Mead, the Rev. Thos. M. Browne, Mr. W. C. Rierson.

In the organization of the several departments there is provision for the election by the Board of associate members of departments who may or may not be members of the Executive Board: these persons being first selected by the chairmen of the respective departments and nominated to the Board by the Bishop. At this session of the Board associate members of two departments were elected as follows:

Publicity, the Rev. Messrs. J. Lewis Gibbs and Carleton Barnwell, and Mr. Thomas A. Scott; Religious Education, the Rev. Messrs. Alfred R. Berkeley and J. Manly Cobb; Mr. Thomas A. Scott and Mrs. Anna M. Davidson.

The Rev. Mr. Whittle Goes to Covington.

The Rev. Dennis Whittle, for the past four years rector of Luray Parish in the Diocese of Virginia, has accepted a call to the rectorship of Emmanuel Church, Covington, in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia. He will also have charge of Grace Mission at Boys' Home, near Covington, and of the Union Church at Lowmoor.

Before accepting this call Mr. Whittle had planned a trip to England. He expects to take up the duties of his new parish on September 18.

Church School Commencement.

A service, unusual and full of interest was held at Christ Church, Georgetown, on Sunday morning, June 19, when the commencement exercises of the Church School took place. Adult members of the congregation were thus given an opportunity to see this important phase of the parish in action. Certificates, awards and prizes were given and a short service of the Church School Service League was held, when certificates and pins were awarded members who had accomplished during the year five acts of service in each of the fields. Short morning prayer, appropriate hymns and a short and telling talk to the children by the rector, the Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, were other features of the service. Commencement exercises at this hour and in this way have been held at Christ Church for three years. with great success.

United Thank Offering Service.

The annual service of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Newark was held at Christ Church, Hackensack, on Friday, May 20. The day opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion, Archdeacon Elmendorf being the celebrant. The Rev. Charles E. McAllister, Executive Secretary of the Diocese, preached the sermon. A box luncheon was served in the parish house following the service.

The afternoon was given over to addresses by Mrs. John Reilly, Jr., of New York, who spoke on "Mission Work in China from the Viewpoint of a Visitor"; the Rev. Paul Murakami, of Kohoku, who gave a splendid account of his work in Japan, and Bishop Lines.

The amount of the offering received at the morning service was $11,529.32, making a total of $24,988.66 for two-thirds of the triennium, as compared with $36,500 for the entire triennium preceding.

Annual Brotherhood of St. Andrew Meeting.

On Saturday, May 21, at St. Agnes, East Orange, the annual meeting of the Newark Diocesan Assembly, Junior and Senior Chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was held. After registration and an informal reception the annual election was held, which was followed by a conference on "The Business of the Master" and an examination for Juniors in charge of Mr. George Easdale, President.

At 5:30 P. M. a Church service for the Assembly was conducted by the Rev. A. R. McWilliams, Chaplain, which consisted of greetings from Bishop Lines, admission of new chapters and an address by the Rev. W. W. S. Hohenschill, of St. Agnes', East Orange.

Supper was served at 6:30, at which Bishop Stearly was the speaker. The feature of the evening service was a conference on "What Shall We Do Then"? led by Professor John Henry Frizzell, of Pennsylvania State College.

Meeting of The Field Department.

On Tuesday, May 24, the Field Department held its organization meeting at the Y. W. C. A. Prior to this meeting a number of the older members discussed the program of work for the coming year. The Department organized by reelecting Mr. Walter Kidde, Chairman, and Mr. Charles H. Van Nostrand, Secretary. Mr. Charles B. Johnes was unanimously elected Vice-Chairman of the Department. The Rev. Charles E. McAllister presented tentative plans for the campaign this coming fall, which were adopted. A report of the year's work was also presented.

It was unanimously agreed that the first task of the Department was to use every effort to secure the attendance of the parish chairman of every parish in the diocese at the Laymen's Conference at the Girls' Friendly Society Holiday House at Delaware, N. J., on September 17 and 18.

Resolutions were passed increasing the membership of the Department to fifty and providing for the appointment of an Executive Committee which will function between meetings of the entire Department.

Outdoor Meeting.

On Saturday afternoon, June 4, an interesting outdoor meeting was held for Church School teachers and officers at the Laura Augusta Home in Madison. The program included addresses by Mrs. Ruth White Colton of the National Child Welfare Association of New York City; Miss Frances Rose Edwards of the National Department of Religious Education, and Miss Mary T. Heward of the Diocesan Board of Religious Education. A most interesting feature of the meeting was an impromptu address by the Rev. George Baldwin, a missionary from Dupre, South Dakota. The Bishop Coadjutor was present and addressed a few words to those who had gathered together there for the occasion. Members of Trinity Church, Bayonne, presented a pageant entitled, "The Awaiting Church", after which refreshments were served. All those who attended felt that the program was most worth-while and helpful.

The National Church League.

On June 10 in the parish house of Calvary Church, the Rev. Alexander G. Cummings, Secretary of the National Church League, spoke to the members of the West Tennessee Chapter of the N. C. L., his subject being "Organized Resistance to the Efforts of the Anglo-Catholic Party to Romanize the Protestant Episcopal Church". A special letter was sent to the members urging them to bring a guest to the meeting.

The officers of the West Tennessee Chapter of the League are as follows: James R. McDowell, president; C. G. Robinson, vice-president; Walter E. Atkinson, secretary.

St. Alban's Mission, New South Memphis, has shown a marked progress since last year, when the Rev. Alfred Loaring-Clark became minister-in-charge. A class of ten was recently confirmed. The church has been redecorated inside, and now plans are under way to build a parish house. This has been made one of the objects of the Diocesan Advance Work Program and already $1,000 has been raised. The congregations have trebled since last year and a children's vested choir has been organized.

The congregation of Grace Church, the Rev. Chas. T. Wright, D. D., rector, after considering several different locations upon which to build, has decided to remain in their present location and erect a larger parish house, which will care for the social service program being undertaken by the church.

The Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Gailor, D. D., has preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Medical School of the University of Tennessee, in the Cathedral on June 15. The Dean of the Cathedral will read the service and the full vested choir rendered a specially prepared musical program.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D., Coadjutor.

The Boys' School of St. Paul's, Baltimore.

The closing exercises of St. Paul's Boys' School were held at the school on Tuesday afternoon, June 14. The Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, President of the Board of Trustees, presided, and Dr. Wyllys Reade, actnng Headmaster, presented the prizes and awards.

Lafayette Parker Temple, of Baltimore, won the prize for Mathematics, Scholarship and Deportment, and the highest prize in the Fifth Form. Joseph Dean Tasker won the Fellowship prize and the Athletic prize. Lemuel C. Hastings won the English prize. Raymond Moore the Latin prize, and Richard Pembroke the prize for Sacred Studies. Other prize boys were Morgan Richards, Ralph Schley, Webster Johnson, William H. Atwell, and Donnell Wright Baker.

The address was made by the Rev. Dr. H. P. A. Abbott. Dr. Kinsolving announced that the Rev. S. Janney Hutton had accepted the headmastership of the School, and would have to assist him three of the present masters Messrs. Beverly and Harry P. Rhett, Mr. Robert Pearman and Mr. Louis Clark.

The school occupies a fine plot of ten acres on Rogers Avenue in the suburbs of Baltimore. There were sixty-five boys during the past session, the full capacity of the present school. Tribute was paid Mr. Edmund S. Ender, for the notable results of his musical instruction as evidenced in the choir of St. Paul's.

The Girls' Friendly Society of the diocese has presented to three of Maryland's rural clergymen scholarships to the Summer Conference at Chestertown. This is in line with the Church's study of the Rural Problem during the present season, and is for the purpose of stimulating interest among the clergy in the great opportunity presented by the rural parish.

The Holiday House of the Girls' Friendly Society of the diocese will open for the season on July 2, and remain open until after Labor Day.

This camp is situated among forest trees on a bluff overlooking the Bush River. The G. F. S. invites those interested in Camp life to spend their vacations at Camp Kemah. The House Mother is Miss M. E. Christian, to whom applications should be sent. Address, until June 30, 417 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and after this date, Sewell, Md.

The Rev. Geo. E. Zachary, assistant at St. Michael and All Angels' Church, Baltimore, was the preacher at the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America convention held in Baltimore.

ATLANTA.

Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop.

Commencement Sermons.

It is rather unusual that all the commencement sermons in a college town should be preached by clergy of one faith in a given year, especially when none of the institutions are under the control of the Church. Yet this is what happened at Milledgeville, Ga., this year and it is the first time such a thing has ever occurred. The Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Atlanta, preached the sermon at the Georgia Military College; the Rt. Rev. F. F. Reese, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Georgia, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the Georgia State College for Women; and the Rev. F. Harriman Harding, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Milledgeville, made the address at the graduating exercises of the Peabody High School.

News Items of Interest.

Announcement of two legacies for the Appleton Church Home during the year was made by the Bishop at the recent meeting of Council. One of a thousand dollars by the will of Mr. William Harrold, of Macon, and another consisting of a considerable estate left by Mrs. T. R. Hudson, of Christ Church, Macon, as a memorial to her son, John F. Hudson.

The Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., sailed the middle of June, to be gone until the first part of September. He will spend most of the time in Spain. Bishop Mikell will attend the meeting of the Conference on Faith and Order, which will be held in August in Lausanne, in Switzerland. The Bishop is accompanied by Mrs. Mikell and their daughter, Miss Henrietta Mikell.

Colonel Z. D. Harrison, D. C. L., one of the lay delegates of St. Luke's Church, Atlanta, attended his sixty-fifth meeting of the Diocesan Council this year. He was a delegate for forty-five years before the Diocese of Georgia was divided. Colonel Harrison was the oldest delegate of continuous service at the last General Convention in New Orleans, and the House of Deputies stood when he entered as a mark of respect, said to be an honor never before accorded a delegate.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary among the interesting facts noted about its members were the following: That the Catechism of the United Thank Offering prepared by Mrs. Mallory Taylor, former United Thank Offering Custodian, Macon, Ga., had been repeatedly voted the most helpful U. T. O. leaflet published by the Church Missions House.

That the Corporate Gift Prayer written by Mrs. J. N. Talley, another former United Thank Offering Custodian, Macon, Ga., had been adopted for official use in the Province of Sewanee.

That Mrs. Charles C. Harrold, Chairman Appleton Church Home Aid Fund, is the only woman member of City Council of Macon, Ga.

All Saints' Church School, Atlanta, led the diocese in the various points of standardization during the past year, ranking one hundred per cent. Its Easter offering of $833 was the largest per capita amount and gave the school the Bishop's Banner. Mr. W. W. Davison is the superintendent.

The Church of Our Saviour, Atlanta, the Rev. William Joseph Cubbins, rector, has received recently a complete and beautiful set of Eucharistic vestments from Mr. A. E. McCann, senior warden; a sterling silver lavabo bowl from Mrs. J. A. Rasbury, a memorial; and a handsome hammered brass alms basin of excellent workmanship from Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Bartlett.

Christ Church, Macon, the Rev. Cyril E. Bentley, rector, under the will of Mrs. Gazalene M. Hardeman, has received a bequest of five hundred dollars which will be added to the permanent endowment fund of the parish. The same parish is much indebted to Mr. Arthur Boardman, who has endowed one of the rooms in the parish house in memory of his wife and also to Mr. Leon S. Dure, who has endowed a room, which is to be furnished at an early date.

Commencement at the Gaudet Normal and Industrial School.

The commencement exercises of the Gaudet Normal and Industrial School, held on Friday afternoon, May 27, were attended by a large crowd of interested relatives and friends and board members. The Gaudet School is located on attractive grounds on Gentilly Road, and is maintained by the Episcopal Church, with the aid of the Community Chest of New Orleans, for the education of Negro boys and girls.

The Rev. Matthew Brewster, D. D., rector of St. Andrew's Church, New Orleans, and Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the School, was the principal speaker. Essays were read by the two members of the graduating class, who received high-school diplomas. Eighth Grade Certificates were awarded to the ten children completing that grade.

Chorals and other musical selections were admirably rendered by the children of the school, these selections including several spirituals sung in typical Negro style. Of particular interest was the demonstration in home nursing given by some of the older girls, showing the results of thorough training. A clever one act play was creditably performed. There was also an exhibit of needlework and dressmaking by the Domestic Arts Department, showing commendable progress in these classes.

Death of a Prominent Layman.

On May 20, 1927, there passed away Mr. Edwin Belknap, at the age of seventy-nine years, one of the most beloved and well-known Churchmen of the diocese. Although having reached advanced years, he was active up to a short time of his death and had attended Communion service on the previous Sunday. The funeral service was held in St. Paul's Church, of which he had been a devoted life-long member, on May 21. The service was conducted by the rector, the Rev. Charles L. Monroe, assisted by the Rt. Rev. Davis Sessums, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese, and his friend, the Rev. W. S. Slack, of Alexandria, La. Other clergymen in the chancel were the Rev. Messrs. R. S. Coupland, D. D., Matthew Brewster, D. D., and S. L. Vail. The Standing Committee of the diocese and the vestry of St. Paul's Church were in attendance and a large number of his friends were present. He had been a member of the vestry of St. Paul's Parish for forty-five years, twelve of which he served as junior warden. For over fifty years he taught in the Church School and as teacher of the Young Ladies' Bible Class, by his love and devotion, he endeared himself to its members. For many years he filled the position most capably of treasurer of the diocese and was also treasurer of the Children's Home. He was a devoted and active member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, conscientious in his endeavor to spread Christ's Kingdom among men.

Meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary.

The Rev. Louis G. Wood,, Field Secretary of the National Council, preached the sermon at the opening service of the Woman's Auxiliary, meeting at the same time as the annual convention of the diocese, in the Church of the Ascension, Hickory, May 17, 18 and 19. Missionaries present as guests of the meeting were Mrs. William Wyllie, of Santo Domingo, and Miss Mollie Townsend, of China, who made stirring addresses. Mrs. William Peterkin, widow of the late Bishop Peterkin, and President of the West Virginia Branch of the Auxiliary, brought the greetings of this Branch, and urged the completion of the Corporate Gift. Bishop Horner expressed appreciation of the work of the Auxiliary in the diocese, reminding them that the diocese needed this help increasingly in maintaining its missions and schools.

Officers' reports showed an increase in interests, in Corporate Communions, in study classes, in work and gifts. The budget adopted for the coming year shows a small increase over this year's gifts.

Resolutions were adopted expressing appreciation of the helpful work done by Mrs. T. W. Bickett, of Raleigh, during the Bishops' Crusade; also memorial resolutions in appreciation of the devoted service of the late Deaconess Ruth Wilds, of Grace Hospital. Officers for 1927-28 are: Mrs. F. W. Thomas, president; Mrs. Hugh Mease, Mrs. P. F. Patton, Mrs. R. T. Claywell, Mrs. Randolph Harper, Mrs. S. R. Guignard, District vice-presidents; Mrs. Howard Etheridge, secretary; Miss Martha Justice, treasurer; Mrs. J. W. C. Johnson, educational secretary; Miss Elise Walker, supply secretary; Mrs. R. R. Harris, altar guild secretary; Mrs. R. T. Simpson, U. T. O. custodian.

Delegates to the provincial meeting are: Mrs. F. W. Thomas, Mrs. Jean S. Knight, Mrs. J. W. C. Johnson, Mrs. S. R. Guignard.

Grace Church, Waynesville.

Interesting services in Grace Church were held on Sunday, May 22, to commemorate twelve years service of the rector, the Rev. Albert New.

During his ministry of twelve years, the development of the activities of the Church has been maintained quietly and unostentatiously, but, nevertheless, successfully.

Many improvements have been made in Church and Church property, a new organ installed, several memorials given, and a new parish house built to replace the one destroyed by fire.

Church Buildings at State College.

When all the money pledged for St. Andrew's, State College, and the Community House, where the students can meet socially, is paid in by the end of 1927, there will be on hand something over $160,000. This is a generous contribution, and all of the five dioceses of the state have given liberally for this purpose. Twenty thousand dollars will be set aside for the support and repairs on the building when erected. That the dioceses have made no mistake in contracting for large buildings is shown by the fact that the State of Pennsylvania has just passed a bill and Governor Fisher has signed it, awarding four million dollars for new buildings and improvement. This is the largest appropriation ever given to State College or any college by this state, and should lead in a few years to more than double the present enrollment of students.

At the annual commencement held on June 10, Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., conferred the degree of Doctor in Divinity upon the Rt. Rev. James Henry Darlington, Ph. D., D. D., LL. D., D. C. Th.

MICHIGAN.

Rt. Rev. Herman Page, D. D., Bishop.

Summer Work In a Large Mission Field.

The Rev. H. R. Hole, rector and missionary in charge of the seven parishes and missions composing the northern field of the diocese, will have three assistants during the summer. Miss Ethel Elliot is the efficient year-round worker among the women, children, and young people of the mission congregations. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, a student at Nashotah House, is working out a scholarship provided by the National Division for Rural Work by actual experience in this field during his seminary vacation, in preparation for the rural ministry. The Rev. Dr. Frederick C. Grant, of Berkeley Divinity School, has accepted the appointment of assistant minister in Trinity Parish, Mackinac Island for July and August. Mr. Hole will be grateful to learn of any of the clergy who will be on vacation in Northern Michigan who would be willing to assist in one or more Sunday morning services in his principal parish at Cheboygan.

The Hillsdale Summer Conference will be held this year at Kalamazoo. Although the Hillsdale Conference will now draw only from the Diocese of Michigan, it is expected that the attendance will run well over two hundred. Outstanding on the faculty are the Rev. John R. Hart, Student Chaplain of the University of Pennsylvania; Miss Hazel Hardacre of the Y. W. C. A. staff, Detroit, and the Rev. Lester Bradner, Ph. D., Secretary for Religious Education for the Diocese of Rhode Island. The dates are June 26-July 6.

ARKANSAS.

Rt. Rev. Jas. R. Winchester, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. W. Saphore, D. D., Suffragan.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Demby, D. D., Suffragan.

The Annual Convention.

The fifty-fifth annual convention of the Diocese of Arkansas convened in St. Mary's Church, El Dorado, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 7 and 8.

The opening service was the Holy Communion and ordination service. Bishop Winchester was the celebrant, assisted by Suffragan Bishop Saphore.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. John T. Foster, rector of Trinity Church, Van Buren.

The Rev. David Jones, of Mena, and the Rev. Henry S. Hopkinson, of Hope, were ordained to the priesthood.

The canon providing for an executive secretary, with a central office, under the direction of the Executive Committee, was defeated on the ground that there was no money with which to pay an executive secretary and to keep an office. There are already three bishops in the diocese.

Whereas the diocese had an executive council of advice to the bishop before, now it is to have an executive council with seven departments.

One new canon that seemed to meet with the approval of the whole convention was concerning the selection of a Board of Trustees to have charge of all real estate and permanent funds of the diocese. This was much needed as the diocese has had great loss on account of neglect of care in looking after its property. It is composed of two clergymen and four laymen.

The board elected was the Rev. W. Postell Witsell and Rev. John M. Williamson, of Little Rock, and Messrs. Thomas J. Gregg, of Newport, M. Deloney of Little Rock, Morehead Wright of Little Rock, and A. N. Tucker of Helena.

One new canon, which was adopted after much opposition, and after having been voted down, and then called up for a reconsideration, is one concerning the annual meeting of the congregation and the election of vestries. The time for such action was changed from "after Easter" to the first week in January.

But the provision that stirred up the opposition concerned the election of vestries, in which it is required to elect one-third each year for three years; and each year a certain one-third shall be dropped for a period of one year at least.

In other words, the parish must keep one-third of its vestrymen for at least three years, whether they are failures as such or not; and it must do without the services of at least one-third of its select men for one year, no matter how much needed.

It was felt that such a law would work a hardship on smaller parishes. A proposition was offered as an amendment to substitute in place of that part of it concerning the dropping of men, "to rotate off each year the two men who had served longest" in parishes having from seven to nine vestrymen; and "rotate three off" in parishes having a larger number of vestrymen.

A new Church pension fund canon was also adopted.

The next meeting of the convention will be held in Christ Church, Little Rock.

The members of the Executive Committee are: The Rev. Messrs. Charles F. Collins, Hot Springs; C. C. Burke, Marianna; J. H. Boosey, Batesville; Samuel H. Rainey, El Dorado; W. Postell Witsell, Little Rock; Messrs. Thos. E. Wood, Little Rock; R. E. Lee, Pine Bluff; S. A. Pernot, Van Buren; G. A. Gibbs, Hot Springs; C. E. Ratcliffe, Little Rock; I. D. O'Neil, El Dorado; John D. Barlow, Hope.

The Standing Committee is: The Rev. Messrs. C. C. Burke, H. A. Stowell, C. F. Collins, J. H. Boosey; and Messrs. T. C. Treadway, R. E. Lee, H. J. Coomber.

The officers elected by the Woman's Auxiliary for the ensuing year are: Mrs. A. N. Tanner, president; Mrs. H. A. Stowell, vice-president; Mrs. Coolidge, secretary; Mrs. W. E. Collins, secretary; Mrs. W. G. McGrath, treasurer of the united offering.

Death of Prominent Churchman.

The oldest living officer of the War Between the States in Cincinnati passed away June 6, when Major Frank J. Jones, for many years senior warden of Christ Church, died at his home after a lengthy illness, aged eighty-nine years. Major Jones was active in many philanthropic movements. He was a prominent figure in the activities of the Diocese of Southern Ohio and one of its trustees.

Ninetieth Anniversary of St. Paul's, Greenville.

The Rev. Charles H. Lee of St. Simon's Island, Georgia, was the special preacher at the celebration of the ninetieth anniversary of St. Paul's, Greenville, of which he was rector for nine years. The Bishops of the Diocese and other visitors joined with the hospitable people of Greenville in an all-day celebration on June 9.

It is a little thing to trust God as far as we can see Him, so far as the way lies open before us, but to trust Him when we are hedged in on every side and can see no way to escape, this is good and acceptable with God. This is the faith of Abraham our father.—John Wesley.

O Lord, Who never failest to help and govern those whom Thou dost bring up in Thy stedfast fear and love; Keep us, we beseech Thee, under the protection of Thy good providence, and make us to have a perpetual fear and love of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Collect for St. Peter's Day.

O Almighty God, Who by Thy Son Jesus Christ, didst give to Thy Apostle St. Peter many excellent gifts, and commandest him earnestly to feed Thy flock; Make, we beseech Thee, all bishops and pastors diligently to preach Thy holy word and the people obediently to follow the same, that they may receive the crown of everlasting glory; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Myrrh-Bearers.

Three women crept at break of day
Agrope along the shadowy way
Where Joseph's tomb and garden lay.

With blanche of woe each face was white
As the gray Orient's waxing light
Brought back upon their awe-struck sight

The sixth-day scene of anguish. Fast
The starkly standing cross they passed,
And, breathless, neared the gate at last.

Each on her throbbing bosom bore
A burden of such fragrant store
As never there had lain before.

Spices, the purest, richest, best,
That e'er the musky East possessed,
From Ind to Araby the Blest,

Had they with sorrow-riven hearts
Searched all Jerusalem's costliest marts
In quest of—nards whose pungent arts

Should the dead sepulchre imbue
With vital odors through and through:
'Twas all their love had leave to do!

So ministering as erst did these,
Go women forth by twos and threes
(Unmindful of their morning ease).

Through tragic darkness, murk and dim
Where'er they see the faintest rim
Of promise—all for the sake of Him.

Who rose from Joseph's tomb. They hold
It just such joy as those of old,
To tell the tale the Marys told.

Myrrh-bearers still—at home, abroad
What paths have holy women trod,
Burdened with votive gifts to God—

Rare gifts, whose chiefest worth was priced
By this one thought, that all sufficed!
Their spices had been bruised for Christ!

—Margaret J. Preston.

The Joy of Giving.

There are two things God expects the Christian to give. One is money; the other is service. Of the two, no one doubts that the latter is the more vital and essential. Christ sent out His disciples without purse or scrip. They went out poor in all those things which are counted as being of great value by the great mass of mankind, including even most Christians. Yet never did the Church grow more healthily than when these givers, poor in this world's goods, went forth in obedience to their Lord's command to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ. Preaching the Gospel, or devoting one's life to some specific Christian service, or laboring in the Lord's vineyard as do the self-sacrificing members of the Christian Church, who, besides being living witnesses for Christ in their various life callings, give such special service as they can for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God—these are the things that count. Where that sort of giving reaches a high standard of devotion and consecration there is no power on earth that can withstand the Church's transforming influence as a spiritual leaven in the life of the world.

And there is no satisfaction or joy that can be compared with that which grows out of the service itself. It is a slander on the Christian religion to say, or assume, that there is no joy in such service. No matter what sacrifices of wealth or comfort it may require, the testimony of all who truly give themselves up to the service of Christ—whether as ministers of the Gospel, or as deacons and deaconesses in the ministry of mercy, or as active members who have the work of the Church at heart—is, that the reward which goes with such Christ-like services is something that overtops anything and everything the world has to offer. There is an inner necessity which drives the Christian into this service of love and makes him say with his Lord, when influence would draw him away from it, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business"? His love for his Lord begets in him an undying love for the Lord's work. No sacrifices will keep him away from it. Apart from that work he would be of all men most miserable. One of the hardest crosses to bear is to be severed from the God-given task to which one has been devoted a whole life time, as many of the Lord's aged or enfeebled servants will testify. Talk about joy—he who would truly have that most precious of inner satisfactions must find it in Christian service. There is no other joy that is worthy of the name.

We are led to speak of this because of the seeming skepticism, on the part of many Christians even, as to whether the Church has anything to offer a man that is worthwhile, anything of a life task that will insure inner satisfaction and happiness. Such skepticism is doing much to keep men out of the Gospel ministry, and gifted men and women out of the ministry of mercy—while at the same time it has a chilling effect upon countless numbers of church members, who, like the people of Meroz, refuse to come up to the help of the Lord against the powers of evil. It is high time that such a deadly heresy were put under the ban of the condemnation it richly deserves. We can safely challenge any skeptic to measure the joy he extracts from a selfish and worldly life with that of millions who find their chief joy in giving what is best in them to some specific Christian service. Since when has it become true that men and women who live for selfish ends should get more out of life than those whose chief joy it is to live for others? "Why shed tears?" said the leader of a band of missionaries to India to a weeping congregation who had come to bid them farewell. "We are not going to a funeral. We are going to a wedding. We go to wed benighted souls to the Lord Jesus Christ." That spoke volumes. There is no love on earth that can be compared to such love for Christ and for those whom He sought to redeem. And there is no joy on earth that can be compared with the joy of Christian service. He who gives all he has for the service is sure to get the joy. Why should it be otherwise.—Lutheran.

Dorcas.

If I might guess, then guess I would:
Amid the gathering folk,
This gentle Dorcas one day stood
And heard what Jesus spoke.

She saw the woven, seamless coat—
Half envious for His sake:
"O happy hands," she said, "that wrought
That honored thing to make!"

Her eyes with longing tears grow dim;
She never can come nigh
To work one service poor for Him
For whom she glad would die!

But hark! he speaks a mighty word:
She hearkens now indeed!
"When did we see Thee naked, Lord,
And clothed Thee in Thy need?

"The King shall answer, inasmuch
As to my brothers ye
Did it—even to the least of such—
Ye did it unto me."

Home, home she went, and plied the loom,
And Jesus' poor arrayed.
She died—they wept about the room,
And showed the coats she made.

—George MacDonald.

Instruction Without Training.

One day a woman called upon a minister.

"I wish to talk to you about my son, John," she said.

The minister nodded. There was no surprise in his face.

"John is not behaving as he should." There was a sob in the woman's voice. "I suppose you read in the paper about that high school affair last week, and saw John's name mentioned. He will soon be eighteen now, and I feel that something must be done to start him right before it is too late."

"It is never too late to try to turn a lad's footsteps in the right direction," the minister said kindly.

"I can't understand about John," the mother went on. "He has been taught the right thing. You know he has been brought up right here in the church. He has always gone to Sunday School, and does yet, for that matter, but what he learns does not seem to impress him enough to make him do right. I don't blame the Sunday School entirely, but—." The woman hesitated to finish her criticism.

For an instant the minister gazed at the woman in silence. Then he spoke gently:

"Yes, Mrs. Blanks, John has had a great deal of moral instruction in our Sunday School. However, it has been in vain, as is the sowing of seed on a rock. I am going to speak plainly, Mrs. Blank. Along with this moral instruction, John needed something which he did not get. Ever since John was thirteen or fourteen years old he has spent much of his time idling in Wade's drug store. I have seen him there after school, evenings, and Sunday afternoons. He has grown up being a waster of time. Has he ever earned any of his spending money?"

"Oh, no," replied the mother. "It was never necessary for him to earn money. His father has always given him a generous allowance. However," she added slowly, "lately he has been having to have entirely too much."

"Still he is given the money?" questioned the minister, and when the mother nodded, he went on:

"—And so he grows up a waster of money also. What is always the result of idleness and extravagance? With all good intentions, you allowed John to spend his time amusing himself in any way he pleased, and spending money all too freely, expecting that he would grow up a good boy because he was told each Sunday at Sunday School that he should be. Do you really think, Mrs. Blank, that John's moral instruction has been at fault or has it been his moral training?"

There are many cases like John's. Can we expect the Church, in one day, to counteract by instruction, the impressions made by what the child lives through six days? Moral instruction acts as steel supports to moral training, but the training is an important factor if we are going to turn out the right kind of men and women. If a child hears one thing on Sunday and acts another all during the week, he will be vastly more impressed by what he lives than by what he is told. Let us then realize the importance of moral training. The churches would be almost powerless if it were not for the right kind of strong Christian homes back of them.—N. K. Carlisle.

A Message of Youth to Youth.

Here is the sixth annual wireless message sent out by the children of Wales to young people throughout the world:

"We, boys and girls of the principality of Wales and of Monmouthshire, greet with a cheer the boys and girls of every other country under the sun. Will you, millions of you, join in our prayer that God will bless the efforts of the good men and women of every race and people who are doing their best to settle the old quarrels without fighting? Then there will be no need for any of us, as we grow older, to show our pride for the country in which we were born by going out to hate and kill one another. Long live the League of Nations—the friend of every mother, the protector of every home, and the guardian angel of the youth of the world."

Faith sees no longer the stable floor,
The pavement of sapphire is there.
The clear light of Heaven streams out to the world,
And the angels of God are crowding the air,
And love still turns where the Godhead burns,
Hid in flesh from fleshly sight.

For the Young Folks

A Prayer.

God, make my life a little light
Within the world to glow;
A little flame that burneth bright,
Wherever I may go.

God make my life a little flower
That giveth joy to all,
Content to bloom in native bower,
Although the place be small.

God make my life a little song
That comforteth the sad;
That helpeth others to be strong,
And makes the singer glad.

God make my life a little staff
Whereon the weak may rest,
So that what health and strength I have
May serve my neighbors best.

God make my life a little hymn
Of tenderness and praise,
Of faith—that never waxeth dim,
In all his wondrous ways.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

The Fellowship of Jesus.

M. L. G.

When our dear Lord went back to the Father He left but a few friends to spread His Message. One had been faithless, and others had been afraid. They did not know how to go on. They could only go back to Jerusalem as He bade them, and wait His further help. We know how greatly the power of the Spirit came upon them, and how at once thousands were added to their number.

Since that great day of Pentecost the fellowship of Jesus' friends has never died out. It has lived through persecution and martyrdom. It has lived through worse things—evil in the Church itself, the love of place and power, the divisions that rend the Body of Christ, indifference, coldness and distrust. It has lived in our time, through war and bitter loss, and more bitter gain. There are those in all the world whose chief aim it is to be a friend of Jesus; and in them the world's hope lies.

It is a great thing to be of Jesus' company. It is in comparison a very small thing whether we are white, yellow or black; whether we are Episcopalians, Baptists or Quakers; whether we are learned or ignorant, rich or poor.

Let us prize our great heritage of the Gospel. Let us give our lives to the spreading of it. Let every man be our brother—either in the fellowship with us, or one to whom we make our Best Friend known.

The Lost Sweater.

"Look here, sis," called Jack Barlow to his sister, Mary Ellen. Mary Ellen came out on to the porch.

"See how well your doll's sweater fits Buster. Doesn't he look slick?"

"Oh, Jack," exclaimed his sister, "you oughtn't put it on him. He'll get it all dirty." But she smiled when she saw the pride and pleasure of the little dog, standing on his hind feet with his forepaws on his master's knee.

"No, Buster, won't soil it. He had a bath last night. See how white he is and how his brown spots shine. He's a fine-looking dog, he is," replied Jack, slapping the dog gleefully. Buster reached up and licked Jack's face and then rushed over to Mary Ellen jumped up and gave her cheek a dab with his tongue, circled round with an ecstatic bark, and then rose again to his hind feet and looked about importantly. The children laughed, and Buster seemed to grow more excited.

"Now, I'll take it off," said Jack, but as soon as the little garment was removed Buster caught it in his mouth, danced about and raced down the driveway with it.

"Here, here, come back, sir," called Jack; and Mary Ellen wrung her hands while the tears ran down her cheeks.

"He'll just ruin it," she exclaimed; "that lovely little sweater. Aunt Annie was so good to make it for me, and Alma looked so sweet in it. Oh, dear!"

Jack ran down the steps along the driveway, and the little dog kept just ahead of him, looking back with one ear lifted roguishly.

"Come back here," called Jack impatiently, almost reaching him and putting out his hand to take the sweater from him; but the naughty little fellow gave a short bark and ran out into the field. He dropped the sweater and ran away in a circle while Jack followed. Just as he was almost to the sweater Buster got it again and ran off, shaking it up and down, making the strings and tassels bob about. Mary Ellen joined in the chase, but Buster refused to come near, and ran far out into the field.

"Naughty dog," scolded Jack.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

"Oh, Jack, the school-bell!" sobbed Mary Ellen.

"We'll have to run or we'll be late. Here, give me your hand. We'll have to leave the sweater now, but he'll just drop it out there and we'll get it at noon. Don't cry, sis."

The two children ran swiftly down the road and reached their places in the line just as the last bell rang.

Mary Ellen wiped her tears away, but it was a sad-faced little girl who read and wrote and spelled all that long forenoon.

When noon came Mary Ellen sped down the road into the field, but, eagerly as she was, Jack was there ahead of her. Up and down the field, behind every little bush or tuft of grass, down by the brook, which babbled and sang through the meadow, the children went. But no little fawn-colored sweater trimmed with brown could be found; and no frisky little dog with expressive brown eyes came at their call.

Then mother called them in to dinner, and they told her of their loss.

"It is likely Buster will bring it to you by and by. You have been teaching him to fetch and carry, so now you will have a chance to see how well he has learned his lessons," she said.

The children went to school again and when they returned Buster lay curled in a round heart under a shrub on the lawn, but he did not bring it to them. Neither could they find it. though they looked long and earnestly in every place where a mischievous dog might stow the little garment; but all in vain.

"I'll buy you another with the money in my bank," promised Jack; but Mary Ellen shook her head sadly.

"It was so pretty, and Aunt Alice made it for Alma. Another would not be half so good," she said.

For several days the children continued to look for the little sweater, but without success.

"Mary Ellen," called mother, one evening after school, "Eva Lake is taking care of baby, so I am going to visit the new family who have come to live in the house by the mill. You may come with me if you like. Daddy says that they have a dear little baby."

Mary Ellen ran for her hat and walked by her mother's side down the lane and across the field till they came to a small low cottage near the stream.

As the day was warm their hostess, Mrs. Jenkins, seated them on the piazza and they talked pleasantly till a little cry was heard.

"Excuse me, please," said Mrs. Jenkins, "while I get my baby. She is just waking from her nap."

In a few moments she returned with a fair-haired baby in her arms.

"O-oh-h!" exclaimed Mary Ellen softly, and mother turned and smiled at her little girl, whose eyes sparkled with excitement.

Mrs. Barlow held out her arms for the baby, who nestled into them as if she had found a friend.

"What a tiny thing she is!" exclaimed Mrs. Barlow. "Mary Ellen came to play with her."

"Yes, she is very small," replied Mrs. Jenkins, "and just after we moved here she did not seem well and looked so blue all the time. It is colder here than where we used to live, and I believe she was not warm enough, but I thought she was ill and I felt so discouraged. I used to carry her out into the sunshine, as it seemed to make her feel better, but she fretted a great deal and I did not know what to do for her. And then we found this dear little sweater hanging on a bush. I put it on her, and it fits as if it was made for her. She's worn it ever since and has seemed to feel better. I will have to get her some all-wool flannels."

"Oh, and may I help make 'em?" asked Mary Ellen eagerly.

"I haven't any cloth to make them out of yet. I will have to send for some," said the baby's mother.

"I have some little pieces left from my baby's clothes, and I will cut them out and Mary Ellen will bring them over when they are finished," said Mrs. Barlow, knowing how much Mary Ellen would like to work for the baby.

"To think, mother," exulted Mary Ellen as they walked homeward, "that Buster carried Alma's sweater to that darling baby, a real, live baby. Isn't it precious?"

"She is a darling," agreed mother. "We will fit the clothes on Alma, only we must make them larger so that the baby can wear them for some time to come. After a while she will grow like a little weed."

And Mary Ellen ran home as fast as she could to tell Jack what Buster had done.—Junior World.

"The Old Swiss Clock."

One time a Swiss clock learned a secret when it lost its burdens. As it hung upon the wall and ticked away, it complained to itself about its burdens. It did have two heavy weights which it held all day and all night. It said that it could strike the hours and mark the time of day so much better without the two weights.

So the owner removed the weights. The clock became still and silent. It could not strike the hour or mark the time of day any longer. People going to work or going to dinner looked at the clock, but they were disappointed. The children going to school looked into the big clock's face, but they were disappointed, too. The watchman who paced the streets in the long, lonely hours of the night listened for the cheery, truthful voice of the old clock to tell him the hour of the night, but he, too, was disappointed. One day a spider stretched his fly-net over the clock's face, and the old clock's heart began to rust out in loneliness.

It had no burdens to carry now through the busy days and long nights, but it was not happy. It had always enjoyed telling the truth with its hands and its tongue. Now busy men no longer depended on it. The school children forgot to look into its face. It was lonely and unhappy. Then it learned the secret—a secret that some of us don't know. It learned that busy people are the happy people. It learned that true lives are real joy-makers.—The Epworth Herald.

ORDINATIONS.

Bishop Garland officiated at a service of ordination in St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, the Rev. Dr. Carl E. Grammar, rector, on Monday morning, June 13, when four deacons were advanced to the priesthood and nine candidates for Holy Orders were made deacons.

Included in the latter are three men from the Parish of Holy Apostles in Philadelphia, one of whom will take service in the Alaska mission field, and the others, two brothers, will go as missionaries to the warmer district of Haiti. Melvin Leo Wanner, of the Chapel of the Mediator, West Philadelphia, one of Holy Apostles' parochial chapels, was ordained by Bishop Garland for the Alaska field. Paul G. Holly and Victor E. J. Holly, from the Chapel of St. Simon the Cyrenian, another of Holy Apostles' chapels, were ordained for Bishop Garland by Bishop Carson, of Haiti, for wok in that field. The Holly brothers are grandsons of the first Bishop of Haiti and graduates of the Philadelphia Divinity School.

The Rev. Dr. Grammer was the preacher at the ordination service. Those advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Garland and their presenters were:

The Rev. Francis Alexander Gray, now serving as an assistant at Old Trinity, Oxford, Philadelphia; the Rev. Waldemar Jansen, rector Old Trinity, presenter.

The Rev. Herbert White Jones, now in charge of St. Barnabas, Kensington; the Rev. N. V. P. Levis, rector Incarnation Broad and Jefferson, presenter.

The Rev. Wayne MacVeagh Waggenseller, who will join the clergy staff of St. Clement's; the Rev. Charles Townsend rector the Good Shepherd, Rosemont, presenter.

The Rev. Daniel Smith Wood, now serving as Curate at St. James the Less, Falls of Schuylkill; the Rev. Charles J. Harriman, rector St. James the Less, presenter.

Those ordained to the diaconate and their presenters were:

Joseph Rockhill Clair, now serving at Transfiguration Mission, South Philadelphia; the Rev. Dr. Grammer, rector St. Stephen's, presenter.

Charles E. Hopkin, who is to be assigned to service later; the Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody, rector St. Paul's, Chestnut Hill, presenter.

Robert C. Hubbs, now serving at St. Bartholomew's, New York City; the Rev. Gilbert Pember, rector St. Michael's, Germantown, presenter.

John William Irwin, now serving at National Council headquarters; the Rev. Charles Eder, rector Grace Church, Mt. Airy, presenter.

Joseph Daniel Stover, to work in West Virginia; the Rev. J. A. Winterstein, rector, Holy Trinity, West Chester, presenter.

Alan Henry Tongue, to work in Harrisburg Diocese; the Rev. Franklin Joiner, rector St. Clement's, presenter.

Mr. Wanner, who is to go to Alaska, was presented by the Rev. Granville Taylor, Vicar of the Chapel of the Mediator, and the Holly brothers were presented by the Rev. John R. Logan, Vicar of St. Simon the Cyrenian.

R. R. W.

On Tuesday, May 24, in St. Paul's Church, Lawrenceville, Va., the Rev. Joshia E. Elliot, was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop B. D. Tucker.

Archdeacon Russell presented the candidate and preached the sermon.

Mr. Elliott is in charge of the three churches in Mecklenburg County.

On June 10, at the Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va., Mr. Foxhall Parker Thornton and Mr. David C. George were ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Tucker of Southern Virginia. The candidates were presented by the Rev. W. E. Rollins, D. D.

VISIT FAMOUS WORLD SCENES and the HOLY LAND on One Trip

JOIN ONE OF OUR CONGENIAL "SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN" PARTIES

THE trip of a life-time has been arranged for you! The Southern Churchman has arranged for a party of our readers and their friends to combine a trip to the Holy Land with a tour which will include other foreign lands and scenes of outstanding interest and fascination. The imagination fairly leaps with the thought of realizing what probably is your fondest dream—of seeing, in company of congenial companions, the same places the Saviour saw nineteen hundred years ago. As long as memory lasts you will re-live the days of your trip. These days will ever unfold before you like the pages of a great book, read and re-read with a deeper understanding.

Two superb new trans-Atlantic Liners have been specially chartered. Hotels, special trains, automobiles and other comfortable conveyances have been reserved. When our Cruise ships arrive in port, all will be in readiness. Mr. Frank C. Clark, the Dean of Cruise Organizers, will have made all arrangements, and the experienced Clark Management will relieve us unobtrusively of the difficulties of foreign travel. The ship will be our Cruise-home. No changing to small local steamers or tedious delays; no baggage worries or passport and customs difficulties. From the time of sailing until we return to New York our only thoughts need be of realizing the utmost from our trip. Even the most confirmed "stay-at-home" need hesitate no longer to visit the lands rich in history, art and religion, while enjoying the same comforts he would find in a big metropolitan hotel.

Such a trip is not beyond your realization. By reason of an entire ship being chartered for the exclusive use of each Cruise there are prices to fit every purse, and you, too, can share in the benefits and savings thus made possible. Which trips have you found most worthwhile? Haven't they been those which had seemed almost impossible? Even if traveling alone, you will soon form delightful friendships in the first few days on shipboard. Mutual interest will draw you closer, and you will return far richer, if only for this. Every year you wait means another less in which to enjoy the fruits of the trip. Come! We want you with us.

We Will Visit Havana, Panama, Los Angeles, Hawaii, 19 days in Japan and China, Manila, Java, Singapore, Burma, 17 days in India Ceylon, Egypt, Palestine, Italy, Monaco, Havre, Glasgow, New York.

Ideal season for a world itinerary mapped by experts. The climax of all travel. No one who has traveled extensively will ever feel satisfied until he has encircled the globe.

PLAN NOW

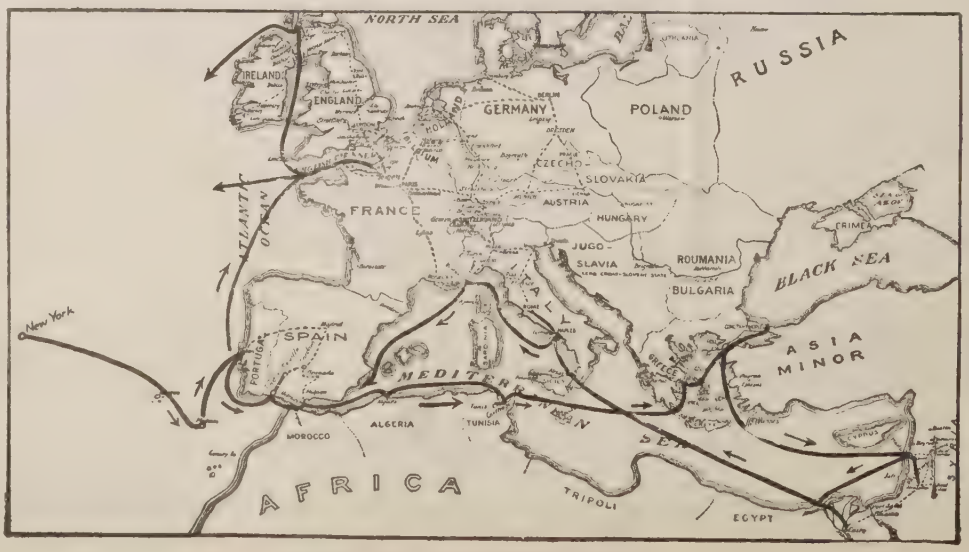
Such a trip is worth planning for now. Already reservations are being made. To assure comfort on shipboard and shore, the membership is limited. An early choice means a wider choice of rates and ship accommodations. Write at once for the interesting, illustrated 100-page program and ship plan, giving complete information and rates so you may be among the first to get full particulars. You will be under no obligation. Please specify which Cruise you are interested in.

TWO GREAT SISTER SHIPS

Like all new Cunard-Anchor Liners, the "Transylvania" and the "Caledonia" burn oil fuel, and they embody every modern equipment for comfort and safety. Their luxurious appointments represent the highest exacting trans-Atlantic standards. Their thermos ventilating system, in addition to electric fans in each room, assures pure air, and as further serving to make them ideal ships for cruising a passenger elevator extending to E deck on each ship., Numerous large public rooms, enclosed garden lounge veranda cafe, gymnasium, and deck space of unusual extent are sure to be satisfying to the most exacting traveler. Cunard-Anchor cuisine and service are justly famous for their excellence.

The Management

Both our Cruises will be under Clark management. The Clark Way in travel offers the utmost in travel value, and has made travel in foreign countries easy and inexpensive as never before. We will have the benefit of Mr. Clark's 32 years of experience, with every detail arranged and every preparation made for our comfort, pleasure and safety. People and agreeable traveling companions from all parts of the Union. Each party or group will have assigned to it the requisite number of guides, be placed together at one or more tables on the steamer and will also be assigned as near as may be, to adjacent staterooms and the same hotel on shore.



Ship Accommodations

The rooms are graded according to size and location, and the number of persons assigned to each. Some extra large rooms are used for three persons, priced at the minimum rates; but the majority of passengers will be berthed two in a room which regularly carries four in the Atlantic service. Many single rooms on the Cruises regularly carry two persons on trans-Atlantic sailings. Suites with private baths are available for those to whom price is of secondary importance. There are no class distinctions. All passengers have the same deck and social room privileges and are on strictly first class basis.

Booking arrangements for our "Churchman" Parties will be made through the Keller Travel Agency, who are in close touch with Cruise Headquarters and will give special attention to our inquirers, supplying complete information and advising in regard to any particular matters when requested.

What is Included

It is a comfort to know in advance how much it will cost to carry out travel plans. One Fee pays railway and steamship passage from New York back to New York, U. S. tax, steamer chair, hotels, transportation to and from stations; motor, ricksha or carriage drives and excursions, and fees for sightseeing in the various cities as specified in the program; porterage, guides—in fact every necessary travel expense is included except passport, visas, and such other purely personal items as laundry, ship stewards' fees, etc.

A NATIONAL CHURCH PAPER FOR ALL THE FAMILY.

Southern Churchman

DOMINUS FRUSTRA NISI 1835

Vol. 92. RICHMOND, VA., JULY 2, 1927. No. 26.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES"

The Revelation of the Bible is Complete :: Its Doctrines Immutable :: Its Truth is Invincible :: And its Authority is Absolute :: :: ::

"The Southern Churchman holds to the historic faith of the Church as expressed in the common creed of evangelical Christendom. We cherish the faith of our fathers as expressed in the Prayer Book and particularly in the Thirty-Nine Articles of Religion. In regard to some disputed points of doctrine we wish it understood that we accept the Deity of Christ, Virgin Birth of Christ, the personality of the Holy Ghost, the supernatural and plenary authority of Holy Scripture, the substitutionary atonement, the necessity of the new birth, the second coming of Christ.

We hold forth the Word of God as our supreme standard and guide and seek to conform our acts to its plainly expressed teachings, making it the supreme authority in creed and conduct.

In accordance with Scripture we believe that the supreme work of the Church is to win souls for Christ, and we give the first place to evangelism. We make a strong appeal to the unsaved to accept the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour, believing that no one is a member of the Church who is not born again and that they have become members of Christ, children of God and inheritors of the kingdom of Heaven through the sacrifice and death of Christ, Who made on the Cross a full, perfect and sufficient sacrifice, oblation and satisfaction for the sins of the world; and redeems every one who is convinced of his need of a Saviour, and accepts Jesus Christ's invitation: 'Come Unto Me.'

We believe that a Church ought to be a praying Church, a Bible reading and Bible studying Church, a soul winning Church, a witnessing Church, a giving Church."

Remember Me.

Lord, when with dying lips my prayer is said,
Grant that in faith Thy kingdom I may see;
And thinking on Thy cross and bleeding head,
May breathe my parting words: "Remember me."

Remember me, but not my shame and sin;
Thy cleansing blood hath washed them all away;
Thy precious death for me did pardon win;
Thy blood redeemed me in that awfful day

Remember me; and, ere I pass away,
Speak Thou the assuring word that sets me free,
And make Thy promise to my heart, "Today
Thou, too, shalt rest in Paradise with Me".

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

"Life begins in wonder and ends in worship."

If the yoke you have taken upon you is not easy it is not of Christ.

"Who ever heard of a man who regretted having received Christ into his heart?"

"We cannot conquer a necessity, but we can yield to it in such a way as to be greater than if we could."

"What marks each one within the fold
Is faith that does not see;
And yet as if it did behold,
Trusts, unseen, Lord, to Thee."

Do today's duty, fight today's temptation; and do not distract yourself by looking forward to things which you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.—Charles Kingsley.

One of the real dangers God's children need constantly to beware of is the placing of their own stipulations in conflict with His guidance.—Rev. Wm. Porkess.

"Wherever water flows or birds fly,
Wherever day and night meet in twilight,
Wherever the blue heaven is hung by
Clouds or sown with stars,
Wherever are outlets into celestial space,
There is beauty, plenteous as rain, shed for thee."

"When thou passest through the waters,"
Deep the waves may be and cold,
But Jehovah is our refuge,
And His promise is our fold;
For the Lord Himself hath said it,
He the faithful God and true:
"When thou comest to the waters
Thou shalt not go down but through."

"So many names, so many fames,
Have echoed through the earth;
So many deeds, so many creeds,
So much of change found birth;
But through the eons onward whirled,
Unaltered, undefiled,
Two figures dominate the world—
A mother and a child."
—Ella Bentley Arthur.

MEMORIES

Recall your first distinct memory, acquired when you were a small child. It may be a little thing or a large, comedy or tragedy, good, bad or indifferent, but it lives in you and with you, however many years may have passed. The incident or event, sight or sound, born into your life with your earliest consciousness, will remain with you until your last consciousness. Muse, then, on the later happenings, what was told you, what you heard or read or saw, that has lingered with you. Occasional musing and delving into the past and the successive chapters of our lives, done wisely and with purpose, is good for all of us. When we so explore the multitudinous contents of our brains we are likely to be astonished and perplexed, even the most logical and methodical of us, by the incongruities and diversities, the apparent lack of orderly arrangement and reason, the scraps, fragments, trivialities we find. So much we gladly would discard stubbornly, so much we wish to retain is lost or mislaid. We are moved to wonder why this or that is stamped on our minds, maybe to spring to life at the oddest and most absurdly inopportune moments, while so much of importanee and real interest has slipped away into oblivion, or to be reclaimed with labor and difficulty. We may stumble trying to repeat the Ten Commandments, the pithiest of the Proverbs, the text of the most recent sermon, the national anthem, read and heard many times, and be perfect with a Mother Goose jingle, a verse of a silly or sentimental song, heard once, a stray newspaper paragraph, a sentence or scene in a forgotten book. We forget our own anniversaries and know precisely the date of the arrival of William the Norman into England, and can not tell why. We ponder and fret seeking the name of an intimate companion of five, ten, twenty years ago, while a casual acquaintance or person with whom we have been in contact but an hour are before us, fresh and vivid. How many of your mates at school or college a short or long while ago can you name? And of those you recall how many are recollected only by association with something unhappy, ugly or ridiculous?

Probably the majority of families of our busy and enterprising American people scatter from the homes. Brothers and sisters and close cousins, separated widely by distances and circumstances, become almost as strangers and, far too often, the tenderness and beauty and love that should hallow thoughts of home are lost, while the disagreeable and unpleasant things live.

Caprices of mind and memory are beyond explanation. Recognizing and considering them, we must be forced to realize anew the responsibilities and opportunities put upon us by the fact of living and of association with people. The counsel of Polonius to his son to give every man his ear but few his voice and no unproportioned thought his act is sound common sense for self protection. The warning that for every idle word men speak they must answer at the day of judgment and that by our words we shall be justified or condemned is a very solemn admonition to consider the strange operations of the human memory and to protect others from consequences of our own deliberate or careless sins and our follies.

Time is very merciful. It cures many of the wounds, softens and soothes much of the bitterness of life. Yet, innumerable memories planted by us in other minds and planted in our own defy time. Children are sent from homes carrying recollections which will not and can not be effaced of evil spoken or done, or ill temper, idle, hasty, unconsidered words and acts, exhibitions of vanity and selfishness which deform and discolor their lives, debate their ideals, make them useless and, therefore, unhappy, yield evil fruit to be transmitted to coming generations. The familiar illustration of the rock thrown in water and the circle of ripple spreading beyond our sight and knowledge may apply in any moment that we do or say something in anger or rashness or idleness. We can no more judge what will be remembered of us in the after years, even when our earthly accounts have been long closed, than we can understand why our minds hold so much we would obliterate if we could and lose so much we would keep. As in the homes, so in the schools, sometimes in the churches. Teacher or employer, schoolmate or fellow employee, pastor or member, do or say what will endure for good or ill and will justify or condemn here and in the hereafter.

We can not know now what hosts of souls may arise to accuse and denounce us because, directly or indirectly, we have stained and blighted them; or to invoke for us mercy and blessing because we have helped purify and awaken them. We may know, from our own self-searching, our knowledge of harm or good brought to us by the infinitely varied contents of the mental storehouse, never filled, in which we begin to accumulate so soon after the first infancy and continue to accumulate until the second childhood, if we live so long, something of what we have done and given for others.

Good and bad, tragic and comic, trivial and big, sweet and bitter, the memories live within us, are aroused to gladden or depress, to make us exult or be ashamed, to burn or heal. Surely, it is a very serious thought, to be gleaned from our own experiences, that we live each hour in the worst of all jeopardy—the peril of placing in some of the ever-receptive and receiving storehouses of memory all about us, from the child just beginning to understand to mature men and women, poisons to bring deadly consequences.

Alfred B. Williams.

THE PRECIOUS BLOOD OF JESUS CHRIST

WHAT IT IS AND WHAT IT DOES

By Canon F. E. Howitt

TWO ladies were sitting together in a street car. Said one: "I would go a long way to hear a sermon about the blood of Christ; I wonder why it is not preached more?"

"Yes," said the other, "we sing of it in hymns, but we don't hear of it from our pulpits."

Are we losing sight of the blood of Jesus Christ? Our eternal salvation depends upon it. "Without shedding of blood (there) is no remission (of sins)" (Heb. 9:22), and without such remission there can be no entrance for us into Heaven, for no sin can enter there. It is the blood of Jesus Christ alone that "cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

Few topics have such prominence given to them in the Bible as the blood. It is mentioned no less than four hundred and twenty-seven times. From Leviticus 17:11 we learn its divine significance: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul."

Peter tells us that the blood of Jesus Christ is 'precious", that is, worth a great price. It is of infinite and inestimable value. He says: "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot". Let us enquire therefore, why the blood of Christ is precious, and let us seek to answer the question in two ways.

First, it is precious because of what it is; and second, because of what it does.

What the Blood of Christ Is.

The blood of Jesus Christ is absolutely unique, and in five particulars:

1. It is Sinless Blood. It is the only sinless human blood this world has ever known. We were all conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity (Psa. 51:5). Jesus was "conveived by the Holy Ghost" (Luke 1:35), and "born of the Virgin Mary". He alone among men was born without sin, nor did He ever sin. He was always "holy, harmless, undefiled, (and) separate from sinners" (Heb. 7:26). Therefore His blood is "available" as our atonement. He only could stand in the sinner's place, and bear the sinner's sins. And this is just what He has done. "For he (God the Father) hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (2 Cor. 5:21). "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 43:4-6).

Had Jesus been only a sinless man, and His blood, sinless blood, its shedding would have availed for but one other human being; but, thank God, it is more than sinless.

2. It Is Divine Blood. Paul in addressing the elders at Ephesus in Acts 20:28, speaks of "the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood". Therefore the blood of Jesus was the blood of God. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them" (2 Cor. 5:19). The blood shed on Calvary was the blood of Emmanuel, God with us. Therefore, the blood of Jesus is divine blood.

What does this imply? It means that Christ's blood has an infinite efficacy. The value of a sacrifice is the value of the victim offered. Therefore it is that in Hebrews 10:4 we read: "It is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins." Neither the blood of one, nor of a million of them, could remove even one man's sins. The Old Testament sacrifices were only typical sacrifices. But what value will you put upon God? God is infinite, and therefore the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, and the blood which He shed is blood of infinite value, is an infinite sacrifice. Hence it is sufficient to cover the sins of the whole world. Jesus Christ is "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1:29), and therefore His blood is of "infinite efficacy".

At the Parliament of Religions held in Chicago during the Columbian Exposition in 1893, among the speakers on that occasion Dr. Hale appeared for Unitarianism, Swami Viva Kananda for Hinduism, and Dr. Joseph Cook for the Christian faith. After all but the last had spoken, each telling the beauties of his religion, Dr. Cook arose. Advancing towards the audience he said: "I want to introduce Lady Macbeth." Then returning to Dr. Hale, he inquired, "Have you, sir, anything in your religion that can wash away her sin"? A cloud passed over Dr. Hale's face, but he ventured no reply. The same question was put to the Hindu, but there was no answer. Coming to the front of the platform with his arms extended, Dr. Cook said: "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

It is Incorruptible Blood. In Psalm 16:10, the writer speaks for Christ prophetically in this way: "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." These words are applied directly to our Lord by Peter in Acts 2:31. What was true of the body of our Lord was equally true of the blood contained in it. It was incorruptible. Peter says, "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, . . . but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." Hence the blood of Jesus is not only sinless and therefore available; and divine, and so of infinite power; but also incorruptible, and therefore of "changeless efficacy".

It is Covenant Blood. At the institution of the Lord's Supper (Matt. 26:28) our Saviour made use of most significant words. As He took the cup, He gave thanks, and said: "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." The blood of Jesus, therefore, is the blood of the covenant.

What does this mean? That there was an everlasting covenant made between the Father and the Son, even before man came on the scene at all. This was entered into "before the foundation of the world" (Eph. 1:4), by which Jesus Christ undertook to become a man and to live man's life, and die in man's place and stead. And God the Father undertook to accept and forgive and save every returning sinner that came to him by Jesus Christ. The Holy Communion is the sign and symbol of that covenant to all who receive it believingly, to all who are trusting in the merits of the precious blood of Christ (Gal. 3:16-18; Heb. 9:11-28).

The terms of that covenant are given in Hebrews 10:16, 17, as cited from Jeremiah 31:33, 34: "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more". As we come to the Lord's Supper and receive that cup, how comforting it is to know that for true believers, His precious blood has secured eternal forgiveness, and that God, for Christ's sake, will remember their sins no more.

It was through realizing his part in the everlasting covenant that Evans Hopkins, one of the founders of the English Keswick Convention, found pardon and peace. Relating the circumstance, he says: "I was in great anxiety of soul. On Monday, February 20, I was reading in my room alone, at Swalland, the verse, 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness', I said to God, 'Lord, I cannot see this. If it were written, "Thou art gracious and merciful to forgive", I could understand it; but how canst Thou be faithful and just to forgive? Faithful to whom? Just to whom? Now, Lord, show me'. I was longing for life and peace. Well, before I rose from my knees, the whole thing was made clear to me. I saw that there was a covenant, not between God and man, but between God and Christ; and if I was among those who confessed their sins, I was in the agreement, and then He was faithful to the Son, and just to the promise made to the Son, to forgive me then and there. I saw at once that I had pardon; and peace came into my soul."

Therefore, because the blood of Jesus is covenant blood, it is of "unshakeable reliability".

It is Glorified Blood. It is now in Heaven, and hence it is glorified blood.

In the Epistle to the Hebrews (9:11-14) it is written: "But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His own blood He entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more, shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Just as the high priest of old entered once a year into the most holy place with the sacrificial blood and presented it to God, so Jesus Christ, our Great High Priest, has entered into Heaven with His own blood, and through the eternal Spirit has offered that blood to God the Father, and that blood has been accepted for the remission of our sins.

Jesus is pleading the merits of that blood today, and that blood itself is pleading. In Hebrews 10:19, 20, we read: "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." So we have boldness to enter into the very holiest now by the blood of Jesus. In the twelfth chapter and the twenty-second verse it says, "Ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."

So the blood is speaking on our behalf in Heaven. This is the ground of our hope. Have we claimed our part of it? Have we by faith appropriated the forgiveness that that blood has purchased for us? God is reconciled: God is at peace with us. Are we at peace with God? (2 Cor. 5:18-21).

What the Blood of Christ Does.

The blood of Jesus Christ is precious not only on account of what it is, but also because of what it does. What does it do? It does at least three things.

It Redeems From Sin's Penalty. What is the penalty of sin?

In Ezekiel 18:4, 20, we learn God's sentence upon sin. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Again in Romans 6:22 Paul tells us: "The wages of sin is death."

Then once more in James 1:15 we are told that "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death".

Therefore, death, not only of the body but also of the soul, is the penalty of sin. Every sinner will have to bear that penalty unless he finds in Jesus his personal Saviour. Jesus Christ has borne that penalty for him. There is no necessity for him to bear it himself if only he will come to Christ and receive Him as Saviour (Matt. 11:28; John 5:40; 6:37).

Charles Simeon, the celebrated evangelical Churchman of Cambridge, England, whose life and preaching exercised such a profound influence for good upon the student body of the university there, while an undergraduate, came under deep conviction of sin, and found peace and salvation through reading Bishop Wilson on the "Lord's Supper". There he learned that the Jews of old knew what they did when they transferred their sins to the head of the sacrificial offering (Lev. 1:4). "May I transfer all my guilt to another?" he said. Then he saw that the offerings under the law were but types of the supreme offering of Christ on Calvary, and going at once to Jesus he claimed and found complete forgiveness for all his sins.

Not all the blood of beasts,
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain:

But Christ, the heavenly Lamb,
Takes all our sins away,
A sacrifice of nobler name
And richer blood than they.

My faith would lay her hand
On that dear head of Thine,
While like a penitent I stand,
And there confess my sin.

Jesus came expressly to redeem us from the penalty of sin. Isaiah 53:5, 6 tells us: "He was wounded for our transgression, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." In the tenth verse of the same chapter we read: "Thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin," and from verse twelve we learn that He has made that offering, that "he hath poured out his soul unto death". He gave His blood, His soul, His sinless life, His divine life as an atonement and sacrifice for our sinful lives. The debt is paid and we can have perfect, instant forgiveness if we come to the Lord Jesus Christ by faith.

It Saves From Sin's Power. In Revelation 1:5 praise is ascribed to Jesus Christ who loved us, and "loosed us from our sins". By his death He has set us free from sin. He has paid our penalty, met our claim, and Satan can no longer hold us, neither can the flesh, nor the world. All we have to do is to claim what Christ has already claimed for us by His precious blood-shedding. In Revelation 12:11 we read of the redeemed that they overcame Satan "by the blood of the Lamb". Romans 6:6 says: "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin."

So there is perfect release for every one of us from the indwelling power of sin, if only we will claim it through the finished work of Jesus Christ, by the power of His precious shed blood. Verses 10 to 14: "For in that he died, he died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace." If we will only reckon ourselves by the death of Jesus to be then dead to sin, if, when temptation presents itself, we will look up and say, "Lord Jesus, enable me to reckon myself dead to this sin and alive unto God through Thee", we shall find that Jesus Christ will instantly make good His promise here, and release will instantly come.

There is a story told of a Frenchman who was drafted during the Napoleonic wars into the French army. He claimed that he was exempt from service, and when asked what was the ground of his exemption, he said: "I am dead. I was drafted before, and I procured a substitute, and my substitute went to battle and was killed; he died in my place, and hence I'm a dead man as far as conscription goes." The officer to whom he applied for relief from conscription would not listen to his plea. The man appealed to the emperor, and the emperor acknowledged the claim, saying: "Yes, judicially you are dead, and you can go to your home; you are perfectly free." He obtained that freedom because he claimed it through the work of another. We may do the same; we can claim redemption from the power of sin through the work of Jesus Christ, who died to redeem us from sin. What is His name, and what does it imply? "Thou shalt call his name Jesus." Why? "Because he shall save his people from their sins." And He will do it if we will only look to Him and trust Him and possess the possessions that we have in Him.

It Will Save From Sin's Presence. This will be when Jesus comes and takes us out of this world of sin to be with Himself forever. In Hebrews 9:28 we read: "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation," perfect, eternal, full, complete, salvation. When we reach that other life, that other world, there will be no more sin. The work of Jesus will then have been completed. He will have saved us absolutely from sin's penalty, from sin's power, from sin's presence, and that forever more. There is no other way by which we can ever enter Heaven save through the blood of the Lamb.

A poor, dying woman was being visited by a London city missionary. "You know," he said, "when you go on a journey you have to have a ticket to travel by. You are about to go on a journey. Have you a ticket to heaven?" Then he read to her Revelation 22:15. It is wonderful, as the Revised Version gives it: "Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." This is indeed a ticket for heaven. Have we secured it by faith in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ?

NO MONOPOLY OF THE CHRISTIAN HERITAGE

By the Reverend Canon G. Osborne Troop

"Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear My Voice; and they shall become One Flock, One Shepherd."—St. John 10:16 (R. V.).

ANY serious treatment of the above subject must, in the nature of things, lead us into the realm of age-long controversy; but controversy need not be un-Christian. It may be conducted in a spirit of honest inquiry, sincerely desirous that the truth should prevail. In that spirit I would now lay before the minds of intellectual readers the slowly-formed convictions of a long ministry as to the one cure of "our unhappy divisions".

1. My court of final appeal is, from first to last, the supreme authority of the Word and Spirit of the Living God. Proceeding with reverential care from step to step, I shall endeavor to show that neither the Roman Catholic Church nor any other part of Christendom possesses a monopoly of the Christian heritage.

2. It is not sufficiently realized that all Christians have an equal right of access to God. There can be no possible monopoly of the Lord's Prayer. All children of God are invited and encouraged to cry, "Our Father". Even so, all penitent sinners have an equal right to the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. "He died for all." He "tasted death for every man". He is "the Saviour of all men", says St. Paul; and he is careful to add, "specially of them that believe". Nor is there any monopoly of the Holy Spirit. "The Spirit and the Bride say 'Come; whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely'."

3. Indeed, it becomes manifest that even the Church Universal has no monopoly of the Everlasting Gospel. The whole Church holds the Gospel only as a sacred trust for all Mankind, for the benefit of the whole race. How comprehensive is the command of our Risen Lord: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature!"

4. No one can, with reason, deny that the Holy Bible belongs equally to all Christians; and, as before, the Church has no exclusive right to it. The Scriptures are committed to the whole body of believers; but only that they may be disseminated throughout the world.

5. No body of Christians enjoys a monopoly of Baptism. There is only "One Baptism". No one can possibly be baptized a Roman Catholic, an Anglican, a Presbyterian, or any other. He can only be baptized "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost"; and, in virtue of his baptism, he becomes not necessarily in the deepest sense a Christian, but a member of the whole Christian society, and entitled to share in its privileges and responsibilities. As St. Paul says of the ideal Baptism: "In one Spirit were we all baptized into one Body, whether Jews or Greeks, whether bond or free, and were all made to drink of one Spirit."

6. Wherever water is reverently used in the Name of the Blessed Trinity by any believer, ordained or unordained, there is a true Baptism, so far as its outward form is concerned, and, as such, it may not lawfully be repeated. Even the Roman Catholic Church recognizes the validity of baptism performed in emergency by a Roman Catholic nurse.

7. Any one who has been baptized in another Christian community and then desires, for example, to unite with the Church of England, is not again baptized, but is welcomed as already a member of the Christian Church. This rule, for the most part, prevails throughout Christendom, and is entirely in accordance with Scripture. Even the Roman Church, in receiving a Protestant, does not presume to rebaptize him. A form of baptism, indeed, is used, but with the saving clause, "If thou are not already baptized, I baptize thee". In Christian courtesy, I should add, that of course I am not forgetting the conscientious difficulties of the Baptist, who regards the adult believer as the only person to be baptized, and immersion as the only proper mode.

8. It should be carefully noted that Baptism, though appointed by Christ, and of equal dignity with the Lord's Supper, may, in emergency, be validly performed by any Christian, man or woman. It is not limited to the Christian ministry. This, again, is wholly Scriptural.

9. We proceed further to find that there is no justifiable monopoly of the Lord's Table. Its very title should warn us that it belongs to the Lord and not to us. Baptism and the Lord's Supper, equally with the Scriptures, are entrusted to all Christians, and are intended for the equal benefit of all who, out of mankind, become believers.

10. It is just at this point that confusion is introduced by unscriptural claims. The Lord's Table is, unhappily, the very storm-center of centuries of controversy, and involves the whole question of the vitality of the Ministry. By a sacerdotal and exclusive view of the theory of Apostolical Succession, the Roman Church unchurches the Church of England, and in its turn the Anglo-Catholic section of the Church of England unchurches all other Protestant communions. The Roman Catholic and the extreme Anglican agree that only those who are episcopally ordained can rightfully minister at the Lord's Table; but it should be reverently observed that the Lord Himself, Whose the Holy Table is, has made no such restriction. The Holy Spirit, the Lord of Pentecost, is Christ's sole Vice-Gerent upon earth, and the same Spirit is the fountain-head of the Christian ministry. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty," and there is also unity. The Spirit gives right both of ministration and of access in all that pertains to the Eucharistic Feast. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ," says St. Paul, "he is none of His." What heart-searching words of these for all of us!

11. We have now reached the most difficult and delicate part of our discussion, but I am constrained to maintain, with humble confidence, that there is no monopoly within the Christian Church even of the Christian ministry; and, further, that there is absolutely no authority given in the Scriptures to a Christian sacrificial priesthood. The Christian Church is unique in this. We are all familiar with such a priesthood among the heathen peoples; and with the Jewish priesthood, especially appointed by God. The New Testament speaks of heathen priests and of priests of the Jewish Order; it brings before us the glorious Temple of Jerusalem, with its altar and sacrifices; but never so much as once is the Christian minister spoken of as a priest, nor is the Lord's Table spoken of as an altar. Indeed, the late Bishop Lightfoot reminds us that, "It is a significant fact that the first instance of the term 'priest' applied to a Christian minister occurs in a heathen writer". He is careful to add, "at least I have not found any example of this application earlier than Lucian".

12. The late Bishop Westcott, in reference to the sacred words of the Risen Lord, recorded by St. John, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost", makes this most weighty and unequivocal statement:

"The gift is conveyed once for all. No provision is laid down for its transmission. It is made part of the life of the whole society, flowing from the relation of the Body to the Risen Saviour. Thus the words are, I repeat, the charter of the Christian Church, and not simply the charter of the Christian Ministry. They complete what Christ had begun, and could only begin, before His Passion. He had given to His disciples the power of the keys to open the treasury of the Kingdom of Heaven, and dispense things new and old. He had given them power to bind and to loose, to fix and to unfix ordinances for the government of the new Society. And now, as Conqueror, He added the authority to deal with sins. In saying this, I do not touch upon the Divine necessity, by which the different persons and channels, through which the manifold graces of the Christian life are administered, were afterwards marked out. I wish only to insist upon the Apostolic mission of all Christians, which no subsequent delegation of specific duties can annul. . . . All Christians, as such, are indeed Apostles, envoys of their Risen Lord. To ministers and to people alike, while they are as yet undistinguished, He directs the words of sovereign power—in the announcement of His victory over death and sin—'Peace be unto you; as the Father hath sent Me, even so send I you. Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whosesoever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained'."

13. It is a fact too often overlooked that even our Lord Himself, while on earth, was not a priest, but, in His human nature, a layman. He was not of the priestly tribe, or, family of Aaron, but of the royal tribe of Judah. When He laid down His life for the sin of the world He was not sacrificed by a priest upon an altar. As the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews tells us, "He suffered without the gate". No one took His life from Him; He laid it down of Himself. The whole Roman Army would have been powerless to slay Him and He chose not to die. We are told in majestic language, that "He through the Eternal Spirit, offered Himself, without spot, to God". In well-known words, He was "Himself the Victim and Himself the Priest". By this sacrifice of Himself, once for all offered, He "put away sin" for ever; and, in virtue of this sacrifice, He also became "a priest for ever, after the Order of Melchizedek", but not after the Order of Aaron. Like each of us, He had, as Man, but one life, and, having died, it is impossible for Him to die again. "Death hath no more dominion over Him." Not even He, then, can repeat His sacrifice. How impossible is it, therefore, for any human priest to offer Him "for the living and the dead" in the so-called "Sacrifice of the Mass"!

14. Moreover, when our Redeemer instituted the Lord's Supper, He did not celebrate it as a priest at an altar, but as a layman at a table, in the course of the Feast of the Passover. Nor were the disciples fasting, for it was "while they were eating" that He gave them to eat of that Bread and to drink of that Cup. These simple considerations show conclusively that the Lord's Table can never properly be an altar, nor can he who ministers at it be a sacrificing priest.

15. We do not forget that the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews says, "We have an altar"; but Lightfoot makes it unmistakably clear that the inspired writer is not speaking of the Lord's Table. The only Christian altar is the unique and terrible altar of the Cross; and that altar has for ever disappeared, and has left no successor. If an objector should appeal to the authority of "Catholic Tradition", our Lord's mighty words most solemnly remind us of those, who made "the Word of God of none effect by their tradition", vainly seeking to worship while teaching for their doctrines "the commandments of men".

16. Christ Himself is our Priest—our great High Priest, Confessor and Judge. We need no other. He is the one perfect Mediator through Whom every believer has free access to the Eternal Father. And, wonder of wonders, all believers share in Christ's royal priesthood. There is no special class of Christian priests recognized by God; but every single believer shares equally in his Saviour's priesthood. Christ is the Head of the Body, the Church, and as members of His Body we partake of His priesthood. Lightfoot, in his immortal essay on "The Christian Ministry", clearly states that "the most exalted office in the Church, the highest gift of the Spirit, conveyed no sacerdotal right which was not enjoyed by the humblest member of the Christian community". He further says: "It must be borne in mind that the minister's function is representative without being vicarial. He is a priest as the mouthpiece, the delegate of a priestly race. His acts are not his own, but the acts of the congregation. . . . "It may be a general rule," he goes on, "it may be under ordinary circumstances a practically universal law, that the highest acts of congregational worship shall be performed through the principal officers of the congregation. But an emergency may arise when the spirit and not the letter must decide. The Christian ideal will then interpose and interpret our duty. The higher ordinances of the universal priesthood will overrule all special limitations. The layman will assume functions which are otherwise restricted to the ordained minister." It may be added that Lightfoot quotes with approval Tertullian, who says: "Where there is no bench of clergy, you present the eucharistic offerings, and baptize, and are your own sole priest. For where three are gathered together, there is a Church, even though they be laymen."

17. If the above paragraph be accepted as true, and it is founded, be it remembered, strictly on the Scriptures, then the practical consequences for our own day are of priceless value. As the present Bishop of Durham has recently said: "Above the Papacy, above General Councils, above every conceivable ecclesiastical authority, we set the Word written". The authority of the Scriptures supersedes the unwarranted claims of an exclusive priesthood, and Christian unity is seen to embrace without distinction all believers. The devout Presbyterian, for instance, is as valid a priest as the devout Anglican or Romanist, and that without distinction of minister or layman. All Christians are reduced to a level as to their common priesthood, and the ministers become only duly authorized officers and leaders of the Christian community.

18. We can see at once of what inestimable value this neglected truth is to the scattered Christian communities, for example, in our own North West. The universal priesthood, once intelligently embraced, meets all possible emergencies; for where there are believers, however few, absence of the ordained ministry does not cut them off from their Christian worship or sacraments. The Spirit of Christ is with them, and they are perfectly justified in ministering to each other until such time as an ordained minister can be secured. The noble simplicity of the Gospel of Christ thus becomes the security of every believer and guarantees the supply of all his need. No conceivable emergency can possibly separate the believer from his Lord.

19. With my whole soul I believe the above statements to rest upon the supreme authority of the Scriptures, as upon the very Rock of Ages; and I am supported in this conviction by the vast learning and dispassionate conclusions of both Lightfoot and Westcott, whose memory the world of Christian scholarship delights to honor. Their printed words are the more weighty now that they have passed into the nearer Presence of the King of Glory. Into that wondrous Presence we may at any moment be called to follow them. Their reasoning is calm and balanced, as if at the very feet of Him Who said, in simple majesty, "I am the Truth". They bear strong testimony to the early development of the Historic Episcopate out of the New Testament ministry; but they unchurch no body of believers in the Son of God, nor do they discredit the orderly ministry of any Christian community.

20. In conclusion, it should, perhaps, be pointed out that the Prayer Book of the Anglican Church never calls the Lord's Table an altar, and that the Anglican "priest" holds the office of a New Testament presbyter or elder. In the familiar words of the judicious Hooker, the word "priest" in the Prayer Book is "presbyter writ short". While I am fully aware that what I have written is unlikely to receive any serious attention from ecclesiastical authorities, yet as a humble Christian and loyal presbyter of the Church of England, I venture to send it forth in the assurance that, in so far as it may be true, the God of Truth will not suffer it to perish. We may well take comfort from the words of the Lord Jesus: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice." Furthermore, our Lord is soon coming back to gather in His own from the living and the dead that they may be with Him and with each other for ever. It is obvious that, in that glorious reunion of the faithful, there will be no possible place for division among them. We shall then, for all eternity, "dwell together in unity". Why should we not, as far as possible, anticipate that unity now?

ALL HEARTS CENTER ON LAUSANNE.

By The Rev. Thos. F. Opie, D. D.

The hearts and minds and the prayers of all Christians are now centering on the great World Conference on Faith and Order, which meets at Lausanne, Switzerland, August 3-21. This conference will be the first concerted effort at Christian unity on the part of all Christendom. Every branch of the Christian Church in all parts of the world, excepting the Roman Church, will be officially represented —and assuredly this Church will be represented in an unofficial and non-participating sense.

Bishop Charles Henry Brent, D. D., LL. D., of the Diocese of Western New York, chairman of the Commission on Faith and Order of the Episcopal Church, will be chairman of the conference. Five hundred delegates from nearly a hundred churches will be present. The official languages will be French, German and English and it is likely that each address will be made in all three languages, as well as printed and distributed in all three languages.

Some criticism has arisen over the announced themes to be discussed, but in the nature of the case, the conference cannot bind any representative or representatives to commit his branch of the Church to anything said or done at the conference. The subjects announced are—The Call to Unity; The Church's Message to the World—the Gospel; The Nature of the Church; The Church's Common Confession of Faith; The Church's Ministry; The Sacraments; The Unity of Christendom and the Relation Thereto of Existing Churches; Arrangements for Continuing the Work of the Conference.

It is officially announced that "The propositions presented are not to be considered as in any sense expressions of official judgment or final conclusions". It is proposed that the various delegates take back the sense of the conference to their respective official bodies for consideration and for such official action as may seem fit.

The official appointed delegates from the Protestant Episcopal Church are as follows: Bishop James DeWolf Perry, Jr., Rhode Island; Bishop Edward L. Parsons, California; the Rev. Craig Stewart, Evanston, Ill.; the Rev. B. Talbot Rogers, Sunbury, Pa.; the Rev. W. Cosby Bell Virginia Seminary; William C. Sturgis, New York, and Frederic C. Morehouse, Milwaukee.

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

Executive Secretary, Department of Christian Social Service, Diocese of Southern Virginia.

THE term "Social Service" is one that has come into wide use during the past generation. It is difficult to give an exact definition of the phrase, for in a general way, every effort or movement for good, in any form, could be called Social Service. But particularly, this term has come to denote a program for the treatment of the unfortunate members of society, the dependent and the delinquent, and for the removal of the causes which make them dependent and delinquent.

A student of the gospels must feel at once that this work is essentially Christian. For ministering to the unfortunate, giving His services as a physician to those that were sick rather than to those that were whole, occupied a very large part of the time and attention of the Master.

Instances From Scripture.

Consider these instances:

1. The clearest statement of His life's purpose was "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister".

2. Of the thirty-five recorded miracles, thirty-four are miracles of ministration; healing all sorts of affliction of body and mind, feeding the multitudes, restoring the dead to bereaved families, etc. The one exception is the blighting of the fig tree.

3. When John sent to find out who He was, He described Himself as one through whom "The blind receiveth their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them".

4. When He sent out the Twelve, and again when He sent out the Seventy, to do the same kind of work that He was doing, their commission was to heal the sick, to drive out demons (some form of mental trouble), and to preach the Gospel.

5. On His first appearance in His home town, Nazareth, after His public ministry began, He amazed and offended His old acquaintance in the Synagogue, by describing Himself as the one to whom Isaiah had referred in this prophecy: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor; He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, To set at liberty them that are bruised, To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

6. And, finally, in the description of the Scene of Judgment, with Himself on the Throne, He says to those on His right, whom He calls "Ye blessed of my Father". "I was hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." And "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me". He makes this kind of service for the unfortunate, in His name, the very criterion of salvation.

Numerous other instances could be quoted, but these would seem to show that whenever there was an especially striking opportunity to emphasize any one subject as being of supreme importance, the subject that He chose was—Ministering.

Definition of Christian Social Work.

I have tried to define the phrase "Social Service", but our subject is "Christian Social Service". What does that mean? Probably something like this: "Ministering to the welfare of the needy and the unfortunate, and seeking to remove the causes of their need and misfortune, in the name of Christ".

Notice that there are two parts to this program, one remedial and one preventive. The one would be concerned with case work for the relief of poor families, the other with the cause of poverty; the one with the cure of diseases, the other with the eradication of the disease germs; the one with the care of wounded soldiers, the other with the abolition of war; and so on.

If the Christian Church is to carry on the work of Christ Himself, surely this program, in both its remedial and preventive phases, should be included in the Church's field of operations.

An Organized Department of the Church.

So the National Council of our Church has, as one of its six departments, the Department of Christian Social Service, and most of the dioceses are organized on the same general plan. It is the task of this department to stimulate the people of the Church towards social-mindedness, towards the giving of themselves in service for the relief of those in sorrow and trouble and the prevention of wretchedness and misery, because Jesus Himself was so deeply concerned in the misfortunes of mankind.

For more than fifty years, the National Conference of Social Work has been convening annually in one or another of the larger cities of the country. This conference includes all kinds of social work, and a great many agencies, representing Christian and Jew, religious and non-religious, state and city organizations. At the same time and place with this general conference, for the last seven years, the National Conference on Social Service, of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, has been convening, under the leadership of its president, Dean Charles N. Lathrop, the Executive Secretary of our National Department of Christian Social Service. The report of this 1927 Conference, which was held at Des Moines, Iowa, in May, appeared in the Southern Churchman of June 4, and Dean Lathrop's paper, read at the conference, was published in succeeding issues.

Purpose of the Conference on Social Service.

One of the objects of this conference of our Church is to afford an opportunity to discuss programs that can be carried out in the various dioceses. The ideal is that the National Department operate through the Diocesan Departments, and that each Diocesan Department operate with and through committees on Social Service in the various parishes of that diocese.

The parish committee should be composed of such persons as are most interested, or most likely to be interested, in (1) active and definite service for others, and (2) a study of conditions that are stumbling blocks in the way of the creation of a perfect society. This committee should include any communicants of the parish who are trained social workers, in any of the fields of service included in this term.

A Program of Parishes.

The parish committee should take as its goal the stimulating of social-mindedness in the parish. As primary work, a program something like the following might be initiated:

Distribute among organizations and individuals in the parish, copies of a list of suggestions for social service. Under each suggestion, have a space for a report of activities under that head. Let each individual or organization make a monthly report to the parish committee, and let the parish committee consolidate these reports and send them in annually to the Diocesan Department.

Individuals or organizations in a parish where no social service committee has been formed, might make reports of work they have done, directly to the Diocesan Department.

Here is a proposed list:

The Church Congress

THE fifty-third annual meeting of the Church Congress in San Francisco, was one of the most interesting and successful of all of its many sessions. It was well attended, the speakers were alive and interesting and the discussions were lively and pointed.

The congress was honored by the presence of the Rt. Rev. John G. Murray, D. D., Presiding Bishop, who officiated at the Corporate Communion in Grace Cathedral and also gave an address at one of the opening sessions. Bishop Murray stressed the benefits of the Congress in bringing together many men of differing views and in harmonizing these many views into one, effective unity. He made an impassioned plea that the Church make a real contribution of this spirit towards the subject of international peace. If we can get the different nations to harmonize their different interests in a world-wide fellowship we can bring about lasting peace.

The opening session of the Congress created a great sensation in the press, due to the misinterpretation given to the address of the Rev. Henry Lewis, of Ann Arbor, on the subject, "Moral Standards in An Age of Change". Mr. Lewis, in the course of his address made the statement that the Church must make a study of all modern problems, including the problem of "unmarried unions", in order to be a guide in setting better moral standards. The newspapers implied that this was a personal endorsement of so-called "Trial marriages", and gave it due publicity. However, a statement by Bishop Parsons cleared the situation.

Bishop Capers, of West Texas, preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon at the Communion Service, on the topic, of "A New Commandment". Bishop Capers emphasized the need of bringing the fundamental principles of love to bear on all Church work and life. He emphasized this need particularly in the conduct of our Church papers, in our Church Clubs and societies, and in our types of Churchmanship. We need the unifying principle of love to correct the tendency for separation and partisanship.

The subject, "How Can Christianity Satisfy the Religious Needs of All Races", brought forth two eloquent addresses. The first by the Rev. Herbert H. Gowen, of Seattle, Wash., and the other by the Rev. Dr. N. Guthrie, of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie.

Dr. Gowen reviewed the history of Christianity to date and prophesied that it was destined to meet the needs of the world if we will only preserve its universality and its spirituality. He called upon all to correct the dangers of narrow nationalism, provincialism, sectarianism and partisanships, which made walls of division among God's people. We need to cultivate the maxima and not the minima. Above all we need to cultivate large thoughts of God and the largeness of His Universal purpose.

On Thursday morning the subjects were: In What Spense Should Our Church Be Catholic? and In What Sense Should Our Church be Protestant? The speakers on the former topic were Bishop Moulton of Utah, the Rev. Dr. Arthur Rogers of Evanston, Ill., the Rev. Samuel M. Dorrance of Brooklyn, and the Rev. Edward S. White of St. Louis.

The first two speakers emphasized the need of preserving the comprehensiveness and the traditions of the Church, especially her ritual and devotions. The last two speakers emphasized the need of preserving the inheritances of the Protestant Reformation.

The Anglican Church was shown to preserve a proper balance between the Catholic tradition and the Protestant rights of the individual. Our Church must be both Catholic and Protestant to be true to her genius.

Thursday evening brought a crowded hall to hear the presentation of the interesting subject, "The Relation of Christianity to Political and Industrial Democracy". The first speaker, Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, of Los Angeles, stated that we must bring the Golden Rule to bear in all of our political and industrial relations. He emphasized the need of preserving our American institutions intact and of constitutional and orderly procedure in effecting any change.

The next speaker, Bishop Faber, of Montana, gave a most stirring presentation of Christianity as a "Way" of life which must be lived in every phase of life. Bishop Faber severely indicted the present social order as being non-Christian and made an eloquent plea for a thoroughgoing democracy in both politics and industry.

On the last day of the Congress the subjects discussed were: "Evangelism, Its Aims and Methods" and "Some Aids to Personal Religion". The first speaker on the former subject was Dean MacDonald of Fresno. Dean MacDonald, who is on the National Commission of Evangelism, reviewed the results of the recent "Bishops' Crusade". The Dean made a plea for the revival of personal religion and personal responsibility for the spread of the Christian faith.

The Rev. Granville Williams, of Brooklyn, followed with a fervent appeal for more reality in religion and the restoration of definite teaching and personal sincerity of life. During the discussion some saw a danger of making more machinery in the Church to carry out the work of evangelism. Many stated that the chief weakness in the Church of today was the lack of Christian living and a warmer fellowship among Church members.

The Rev. Raymond S. Brown, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., gave a most helpful interpretation of the need and practice of "Prayer". This was followed by a clear interpretation of the nature and use of "Sacraments", by Dean Harry Beal of Los Angeles.

The closing address was made by the Rev. Dr. Loring W. Batten, of the General Seminary on "The Bible". Dr Batten's address was a masterly presentation of the history of the Bible in the Church and a plea for its better use for today.

The Congress closed with an expression of appreciation of hospitality by Dr. Batten and an expression of deep appreciation of the Congress on behalf of the Diocese, by Bishop Parsons.

Dr. Batten presided throughout the Congress and the Rev. Samuel M. Dorrance acted as Secretary. During the Congress several social events took place and pleasure trips were made to the points of interest. A warm invitation to return to California was made.

BISHOP RESCUES GIRL FROM DEATH.

The Rt. Rev. William P. Remington, D. D., Bishop of Eastern Oregon, was hailed as a hero recently following his act in saving a child of ten from drowning. The child fell into the raging torrent of the Umatilla River. Bishop Remington, a former Olympic games hurdler on the American team, leaped into the stream fully clothed and rescued her.—The Living Church.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except over the signature of the writer.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY TO SERVE.

Mr. Editor:

The Department of Missions appeals through you for a relief doctor for the Hudson Stuck Memorial Hospital, Fort Yukon, Alaska.

Dr. Grafton Burke, the physician in charge of the Hospital, is due to come out for a much-needed furlough. The Department has been disappointed in the withdrawal of a doctor who had agreed to act as his substitute, and urgently calls for a year's time of some young physician who is a communicant of this Church. He should be experienced in surgery, free from family ties, capable of meeting the hard conditions of service in this remote spot of Arctic Alaska.

He should be ready to go in at the earliest possible moment and to remain for a year. It will be hard work, but it is an unusual chance to be of use to some of our humankind in need.

Further correspondence should be directed to

LOYALTY.

Mr. Editor:

In his book on "Anglicanism" W. H. Carnegie, Sub-Dean of Westminster Abbey, puts a question that the General Convention must deal with:

> "The efforts of the Anglican Church to come to terms with Calvinism affected her intellectual outlook potently and permanently. They caused her to formulate some parts of her doctrinal teaching in terms which were designedly ambiguous, in terms which both Catholics and Calvinists could honestly accept. It has maintained itself as a distinctive characteristic of the Anglican attitude and atmosphere. Unfriendly critics may speak of it in terms of disparagement, may charge it with vagueness and confusion and lack of logical coherence. But Anglicans can point in reply to the fact that the Church of their allegiance, while maintaining firmly the essential principles of Catholic faith and order, has in a conspicuous degree been successful in retaining within the limits of her loyal membership men of very different temperaments and aptitudes, and that the interactions of their thought and practice have done much to bring to light the many-sidedness of the Christian revelation, and its congruity with the varied and intricate workings of the human mind. Limits of comprehension are a necessary condition of all organized social life. Every society must demand from its members loyalty to its fundamental principles and institutions. The question we have to face is which of these are fundamental"?

In a recent article in the Southern Churchman it was stated "The Church should be the kind of Church which the laity want". Certainly we all want to avoid any breach between the clergy and laity. For this reason the voice of the laity should be heard distinctly in regard to all matters pertaining to Prayer Book revision, especially to those which have a definite bearing upon the doctrinal position of this Church. Many laymen take the attitude, "We are not well informed enough about the questions involved in Prayer Book revision to take any definite stand. We must leave that to the clergy". The danger of such an attitude is apparent. If it prevails we might well find ourselves with a Church which the laity do not want at all. The lay delegates to the General Convention of 1928 should at least realize that they must deal with the question, "What is involved in loyalty to the fundamental principles of the Episcopal Church"?

FAR EAST NEWS.

Mr. Editor:

I have just received this awful communication from Syria—that the Rt. Rev. Rennie McInnes, Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem and the East, was held up by bandits while returning from Beirut—near Ramalla, about nine miles from Jerusalem—beaten, then relieved of his possessions. A driver coming after the Bishop's car, was shot dead, the bandits fearing he would tell on them.

Syria and Palestine are agog and much perturbed over the incident. The British Governor and police are doing their best to trace the culprits.

I thought the whole Church would want to hear the sad fate of this bishop, so well-known to many here.

MISSISSIPPI'S GRATITUDE.

Mr. Editor:

May I express through your columns my sincere thanks to the many Church people who so kindly sent us boxes of clothing during the flood period.

I wish that those who contributed so splendidly could have witnessed the expressions of gratitude by those who received the clothing.

Our section is still under water and the question of a crop this year is problematical. More clothing is needed, and if any care to send clothing, I shall be very glad to handle same in cooperation with the Red Cross.

BISHOP MANNING ON THE CHURCH CONGRESS.

Advocates of "sex experiments" are a menace to the community, Bishop William T. Manning, of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, declares in a statement made public, in which he took issue with the Rev. Henry Lewis, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Rev. Mr. Lewis was quoted as having inquired whether the Church "might not do better to recognize unmarried unions" among the younger generation at the national congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in session, at San Francisco.

"I hope Mr. Lewis will disavow these views," Bishop Manning said, "for any man who defends or approves unmarried unions is out of place in the ministry of the Episcopal Church or any other Church.

"Unmarried unions or companionate marriages are not new. They are high-sounding phrases for age-old immorality, and modern names for free love. I am aware that these ideas are being propagated among young people by some college professors, but that any Christian minister should advocate them seems incredible.

"Such teaching from a Christian minister would be even more vicious than from a tabloid newspaper or a sex magazine. A clergyman who should advocate these views, if mentally responsible, would be a dishonor to the Christian Church and a menace to the community.

"Straight thinking and true-hearted young people will resent and reject any such teaching. We have had a most striking evidence of the kind of stuff that is in our young people by the modesty, poise, clear judgment and courage exhibited by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh."

FAITH.

By Elizabeth M. Bruen.

The thunder crashed, and the lightning flashed
From a dark and angry sky;
The wind and the rain, like a hurricane
With furious force swept by:
Then out of the gloom of the darkened room
Rose the voice of a child, so sweet and so clear,
As she said with the faith that knew no fear,
"Grandmother! God will keep care of us".

In the midst of the strife, and the storms of life
If a childlike faith we know,
In the darkest hours will grow bright flowers
On the path we feared to go.
Instead of the night, a rainbow of light.
Then the promise of God as the clouds break away
And the daystar arises at dawn of the day
"Beloved, I will take care of you".

Church Intelligence

The University of The South.

In conjunction with the fifty-ninth commencement exercises of the University of the South, Sewanee, the semi-centennial celebration of the Theological School was celebrated.

Fifty years ago the leaders of the Church in the South saw the vision and need of a theological seminary for the clergy, and the theological school was organized.

The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of St. Luke's, as the theological school is known on the mountain, opened on Saturday morning, June 11, with a Corporate Communion for the alumni of the school in St. Luke's Chapel. A large number of alumni and students were present.

Immediately following the service in St. Luke's Chapel the Alumni gathered at Magnolia Hall for the alumni breakfast. Bishop Juhan acted as toastmaster, and Bishop Gailor was the chief speaker. Dean Wells made a report of the work of the Theological Department. Mr. MacBlain, of the graduating class, expressed the appreciation of the class for the efforts of the faculty during the course. The Rev. Robert Grubb, of Mississippi, a member of the third class to graduate from the seminary, made an interesting address. Bishop Seaman and the Rev. Carroll K. Davis, D. D., Field Secretary of the National Council of the Church, made short speeches.

Saturday morning the main event of the anniversary took place with a service at All Saints' Chapel. The church was filled when the hour of the service approached.

The special preacher for this occasion was the Rev. Frederick C. Grant, D. D., professor of Systematic Theology, and librarian of the Berkeley Divinity School. Dr. Grant stressed the need of a wider scope for the theological seminaries, and the need of seminaries to train the men in the problems of today.

The Theological School of the University has grown by large degrees in the last few years, and especially under the leadership of the present dean, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Wells, the progress of the Seminary has been remarkable. This year's junior class was one of the largest in the history of the Seminary and indications are that the incoming class will be fully as large if not larger.

The Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of North Carolina, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the fifty-ninth commencement exercises of the University of the South, which were held in All Saints' Chapel, Tuesday morning, June 7.

The Rev. Raimundo G. de Ovies, rector of Trinity Church, Galveston, Texas, was elected chaplain of the University of the South at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Pageant Award Made.

A scholarship at the Sewanee Summer School for Church Workers, young people's division, is the award made to Miss Katharine Wells, of Laurel, Miss., who is the successful contestant for the best pageant written in the contest offered by the Committee for the Corporate Gift of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Province of Sewanee, of which Mrs. W. E. Wilson, is chairman. The contest for the Fourth Province was started in the early spring, and the decision has just been made by the judging committee of which Mrs. T. P. Waring, of Georgia, was chairman. Written on the six projects selected by the Woman's Auxiliary in the Advance Work of the Church's Program, the title of Miss Well's pageant is "A Song of Sixpence", and it will be presented at Sewanee during this season's summer school. Later an effort will be made to have it presented throughout the Province.

A close second to Miss Wells was Mr. Scott Keyes, of Lexington, Ky., who has been given honorable mention by the judging committee. So good is Mr. Keyes' pageant, entitled "These My Brethren", that the committee hopes to have both pageants printed under the same cover.

Summer School For Colored Church Workers.

The fourth annual session of the Provincial Summer School of the Third Province for Colored Church workers will be held at the St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Va., July 18-23, inclusive. This School is conducted under the auspices of the Commission of Religious Education of the Province of Washington for the intensive training of leaders in religious education, including not only teachers in Church (Sunday) Schools, but clergy, officers and members of parish organizations engaged in educational work.

Information may be secured from the Rev. James S. Russell, D. D., Lawrenceville, Va.

Dr. Silver Declines His Election as Bishop of Wyoming.

In a letter to Bishop Murray, the Rev. H. Percy Silver, D. D., writes:

"I am not unmindful of the fact that the call of the House of Bishops is a challenge from which no man can turn lightly aside. The action of the Bishops of the Church in selecting me for the post of Bishop of the Missionary District of Wyoming has received serious and prayerful consideration . . . it has, I confess, brought back to me many happy and sacred memories of the nearly twenty years during which I was permitted to live and work among the people of the West, for whom I have a deep affection, and among whom I number many of my dearest friends. I believe in the West! I believe great things are to come out of the West both for the Church and the Nation, and I also realize the importance of every effort the Church is making, and should make to establish in our Great Western States strong centers of Church life. While I feel all this very deeply, and while I appreciate the expression of confidence and esteem on the part of the Bishops of the Church, yet I am convinced that I can far better serve the Church where I now am, and therefore, my dear Bishop, I believe it to be my duty to decline the election."

New Church Building at Pikeville.

The congregation of St. Mark's Church on the Hill, Pikeville, a suburb of Baltimore, have begun the erection of a new church building which, when complete, will have cost $80,000. Of this amount $54,000 is in hand or is secured in pledges. The building is to be of early English Gothic architecture, and it is the intention of the Rev. Roger A. Walke, the rector, and the building committee, to make it as nearly like an English country church group as possible.

Of the group there is now standing the parish house, which was completed five years ago at a cost of $40,000. This will be connected to the church by cloister, or covered colonnade, and eventually a great square tower will be erected to dominate and unify the group. The church will be built of native stone, quarried within a mile from the edifice, the same material used in the parish house. The church is set upon the brow of a hill overlooking the historic old Reisterstown road and will be a most acceptable landmark to those who daily use this road in great numbers.

Dedication of The Church of The Nativity, Forest Park.

On Sunday, June 26, the opening service and dedication of the recently completed Church of the Nativity, was held in Forest Park, Baltimore, the sermon being preached by the Rt. Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese. Since the inception of the parish in June, 1911, the Rev. Hugh W. S. Powers has been in charge. The parish was first conceived when the Rev. Peregrine Wroth was Archdeacon of Baltimore, and the present Bishop Coadjutor was head of the Church Extension Committee. Under their direction a survey of the suburban district was made and a site was secured. Under the able leadership of Mr. Powers within two years the communicant list had grown to several hundred and at the present time, which is the sixteenth anniversary, it numbers five hundred and eighty. In 1920 the parish became independent. Throughout the period of growth it has accepted and paid in full its missionary obligations. All this has been made possible by the enthusiasm and cooperation of the parishioners. The new church cost $170,000, and is a beautiful Gothic structure. The old place of worship will now become the parish house. At the opening service in the new church a number of memorials were dedicated, including a stone altar, a stone credence niche and an echo organ.

Opening Services In New Church.

The opening services of the new St. James' Church, Knoxville, were held on Whitsunday, June 5. The Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese, was present and preached at the morning service, and paid tribute to the effective work of the minister, the Rev. E. N. Hopper, and to the loyal support and cooperation of the congregation. The Rev. Walter C. Whittaker, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, Knoxville, preached a sermon at the vesper service in the afternoon.

An exact replica of the old church, the new St. James, is a model of the purest type of Gothic architecture. The new structure is the first unit of a plant that will be one hundred and twenty-six feet long and thirty feet wide when completed. The present unit, though temporarily used as the entire church, is comprised of the nave as far back as the transepts. A temporary chancel will accommodate the pulpit and organ.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Diocesan Assembly, Daughters of the King.

The fifth annual assembly of the Daughters of the King in the Diocese was held in St. Paul's Church, Salem, June 17.

The session opened with the celebration of the Holy Communion by Bishop Jett, assisted by the Rev. Roland J. Moncure, rector of St. Paul's. Mrs. H. I. Johnson, President of the Diocesan Assembly, was in the chair.

The Rev. Mr. Moncure, in an address of welcome, spoke of the great value of the order in parish work and stressed the necessity of emphasis upon the spiritual values in life. The response on behalf of the visitors was made by Miss Mary J. Elder, of Trinity Church Staunton.

Interesting reports were submitted by the various chapters in the diocese. Mrs. A. A. Birney, National President of the Order, conducted a helpful conference.

In the afternoon, Quiet Hour was conducted by the Rev. Alfred R. Berkeley, rector of St. John's Church, Roanoke. There was an Open Forum and brief addresses were made by Bishop Jett and others. Officers elected for the coming year are: President, Mrs. I. W. Littell of Staunton; Vice-President, Mrs. I. S. Prichard of Roanoke; Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Carpenter, Roanoke; Treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Page, Salem.

The meeting closed with the benediction, pronounced by the Bishop.

The Crusade in Culpeper.

In St. Mark's Parish, Culpeper County, the Bishops' Crusade was conducted June 13 to 21 by the Rev. John F. W. Feild, rector of Grace Church, Kingston, Pa.

Interest and attention increased from the first service, in both the congregation and community. Many pledge cards were received, and the effort will be made by pastor, the Rev. Dr. Hammond, and people to conserve the results of the faithful and spiritual services of the crusader.

Mr. Feild also preached at Little Fork Colonial Church, on the afternoon of Trinity Sunday. The sesquicentennial of this old church will be celebrated on the Seventh Sunday after Trinity, July 31. The Bishop of West Virginia has accepted an invitation to preach there then.

Crusade Mission.

The Rev. Nelson P. Dame, missioner of Virginia, held a successful crusade mission, from Sunday, June 5, to Sunday, June 12, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, near Bluemont.

Services were held every night, during the week, with an additional service at eleven o'clock, each Sunday, with a celebration of the Holy Communion on Trinity Sunday. Mr. Dame was assisted by Mrs. E. A. Meade, who played the organ, and with Mr. Dame led the children's choir in the singing of mission hymns.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

St. John's Church, Georgetown, has opened a summer session of the Church School to accommodate those children who remain in the city during the summer season and who desire to continue in Sunday School. At the first session, June 12, there was an enrollment of thirty-five children who will be under the direction of Mr. A. B. Hoestman; and fifteen children in the primary department, of whom different teachers will take charge different Sundays. Organization of this school will be unlike that of the regular school on account of the smaller numbers and different conditions.

G. F. S. Outings: Last week was "Candidates Week" at the Holiday House of the Girls' Friendly Society near Mount Vernon. Forty small girls and their leaders arrived to spend a happy week away from the city and in an environment musical for its beauty and comfort. The children in this group are from Epiphany Church, St. Paul's, Rock Creek Parish, St. John's Church, Georgetown, Church of the Transfiguration and Epiphany Chapel. Next week, another group will go to Holiday House for an outing and will come from the Chapel of the Nativity, Chapel of the Resurrection, St. Stephen's Church and the Chapel of the Annunciation. Services are held every Sunday afternoon in the chapel there, and the preacher on June 26 was the Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett, of All Souls' Memorial Church.

St. Mark's Church during August will be in charge of the Rev. Charles F. Edwards, rector of St. John's Church, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. During the greater part of September it will be in charge of the Rev. Horace W. Stowell, of Towanda, Penn., while the rector, the Rev. William Henry Pettus, is on vacation. June 21 was the fifteenth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Wm. R. Pettus.

New Parish House at Collingdale.

Ground was broken Saturday afternoon, June 25, for the new parish building, which the congregation of Trinity Church, Collingdale, is to erect next to the church to serve the community needs of Collingdale and of the parish. Officials of Collingdale Borough, representatives of other religious communions and patriotic and other organizations were invited to take part in the ceremonies by the Rev. Dr. Henry Davies, who is in charge of Trinity Church. Mr. T. Broom Belfield, a vestryman of Old Christ Church, Philadelphia, through whose generosity and interest the new building has been largely made possible, turned the first spadeful of earth.

The building, which will cost upwards of 40,000, when finished, will have an auditorium with a seating capacity for about three hundred and fifty, besides every modern equipment which will enable it to render a complete community service. Saturday's ceremonies began with a procession of all the church organizations, visiting clergy and other invited guests, led by Trinity's vested choir, to the Soldiers' Monument at Clifton and Parker avenues, where services were held. The Rev. Francis M. Taitt, rector of St. Paul's Church, Chester, and Dean of the Convocation of Chester, and the Ven. James F. Bullitt, Archdeacon of the Diocese, made addresses.

Open-Air Services.

Sunday afternoon Bishop Garland conducted "Open Air Services" on the one hundred acre cathedral site recently acquired by the Church in the Upper Roxboro section of Philadelphia. The Bishop made the address and the music was by the vested choir of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Kensington, under the direction of Frank H. Longshore. On Sunday afternoon, July 3, another "Open-Air Service" will be conducted at which the Ven. James F. Bullitt, Archdeacon of the Diocese will be the officiant and make an address.

Young People's Fellowships from upwards of fifty parishes in Philadelphia and vicinity Sunday morning at eight o'clock united in a Corporate Communion Service held in St. Simeon's Church, at which Bishop Garland was the celebrant and preached the sermon.

Bequest: Miss Annie Buchanan, niece of former President Buchanan and widely known in religious and charitable work in Philadelphia, left a $130,000 estate. In her will she provided for a gift of $5,000 to the Episcopal Hospital, for a free bed to be known as "The Buchanan Bed", for the benefit of members of St. Nathaniel's Church, Philadelphia. Miss Buchanan was instrumental in organizing St. Nathaniel's Mission, now St. Nathaniel's Church.

She was vice-president of the Society of Nurses of the Episcopal Hospital.

Church Schools Hold Commencement Exercises.

The Church Schools of Trinity, Mt. Vernon; Christ, Carlyle; Calvary, Nashville; St. Thomas, Salem, and St. John's, Centralia, held their joint commencement exercises in St. John's Church, Centralia, on June 12. The church was filled to capacity with the friends and relatives of the children. Promotion cards and certificates were awarded and reports from the various schools read. The banner for the highest standard of the five schools was awarded to Calvary Church School, Nashville. The rector's cross for the most helpful pupil went to Jean Barber, of St. John's, Centralia. The Rt. Rev. John Chanler White, Bishop of Springfield, was present and made a short address to the children. The mystery play, "The Little Pilgrim and the Book Beloved", was beautifully given by children from the five schools.

An interesting exhibit of work done by the children during the Church School year was on display in the croft of the Church throughout the evening.

Christ Church, Springfield, the Rev. Jerry Wallace, rector, seems to be the first parish in the diocese to sense the need of an adequate endowment, not so much for the needs of the Church at the present time, but in the years to come. Christ Church is even today well down in the heart of the business district and rector and people are already beginning to feel the need of preparations being made which will insure the carrying on of the Church's work, and accordingly on Whitsunday there was taken in Christ Church the first offering for the Endowment Fund of this growing parish.

Memorial Service For City Mission's Chaplain.

At the memorial service held on Thursday, June 9, for the Rev. Frederic Wyndham White in the Chapel of Our Saviour at the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, the attendance filled the chapel to overflowing. As it seats nearly six hundred people, this was an eloquent tribute to the work that Chaplain White has done as the resident chaplain for the past thirteen years for the Episcopal City Mission Society in this institution.

The chaplain of the society is officially recognized by the state as in charge of all the religious work for those not Roman Catholics nor Jews.

Chaplain White's fourteen years of service were characterized by the faithful performance of duty and unfailing kindliness to the patients and the staff of the hospital. He died on June 6, while still in active service, rounding out an active ministry of forty-two years. He became chaplain of the hospital two years before the Chapel of Our Saviour was opened for services.

For the present the Rev. Almon R. Pepper, a member of the staff of the City Mission Society is in charge of this chaplaincy work.

An Interesting Confirmation Service.

Thirty-four old people at the City Home on Welfare Island, many of them feeble and bent with years, knelt before the altar in the Episcopal City Mission Society's Chapel of the Good Shepherd to receive the confirmation rite of the laying on of hands from the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., Bishop of New York, in the thirty-eighth annual confirmation service to be held there by a Bishop of the Diocese on Trinity Sunday.

This was the thirty-eighth consecutive year, also, for a New York Bishop to take with him to this service for the old people, the young deacons and clergy ordained by him earlier on that day at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the custom having been initiated by the late Bishop Henry Codman Potter, in 1889. Bishop Manning had with him four newly-ordained clergy and four deacons, who participated in the service.

Following Bishop Manning's sermon and confirmation in the chapel, the Rev. Ernest Sunderland, D. D., Superintendent of the Episcopal City Mission Society, which maintains the chaplaincy work at the Island, spoke briefly of the history of that work on the Island.

Rt. Rev. H. T. Moore, D. D., Bishop.

Carrying Out A Large Enterprise.

On Trinity Sunday, June 12 Dean Robert S. Chalmers announced to the congregation of St. Matthew's Cathedral, the successful completion of the first step in one of the most significant efforts ever undertaken by the Church in the Southwest.

In November, 1926, alarming cracks were discovered in the walls of St. Matthew's Cathedral, Dallas. On the appearance of these new cracks in the walls, the wardens and vestry promptly secured the services of a well-known local firm of architects and engineers to make a thorough report on the condition of the Cathedral building. The condition disclosed was one of deterioration and insecurity, due to insufficient foundations and if the congregation had decided to continue the Cathedral in its present location, it would have involved an expenditure of between seventy and one hundred thousand dollars, and that expenditure would only have taken care of the immediate physical necessity. It would have made no provision for endowment.

Three meetings of the wardens and vestry were held, and considerable difficulty was experienced in arriving at any decision. In the meantime it occurred to several of the vestrymen that St. Mary's College, occupying a campus of fourteen or fifteen acres, was located advantageously, from the viewpoint of future growth of the city, while the present location of St. Matthew's Cathedral was bound to become less favorable as the years passed. St. Mary's College has been carrying, for several years, a very heavy indebtedness, against which incubus it has been struggling almost in vain. Out of this situation a felicitous plan was developed, by which it was agreed that the Cathedral congregation should endeavor to raise a fund of $540,000. Of this fund, $360,000 should be attempted first. If the $360,000 should be raised, St. Mary's College buildings and grounds should be purchased from the diocese, at a price of approximately $225,000. This purchase price would be sufficient to liquidate all of the indebtedness of St. Mary's College and leave the entire property and buildings free of any encumbrance whatsoever. The remaining sum of $105,000 would remain in hand as a nucleus toward the building of a future Cathedral. This sum would be added to as the present Cathedral site and buildings came to be sold and as the second unit, amounting to $180,000, should be subscribed.

The entire plan was laid before the Bishop of the Diocese on April 18, and had his approval. It was then submitted to the Standing Committee, who unanimously passed a resolution approving of it. It was submitted to the Cathedral Woman's League, to the Board of Trustees of St. Mary's, and to a representative group of business men, and finally, on April 24, at a special meeting of the Cathedral Parish. The plan was adopted by a standing vote, and full authority was given to the wardens and vestry to carry it into effect.

On May 10 the drive was launched for the first unit of $360,000, and on Trinity Sunday, Dean Chalmers was able to announce that this entire amount had been subscribed in full, and that this result had been achieved without employing the services of any professional money-raisers, and with a total promotion expense of less than $800.

The wardens and vestry propose to continue the efforts until the second unit is reached, bringing the total fund up to $540,000.

The effect of this will be that St. Mary's College, which was so dear to the heart of the late Bishop Garrett, and represented so much of his life work, will be continued and developed as a Preparatory School and Junior College for Girls. It has lately become a fully accredited junior college, accepted by all the state authorities. It also means that the campus will form a splendid site for a harmoniously developed group of buildings, including ultimately the Cathedral Synod House and Diocesan center, as well as the school for girls.

It is an interesting evidence of the recuperation of St. Mary's College that in the academic year just passed, the religious instruction given to the junior college group was such that no less than twenty-two students qualified for units of the N. A. T. A. and were awarded certificates. It is believed that this is so far a unique record among the Church educational institutions for young women.

Miss Jeanette W. Ziegler is principal of the College, and Miss Edith James, formerly of the Week-Day School of Religious Education of St. Mark's, Toledo, is in charge of the religious instruction in the school.

No single factor has contributed more to the success of this great enterprise than the affectionate interest and guidance of the Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Harry T. Moore, who spoke in terms of warm congratulation to the Cathedral parish on the occasion of the annual baccalaureate sermon of St. Mary's College. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Robert Nelson Spencer, D. D., of Kansas City, who also added his felicitations.

Dr. Abbitt's Twenty-Fifth Anniversary.

Loving tribute was paid the Rev. George C. Abbitt at the "Community Recognition Service" held Sunday evening, June 5, in the First Baptist Church, in appreciation of his twenty-five years as rector of Grace Church, Hopkinsville, by probably one of the largest congregations that has ever been in that church.

In opening the service, the Rev. R. B. Grider, pastor of the Methodist Church, who is chairman of the Ministerial Association, stated the purpose of the meeting, and that it was set on foot by members of that association.

The invocation was said by the Rev. W. B. Holmes, Jr., pastor of the Westminister Presbyterian Church, and the lesson was read by the Rev. William Garner, pastor of the Universalist Church.

The prayer was said by the Rev. J. W. Stiles, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Brief addresses were made by Mr. W. O. Soyars, Judge Downer, Dr. P. C. Walker, and the Rev. Dr. Horace Kingsbury, of the Christian Church, who presented Dr. Abbitt with a purse of gold on behalf of the vestry and congregation of Grace Church. Dr. Abbitt responded in a brief and appropriate address. The benediction was said by the Rev. W. W. Astles, of the First Presbyterian Church.

Brief Items of Interest.

Reports from Elizabethtown, one of the oldest Missions of the diocese, tell of hopeful and encouraging progress under the ministry of Canon J. M. Nelson, who has been holding services at this point during the past year.

The work in our Colored parishes, the Church of Our Merciful Saviour and St. Matthew's Mission, Louisville, indicates faithful and praiseworthy activity, the former under the rectorate of the Rev. G. G. Walker; the latter has been without a rector for some months. The Mission won special commendation through a notably fine Lenten Offering from its Church School reported at the presentation service, May 8. The diocesan offering amounted to nearly $4,000.

On National Hospital Day, May 12, the class of nurses graduated at the Norton Infirmary, held its annual service at the Cathedral, conducted by the Bishop of the diocese, with address and bestowal of diplomas. The Infirmary is still asking the aid and interest of its many friends.

On June 12 the Very Rev. R. L. McCready, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the University of Louisville. This institution claims prestige as the oldest chartered Municipal School of its kind in the country. In referring to this fact, Dean McCready made note of the strong ties uniting the Cathedral and University as represented, respectively, by largely the same men as founders, adding the interesting item that as many as four generations in the same family have, in some instances, been connected with both.

June 12 was also a date of general interest to the diocese, as marking the seventy-third birthday of its beloved Bishop. The public press of the See city made gratifying mention of the anniversary with congratulations and full biographical notes.

The resignation of the Rev. C. A. Ross, rector of St. Stephen's, following that of the Rev. Royal Tucker, of St. Paul's, Louisville, makes vacancies in two of the busiest parishes. It is hoped the fall will see both filled.

A Debt Erased and a Church Consecrated.

On Trinity Sunday, the Church of the Incarnation, Cleveland, the Rev. Charles C. Jatho, rector, was consecrated by the Rt. Rev. Warren Lincoln Rogers, D. D.

This church, beginning over twenty-five years ago in a small building in Glenville (then so-called) has at length through tremendous financial struggle come to be one of the finest churches in the city. With a full congregation, Church School enrolling three hundred, a sanctuary of great beauty, freed at length from an over-burdening debt, Mr. Jatho, on whose shoulders fell greater portion of the indebtedness, has finally accomplished his desire.

The present site of the church, and the parish house built under Archdeacon Patterson's regime—the capacious auditorium serving for place of worship for many years—lies at the juncture of two prominent city streets very convenient for the worshippers. The purchase of this lot was made possible by the selling of the Glenville Church and grounds to the Roman Catholic Parish in that place. This church, built during the rectorship of the Rev. A. R. McKinstry, has increased its influence wonderfully under Mr. Jatho in the three years of his ministry there.

The service was inspiring in every feature, the unusually wide chancel enabling everybody to see what took place there. Bishop Rogers preached one of his pointed and instructive sermons. A large number partook of the Holy Communion.

In the notes of Bishop Rogers there appear two remarkable incidents: In the number confirmed at St. Peter's, Ashtabula, the Rev. Creetus A. Dowell, rector, one of the oldest churches in Ohio, ninety-three; also in the number of candidates presented by the Rev. Robert Freeborn, of Calvary, Sandusky, the largest number in the history of the parish.

Church School Rally.

The Church School Rally with presentation of Easter offering was held in Grace Church, Grand Rapids, in the afternoon of May 8.

The pleasant weather brought out a large attendance of children with their friends, so that the church was well filled.

The Bishop, with ten of the clergy, were present. The service was taken by the Rev. Messrs. D. D. Douglas and Edwin G. White; and the address was made by Bishop McCormick.

At the time of the offering, as each school was called, children came forward and placed the school offering in the alms basin held by the Bishop. The amount of the offering was $3,600, with several schools to be heard from.

Woman's Auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese met in St. John's Church, Ionia, on May 18. This was a supplementary meeting, as the time of the annual meeting was changed from January to May. The attendance was large, every parish, with two or three exceptons, being represented.

The meeting opened with the Holy Communion, the Bishop being the celebrant, assisted by the rector, the Rev. E. G. White, and the Rev. Lewis B. Whittemore of Grace, Grand Rapids, who was also the preacher. The sermon was a practical exposition and application of the central truth of our Religion—God is Love.

At the close of this service business sessions were held in the Guild Hall. The Diocesan President, Mrs. James E. Wilkinson, presided. An exceptionally enthusiastic spirit prevailed, and the sessions were full of good things.

The treasurer reported the finances in exeellent condition; and the Box Secretary had very encouraging reports of work done. Mrs. W. G. Studwell in charge of the Corporate Gift Fund aroused much enthusiasm. Miss Helen Stevens, director of Religious Education in the Pro-Cathedral, spoke at length on the Summer Conference. This is a new venture of the Diocese, and much good is expected from it. Miss Stevens is one of the faculty, and her talk aroused much interest.

Mrs. R. H. Franchot, Librarian of the Frances Hilyer Library, made a helpful address on summer reading and the use of the Diocesan Library.

At mid-day Bishop McCormick offered prayers for missions and for the Auxiliary. At this service seven candidates were admitted by the Bishop into the Order of the Daughters of the King.

A much appreciated feature of the meeting was the constant attendance and helpful words of the Bishop, whose time has been usually taken by the diocesan convention meeting at the same time.

In the afternoon Miss Grace Parker, Field Secretary of the National Woman's Auxiliary, spoke interestingly on Personal Religion as Expressing Itself in Service.

Delegates were elected to the Provincial House of Churchwomen, after which the convention adjourned to meet in 1928 in Grace Church, Grand Rapids.

Social Service Work.

St. Luke's Summer Home for Convalescent Women and Children opened in June immediately following the close of school. The institution located in Cresco in the Pocono Mountains, is strictly non-sectarian. It was established in 1893 by the Men's Guild in St. Luke's Church, Scranton, the Rev. R. P. Kreitler, rector, for the purpose of providing a summer home for women and children in permanent ill health, convalescent or overworked, where a rest and change will be provided that they are unable to secure for themselves.

Last season three hundred and sixty persons were entertained during the season of ten weeks at the home. A check on the religious affiliations of the guests at the home last summer show there were one hundred and eleven Roman Catholics, sixty Episcopalians, twenty-five Methodists, forty-seven Baptists, eighteen Presbyterian; Salvaion Army, four; Congregation, seven; Christian, twenty-five; Pentecostal, one; Lutheran, ten; Christian Alliance, seven; Greek Catholic, twenty; Evangelical, one; Russian Catholic, two.

The first home was established on a farm near Dalton and was maintained two summers. Later the home moved to Lake Ariel and in 1897 a beautiful semi-colonial residence was purchased as a permanent home by the organization.

There are twenty guest rooms and additional rooms for the help, making it possible to accommodate between forty-five and fifty guests for each ten-day vacation period. There is a lawn with trees and shrubs in the front, and in the rear there is brook, dammed for swimming purposes. A large playground to be fully equipped by the Young People's Fellowship of St. Luke's Church this summer provides entertainment for the children.

The only work required of any woman who is a guest in the home is that she make her own bed each day.

The home is maintained by a joint fund, an endowment fund established by the Men's Guild of St. Luke's and an annual contribution from the Community Chest.

The Very Rev. D. Wilmot Gateson, of the Pro-Cathedral of the Nativity, Bethlehem, will spend his summer abroad with his family. Sailing on the Cunard Liner "Caronia", June 17, he will spend a while in and about London and then go to Guernsey, one of the Channel Islands, where he will spend most of his summer. Toward the end of August he will cross into France, and, after spending some time there, will sail for home to be back early in September. His address during July and August will be: Ste. Marie du Castel, Guernsey, C. I., Eng.

Dean Gateson has just finished his fifth year as Dean of Bethlehem, and his eighteenth year in Holy Orders.

Church Home Day.

Wednesday, June 8, was possibly the biggest day for the Diocesan Church Home for Children since its founding almost fifty years ago.

The "Water Wing" as the bathing apartment of such buildings are now called, as well as the new dormitory was dedicated by Coadjutor Bishop Sterrett at the request of Bishop Talbot, who was also present.

Other repairs and improvements were also made to the main building. Two playhouses, one for boys and one for girls were donated and are ready for play in wet weather. An industrial building was also donated. It is small and modest, but is the beginning of a dream which the officials have had for years.

Because of these additions and improvements, the Executive Committee determined to make it a Diocesan Day for the Home. Invitations were sent to all the clergy and officers of the various societies of the diocese to attend the dedication. Over two hundred came. The chairman of the Executive Committee, Mr. Charles A. Mills, furnished a dinner for all present. The band from the Hershey Industrial Home furnished music, and the two schools engaged in a lively baseball contest in the afternoon.

Short addresses were made by Bishop Talbot, Bishop Sterrett, the Archdeacon and Mr. Mills, after which the Coadjutor read the dedicatory prayers.

Convocational Meeting.

The convocation of Scranton met in the historic St. Matthew's Church at Stevensville, Pa., on June 6. The services were started here in 1799. The present church was built in 1814. It is the oldest church building in Pennsylvania outside of Philadelphia. The session of the convocation was devoted mostly to a discussion of rural work.

Cornerstone Laid at Oceanside.

The cornerstone of a parish house for St. Andrew's Mission, Oceanside, was laid Sunday afternoon, June 12, by the rector, the Rev. Frederick H. Handsfield. Beside the address of the rector, brief addresses were made by the Rev. J. V. Cooper, of Lynbrook; the Rev. C. M. Wilson, of Baldwin; the Rev. Mr. Lauffer, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Oceanside, and Mr. Rufus Smith, President of the Oceanside National Bank. The parish house is the first building to be erected. It is thirty feet by forty, with a basement the same size. The plot, seventy-five feet by two hundred and forty, was presented to the Church by Mrs. A. A. Pearsall and her children, Mrs. Bristol, Mrs. Shaw and Mr. Jarvis Pearsall, of Oceanside. It is expected that the building will be ready for use in July, only ten months from the date of the first church service in Oceanside. The Rev. F. H. Handsfield, who started the mission, is rector of the Church of the Ascension, Rockville Center. Oceanside lies between Rockville Center and Long Beach, and is growing rapidly.

Clericus Meets at Children's Cottages.

The Clericus of Queens and Nassau met on Thursday, June 16, in the Bishop Burgess Cottages, one of the group of children's cottages of the Church Charity Foundation, at Sayville. After inspection of the new buildings and lunch, the director of the C. C. F. made a brief address on the newer ideas as to orphanages, expressed in these cottages. The children in each cottage are a small enough group to live much more nearly like a real family than is possible in the older or "congregate" type of institution. The children go out to public school and to the parish church. There are but two cottages as yet, one for twenty girls and one for twenty boys. There are fifteen acres of land, and room for several more cottages.

The Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D., has accepted appointments which will keep him in his diocese nearly all summer. He has, however, closed his house in Garden City and taken his family to their summer home at Lake George. He has engagements for the Sundays of July in the eastern part of his diocese, and will be in his office part of each week for necessary diocesan business. He hopes to get in a visit to Lake George between Sundays.

The diocesan assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew had a very successful meeting Saturday afternoon, June 11, at Port Washington. From two o'clock to five there was opportunity for base ball and swimming, and then a well-attended and interesting devotional meeting in the church. The Rev. A. R. Cummings, Chaplain of the Brotherhood, led the devotions. After this the men sat down to supper in the parish hall, and after supper had the annual election of officers. Mr. Wm. F. Leggo was reelected president, and the Rev. A. R. Cummings was reelected chaplain.

The Church of the Nativity, Ocean Avenue and Farragut Road, Brooklyn, has established a free lending library for the children of the neighborhood. It is open on Wednesday afternoons.

Young People's Camp.

The Y. P. S. L. Camp of the Diocese was held June 7-14 at Battle's on the east shore of Mobile Bay. The camp was under the direction of the Rev. R. A. Hirchhoffer of Mobile, with the Rev. J. W. Heyes, of Eufaula, as chaplain. About one hundred young people and their counsellors enjoyed the week of study, fellowship, recreation and worship. Diocesan officers of the Y. P. S. L. for the coming year were elected President, Allen Bartlett, Church of the Advent, Birmingham; Vice-President, Catherine Nelson, Church of the Ascension, Montgomery; Secretary, Delia Gould, St. Andrew's, Birmingham; Treasurer, Robert Morefield, St. Mary's, Birmingham.

The Conference of Colored Workers of the Diocese was held at Tuskegee Institute, June 16, the Rev. C. W. Brooks, principal of St. Mark's School, presiding. All the Colored clergy of the diocese were present and all congregations represented. Among those who spoke were Dr. R. R. Moton, Principal of Tuskegee Institute, and Bishop McDowell.

The Rev. Edgar vanWright Edwards, late of Graniteville, S. C., was instituted June 9, by Bishop McDowell as rector of Trinity Church, Atmore. Assisting in the service was the Rev. Joseph R. Walker, his predecessor. In the procession were the Protestant pastors of the city, one of whom made an address on behalf of the Christian congregations represented, quite in the spirit of the Lausanne Conference.

"The life which we are meant to lead under the dispensation of the Spirit who has been given for our guidance into Truth, is one which does not take us out of the world, but keeps us from its evil, enabling us to live a heavenly existence on earth, and so to span over the chasm which divides us from heaven."

For the Southern Churchman.

At His Love-Feast.

Edmund N. Joyner.

Sweet Saviour, too unworthy I
To taste Thy precious Flesh and Blood,
Yet thus alone to Thee I fly,
By Whom alone I'm understood.

Unfit am I to gather up
The crumbs which from Thy table fall;
And who could dare with Thee to sup,
But that Thy love constrains us all?

If Thy just eyes shouldst keenly mark
Within me all that fares amiss,
'Twould quench of hope the cherished spark
Of feasting in Thy realms of bliss.

Were I to challenge Thee, good Lord,
Of my poor heart to seek the ground,
While kneeling at this crucial Board—
I tremble at mine own harp's sound.

Yet must I sweep its vibrant strings,
Whatever psalmody proceeds,
Or such as trusting seraph sings,
Or such as truant sinner pleads.

And mine the last. When shall it end,
This thirsting on the river-brink!
Thou, Son of Man, the sinner's Friend,
At Thy heart's fountain let me drink:

Deep let me drink, till all my heart,
And soul, and body be imbued
And leavened with love, till every art
Of man and devil be subdued.

. . . . . .

Ah, if with willing hands and pure
I could reach out to take this bread,
And lips which will no guile endure
I could be on this chalice fed,

Then, Prince of Peace, such peace were mine
As earth's full cup can vainly give:
Lord, Light of Light, O through me shine,
No more in darkness here to live;

For some time mortal life must fail;
The deathless soul, unfleshed, shall rise,
And at the vision meanly quail,
Of Thy Redemption's vast emprise:

Or at Thy Feast its powers regale,
Spread in Thine utmost Paradise—
Where all Heaven's Company acclaim
The Love, O Lord, which is Thy Name.

The Thirst of the Spirit.

These long hot days of summer are the thirsty days of the year. And yet we perhaps know but seldom how intense that craving may become in some of the hot and dusty tropical lands, in countries such as Jesus lived in. It was something that was felt intensely by all. Every one knew the great satisfaction that came when the water-vender appeared on the street.

Jesus used this common need of every day to picture the joy and satisfaction of the soul that has come to know the blessedness of religious trust and communion. "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

"Complete fulfillment of the deepest needs of the soul comes to any man who makes the great adventure of living his life in the wonderful way of Jesus. Our Lord brings to us the wealth of the eternal and infinite God in such manner that His words of life and the living presence of the Spirit in our hearts, conveys to our receptive natures that eternal life which was with the Father before all worlds."

The simile of the "well" or "fountain of water, springing up within us unto everlasting life", is more complete than that of the cup of water. The gift of the Spirit is a blessing, ever renewed, ever fresh and wonderful. Some day this summer we may find ourselves beside some spring in the mountains. We are tired and thirsty from the long climb. And there is the little pool of water, ever coming fresh from the rocks, surrounded perhaps by ferns, the great trees sheltering it, a little brook flowing away down the woodland slope. Who cannot call to mind some such picture? Purity, refreshing coolness, satisfaction, beauty—all these, it typifies.

But all this Jesus declared would be given to the thirsting spirit if one would but turn to Him. "As the heart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God," wrote the ancient Psalmist. It is the never ending thirst of the soul, as true today as it was in the long ago. In Jesus alone can we find the final satisfaction, for our souls "can never rest until they rest in Thee". —Ozera Davis, in Zion's Herald.

Sixty Years For Christ.

A long life of consecration and service came to an end a few months ago, when Dr. Chauncey Goodrich died in Peking. Doctor Goodrich was in his ninetieth year, and he had, not long before his death, completed sixty years of missionary work in the service of the American Board of Foreign Missions in China. He was one of the two authors of the Chinese Hymnal, which all Chinese Christians use, and one of the five translators of the Bible into the Mandarin tongue, which Hu Shih, the leader of China's literary revelotion, declares to be the most powerful influence in the Renaissance movement that is awakening Chinese scholars and literary men to fresh and eager intellectual life.

Doctor Goodrich was buried beside his wife and many another devoted missionary worker, including the martyrs of the Boxer year, in the cemetery at T'ung Chou. One who was present writes to the Congregationalist of the impressive scene.

"As the group following the casket approached the cemetery, the sun sank in clear golden light behind the purple hills, and we heard the voices of young girls, clear and sweet, singing one of the hymns Doctor Goodrich translated. We found them standing on either side of the green aisle through which we passed to the open grave. Over all was the solemn mellow light from the western hills.

"Here the Chinese took charge of their beloved dead. Foreigners stood quiet while hymns and prayers and the single tribute were offered. A tall, grave man spoke his heart out, and, his voice failing him, he said, brokenly, 'It is fitting that I should weep at this place'. But he went on presently to glorify the Master who had become a living presence to him and to others in the personality of Doctor Goodrich.

"That broken Chinese voice had proclaimed this an hour of consecration for those who were gathered together in that place, and a time of holy triumph of one who might have said with Paul, 'For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain'. And it was also very full of the simple human fellowship which Doctor Goodrich loved. The young people from the schools were there as well as their elders. Old friends were there, and little Chinese children played about in the green gloom and called to each other in their high sweet voices, and no one forbade them. Village women were there and men burdened with heavy international responsibilities. They were all as one in grief and thanksgiving and praise."

It was a fitting end to a beautiful life.

The Born Boy.

By Gregor North.

Boys are funny animals. I say that because they are not conventional human beings. Their stomachs are insatiable, their cruelty instinctive, their inconsequence phenomenal. You never know what they will next "be at". Their natural impulse is to destroy, and if not that, to try out everything to the limit, and often beyond it. Communism runs in their blood. He holds that strength is given to coerce the weak. The younger he is the more he howls and stamps and rages when crossed. Like a monkey, he never stays in the same mood or posture long, and flies from hatred to friendliness in a minute. Achievement has nothing like the same zest as winning by rough and tumble. The fierce fight to secure gives value to the prize in his eyes. His energy is boundless and tireless as a steel spring. He is strong on monotony, repeating a phrase or a snatch of song to weariness when it tickles his fancy, yet, not even memory will keep it when the whim is past. Nevertheless his memory is the strongest faculty. However does he manage without conscious effort to lay it so to sleep although it is automatic? He will learn screeds of rhyme by mechanical, unthinking repetition. How does he forget? Let the psychoanalysts say. I can't.

He ferrets out, unaided, whatever he sees his elders try to cover up. Prohibition is to him like a red rag to a bull. No squirrel is more curious. He is the Arab of his neighborhood, with no desert for retreat. His secret conclusions hang on the most unexpected pegs of fact. He notes more things than a cat, and like the cat knows how to keep them to himself. Dirt fascinates him. He would rather wallow in a puddle than pass round it. Cleanliness is anathema—Mother Earth is his close friend. Things put out of reach are a challenge to be accepted. His birthday is to do what he likes, when, where and how he likes.

Clothes he tolerates as a convenience. Collars he abominates. Pockets he adores, in fact, the chief end of garments is that they are a vehicle for pockets. Their contents illuminate his standard of values. Only sentiment, hiding somewhere about him, can explain these. He always wants what another boy has, and prizes it only till he gets it. In its acquisition violence is preferred—failing that, "trading" is almost as pleasant. Strength is his idol, and next, agility. Domestic fires are tame compared to those of his own unlawful making. He delights to take down dignity, for it enrages him.

All qualities proper to the other sex seen in his own, are ridiculous monsters, and the "sissy" is to be stamped on at all costs. His elder sister is to be disobeyed, his younger despised. School is a vehicle only for the playtimes and competition outside, the first is often useful as a vent for the soreness bred of his failures in the second. Teachers are born enemies, to be circumvented always. Here his cunning has a hazardous field, disastrous often, but with its brief triumphs. He adores dog-fights most as pure delights of ragings, noises, scuffles, tearings and dust.

His ideal meal begins with pudding, cake and ice-cream—the rest are weak triflings. To beguile the affections of a puppy is the acme of peaceful penetration, and to scare a cat relishes next. He has his own ethics. Tale-telling is the cardinal sin. To refrain therefrom is not so much a subjective virtue, as an objective excellence ruthlessly enforced by public opinion. No nautical almanac provides more constant daily tidemarks than do his own neck, ears and wrists.

His legs and arms are a four-runged ladder to perilous pinnacles, whilst his feats with a pocket-knife and string would give wrinkles to Archimedes. He will put things to more undreamt uses, and in more unimagined positions than a Doctor of Science. Though he wheedles and disobeys his mother by turns, she is the provider for his appetite, his shield from penalties, his advocate in family trials, and his unfailing refuge in extremities. Se he loves her.

The Darkness and the Day.

Eternal God, who hast neither dawn nor evening, yet sendest us alternate mercies of the darkness and the day, there is no light but Thine, without or within. As Thou liftest the curtains of night from our abodes, take also the veil from our souls; quicken all our labor and our prayer; and, though all else declines, let the noontide of Thy grace and peace remain. May we walk, while it is yet day, in the steps of Him who, with fewest hours, finished Thy divinest work. Amen.—Hunter's "Devotional Services".

Let not unworthiness scare the children of God. Parents love their children and do them good, not because they see that they are more worthy than others, but because they are their own.—Archbishop Leighton.

For the Young Folks

A Little Song.

"When I run about all day,
When I kneel at night to pray,
God sees. God sees.

When I'm dreaming in the dark,
When I lie awake and hark,
God sees. God sees.

Need I ever know a fear?
Night and day my Father's near.
God sees. God sees."

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

Looking Unto Jesus.

M. L. G.

If two friends start together upon a long journey they have a right to feel that one of the pleasures of the trip will be their coming to know one another better with each day of companionship. Hardships will be shared, tasks will be done together, new beauties of road and sky will give joy to both. So if a young person takes the Master for his Companion he will expect that each day's walk with Him will bring more knowledge of the Best Friend; and also he will be glad to feel that that Friend in turn will give him new ways, as he is able to help Him in the task of bringing the world to Himself.

"When I was a child," says Paul, "I understood as a child." So little children understand Jesus. But with each year that understanding will grow, if the heart is only kept open to Him. The understanding of the need of the world, its sin, its suffering, will never press too hard upon us if we understand too His ability to save and to sustain. He is equal to the need! It is only when we turn away from Him that we feel hopeless.

And down to our last day on earth He will be with us. Not even death can hinder Him; He has been through all that, it is nothing to Him! But to us, if our work here has been done faithfully, it will be an entrance into new glory, and a closer fellowship with the Companion of our way.

The Garden That Made a Friend.

It was Friday afternoon. Nancy Jane sat with her grandmother on the east porch, looking very disconsolately at the bare garden-spot beside the house.

"It's the first year, grandmother, that we have not made a garden," she said at last.

"Yes, dear."

"And it will be too late to start one at our new home in Dallas when we move," she continued.

"I'm afraid so, child. One does get hungry to make a garden when these warm days come, doesn't one?"

Nancy Jane did not answer immediately, but looked again at the ground that should be all neat little beds and rows. It had been all plowed and broken, but yesterday when father came home he told them that he had traded for a home in the city. They would move as soon as Nancy Jane's school was out.

But Nancy Jane's hands fairly ached to be setting out onions and cabbages, to feel the warm earth as she made the straight little rows. She sat still and thought hard. After a while she said:

"Grandmother, when that woman moves here, don't you suppose she will miss her garden just like we will ours? And don't you suppose she would be glad to find a garden just ready to pick peas and carrots and the tomatoes and beans just ripe to start canning?"

"Well, now, don't you know she would?" responded grandmother heartily. Grandmother always understood so well.

"Grandmother, let's start one for her. We have the seed saved from last year and she could save us some more for next year."

"Bless your heart, little Nancy. Run, get the hoe and the rake while I find the seed. We'll make her the best she ever had."

Before long they were making the dirt fly. All afternoon and most of the morning and afternoon Saturday they were busier than that many bees, and happy, too. They chatted without stopping about how surprised and pleased the woman would be to find a ready-made garden and the nice things she would think and how she would be thankful every time she went to gather vegetables. It was really much more fun than planning for one's self. It left such a good feeling inside.

Sunday it rained, and before they knew it turnips and peas were just popping out of the ground. But just as they expected, the garden was only beginning to be ready when they had to move.

One day a great blue car drove up to the house and a man and woman got out. Then the man turned and lifted a little girl, just about the size of Nancy Jane, in his arms and carried her to the swing on the porch. She had long curls and such a lovely dress and would have been quite pretty had she not been pale and so very thin.

The mothers and fathers fell to talking and Nancy Jane crept timidly up to the little newcomer.

"Can't you walk at all?" she asked.

"Oh, yes, a little; but you see I have been sick for a long time. The doctor says I'll be well if I stay out of doors lots. I have done nothing for a long time but stay in the house and read."

"Don't you like to stay out of doors?"

"No, you can't do anything but ride and sit in parks, and I get tired of both."

Nancy Jane wondered if she could ever get tired of riding, but she said:

"Don't you like to feed the chicks or cut the flowers or help milk or work in the garden?"

"I might. I never did. We have always lived in the house with a lot of other people who never owned anything but cars."

"Can you walk around the porch? Grandmother and I have planted you a garden and it's all ready to eat, and we planted sweet peas clear around the fence."

Slowly the little girl, whose name was Catherine, moved around the porch while Nancy Jane found another chair for her.

"Did you do all that by yourselves?"

she asked, amazed.

"Yes. You see, grandmother and I make the garden every year and have the best times. Mamma buys our vegetables."

"And it's mine now?"

"Yes, we made it for the one who bought the house. Anyway, we could not take it with us if we wanted to."

"I'll send you part of it sometimes," the girl answered happily.

Snatching the scissors from the nail on the wall, she ran and cut a handful of sweet peas and tossed them into Catherine's lap.

"The doctor was right. I believe I am better already. I must hurry and get well so I can work the garden myself. Won't you come back and show me how?"

"I'd love to," replied Nancy Jane.

So it was that often during the summer Catherine's father would come early before the day grew warm and take Nancy to her old home. How the two little girls would work pulling the weeds and picking the beans and okra. Then they would play until the sun, going to rest, would remind them that Nancy Jane must go.

The roses came into Catherine's cheeks and she was now very pretty and Nancy Jane was proud of her, for she knew she had helped them to grow there.—Selected.

The Mexican Pack Mule Asks for Kindness.

The way I happened to write this story is because one day I carried the baggage of a man who was distributing Bibles for the American Bible Society. He was the first man to ever treat me with real kindness and I felt there must be something in those books he had which made people think of doing things for others.

It would not be correct to say that my home is in Mexico for a pack-mule has no home, but I live there. Where the Rocky Mountain range comes down along the coast of the Pacific Ocean there are high ridges and deep gorges over which the rails have not been laid and where the autos cannot go. Over the trails on these mountains I carry burdens.

It's a hard life, but they say hard work never hurt anybody and I don't suppose it hurts me. What hurts me is beating and rough treatment when I'm not to blame. I am sure that the man who wrote about the "joy of service" was not a Mexican pack-mule. Perhaps you don't know how it feels to get a breakfast of a few grains of corn instead of bacon and eggs and some barley straw instead of toast and hot chocolate, and then have trunks and baggage piled upon your back while the two men draw up the cinches. When one of them plants his foot against your side and begins to pull, it feels as if your lungs would never be filled with air again.

Then it seems to me that sometimes life consists of nothing but going up and up on a rough trail till you are all tired out. And then you have to go down and that is worse yet. Sometimes there is a steep place in the dry bed of a stream where it is very hard and slippery; and then you have loose rolling stones and gravel and then deep sand. If your driver is a man who doesn't care, he scolds when you stop. He doesn't seem to realize how it is to keep your footing. It is not pleasant either when the load is wide and one side of your pack hits the rock wall and the other hangs out over the cliff.

I suppose some of the people like the views along the way. Appreciation of fine scenery is not quite in my line; you have to be educated for such things and I guess my education has been neglected. Some of the men who go over the road for the first time seem to think the long rows of organ cactus used for fences are very interesting. But I never could see much in them nor in the line of men and their big hats. I have noticed down in the valley the goats that stand right straight up on their hind legs on the point of a rock and eat the few leaves that grow on the thorny bushes. What little I have, I can eat in some comfort and I am glad I'm not a mountain goat.

Myself and my companions are still carrying miners and merchants, book agents and missionaries over the mountain trails of Mexico. We all know that the railroads and Mr. Ford have lifted the burdens from the backs of a great many pack-mules but it has not made any difference to me. Nevertheless, I realize that labor-saving machinery is a fine thing for the world. But what interests me very much more is the plan that will make men treat me better. It is so much easier to work hard when you are well treated. And when men begin to treat me with kindness, I know they are kinder to each other.

That day I carried the baggage of the man who was distributing Bibles he went behind me with his camera. As I was being cinched up, even though I groaned a little, I said to myself: "Now in this picture which he is going to take of me with my heavy load, I shall have a chance to leave these trails and tell my story to some people in another land." I think the picture turned out pretty well. When you look at it, see how the man plants his foot against my side when he tightens the cinches.

But I never went over the trail with such a feeling of satisfaction as I did that day. Along in the afternoon, when we were coming to one of the hardest places, the Bible man said: "Seems to me that pack-mule has a very heavy load for this trail." I know a very little Spanish and less English, but I could tell by the tone of his voice that he had some feeling for me. There is nothing like a little real sympathy to make a load seem lighter.

Once I was told a story about a donkey who just up and told his rider "where to get off"; I like that story and I know it must be true, for I can tell what a man means by the very tones of his voice. And so, as I have said before, labor-saving machinery is a fine thing. Even if it doesn't help me, I can bray a grand hurrah for railroads, gasoline, electricity and aeroplanes.

But it is well to remember that while these may be used to lift and carry and help they can also be used to kill and to destroy. The more power men get, the more they need the Bible. The only safe and sure thing is to take the Bible over the whole world. And that, the man said, is what the American Bible Society is trying to do. For over half the world still lives in Bibleless huts or homes.

A Thrilling Adventure.

Emmie Tyler.

One bright Sunday afternoon a group of small girls and boys who had gathered at the country home of little Brenda Morris started out for a walk.

"Oh! Let's go and see how your new house looks, Brenda!" said Carrie.

"Oh! yes! That will be dandy!" exclaimed all at once.

So they walked quickly and brightly on and soon reached the building, which was situated in a lovely woodland about one-half mile away. All now scattered around in different directions, closely examining everything about the place soon to be Brenda's new home, the boys cramming their pockets with nails, pieces of tin and other things left over by the workmen, one after another exclaiming:

"Oh! boy! Just look what I've found!"

After awhile all came together again and went into a small linen closet which had no window and had been freshly plastered.

"Let's see how dark it will be in here," said Bobbie, suddenly closing the door.

"Oh! there's no knob on the inside of this door!" screamed Nellie, "and maybe we'll all die in a few minutes, because there's not one breath of air in here."

Although they knew there was no one on the outside near enough to hear their cries, they all began screaming, yelling and kicking against the door as if they were crazy.

"Let's stop and ask God to help us," said Brenda at last.

Instantly the cries were hushed, the children fell on their knees and clasped their hands in a prayer for help.

"If we can find a nail maybe we can open the door with that," said Johnnie then. "I've got some in my pocket, but they're stuck together with a ball of putty."

"Hush!" cried Susie, "I hear somebody walking up the steps."

Now the screaming began again and the boys kicked loudly on the door.

"For the love of Mike, what does this mean? What are you children doing fastened up in this closet?" said a strong voice as the door opened wide, for Brenda's father had also walked over to see how the new house was getting on.

Brenda burst into tears as she tried to tell her father the story, for the strain had been almost too great for the little girl, but the other children rushed pell-mell out of the house with a shout of joy as they started off for different homes.

"Atta boy!" cried Bobbie; "you bet I'm never goin' to shut another door till I see if there's a knob on the inside."

A Lovely Sunday School.

Taro and Ume went to school every day. Saturday they did not have their work but played games. When Sunday came, their Mother said, "Will you go to school today"? Taro said, "Not this morning, but in the afternoon we will go and we must be very clean, Honorable Mother, for this is Sunday".

"What is Sunday?" asked the mother.

"Oh, it is the great day of the Christians when their God has them worship Him.

"But you must go and worship your god," said the Grandfather who had come to see them.

"Teacher says there is only one God, Honorable Grandfather," said Taro; we cannot see Him but He sees us and He made all the world and He is Love."

"No, no," said the grandfather, "you must go and pray in the temple to Buddha."

Their Mother said, "Obey your Grandfather and then you may go to school this afternoon."

So they started. Each had a Japanese penny and they walked a long way to the temple. It was in a pretty garden and there were many, many people going up to the big wooden idol and putting their money in the priests' box. Mothers with sick babies went to one of the idols and rubbed its face. They thought it would cure the babies. Ume did not like the idol and did not want to touch its dirty face or hands. Taro thought it was silly. They were glad when Grandfather had bowed to the idol and given his money. Then they went home to dinner. In the afternoon their father said, "Would you like to go to the Park"?

"Oh, no, thank you, Honorable Father," they said, "we are going to the school. Please come, too." So Father and Mother went with the little baby on her back and Grandfather all went to the Sunday School. They were surprised to see the pretty school room in the Starlight Kindergarten and were so pleased with the obedient children who sang so nicely. When they went home, Taro and Ume said, "We can have a Sunday School here in our garden". Taro said, "I will be teacher", and Ume said, "I will teach singing". So they had Father and Mother and Grandfather and Grandmother sit on a mat and the children taught them the verses and the song. It was a lovely Sunday School and Father and Mother were surprised to see how much the children had learned and how well they behaved.—Lucy W. Peabody.

Little Ted.

The sun was shining brightly one early spring morning, and little Ted sat on the front doorstep pondering. His elbow rested on his knees and his chubby face rested in his hands. Ted was thinking; and as he sat there keeping time with his little foot he was softly singing a kindergarten song.

It was Saturday, and, much to Ted's dislike, there was no school, and the little boy did not know what to do with himself.

"I wish there was kindergarten every day," sighed Ted, and he longingly thought of dear Miss Alice and little Hazel and John and Paul, and of the pretty pink mat he was weaving; and then the song came again to his lips and he sang right merrily and sweetly:

"I'm small, I know, but wherever I go
The fields grow greener still."

"That was such a pretty story that Miss Alice told us about the little stream," thought Ted; "how the little stream went singing on its way as happy as could be, watering the grass and the flowers on the banks, and the roots of the big trees, and the cows and sheep and the birds, and then there was the little boy who came after the cows—it was such a nice story!"

Pretty soon Ted was aroused from his reverie by hearing the milkman ring his bell. Ted ran down the steps and up to the wagon in a moment.

"Well, Ted," said Thomas, the driver, "you have come in good time. My leg is so lame with rheumatism that I cannot get out of the wagon this morning. Will you carry the milk in to Maggie?"

"Yes, sir!" said Ted, glad of something to do; and he carried the milk very carefully to the kitchen door, where Maggie met him with a pitcher in her hand.

"Thomas is lame with rheumatism," said Ted, "and can't come in."

Maggie gave him a cookie which she had just taken from the oven, and off he went again as happy as a bird. He felt as if he had wings. He ran out to the gate and swung there for some time, the song again jingling in his mind:

"I'm small, I know, but wherever I go
The fields grow greener still."

Very soon he saw his little friend, Kitty Culpins, coming down the walk, wheeling her baby brother. As she went to cross the street the curbstone was too high and she was not strong enough to get the carriage over. She pushed and she pulled, but it was of no use. Ted watched her for some time and then a happy thought popped into his little brown head. He ran to Kitty, and pulled while she pushed, and they got the carriage safely over. They walked up and down in the bright sunshine for a long time, and then Kitty went home and Ted went to his favorite place on the front steps.

"Sing, singing all the day," sang Ted, as he took some marbles from his pocket and counted them over.

He heard a strange noise on the sidewalk, and looking up, he saw an old blind man, who was very much frightened at a wagon which had passed quite close to him as he was crossing the street. The blind man had lost his way and was tapping with his cane upon the sidewalk, to find out where he was.

Ted ran down to see what was the matter, and the poor old man told him that he had lost his way. He wanted to go to North Street, and so Ted took hold of his hand and turned him gently around, and the old man thanked him kindly.

Just then the dinner bell rang, and Ted ran in with a light heart.

His papa said, "Well, Ted, what have you been doing today"?

"Oh, having such fun!" said Ted.—A Year of Primary Programs.

My Little Dog Bo.

My little dog Bo is so wonderful-wise
He can't read or write—he does not know a word
But he talks with his tail and his ears and eyes
As nicely as any one you ever heard!
You couldn't—I couldn't—but Bo does!

My dad and my dog and myself, yesterday,
All dressed in our best for a nice outing went!
It made me so proud when the ladies would say
"Oh, isn't he sweet!" for I knew whom they meant!
Dad wasn't—I wasn't—but Bo was!

Deaths

MRS. L. R. COMBS.

After eight years of invalidism, ever patiently borne, MARY RICE JACOBS, wife of Rev. L. R. Combs, rector of Christ Church Parish, Lancaster County, Va., fell on sleep at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, June 5, 1927.

Mrs. Combs was born in the "Carlyle House", in Alexandria, Va., February 19, 1860. She was the daughter of Rev. William Fenton Mercer Jacobs and his wife, Sarah B. Green, and great-granddaughter of Rev. Jared Rice, of the Diocese of Maryland. On her father's side she was descended from Henry Corbin, who settled in Middlesex County in Colonial days; and from Sir Oliver Cromwell. On her mother's side from the Langs and Muirs, of Rowallen, near Kilmarnock, in the Parish of Beith, Scotland, and from William Green, of Sheffield, England.

Rev. William Fenton Mercer Jacobs, her father, served his diaconate in old St. Peters, Baltimore, Md.; thence he went to Harpers Ferry, from there to St. John's, Hampton, which was burned during his rectorship, he losing all he had, including his library. He then went to St. John's, Charleston, W. Va., where after a few years he died.

The funeral service was held in St. Mary's Whitechapel Church Monday afternoon by the Rev. F. D. Goodwin, of Warsaw, and as the sun was sinking in the west her body was lovingly borne to its last resting place by her son-in-law and grandson, the vestry acting as honorary pallbearers.

Rest comes at length though life be long and dreary;
The day must dawn, and darksome night be past;
Faith's journeys end in welcome to the weary;
And heaven, the heart's true home, will come at last.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Charles Clingman, rector of the Church of the Advent, Birmingham, Alabama, sailed for Europe June 17 on the Conte Rosso, with Mrs. Clingman, and their son, Robert. He will be at the opening of the Lausanne Conference. He expects to return September 10. The Rev. Edgar R. Neff will be in charge of his parish during the summer.

The Rev. E. L. Aldworth has resigned as assistant minister of the Church of the Messiah, Detroit, to become rector of St. Peter's, Hillsdale, Mich. The change took place June 15.

The Rev. Robert James Belt, formerly of Clairton, Pa., has been in charge for several months of St. James' Church, Mansfield; St. Luke's, Blossburg, and Christ Church, Arnot, Pa.

The Rev. Thomas G. Mundy, rector of St. John's Church, Albany, Alabama, has resigned to accept a call to St. Mark's Church, Troy, Alabama, effective September 1.

The Rev. Rowland K. Gimson, who has been serving successfully as missionary-in-charge of the Church of the Transfiguration, Blue Ridge Summit; Calvary Church, Beartown, and St. Mary's, Waynesboro, Diocese of Harrisburg, has been appointed City Missioner of the City of Newark, N. J., by Bishop Lines and Bishop Stearly, and has accepted the position, to take effect August 1.

The Rev. T. B. A. Allan, of Sherwood Parish, Cockeysville, Md., has resigned, his resignation to take place the first of August, to go to the Diocese of Albany.

The Rev. Stuart F. Gast, recently ordained to the diaconate, has been appointed by Bishop Darlington to assume charge of St. Luke's Church, Mechanicsburg, Pa. He will also minister to the newly-started work in the Chapel of St. Chrysostom, New Market; St. James, Enola, and St. Gerald's, Harrisburg.

The Rev. Murray Dewart, rector of Christ Church, Baltimore, is in Panama on a six-month leave of absence. Sunday preachers during his absence have included a number of the members of the faculty of the Virginia Theological Seminary. For the summer the Rev. O. W. Zeigler will be in charge.

The Rev. John Oliphant has left Kulpmont, Pa., and should now be addressed at Trinity Rectory, Orbisonia, Pa.

The Rev. George D. Ashley, formerly of City Island, New York, has become rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Greensport, L. I.

The Rev. Alexander P. Pflaum, who has just recovered from an operation in a Philadelphia Hospital, has returned to St. Andrew's Church, Harrisburg, Pa., and is now taking full services.

The Rev. R. E. Randall has resigned as rector of St. Mark's, Marine City, Michigan, to undertake evangelistic work in England. The change became effective June 15.

The Rev. Gilbert Apelhof, recently ordered Deacon by Bishop Brown for Bishop Page, after completing his course at the Virginia Theological Seminary, has been appointed missionary-in-charge of St. Luke's, Ferndale, Michigan.

The Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, D. C., and Mrs. Tucker, have left for a two months' trip in Europe and expect to return to the parish September 1.

Mr. Albert Holloway, a student of the Philadelphia Divinity School, has charge of Holy Apostles' Church, St. Clair, Pa., until the newly-appointed rector arrives August 1.

The Rev. John Hall Griffith is assisting the Rev. Mr. Littebrandt, of St. Stephen's Church, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., during the month of July, Dr. Flinchbaugh, the rector, having sailed for Europe.

The Rev. Z. B. Phillips, D. D., rector of Epiphany Church, has gone with his family to Cape Cod, where he always spends his vacation period.

ORDINATIONS.

On Wednesday, June 15, in Emmanuel Church, Kempsville, Va., the Rev. Richard Henry Lee, Deacon, was advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Conover Thomson, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Southern Virginia. The Rev. George S. Gresham, rector of the Church of the Advent, Ocean View, and of Emmanuel, Cradock, preached the sermon. The litany was read by the Rev. Thomas L. Ridout, rector of Galilee Church, Virginia Beach. The epistle was read by the Rev. Norman E. Taylor, and the gospel by the Rev. Wm. El Callender. The candidate was presented by his brother, the Rev. J. Keith M. Lee, rector of St. Paul's, Newport News, who also assisted the Bishop in the celebration of the Holy Communion. The Rev. Richard H. Lee will remain in charge of Emmanuel and Old Donation Churches, Lynnhaven Parish, with residence at Kempsville, Va.

On Friday, June 10, in St. John's Church, Roanoke, Virginia, the Rev. John Simmons Wellford was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia.

The Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, of St. John's, Wytheville, preached the sermon, and the Rev. Dr. Churchill J. Gibson, of R. E. Lee Memorial, Lexington, presented the candidate for ordination. The Rev. J. Manly Cobb, of Christ Church, Blacksburg, said the litany. The Rev. Roland J. Moncure, of St. Paul's, Salem, read the epistle. The Rev. G. Otis Mead, of Christ Church, Roanoke, read the gospel and said the Creed, and all of these clergymen participated with the Bishop in the laying on of hands.

Bishop Jett celebrated the Holy Communion, being assisted by the newly-ordained priest.

Immediately upon his ordination to the diaconate on June 8, 1926, the Rev. Mr. Wellford was placed in charge of All Saints' Church, Lloyd Parish, Norton, Virginia, and has served there successfully. He has now accepted a call to the rectorship of that parish.

On the day of his ordination to the diaconate he was united in marriage to Miss Harriett Penn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Conway Penn, of Roanoke.

On Trinity Sunday, the Rev. Elliott C. B. Darlington was advanced to the priesthood by his father, the Rt. Rev. James Henry Darlington, Ph. D., D. D., Bishop of Harrisburg, in St. Stephen's Church, Harrisburg. The litany was read by the Ven. William Dorwart, Archdeacon of Harrisburg. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Leroy F. Baker. The epistle was read by the Rev. William Heakes, and the gospel by the Rev. Elliott C. B. Darlington. The ordination sermon was preached by the Rev. Oscar F. R. Treder, D. D., rector of St. Stephen's, Harrisburg. Other clergymen who participated in the service were the Rev. Alexander McMillan and the Rev. O. H. Bridgman.

Mr. Darlington is the Bishop's younger son, and all three of Bishop Darlington's sons have now been ordained to the priesthood. Before seeking Holy Orders, Mr. Darlington was a practicing lawyer in New York City.

REMOVAL FROM THE MINISTRY.

The Reverend Maximilian Pinkert, a Presbyter of the Diocese of New York, having declared in writing his renunciation of the Ministry of this Church and his desire to be removed therefrom, Bishop William T. Manning, Bishop of New York, in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, on May 14, pronounced and declared that "such renunciation is accepted, and that the said Maximilian Pinkert is hereby released from the obligations of the Ministerial Office, and that he is deprived of the gifts and spiritual authority as a minister of God's Word and Sacraments conferred on him in his ordination; this action being taken for causes not affecting his moral character".

DEATHS.

The Rev. Julius William Bleker, nonparochial priest of the Diocese of Florida, with residence at Jacksonville, died while swimming at Mandarin, Fla., aged sixty-five years.

Funeral services were held at Opelousas, La., Saturday, May 21, the Rev. Walter Lennie-Smith officiating.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES"

The Revelation of the Bible is Complete :: Its Doctrines Immutable :: Its Truth is Invincible :: And its Authority is Absolute :: :: ::

THERE'S A MEAN STREAK IN THE MAN WHO ROBS OTHERS OF THEIR FAITH

Picture four small girls in the shade of a tree playing with dolls. They have a wee table and cakes and wee dishes. Enter a boy who scorns dolls. He kicks over the table, scatters the cakes, and laughs. There are such boys, as you know.

Now consider another matter.

There are in America millions of people to whom religion is vital and sacred. Their faith was absorbed from the environment of their childhood.

> Belief in a Father who is just and wise and merciful gives them comfort and peace and a sense of security, and as they grow older it takes away some of the terror of death.
> Among these believers are many humble and simple folk, unlettered, unfit, doomed to live in poverty and obscurity. They have little understanding of great matters; faith is the staff on which they lean.

Now suppose, if you will, that their religion is non-sense; that the universe just happened; that natural laws invented themselves and keep on working under their own motive power; that there is no God, no heaven, no life hereafter.

These millions, then, are mistaken; but still the fact remains that their faith enriches their lives, takes away some of the sting of poverty, and comforts them in their time of sorrowing.

> What, then, of smart men—schooled men of wide understanding—men who have culture and high place and money, who ridicule religion and try to take away the faith that is the crutch of the humble?

They have nothing at all to gain; their destructiveness is wholly wanton. What is the motive that actuates them?

The proselyting atheist has a right to proclaim his unbelief, as the believer has a right to teach his faith; but legal rights do not comprise the whole of good sportsmanship.

If the scornful unbeliever is in all ways superior to the humble one who worships God, does not the very fact of his superiority require him to be generous? Is there no more of noblesse oblige? A theft that makes you no richer and yet leaves the other man impoverished of his greatest treasure seems a petty and ill-mannered business, to say the least—Quillen, in Richmond (Va.) News-Leader.

For the Southern Churchman.

Resignation.

Helen R. Stetson.

Does God send sickness? Yes, I think
He does,
For what a joy it can be after all!
Though we rebel and think we are abused
And it does hurt when pride must have its fall.

Rest in the wilderness a little while,
Leave all your mad activities behind,
Forget the plans you made, and with a smile
Realize that all is well and God is kind.

Just be yourself, and let your mind and soul
Stretch and expand their weary crippled wings
Bruised and restricted in the daily rush
Of what we think the most important things.

So let us not complain when trials come,
But bear them bravely, welcoming release
From active service, and a time to rest
That brings to weary spirits joy and peace.

The climax of Christian character does not consist in marvelous illuminations and gifts, nor simply in resignation to God's will, but in an experience that no matter what may come exercises all patience and long-suffering, with joy. Patience at home, with neighbors, with fellow-workers, when misunderstood, when opposed, when neglected, when suffering, in absence of feeling—joyfully patient, always and everywhere!—M. W. Knapp.

To A Dead Child.

Lillian S. Keech.

Although I saw you laid in beauty cold,
Like a young sapling smitten by the storm.
Yet do I know you live, yet do I hold
The memory of your kisses on my brow.
What purpose you did serve by such quick flight,
What sudden need in heaven you must fill now—
I can not know. It seems that I possessed you
Like a jewel, lent a day or two
To me, which I must now return to God.
So short a span is life, so long is heaven,
So infinite and wise the ways of God.
I can not fathom them—You'll tell me all
The why and wherefore of your sudden going,
When through the deepening shades I hear you call.
When o'er the stream you'll reach your hand and call.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

It may be that all our weeping has its part in the oratorio of the universe.

Every day we are becoming more like our thoughts.—Robert E. Speer.

The bond of promise is never seen while we are looking down.

Spiritual things are all mystery, where the Spirit has not the mastery.

In every man there is something wherein I may learn of him; and in that I am his pupil.—Emerson.

The thing that wasn't done when the time came is never quite compensated by the thing done later to make up for it.—Continent.

"Oh, that the Comforter would come!
Nor visit as a transient guest,
But fix in me His constant home
And keep possession of my breast:
And make my soul His loved abode,
The temple of the indwelling God."

The climax of Christian character does not consist in marvelous illuminations and gifts, nor simply in resignation to God's will, but in an experience that no matter what may come exercises all patience and long-suffering, with joy. Patience at home, with neighbors, with fellow-workers, when misunderstood, when opposed, when neglected, when suffering, in absence of feeling—joyfully patient, always and everywhere!—M. W. Knapp.

"Consequences!" This is the devil's argument. Leave consequences to God; but do right. Be genuine, sincere, true, upright, Godlike. If friends fail thee, do the right. If foemen surround thee, do the right. The world's maxim is, Trim your sails and yield to circumstances. But if you would do any good in your generation, you must be made of sterner stuff and help make your times rather than be made by them.—Dr. Thomas Guthrie.

"Lives are like money in that their chief function is to be spent. The great matter is not whether we live or die, but what we accomplish by living or by dying. Three hundred dollars represents a vast expenditure of human labor. So regarded it is in a way a consecrated object. One might call it a vast expenditure of human life. It would be well if we thought more of money in terms of human life and not so much of human life in terms of money."

How hardly man this lesson learns,
To smile, and bless the hand that spurns;
To see the blow, to feel the pain,
But render only love again!
This spirit not to earth is given—
One had it, but He came from heaven,
Reviled, rejected, and betrayed
No curse He breathed, no plaint He made,
Bue when in death's deep pang He sighed
Prayed for His murderers and died.

Anon.

A DIRGE FOR THE SOUTHERN CHURCHMAN

In a short chapter of lamentations the New York Churchman of June 4 bemoans the relapse, or retrogression, of The Southern Churchman to the simplicities and the fundamental principles and creeds of the Christian religion and the Protestant Episcopal Church. It dismisses our quotation of the statement on Biblical inspiration by Bishop McIlvaine with the polite sneer that it was written ninety-five years ago.

Our brother of The Churchman neglects to instruct us on the limits of time within which we may, with propriety and in harmony with standards of modernism and advanced Churchmanship, cite and accept authorities. Luther, for instance, wrote some four hundred years ago. If we should undertake to quote him we might be informed of the time of his activities with another polite sneer, perhaps with the veiled suggestion that Luther was a misfortune and mistake. He was a fundamentalist, essentially and consistent. St. Paul wrote and preached more than eighteen centuries, ago and Moses, to whom we are referred in the sixteenth chapter of St. Luke's Gospel as likely to be a competent instructor and guide, was centuries before Paul. If we may not follow Bishop McIlvaine, because he wrote ninety-five years ago, how much greater must be our offense against liberal theology if we follow in any respect Luther, Paul and Moses!

Yet, in this part of the country, and elsewhere, some people can look back on good, simple grandparents of Bishop McIlvaine's time who believed devoutly in his teachings and in those of Luther, Paul and Moses also and were regarded as faithful Christians and loyal Episcopalians, were useful in the world and whom we are very sure are in Heaven, if the modernists will forgive us for firm conviction that there is such a place.

Humiliated and depressed as The Southern Churchman may be by its inability to absorb the new light from the effulgent intellects of progress, it cannot consent to have its range of authorities to be reverenced and doctrine to be obeyed limited to the sixty-eight years since publication of the "Origin of Species". We must reserve the right to think and seek somewhat further back. Venturing even further in rashness and retrogression, we confess that if forced to choose between the fundamentalism of the Tennessee mountains and the progressiveness of Mr. Darrow and the Association for the Advancement of Atheism, we shall prefer the former. Narrow and crude as it may be, it gives us a definite God to worship, a Heaven for which we may hope, a clear code of conduct and distinct reasons for trying to be and do good.

We have no fear, however, of being forced to such choice. These maladies and epidemics of too loose or too rigid constructions of the Holy Scriptures and of wavering and confused faith have afflicted the Church from time to time, almost periodically. Something more than a century ago the Church, first planted on this continent in Virginia, seemed dead here and was revived by plain, simple, loving people holding to a plain, simple, loving Gospel. Always when strange doctrines or lowered standards have tested the vitality and sapped the strength of the Church she has retained a remnant of those powerful in the simplicity, clearness and directness of their faith and through them and the blessing of God has survived and risen, purified and triumphant. In her coming renewed and increasing strength, purification and triumph, we shall hope to have our brother of the New York Churchman rejoice with us that the most brilliantly supported and plausible error could not prevail against plain truth and faith living in unsullied hearts.

Sir William M. Ramsay, that eminent authority on archaeology, in a letter to the National Union for Bible Testimony, in connection with a meeting at Albert Hall, London, wrote: "The longer I study the New Testament, the more convinced I become of its absolute trustworthiness; and also of the care and the faithful study which ought to be given to the reading of it. The books of which it is composed are so wonderfully true to the surroundings and the life and spirit of the time. We who live far away in a different age, accustomed to a different spirit and different way of looking at life, thinking and speaking of the world different, find it hard to realize the full meaning of the words. The disciples who had been with Jesus often perceived in later life that they had not rightly understood what He said to them; yet they learned from those words the way of life. . . .

"The Christian religion is not founded on a falsehood, nor on a misapprehension of facts, nor on legend, nor on half-forgotten and exaggerated tales. . . . Christianity is the religion of truth; it is founded on truth, absolute and perfect truth."

LANGBOURNE M. WILLIAMS.

ENDORSING BISHOP MANNING

The Southern Churchman heartily endorses Bishop Manning's strong, outspoken denunciation of the utterances of the Rev. Mr. Lewis at the Church Congress relative to sex matters. This is not some new problem to be faced—we have been facing it for six thousand years. Some years ago, when eugenics was being agitated, dear old Bishop Randolph in his original and witty way said something to the effect that they might as well pass a resolution in Council endorsing the Ten Commandments. It is an old problem and the old gospel is the one sovereign remedy. Our attitude on the whole matter can be given in the words of Scripture. Ephe. 5:3 says, "But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you as becometh saints". "Now the works of the flesh are manifest which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness," etc., Gal. 5:19. Then see 1 Cor. 6:9, 10,

"Fornicators . . . shall not inherit the kingdom of God". Companionate marriage is fornication. God has spoken. It is a work of the flesh. And we are told that they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. God says, "Make no provision for the flesh". But some of these modern ministers are seeking to do that very thing—to hold the young people, forsooth! Hold them for what? Our preaching is lacking in not showing them the way to victory. God has made provision for this problem. "Walk by the Spirit and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh." Preach the gospel. Preach holiness "without which no man shall see the Lord". We say it in sorrow, but in loving warning to the flock and without any personal animus that there are wolves in sheep's clothing to be found in the ministry. Thank God we believe them to be few. But it behooves us to be watchful. Test everything by the Word of God. Remember what St. Paul says in 1 Cor. 11:13-15, "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great surprise if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works."

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN

By I. H. Nakdimen

Of Fort Smith, Ark.

It is my privilege to have the opportunity to appear before you and give you a lesson.

I was invited to make a talk but I have changed my mind. Instead of making a talk, I thought I would give you a lesson.

To my mind, there is a distinction between a talk and a lesson. You can always accomplish something out of a lesson.

You may not absorb, you may not inhale and you may not inherit all the lessons that you have received, but I feel safe that there is something about each lesson that you have received that is still fresh in your memory.

A talk the way I see it consists of jokes, stories—it doesn't matter what is said—anything to make you laugh and feel good.

A lesson is a teaching, teaching to do better, teaching to do different and to do something that will uplift you, raise you to a higher standard either in profession or in making money.

In profession when the professor gives you a lesson either on law or medicine, journalism or any other specific occupation, he gives you something that will be helpful to your profession.

The preacher in the pulpit does not make a talk. He gives you a lesson on the Bible which is a wonderful lesson.

Now my intention is to give you a lesson on business in a general way and how to make yourself just as big, just as powerful as you want to be.

Each and every one of you are striving for something bigger, something higher.

There is no doubt in my mind you all have an ambition to rise and make a success.

Some may have in mind in a professional way. Some may have in mind in a business way.

Each and every one of us have a hobby for something.

Now the question is, how are we going to accomplish our purpose?

Now bear in mind the man who has made a success in any line named above or any other line hasn't made it by staying out late at nights, getting up late in the morning, spending his money as fast as he makes it, spending more than he has made, being in debt, going often to dances or picture shows, riding around in automobiles; indifferent if he does or don't.

The man who has made a success not only as a doctor, a lawyer, a merchant, a manufacturer, a banker, or even the man in politics has made it through getting up early in the morning, working late at night, staying out of picture shows, staying away from dances, keeping from spending, saving penny by penny, going to church Sundays and listening to the lessons given by the good men in the pulpit, not riding around in automobiles, not buying big boxes of candy, not having a fickle mind to change girls every time he sees a new one, hasn't got foolishness in his mind, but his mind is upon one thing and that is how can I make a success.

Saving is the fundamental principle of success.

Saving is the fundamental principle of thoughtfulness.

We can all make a success if we just think and there is nothing that will cause you to think more than when you save.

Did any one of you ever test your will power? Do you know how to test it?

Testing your will power is a wonderful help to a man's success.

How would you test your will power?

The way I test my will power. Say I am in the habit of smoking and sometimes I will take a cigar out of my mouth and throw it down and say I will quit for ten days and see if I have the will power to quit smoking for ten days.

Anything you are in the habit of doing, anything you crave to do, say to yourself now I am going to cut it out for a day or a week or a month.

Say you are in the habit of drinking a certain drink—say a coca-cola, or too many ice creams or in the habit of eating too much candy or in the habit of doing any luxury that you feel you can't get along without, say to yourself you are going to quite for ten days, or thirty days, and see if you can't get along without it.

Suppose you get angry at a fellow and when one gets angry at the other, they are full of bitterness, full of malice, prejudice, hate and ready and willing to take revenge.

Now when you are confronted and placed in such a position which humanity is subject to, then is your time to say to yourself—No—I am not going to do it.

Now if you can train yourself to possess the power and not do what you want to do, either through malice or through prejudice or through hatefulness, when you have the power not to do what you want to do during the time when your mind is confused and your heart is clogged with bad blood, then you are the man who has the will power to control yourself and guide yourself to success.

Then you become the man of the hour.

Then you become a man of success and loved by everybody.

But the boy who spends his money freely, stays out late at nights, sleeps late in mornings, indifferent about his position, indifferent about his success, indifferent if he saves or don't save, indifferent about testing his will power, he is the man that must face the struggle.

Now, young man, you have the opportunity of your life. You have a greater opportunity than I had when I was a boy.

Fifty-odd years ago, the opportunity for a young man was nothing like it is now.

In the first place, the young man of fifty-odd years ago lacked education. They didn't have the opportunities of getting an education like you have.

I realize that the present young generation are confronted with more temptations than the young men of fifty years ago.

Fifty years ago, there were no picture shows. There were no automobiles. There were no short sleeves and low necks and short dresses to the knees with painted cheeks and rosy lips and other temptations that the young man is now confronted with, which in order to make a success he must fight.

I appreciate what the young man of today has to contend with in order to make a success.

I also appreciate why the young man of fifty years ago was compelled to make a success, because they were not surrounded with the temptations like they are now.

They were not surrounded with the luxuries like they are surrounded now.

All they were surrounded with was hard work and to make a living; not only to make a living for themselves, but the supposition is they had to make a living for their father, mother, little brothers and sisters where now some of the fathers and mothers are not only struggling for a living for themselves, but they are depriving themselves in order to keep their sons and daughters in luxuries, giving them the best education there is, sending them to the best schools and clothing them with the best there is.

That is what makes a lot of difference in the success of the fifty-year-ago generation and the present generation.

With all of this, don't forget that we have today thousands upon thousands of young men who are supporting their mothers and fathers and still go to school and go to college, working their way through without luxuries, shining shoes for their companions, cleaning clothes for their companions in school, in order to pay their way through; and in time make a success.

That shows the possibilities for a young man's success today are just as much as they used to be. It is entirely, as I said, with the young man.

The Meat of Success.

Now, young man, I could speak to you for a day, but I want to give you the meat of success.

The meat of success is thoughtfulness. When you want to strike, think and say I am not going to strike.

When you are so eager to do something, it doesn't matter how bad you want to do it, say—I am not going to do it. I am going to test my will power.

Testing your will power and saving is the greatest power that you can educate yourself to do.

I don't mean when I say save is to go and deposit money in a bank. No—that is only a small part when I say save.

Save your clothes from wearing them out unnecessarily; save your shoes from wearing them out unnecessarily.

Don't be extravagant.

Don't be wasteful.

Be careful so you don't waste. That is what I mean by saving.

Even when you take a drink of water, take enough for whatever you use and not take a glass of water and only drink a half and throw the other half out.

Lots of boys will take a cigarette and light it and take a few puffs and throw it away.

That is waste.

I am only giving you a few of these illustrations.

To show you what will power will do, I know of a lady in Fort Smith (I don't mind to give you her name if any one desires to know it).

Two years ago her husband died. Left her with five children and $2,000 in debt.

During the two years she has supported the five children, maintained herself decently and paid out of debt.

Now think of it—a woman with five children. Her husband left her without a dollar and a mortgage upon the little home and in addition to the mortgage on the home 2,000 scattered debts and in less than two years she has paid out of debt and reduced the indebtedness on her little home.

Now when a woman with five children can do it, why can't a young man do it?

Honesty is the first lesson for success.

Loyalty.
Saving,
Thoughtfulness,
and Hard Work.

The world is seeking and looking for young men of the character outlined.

The opportunities are greater for young men now than ever before.

Who are the most successful men of our country today?

The man who has toiled by day labor.

Through his honesty, through his loyalty, through his saving, through his thoughtfulness, through his hard work, it has made him successful and made him powerful in his profession.

Now, young men, you have the opportunity before you.

If you don't take advantage of the opportunity, don't blame any one but yourself.

No one, neither your father nor mother who is the closest to you, can do as much for you as you can do for yourself.

It is entirely in your power. It is entirely in your hands. Young men, it is up to you.

Everybody loves to see a young man prosper. Everybody loves to see a young man energetic and everybody loves to see a young man make a success.

The public admires a young man when he is energetic and makes a success, but the public does not favor a boy or a man especially who is able and capable for not taking the advantages that stand before them.

The world loves success. The world hates a failure. So now, young men, I hope my lesson will have some effect upon you.

I hope it will soak into your bosom and soak into your mind and soak into your system to the extent where you will take advantage of the lesson of success.

Make a copy of this, give it to each one of the young men—not only to your members but to outsiders. Let them study it. It is not only good for young men but the same could be applied to older ones as well.

BROOK SAYERS

By The Rev. J. de Hart Bruen

Brook Sayers was a little man. He was born in a log cabin at the edge of a mountain at Summit, N. J. His father was dead; his mother died shortly after I made their acquaintance. Brook Sayers had been brought up without religion, but his conversion was very complete. He united with the church and went zealously to work. After his mother's death he lived quite alone in an old, unpainted farm-house. His barn corresponded with the house, and was kept from falling by being propped with several logs.

Brook did his own washing and repaired his own clothes. They looked as if he had made them himself, and the repairs, varied in color, made a grotesque appearance. He worked his little farm with dilapidated farm machinery and an old horse.

One day the agent of the American Tract Society called upon me and asked who had been contributing $100 a year to the Society. I said promptly, "No one", and then revised my answer and suggested a wealthy citizen living some distance out of town. The agent of the Tract Society started cheerfully to collect his hundred dollars. He reached the house and was graciously received by the cultured lady who owned the splendid home. The house had just been built at a cost of over $85,000. The appearance of the house assured the agent, and he presented the cause of the Tract Society. The lady, however, said she was not interested in that work and regretted that he had taken the long walk, for she had never contributed to it. She, however, gave him a dollar.

On his way back he passed over the old farm where Brooks lived and happened to come face to face with him. He recognized the person who had brought in the hundred dollars, supposed to be a farm hand, and said, "Are you not the man that was sent in with one hundred dollars to be credited to the Summit Presbyterian Church and gave no name?" Sayers hesitated, then answered, "Yes". The agent said, "My man, who sent you with that contribution"? Sayers said, "I don't want to tell you", but the agent insisted that in order to collect the one hundred dollars, that had not been sent in recently, he must know to whom to apply. Again Sayers hesitated and answered: "Well, I suppose I must tell you; I gave that hundred dollars myself, but this year my crops are so poor that I haven't got but twenty-five dollars. If you will wait a moment, I will give you that and get the rest as soon as I can".

Years passed. Brooks was a devoted friend to Harry, the sexton, who had been serving the church for fifty dollars a year. He had left Summit, and the new pastor was a stranger to the conditions, but I happened to know that Harry had borrowed the money with which he built his little home, and had died, leaving a large family of little children. So I went back to Summit, thinking that I might possibly be able to raise the money and pay off the mortgage of one thousand dollars. The first man I met was Sayers. I knew of his generosity to the Tract Society and of his affection for Harry, the sexton. I thought perhaps he would be willing to start the subscription, and with such a start I was quite sure I would succeed. To my astonishment Sayers said to me, "Mr. ——, let that alone—you needn't worry about it". I replied that I did not intend to let it alone, but that the mortgage must be paid off if possible. I turned away, surprised and grieved at his apparent indifference to the situation. He called me back and said, "Won't you go home and let it alone"? I said, "I will not". Then he said, "I've got to tell you. You see, when Harry was dying I went to see him and said, 'Harry, can you die in peace'? He said, 'Yes, Brooks, but I am worried about my family. They can never pay the interest on that mortgage'. Well, Mr. ——, that kind of worried me. You see, I had lent him the thousand dollars, and I just went to Elizabeth and had that mortgage marked paid, and I came back and went into Harry's room and said, 'Harry, now you can die in peace. There ain't no mortgage on your house. Here are the papers'."

This account is absolutely true, and the incidents occurred forty-five years ago.—This tract won honorable mention in the Wood Prize Contest of the American Tract Society.

THE ANGELICAN CHURCH AND ITS MISSION TO THE WHOLE CHURCH OF CHRIST

A MESSAGE FROM NEW YORK TO OLD YORK

By Right Reverend William T. Manning, D. D.

Bishop of New York.

In York Minister, England, at the 1300th Anniversahy of the founding of The Minister, on the Third Sunday after Trinity.

I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole World.— Romans 1:7, 8.

THE occasion which sees us gathered in this great Minster of York is one to stir the heart of every child of the Anglican Church, and it is one that must appeal to the imagination, and the interest of all Christians. For more than three centuries the streets of this city heard the tramp of the Roman legions. Two Emperors of Rome died here within your walls. In the year 314 the Bishop of York attended the Council of Arles. And you are now celebrating the thirteen hundredth anniversary of the foundation of your Minster.

Thirteen hundred years—two-thirds of the time that has passed since our Lord was born in Bethlehem! This is the history of which this building speaks to us. For thirteen centuries worship has been offered to Our Lord in this place, and here your Minster, one of the glories not only of the English Church, but of the whole Christendom, stands today, bearing its witness to the unbroken life, the historic continuity, the Catholic and Apostolic character of the Church of England.

In 627 your founder, Edwin of Northumbria, gave his allegiance to Christ. It must move us to realize that here is the very ground where on Easter Day, King Edwin was baptized, and Paulinus, your first Archbishop, offered the Eucharist thirteen hundred years ago. And if Paulinus, and Aidan and Wilfrid could now be with us in the flesh, they would find held and taught here, in every essential, the Faith of Christ as they knew, and believed, and preached it.

You may well pray, as you are now praying, "for all who have been converted, baptized, absolved, confirmed, ordained to the sacred ministry, or consecrated to the Episcopate in this place".

You have reason indeed to give thanks as you think of all that this Minster has meant to your forefathers, and of all that it means today, not only to your ancient city, but to England, and to the world, and I have the great privilege of bringing to your Archbishop and clergy, to your Lord Mayor and Corporation, and to you all in Old York a message of glad felicitation from the city of the New World which bears your name, and from your brethren of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. From my own Diocese of New York I bring a message of affectionate greeting, sent to you by unanimous vote of the clergy and laity assembled at our Diocesan Convention, which I have placed in the hands of your Archbishop.

We are one with you in faith and fellowship. The Church of England is our spiritual Mother and we glory in her long history even as you do. From her we received the Divine gifts of the Faith, the Ministry and the Sacraments as these have come to us from Apostolic days. Your saints and martyrs and scholars are ours also, and we too receive strength from them. We claim our part and share in your historic churches, and while you are keeping the thirteen hundredth anniversary of your Cathedral in Old York we are building our Cathedral in New York on the same spiritual foundation upon which your Minster rests, the foundation of faith in Jesus Christ our Ascended and Living Lord, as that faith in Him has been held from the beginning of the whole Catholic Church throughout the world. And I rejoice to tell you that the City of New York, sometimes unjustly regarded as absorbed in material things, has shown an interest such as few causes have ever called forth from her in the erection of this great building to serve no utilitarian purpose, but to stand solely for the things of God and of the spirit.

We in America are joined to you in old England, and to our brethren in the English-speaking world, by ties which are of God's own ordering and which no man may put asunder.

We remember with deep and lasting appreciation the visit of your Archbishop to America at the time of our entrance into the World War, and the message which he brought to us at that great moment. I shall never forget the scene in our New York Cathedral as the Archbishop stood up to preach there, and the feeling in that vast assembly as he announced for his text the words, "And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them." May America and Great Britain and all who speak the English tongue stand ever in true partnership, not for their own selfish advantage, but for the good of all mankind.

As we look back over the history of this Minister, and see what these thirteen centuries tell us, we give thanks to God for the life and witness of the Church of England. Like other Churches, she has made mistakes, she has her weaknesses and shortcomings, but her record is one to fill the hearts of her children with true devotion and with loyal love.

As we look back over the history of this Minster, and ness to the Gospel of Salvation brought to this world once for all in Jesus Christ. No one can be in any doubt as to the Faith which she teaches, and which she expects, and trusts, her clergy to teach. Not only in her Creed, but in every act and utterance of her worship, she declares her faith in the Christ of history, the Christ of the New Testament, the Christ Who hears and answers our prayers where He now reigns on the Throne of God.

We give thanks for her constant and unwavering wit- of truth, her readiness to hear all that science and scholarship may be able to teach, her faith that there is, and can be, no conflict between the truth made known to us by science and the truth revealed to us in Christ. It is one of her great glories that, in the words of Bishop Creighton, she has been eminently, and still is, "the Church of sound learning". It is the Historian Lecky, certainly no ecclesiastical partisan, who, writing of the intellectual side of the Church of England, says, "There is hardly a branch of serious English literature in which Anglican clergy are not conspicuous. . . . in the fields of physical science, in the fields of moral philosophy, metaphysics, social, and even political philosophy, and perhaps still more in the fields of history (they) have won places in the foremost rank" by work "marked not only by profound learning, but, to an eminent degree, by judgment, criticism, impartiality, a desire for Truth, a skill in separating the proved from the false, or the merely probable". "There is no other Church," Mr. Lecky says, "which has shown itself so capable of attracting and retaining the services of men of general learning, criticism and ability." And in this spirit of loyalty to Truth, in the light of fearless and thorough research, and of scholarship equal to any that the world can show, her witness is that there is no fact of science, there is no discovery of modern knowledge, there is no claim of truth, or reason, to debar any sincere man or woman from kneeling in full and humble faith before Jesus Christ as God and Saviour.

And again we give thanks for the great part which the English Church has played in moulding the life and character of the English people. It is the Church of England, the ancient Church of this land, identified with all your past back to the days of Celt and Saxon which, far more than any other agency, has inspired and developed that type of character which marks the people of English stock. It is from the Church that they have learned their deep sense of justice, their love of liberty, their reverence for womanhood, their faithfulness to their pledged word at whatever cost, their self-restraint and reticence in success and their indomitable courage in adversity.

Who can measure the work of the Church of England, through all the centuries past, in forming and preparing this island race for its great part in the life of the world? And that ancient Church has now been called to far larger service. Her influence, like that of the English race, has spread far and wide over the earth. Standing for the Catholic Faith in its fulness, and in its simplicity, the Anglican Church has today her world-wide mission to the English-speaking peoples.

And we believe that there is a mission beyond this to which God is calling her. At this moment of history the greatest and most far-reaching of all questions, the question upon which the future of the world depends, is the Reunion of the Christian Church. The Church of Christ stands before the world at this time disqualified for her Divine task, her life enfeebled, her witness weakened, her message discredited, by her own differences and divisions. Unable to speak with a corporate voice, unable to give a united testimony, she cannot meet the deep need of the world or do her true work for Christ. It is in this great cause that God has given the Anglican Church her supreme mission.

Between the differences on either side, it has placed God to set her in the middle place. She is the one Church on earth which holds the truth of both Catholicism and Protestantism. She is both Catholic and Protestant. She recognizes and holds the principles for which both these opposing groups contend, authority and liberty, corporate life and individual freedom, the Divine mission of the Church and the free access of each soul to God. It is for her to show more fully than she has yet done, by the breadth of her sympathies, and by still greater freedom in her worship, that the truth which the Catholic emphasizes and the truth which the Protestant emphasizes are not contradictory but complementary, that each truth needs the other for its own enrichment and completion, that both are needed for the full life and power of the Church of God. To the Anglican Church is given this opportunity. She alone of all the Churches has been forced to learn this lesson. God has appointed her to the work of reconciliation.

Fathers and Brethren—the time has come for us to make new effort in this matter, to consider again, with loyalty to the Truth as it is in Christ, but on a new spirit of sympathy and love, the things which separate us from our fellow-Christians.

It is this which we are hoping to do at the World Conference on Faith and Order which meets next month at Lausanne. It is a hopeful thing that Christians are now coming together for conference in this spirit. But we must not expect too much from this gathering. Its scope is necessarily a limited one. It cannot, of course, arrange terms of reunion between the different Churches. Only the Churches themselves, acting through their own governing councils, could take such action. We pray that this gathering may help to prepare the way for the healing of our divisions. In what other way can differences be explained and removed except through conference? But conference alone will not bring reunion. What we all need is closer fellowship with Christ. It is nearness to Him that will bring us nearer to each other. It is a true saying that "the nearest way to any heart is round by heaven". If we were all fully converted to Christ the way to unity would soon be found. I have been urging in America, and I will repeat it here, that what we need is to realize afresh the fact of our brotherhood. We Christians are already one in Christ. Whatever our differences, we Christians are all brothers, and therein lies the sin of our divisions. We are one in the life that joins us to Christ, and, more fully than we realize, we are one also in faith. We all believe in one Lord Jesus Christ, "Who for us man and for our salvation came down from heaven, and was incarnate by the Holy Ghost of the Virgin Mary, and was made man". Roman Catholics and Anglicans, Protestants and Easterners, we are all one in this. We all believe in the Lord Christ, we all pray to Him and trust in His Divine power. We can all join in those great words of praise which have come to us from the first days of the Church on earth, and which have been lifted up here in this place through thirteen centuries, "Thou only, O Christ, with the Holy Ghost, art most high in the glory of God the Father". And this is the Christian Gospel. The Christian religion is belief in, and fellowship with, Christ our Divine Lord. From this all else that we believe follows. Holding this common faith in Christ the Lord, it must be possible for us, with His help to find the way to visible fellowship and unity, not merely that waste and rivalry may cease, but that Christ Himself may be manifested, that His glory may be revealed, and His Kingdom established among men.

Brethren of the Province of York, and of the Church of England—we who dwell in the newer world ask your prayers that in the midst of the problems and difficulties which we have to meet we may bear our witness for Christ with steadfastness and truth as you have done; we rejoice with you in thanksgiving for "the harvest of the bygone ages, and the hope of the coming years"; we offer our prayers with yours, that God will give to the Anglican Church grace and strength and wisdom and love for the holy mission to which He has called her in the service of the whole Church of Christ.

CHRIST OR CHAOS

Sixty-two million of the 110,000,000 people of the United States have no religious affiliation, the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., Bishop of East Carolina and chairman of the Church's National Commission on Evangelism, told clergymen from eighteen States at the third annual Conference of the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral.

"America is at the cross-roads," said Bishop Darst. "We are not going rapidly down hill to perdition, nor are we going up hill to an infinitely finer civilization.

"But America will go with the 62,000,000 unless the 48,000,000 get busy; unless our religion becomes a little more real with us, a flaming thing that shows the way.

"The Church has the solution to the world's problems, but in order to effect the solution, we must carry religion out into life."

Bishop Darst viewed the College of Preachers, one of the many activities of Washington Cathedral with nation-wide influence, as an endeavor, meriting commendation and support.

"I consider it one of the most significant gatherings held anywhere in the Church during the year," he said. "The possibilities of the plan are enormous. The Church is waiting for something this School of Prophets can give, and I hope the time is near when we can gather here in a permanent institution to discuss problems of Church and parish and fit ourselves with new inspiration for service as ministers and servants of God. I believe and pray that this will come to pass, for it will fill a real need."

Bishop Darst's address was concerned with the "Follow Up of the Bishops' Crusade", and in pointing out the necessity of additional evangelistic effort on the part of the Church, he indicated problems of the nation as observed in interviews and conferences with bishops, clergy and laymen in various sections of the country during the past year.

Although, according to the speaker, Americans do not give as much thought to world problems as they should, there are, nevertheless, men who ask, "Has the Church any answer to the problems of a broken world trembling on the verge of even greater woes"?

The answer, declared Bishop Darst, is that nothing less than "a united Church can heal a broken world". "We must get together on things which have caused disagreements, together under the leadership of Jesus," he said.

The second and most important problem, in the opinion of the speaker, is the apparent indifference of the American people to religion and the assertion that only 48,000,000 people in the United States have any sort of religion was a challenge to his audience.

Bishop Darst scored the clergy for being partially responsible for this attitude. "Laymen tell me that they are not being fed when they go to church. Of course they should go to worship to partake of the blessed things God has to offer at His altar, but the fact remains that 22,000 communicants drifted away from the Church during 1926. We should have found some way to tie these lives to the purpose of God."

The Church's National Commission on Evangelism will carry on for perhaps four years, the speaker said, providing preachers, leaders and lay workers for parishes that feel the need of evangelism. The Bishops' Crusade will not have succeeded until it has reached the life of every individual, he declared.

In conclusion, Bishop Darst said, "To know Him and make Him known is the thing that should follow the Bishops' Crusade, and to know Him you must follow Him, journey with Him and companion with Him".

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

Executive Secretary, Department of Christian Social Service, Diocese of Southern Virginia.

The list of suggestions for social service in parishes, as given above, is based largely on the work of Rev. R. Cary Montague, D. D., both as City Missionary of Richmond, and as Executive Secretary of the Department of Social Service of the Diocese of Virginia. In these two lines of endeavor he has come in contact with almost every form of social work, as applicable both to urban and rural problems.

The list is given in answer to a question that is often asked by persons who are becoming more interested in the social side of the gospels: "What can I do?" It is not expected, of course, that any one individual or organization will attempt to do all these things immediately, but it is hoped that any one, under any conditions, who is genuinely anxious to make some contribution in the field of "Applied Christianity", can find an answer to his query among these suggestions.

Not a Sunday Cloak.

The Departments of Christian Social Service are trying to impress upon the communicants of the Church that Christianity means something more than occupying a cushioned pew and paying the preacher's salary. The ordained ministers are not to be the only ministers. Christianity is a religion of ministering; it is a seven-day religion, and not a Sunday cloak, to be cast aside on Monday morning.

It is a positive religion of accomplishing; not merely a negative religion of refraining.

Two Phases of Social Work.

Now our list, as outlined here, is concerned chiefly with the first of the two phases of the Social Service Program, referred to above, that is, activities for the relief of various kinds of needs, and the alleviation of suffering and misfortune. This is the more definite side of social work, because it is easy to see misfortunes that have come to pass. It is not so easy to see the causes that lie at the root of misfortunes, and it is still more difficult to determine how to remove those causes. And yet here is the really great task of the social worker.

So one, at least, of our suggestions looks toward the second phase of social work. No. 12 reads: "Attend classes or meetings for study or discussion on the application of Christian principles to modern social problems," with the parenthesis "(material will be supplied by the Diocesan Department of Christian Social Service)".

Discussion Groups.

A discussion group, on problems that thoughtful people are talking about, is one of the most interesting ways of spending an evening. Get people started to discussing what they have been reading and thinking, and the problem will be how to stop them. Chase them out and shut the doors, and they will stand on the street corners and talk on. And they will go home, in the small hours of the morning, still talking. "And so far, far, into the night."

Here are some plans for conducting a discussion group. Begin with a comparatively small number of persons, say ten or twelve, who are a little more interested in the problems of the day than the average run of parishioners. A residence is more appropriate for such a small group than a hall or parish house. Some light cakes, and a little liquid refreshment, that will moisten the lips, but not loosen the tongue more than the law allows, will help the flow of thought.

The leader selects a few statements that have been made or might be made, by some one representing a certain school of thought, or a certain phase, we'll say of the industrial situation, or a certain attitude towards social problems. The statement may or may not reflect the views of the leader.

Three or four of the following statements might be chosen for an evening's discussion:

Statements for Discussion Groups on Application of Principles of Christ to Modern Social Problems.

(Note: It is not probable that any one individual would agree with all these statements. They are designed to represent a number of different points of view.)

1. The law of supply and demand is the only factor that should enter into the determination of wage scales.
2. A Christian should decline to bear arms in a war for any cause whatever.
3. Negroes should be welcomed into white churches.
4. A Christian should give money to beggars at the door and on the street whenever possible.
5. The love of mankind is secondary in importance to love of one's own country.
6. Publication of crime news tends to increase crime.
7. The best preventive of crime is severe punishment.
8. Military training should be extended to high schools and summer camps for boys.
9. Industries should be controlled by the workers.
10. The State should foster housing programs.
11. A people representing the intermingling of the better elements of all races would be superior to the better classes of the Nordic race.
12. Capital punishment should be abolished.
13. All sorrow and trouble comes from human error, of commission or omission.
14. The government should provide, at cost, insurance against sickness, unemployment and old age.
15. The business of the Church concerns only the salvation of man's soul; it has nothing to do with his body.
16. A poor man cannot get justice in legal matters today.
17. Churches are more sympathetic with capital than with labor.
18. Most men in the business world place first: the defeat of a competitor; second: ethical conduct.
19. The American laboring man is the most fortunate in the world.
20. Immigration should be regulated on a basis of individual qualification rather than on a basis of race or nationality.
21. One's conscience is a sufficient guide to conduct.
22. Superior force is the surest protection against war.

Out of the three or four statements chosen, one should be selected as the chief topic for the evening, and some reading should be done, on this topic, by the leader, and by as many of the group as possible before the group gathers. (The Diocesan Department would suggest reading matter.) A number of charts might be prepared something like this:

Chart for Discussion Group.

Statement	+2	+1	0	—1	—2
1.
2.
3.

MONO HERE ... ... HWS:fi(...

A check mark (x) in + 2 column indicates that, in one's opinion, this statement is absolutely true; in + 1 column that it is probably true; in — 1 column that it is probably false; in — 2 column that it is absolutely false. One who knows nothing about the subject, or who for any reason cannot express an opinion, or who is undecided what to think, should check in the zero (0) column.

Checking Reactions.

Now with these charts and explanations in the hands of the members of the group, the leader reads the first of the statements chosen, and each one present writes the statement in the first space on the chart. and checks in the column indicating his first reaction to the statement. Without allowing, at this point, any time for discussion, except to explain, if necessary, what the statement means, the other statements are written in, and checked.

Then the discussion is opened, on the statement chosen as the chief topic of the evening, and the fun begins. Two rules should be announced and adhered to:

(1) Nobody shall get mad. An ideal group will be composed of persons representing different points of view, and sometimes the statements will vitally concern one or another of them. (2) Not "what I think", but "what I think Christ would think", is to be the basis of the conclusions. Remember that this is a discussion group on "The Application of Christian Principles to Modern Social Problems".

After a reasonable time allowed for discussion, the leader calls for a recheck, and each of the group is given an opportunity, if he so desires, to bracket his first check mark, and check in another column, indicating that, as a result of the discussion, his point of view has changed.

Then if there is time, the other statements are brought up for discussion and opportunity given for rechecking.

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except over the signature of the writer.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

Mr. Editor:

Have been reading the article in The Dallas News, June 17, entitled "Sex Freedom and Liberalism Interest Episcopalians After Rector Gives Radical Opinion". I am amazed and grieved to read of such shocking things emanating from any one—be they pastor or layman—claiming to be a Christian, and am led to exclaim, "Can such things be"? and "Whither are we drifting"? for he says, "The New Testament was written by a lot of chumps who were thick in the head. They were thick-heads, but their thickness served Christ, for He was a genius and knew how to make them serve".

If this be true, then we are "adrift without chart or compass". We cannot believe that any great number—be they rector or laymen—of the great Protestant Episcopal Church in these United States believe, or will indorse the radical opinions of the reverend gentleman, "rector of St. Mark's in the Bouwerie".

So long as men like this rector of the Bouwerie say such things as "Protestantism is as dead as the dodo" and cast such reflections upon Christianity and the Christian religion, we need not be surprised at the deflections and derelictions of "Flaming Youth" and deplore the "Crime Wave" and the breaking up of the American home, and the divorce evil, etc., and seek to locate and place the onus and responsibility upon the movies, the automobile, the petting and other wild parties, for the trouble lies with some of our would-be religious leaders and teachers who fail to practice what they so loudly preach and teach, and as a great-religious leader expressed it, "Fail to practice their creeds, or if they disavow a creed—which they have a perfect right to do—fail to practice what they teach".

You who have read the letters of Walter H. Page will recall that he said, "When a Frenchman was dying in the World War, he called upon his wife or his sweetheart, the German called for his mother, the British Tommy asked to be faced in the direction of the guns, and died without calling on any human being as if he had a secret compact with God. I asked a British nurse why this was so and she replied: 'The British Tommy was raised in what you Americans call the public schools, where he learned his Bible as he learned his letters. That's why he's not needing human support when he dies.'"

Yes, it's at such times of dire distress and trouble that those who have faith turn to Him who is an "ever present help in time of trouble", and we would not have this apostle of liberalism deprive believers of this sustaining faith that has helped millions to bear their burdens during life and consoled themselves when called upon to face the Grim Reaper.

"THE EPISCOPALIANS."

Mr. Editor:

The enclosed clipping from the Houston (Texas) Post-Dispatch was sent me, and I forward it to you. It shows what thinking people feel in the way of confidence in our Church as a whole, and inspires me to pray that the Church may measure up to the expectations our friends have.

E. CECIL SEAMAN,
Bishop of North Texas.

Amarillo, Texas.

The Episcopalians.

"Radical brethren in the Tpiscopal National Convention, meeting in San Francisco, had a veritable field day when the meeting opened, due to the fact that Episcopalians subscribe to the doctrine of free speech.

One young man on the convention platform suggested recognition by the Church of unmarried unions and toleration of "sex experiments" by young people. A New York rector, who has achieved notoriety in the past by being rebuked by his Bishop for staging dances by scantily clad women in his pulpit, took advantage of his opportunity to address the meeting by expressing the opinion that the authors of the New Testament were "a bunch of chumps who were thick in the head", while another wearer of the cloth, very evidently with a craving for red, made bold to predict that America soon would be doing to "plutocracy".

The Episcopal Church wasn't born yesterday, and it is scarcely necessary, we suppose, to give warning that this is really not a Soviet meeting in San Francisco, though the reports from the convention that have received the most prominence in the newspapers would indicate as much. It is simply that several of those who have been doing a good deal of the talking know the makings of front-page "position", and have put their knowledge to practical use.

The truth is, of course, that the convention in San Francisco represents one of the most conservative and orthodox branches of the Christian Church in the world. True, the Episcopal Church has evinced much interest in youth in recent years, and has attempted to adapt its appeal in some measure to the life of modern youth in order to win it to the religious life. It might be said that the Episcopal Church is taking the lead among the Protestant denominations in evolving a program that will enable the Church to meet the needs of the time, and especially to grip young people. And it is meeting with no little success in that direction.

The Episcopal Church today is not the staid, unbending, "high brow" communion it has been traditionally represented as being, and as many Episcopalians, in their lighter moods, assert that it is. But the freshened spirit the Church is experiencing isn't going to lead it into dangerous social or theological paths. The Church has the wisdom accumulated through a long past to restrain it. Furthermore, neither its ministry in general nor its lay constituency is recruited from the class that desires to blow up something or tear something else down. Also, the policy of bringing up the children in a knowledge of the fundamentals of the faith makes for stability among the Church's communicants.

No, despite the effusions of the notoriety-seeking blatherskites and erratic sociological adventurers who may occasionally attempt to speak for it, the Episcopal Church isn't going to declare for Judge Lindsey's brand of free love, repudiate the evangelists and the apostles, and substitute the red flag for the cross. Drs. Guthrie, Lewis and Melish to the contrary notwithstanding, the Episcopal Church isn't going Bolshevik. The religious world need have no apprehension on that score."

The Great Commission

S. O. S. FROM ANVIK, ALASKA.

A wireless message from Rev. John W. Chapman, head of the Church's mission in Anvik, Alaska, informs the Department of Missions that an epidemic of influenza has been raging in Anvik and the surrounding region. There have been twenty-nine deaths among the Indian people, all adults. The members of the mission staff have escaped, and the Indian children have come through with no deaths. The death of Indian parents has thrown a heavy burden upon the Anvik Mission. Dr. Chapman's message says that the mission must accept immediate responsibility for forty children. He pleads for a trained nurse to reinforce the staff, and for a house mother and assistant to fill the vacancy caused by the furlough of Miss Margaret Bartberger. He urgently needs also a layman accustomed to outdoor life and work who can assist in building and in the scores of odd jobs that have to be cared for in order to keep the buildings in repair, the woodpile replenished, and the work of the mission going forward. The addition to the mission family of a large number of orphaned children requires another building to cost $8,000 and at least $3,000 for food and other care for the children.

Bishop Rowe wires to the Department of Missions:

> "Anvik has my deepest sympathy. Once again I must ask all friends of Alaska to help me meet this desperate need. The Church has never failed to care for my helpless Indian people in Alaska, and I am sure it will not fail now. Dr. Chapman's forty years of service at this one post call on us for everything we can do to help him care for the people to whom he has devoted his life. His heart must be almost breaking as he sees the suffering that comparatively little money will relieve, and then realizes that he has not on hand even that little."

Bishop Rowe leaves Seattle on July 2 for Point Hope. He will have to spend the entire summer in Arctic Alaska and cannot personally care for this Anvik emergency. The Department of Missions is endeavoring to secure additional members for the Anvik staff and will gladly forward to Dr. Chapman any gifts of money to help provide food and shelter.

WORK AMONG LEPERS.

One of the branches of the Church's work in Japan nearest to Bishop McKim's heart is the impressive and beneficent work for lepers at Kusatsu. "Until fifteen years ago," says Bishop McKim, "Kusatsu was like a place of perdition, full of rottenness and uncleanness. It is now a paradise for more than three hundred of God's children who are looked upon as physically loathsome, but whose souls have been cleansed and sanctified by the Holy Spirit of God, in whose sight they are beautiful. This activity has been carried on up to the present without any direct appropriation from the Church at home, and the necessary expenses have been met largely by a devoted woman whose life and all that she has are consecrated to God's service; also by Japanese official contributions and by gifts from friends here and in America. The equipment is of the simplest and cheapest. The buildings are frail and unsuited to the severe winter climate, where the snow lies several feet deep from November until April. Miss Mary Cornwall-Legh is now approaching seventy years and lives the most ascetic of lives. May I take this opportunity to set before the Church in general my urgent prayer that individual Churchmen and women may see in this a call from God to relieve us of some of the responsibility for the financial burden which we are now carrying? There is no mission work in Japan which yields such splendid spiritual results as that at Kusatsu. There are more baptisms and confirmations there than at any Church or institution of the American Church Mission in Japan. Our leper Christians believe in self-help and do all in their power to show their sympathy for others. They were the first people to send a contribution to stricken Tokyo after the earthquake. They have contributed to the work in Alaska, Panama and Armenia, and are prompt to respond to any local need which appeals to them. I appeal to our Church people to relieve to the extent of their ability the woman who has given her all. I appeal also for the lepers, separated from relatives and former friends, who are dependent upon the charity of the Church."

Any gifts sent to the Department of Missions will be promptly forwarded to Bishop McKim.

A member of the Church in the Diocese of New York has established with the Foreign and Domestic Missionary Society a trust fund of $30,000, the income to be used for the support of St. Margaret's Home, Kusatsu, Japan. The home itself was given a few years ago by the same donor for the care of the untainted children of leper parents. It is a part of the merciful and self-sacrificing work carried on among lepers by Miss Mary Cornwall-Legh, under the auspices of our Church in the Diocese of North Tokyo.

THE CHURCH HOSPITAL IN ZAMBOANGA.

Bishop Mosher writes:

The Church Hospital in Zamboanga, opened fifteen years ago, was, by many years, the first modern hospital there. At that time it seemed that Zamboanga was going to be one of the important American centers of the Southern Islands, and it seemed that the Church ought to do what it could to look after the health of those who went there. Also a splendid field seemed to be open for work among the Moros in whom the Church saw a very important and necessary contribution to what America was trying to do in this archipelago.

Later on two other hospitals began work there, of which the one belonging to the Roman Catholic Church was maintained for a very few years and the Government Hospital is being carried on now with always increasing efficiency. The work that our Church hospital is doing, however, is important ,and the financial report is gratifying. I suppose there have been at least five times when I have felt that we could no longer keep that hospital open, for the Church at home cannot be asked to do more than provide the salary of a nurse and the annual contribution of $1,000. The financial report, therefore, is gratifying because it shows that the hospital is holding its own excellently well. Those who want to keep the hospital in Zamboanga have been quite generous in their contributions and the earnings for 1926 have been most satisfactory. The report suggests considerable satisfaction for the year just passed and confidence for the year to come.

AN INTERESTING VISITATION IN LIBERIA.

The April-May issue of The Liberian Churchman reports a visit of Bishop Campbell through the interior of the country, a fourteen-day walk from Cape Mount to Mosambolahun, where he found the work of the Holy Cross Mission in a very encouraging condition, and confirmed fifty. At Pandemai the Bishop confirmed sixteen. Here the Rev. James Dwalu was recovering from the shock of a stroke of lightning which fell out of a perfectly clear sky and shattered a flagpole twelve feet from where he was sitting.

During the Bishop's trip in the Gbande and Buzzi sections he confirmed about one hundred in all. As far as can be known, this is the first time that a bishop of the Church has been in this country so far from the coast.

BRYAN UPHELD.

Ghost of William Jennings Bryan, attention!

Listen to this from Dr. Henry Fairchild Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History and the acknowledged leader of all the anthropologists and evolutionists of America, if not of the world.

"The Ape-human ancestory theory is greatly weakened by recent evidence. . . . I regard the ape-human theory as totally false and misleading. It should be banished from our speculations and from our literature, not on sentimental grounds, but on purely scientific grounds, and we should now resolutely set our faces toward the discovery of our actual pro-human ancestors. . . . The 'Dawn Man' belonged to a distinct family, the Hominidae, ground-living, alert, capable of tool-making. The ape belongs to a distinct family, the Simidae, tree-living, sluggish, incapable of tool-making."

In the evolution war, about all that Bryan fought was the ape ancestry theory and it earned for him the enmity and ridicule of hordes of scientists, all of whom will please proceed to get into line with the dead Commoner, now that Dr. Osborn has spoken.—Washington Herald.

A parting judgment that advocacy of "unmarried unions" and "sex experiments" is "not only shameful but damnable —a sin against God", was left by Bishop William T. Manning, who sailed for Europe on the Majestic.

A sweeping attack on "companionate marriage", "sex questionnaires" and the "divorce mills" of Paris and Reno was contained in a statement issued by the bishop before he sailed with his elder daughter, Frances, to attend the thirteen hundredth anniversary of the York Cathedral and to visit Lausanne, Switzerland.

Referring to "companionate marriages", the bishop said:

"If I thought that the Church would listen with open mind to such a proposal as this I would not lift another finger for the building of St. John's Cathedral or for any other cause in the Church".

Sanctioning of "companionate marriages" was mentioned for consideration at a recent conference of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco.

Its consideration, the Bishop said, "is also being commended by not a few professors in our universities".

He said he recently had been shown "a questionnaire sent out by a male professor to the young women of one of our best known women's colleges, in which not only is the so-called companionate marriage definitely suggested, but the questions asked of these girls are of such a nature that it would be improper for me to quote them here". He said another girl had written that she has been assigned "companionate marriage" as a topic for a sociology class paper.

"With the divorce mill running as it is in Paris, Reno, and elsewhere to break down the sanctity of marriage and with the sanction of unmarried unions now openly suggested," the Bishop asserted, "it is time for us to consider where this is leading us."

Church Intelligence

RUSSIAN STUDENTS' CONFERENCE.

The Rev. Thomas Burgess, Secretary Foreign-Born American Division.

There are about 1,500 Russian students in our colleges throughout the United States. These young men and women are of the highest type, part of the exiled "intelligentsia", the future hope of Russia.

From June 22 to 26 about thirty-five representatives of the National Russian Students' Christian Association in the United States met for conference, largely on spiritual topics, in Camp Haarlem, Conn., by a beautiful lake on the western side of the Berkshires. They were to go to our school at Lenox, Mass., but a scarlet fever outbreak prevented. Dean Ladd offered them Berkeley, but they wished a place away from the world. So the Y. M. C. A. provided this beautiful camp.

The Russian Bishop of Chicago was their chaplain, Theophilus, humble, democratic, dignified, a true and efficient leader, deeply spiritual. He was formerly for eighteen years in San Francisco. During the first part of the Revolution he was the secretary of Patriarch Tikhon, who sent him here to help Metropolitan Platon. Dean Turkevich, of the New York Cathedral, was also present, and his two six-foot boys, students at Dartmouth, one the senior manager of the freshman football team. From the European Russian Students' Christian Association came two of its chief organizers, Professor Zenkowsky and Dr. Kullman, men on fire with the Orthodox religion.

The days were spent with conferences on religion and also on organization and spreading the work among all Russian students. The boys slept in tents; the girls in a farmhouse. A finer set of college students I have never seen. They enjoyed, like any collegians, the recreation periods, with games and boating on the lake, and the fun at meal times, preceded by a beautifully sung Grace. As a typical Russian method of showing their appreciation, they tossed high in the air and caught —not with a blanket but with their arms—Mr. Anderson, "Y" Secretary, who was their genial host, and also the Scandinavian cook, Mr. Anderson, who was in Russia eight years and speaks Russian like a native.

They converted the central building hall into a Russian chapel with improvised altar and iconastasis, all decked with green boughs and masses of daisies and other wild flowers. Here on Saturday evening I stood behind the screen for the long hour offices, and on Sunday morning from 8:30 to 11 there was celebrated by the bishop, priest, deacon and reader, and choir of students, a wonderful Eucharist, the Divine Liturgy of St. Chrysostom. The Bishop sang some parts of the service in English.

Then came breakfast and the final conference, in which many told what the successful meeting had meant to them.

This conference was part of that extraordinary movement outside of Russia among the Russian "emigres". "Circles" of students—those at the conference represented the "circles" in America—have been formed, primarily to put the students into touch with God. Young men of the best intellectual type are preparing for the priesthood in the new Russian Seminary in Paris. Famous Russian University professors, once agnostics, professional men and some nobles of the old regime, have taken Holy Orders. The Holy Spirit is working. In fact, the return of the exiled "intelligentsia", purged by the fire of suffering, to their Holy Church, is one of the most striking spiritual phenomena of modern history.

When the autumn comes our clergy and our lay people in college towns should make themselves friends of the Russian students.

English Clergyman Coming to Berkeley Divinity School.

The appointment of the Rev. Cyril E. Hudson, M. A., of England, to the faculty of Berkeley Divinity School as lecturer on Systematic Theology for the coming year is announced by the Rev. William Palmer Ladd, Dean of Berkeley, who established the practice several years ago of bringing to this country each year an English clergyman as special lecturer at the school.

Mr. Hudson resigned as Director of Religious Education in the Diocese of St. Albans, England, in accepting this lectureship at Berkeley, and will be a member of the faculty throughout the school year.

Mr. Hudson will take up his residence at Berkeley Divinity School at the opening of the fall term in September. He will assist in the "extension work" at Berkeley as well as teach the regular courses in theology.

Old Church Observes Anniversary and Calls New Rector.

The Rev. John Lowry Hady, rector of St. Paul's Church, Doylestown, Pa., has accepted a call to the rectorship of historic Gloria Dei (Old Swedes) Church, Philadelphia, the foundation of which dates back to two hundred and fifty years ago, when the Early Swedish Colonists settled along the banks of the Delaware River.

Mr. Hady will assume his new charge on August 15. He succeeds at Gloria Dei the Rev. Addison A. Ewing, who relinquished his rectorship at the beginning of the present year. For several months past the Rev. Dr. George Cadwalader Foley, a member of the Philadelphia Divinity School faculty, has been serving at Gloria Dei pending the selection of a new rector.

Mr. Hady, who has been in charge of St. Paul's, Doylestown, since March 1, 1925, was born in Romney, W. Va., in 1890. He graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1919. His first work as a missionary was in the mountains of West Virginia. He then became rector of Trinity Parish, Shepherdstown, W. Va., coming from there to St. Paul's, Doylestown.

On Trinity Sunday of this year Gloria Dei celebrated the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its foundation as a parish and the two hundred and twenty-seventh anniversary of the dedication of the present church building. A log block house erected in 1699 as a defense against the Indians stood on the present site of the church. This was later fitted with simple appointments to serve as a church. On Trinity Sunday, 1677, the Rev. Jacob Fabritius preached the first sermon there. On the First Sunday after Trinity, 1700, the present church building was dedicated.

With the arrival of the English Colonists and the planting of the Church in Pennsylvania, the relations of the Swedish congregations with the Episcopalians became cordial and intimate. Clergy of both establishments shared in the performance of duties and ministered freely for one another. Before the Revolution the Swedish language had fallen into disuse and Swedish and English families had widely intermarried. During the pastorate of the Rev. Nicholas Collin, the last of the Swedish ministers to serve Gloria Dei, the Prayer Book of the Episcopal Church was used in the Swedish churches and Dr. Collin's assistants were all in Anglican Orders. On the death of Dr. Collin the congregation severed the tie, a merely formal one, which had bound it to the Church of Sweden, and it became in name, as it had been in fact, an independent and self-supporting parish. In 1845 it was admitted into union with the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Visitors to this ancient parish, overlooking the broad surface of the Delaware River, the quiet and beauty of its spacious grounds, unspoiled by the rush and clatter of the busy commerce of the river front, find themselves surrounded with many evidences of the hardy Swedish Colonists, whose first thought upon their arrival in the new land was the establishment of the Church.

Relics and memorials of these early Swedish Christians may be seen; the baptismal font brought by them from Sweden in the seventeenth century, and also many other records and memorials of the days before our own Mother Church of England was planted in Pennsylvania in Old Christ Church in 1695 are there. Beneath the chancel of Gloria Dei are the graves of early Swedish rectors and in the churchyard may be seen the tombstones and graves of the early Swedes.

The Ven. James Fry Bullitt, Archdeacon of the Diocese, officiated Sunday afternoon at the second Sunday "open-air services" conducted on the new Cathedral site in Upper Roxborough. "America's Treasure Hunt" was the topic of Archdeacon Bullitt's address. The musical program was rendered by the Trumpeters and choir of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Kensington, under the direction of Frank H. Longshore.

Summer Services.

Grace Church, Georgetown, has secured for the summer months the services of the Rev. Mills Perkins, who was ordained deacon by Bishop Freeman on Ascension Day last in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral. Grace Church is at present without a regular rector. Mr. Perkins will also have charge of the Chapel of the Redeemer, Glen Echo, Md.

The Rev. Edward Charles Russell, rector of St. Ann's Church, New York City, will be in charge regularly at St. John's Church during the absence abroad of the rector, the Rev. Robert Johnston, D. D. Mr. Russell expects to remain in the city until September 20.

The Rev. Raymond L. Wolven will have charge of the work at Epiphany Chapel during the summer months. Epiphany Chapel is at present without a regular vicar.

An Interesting Wedding.

Rev. John S. Moses, formerly rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown, and Miss Annette McCartney, of Christ Church, Georgetown, were married in Christ Church on Tuesday afternoon, June 28. This wedding was of unusual interest to many Church people in the Diocese and a number of clergymen were present. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, cousin of the bride, and the Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, rector of Christ Church, and college mates of the groom. The Rev. Mr. Sterrett, rector of All Souls' Church, and Mr. Paul Harding, son of the late Alfred Harding, Bishop of Washington, were numbered among the ushers. Mr. Moses served as rector of St. John's Church for about three years, resigning at the end of that time to take a charge at Chestnut Hill, Boston. The bride has been a life-long member of Christ Church, Georgetown, and is one of a family closely connected with the Church and life of Georgetown for several generations.

Choir Camp.

The choir of St. Mark's Church has left for camp at Cornfield Harbor, Md., where they will be under the leadership of Mr. Henry B. Blair, assisted by Mr. Samuel Wood, organist and choirmaster, and Rev. C. S. Abbott. This choir camp has a record worthy of mention, this being the twenty-ninth summer of camping for St. Mark's choir. Mr. Blair is responsible largely for this record and finds his greatest pleasure in vacation time in camping with the boys and making the camp a success.

American Guild of Organists.

The sixth General Convention of the American Guild of Organists, which was held in Washington June 28, 29 and 30, brought a rare treat to those music lovers who were able to participate in some of the meetings. Recitals by organists of outstanding ability contained on their programs organ works by organ masters ranging from Bach to those of more modern times as well as modern style. Two church organs, the organ at the Library of Congress and the new and large organ at the Auditorium, were the instruments used. Addresses and discussions on organ recitals and at another session on "Congregational Praise" were features of the convention also. Headquarters of the convention were at Epiphany Church, and the organist of that parish, Mr, Adolf Tovorsky, who is also dean of the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists, was untiring in his efforts, which proved most successful, to make the convention a joy to every one and something long to be remembered. About one hundred and fifty organists registered and these came from States far distant and near at hand. One morning of the convention was given over to a sight-seeing trip, when members of the local chapter took the visitors in their own cars to Mt. Vernon and other places of interest. A banquet the last evening closed the convention, the first of its kind in Washington. The American Guild of Organists commends itself to all who desire to see the best in Church music, because Church music and the organ are so inevitably bound up in each other. The following excerpt from its constitution shows the object of the organization:

"To raise the standard of efficiency of organists, by examinations in organ playing, in the theory of music and in general musical knowledge, and to grant certificates of fellowship and associateship to members of the Guild who pass such examinations."

OHIO.

Rt. Rev. W. A. Leonard, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. L. Rogers, D. D., Coadjutor.

Historic St. John's, Cleveland's Oldest Church.

St. John's is the oldest church of any kind in Cleveland, the cornerstone having been laid by Bishop McIlvaine July 2, 1836. This itself is a most interesting fact.

For many years it was the foremost Episcopal Church, having in its congregation the most prominent families of the city. Its influence was felt throughout the city. Strangely enough, the street on which it is situated is still called Church Avenue and a street parallel—Vestry Street. Over the entrance the city has placed a bronze tablet, stating the church to be one of the oldest landmarks.

Among its rectors two have become Bishops—the Rt. Rev. Henry D. Aves, D. D., former Bishop of Mexico, and the Rt. Rev. Lewis W. Burton, D. D., the Bishop of Lexington. It has been the spiritual home of many outstanding men and women. Among the clergymen it has produced are the Rev. George P. Atwater, D. D., rector of Grace Church, Brooklyn, and the Very Rev. Arthur Dumper, D. D., Dean of Trinity Cathedral, Newark, N. J.

The church was founded by Judge Josiah Barber, the first Mayor of Cleveland. His descendants are still active members. Robert Rhodes, well-known philanthropist, left a legacy of $25,000 for endowment, which was increased materially through the efforts of Miss Stella T. Hatch, President of the Animal Protective League of Cleveland, who is still active.

This splendid old church still stands with its beautiful architecture unimpaired. It is thought to have been modeled after St. Botolph's, Boston, England.

Formerly surrounded by beautiful homes, the church is now hemmed in by business blocks, and there dwell around it people having no interest in its traditions; its congregations having gradually moved to the suburbs and scattered, many becoming affiliated with other churches. Of late years it has been in a very fragile condition, both numerically and financially, kept alive almost entirely by its endowment, which is all too small.

Last November the vestry elected to the rectorship the Rev. Roy Ellicott DePriest, a native Clevelander, formerly assistant at Grace and St. Peter's, Baltimore. Since then the old parish has taken on a new lease of life. In May Bishop Leonard confirmed a class before a congregation of over two hundred. He remarked that it was the largest congregation he had seen in the church in twenty years. At the Easter service there were about three hundred present. The congregation has been steadily increasing, drawn from all parts of the city and many strangers passing through. Many who have not been in the church in years have revived their interest.

One hundred people were assembled at a parish dinner several weeks ago. The young rector is meeting with enthusiastic support on every side. Truly, this historic shrine is being rehabilitated as a house of worship for all people, on the basis of its old traditions.

Mission Started at Jewell Ridge.

On the evening of Sunday, June 19, the first Episcopal service was held at the mission just established at Jewell Ridge by the Rev. Herbert H. Young, Dean of Associate Missions. There was a splendid congregation and a fine response. In the service Mr. Young used the little booklet prepared by Bishop Jett, "Our Book of Worship, or Helps to the Use of the Book of Common Prayer, and Explanations". This is a simplified service book for use in congregations which have not become accustomed to following the service in the Prayer Book and has been found to be of the greatest value in the associate missions field and elsewhere in the Diocese.

The Jewell Ridge Coal Corporation is cooperating in every possible way with Dean Young in his effort to bring the Church to this coal mining community of about one thousand persons, and it seems certain that excellent results will be attained.

Preparations for the Synod.

At the recent session of the Diocesan Council the clergy and vestries of the Roanoke churches were constituted a committee and charged with the duty of making suitable preparations for the entertainment of the Tenth Synod of the Province of Washington, which will assemble in St. John's Church, Roanoke, on Tuesday, October 18, 1927.

On June 28 this committee met and perfected an organization with the following officers: The Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett, D. D., General Chairman ex-officio; the Rev. Alfred R. Berkeley, rector of St. John's, Chairman; Mr. C. Edwin Michael, Senior Warden of Christ Church, Vice-Chairman; Mr. Thomas A. Scott, General Secretary.

An Executive Committee was formed, composed of the clergy and wardens of the three Roanoke churches. This will meet in the near future and consider initial steps looking to the proper entertainment of the members of the Synod.

Although located in the southwest corner of the Province, Roanoke is by no means difficult of access as compared with numbers of other points in the Province. On account of its excellent railway connections it is easily reached from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, etc. Also, located as it is at the end of the beautiful Valley of Virginia, it is probable that a large number of the visitors will come by automobile, adding much to their pleasure by a trip through this interesting part of the Old Dominion.

Rector's Sixth Anniversary.

On the last Sunday in June the Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey celebrated his sixth anniversary as rector of St. John's Church, Wytheville, and Wythe Parish. Thirty persons received the Holy Communion at the early service, the majority of whom had been presented for confirmation by Mr. Gwathmey. Also there was a large congregation at the 11 o'clock service. The preacher in the evening was a former rector, the Rev. Mercer P. Logan, D. D., now Warden of DuBose Memorial Church Training School at Monteagle, Tenn.

The Rev. S. Janney Hutton, who during the period from September, 1926, to June, 1927, was chaplain of the Virginia Episcopal School at Lynchburg, will be in charge of St. Thomas' Church at Abingdon, in this Diocese, for the months of July and August. Mr. Hutton recently accepted the position of headmaster of St. Paul's School at Baltimore and will take up this work in September. He has made many friends in Southwestern Virginia who will sincerely regret his departure.

Mr. DeS. P. Moore, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and a student of Virginia Seminary, is assisting Dean Young in the Associate Missions field this summer. He is bringing his family to be with him at Dante, Va., which will be his headquarters during this summer engagement.

The Rev. G. Wallace Ribble, D. D., of Bessemer, Ala., has been spending a vacation in Virginia, visiting a part of that time with his relatives in Wytheville.

The Rev. Herbert H. Young, Dean of Associate Missions, with residence in Bluefield, Va., left with his family on June 20 for a vacation of several weeks. They will visit relatives at Williamsburg, Va., and Aquasco, Md.

Memorial Dedicated.

On Sunday, June 19, a seven-branch candelabra at each end of the altar in Grace Church, Alexandria, was dedicated by the rector, the Rev. Edgar Carpenter, as a memorial to Susie Upshur Nottingham Carpenter.

They stand on marble steps at each end of the altar and are six feet high The memorial was given by the congregation, as a testimonial of their affection for one who had been with them in the work of Grace Church for twenty years. Mrs. Carpenter's mother, Mrs. Annie Fitchett Nottingham, placed a walnut altar in Christ Church, Eastville, Va., about a year ago, as a memorial to her daughter.

St. Timothy's Church, Herndon, the Rev. Alexander Galt, rector, has lately undergone extensive repairs and improvements. The whole chancel has been replastered, and the interior of the church has been renovated and redecorated. The building has been painted on the outside, and the cross on the tower regilded. The foundation has been reinforced with concrete supports built up under the main floor, and the general condition and appearance, within and without, is much improved.

All this work was done by the Rector's Aid, Mrs. Andrew Hutchinson, President. This faithful band of workers hopes soon to raise funds for a new roof, and when this is done the building will be in excellent condition.

During the month of July, while the rector is supplying at All Saints' Church, Chevy Chase, the services are kept up as usual by visiting ministers.

Meeting of the Executive Council.

The first meeting of the Executive Council, elected at the Diocesan Convention in May, was held at Trinity Parish House, Asheville, June 29, the Bishop of the Diocese presiding.

The several departments were organized with the following as chairmen: Missions and Church Extension, Rev. George Floyd Rogers; Education, Rev. J. W. C. Johnson; Social Service, Rev. S. R. Guignard; Finance, Mr. W. Vance Brown; Publicity, Rev. A. G. B. Bennett. The Rev. S. B. Stroup was elected to act as Secretary for the Council.

Immediately after the meeting of the Executive Council a meeting of the chairmen of the departments was held. In this meeting the need of a survey of the Diocese was urged with a view to the advisability of strengthening or abandoning certain work in the Diocese, or making it self-supporting.

Mission at Calvary, Fletcher.

Beginning Sunday morning, June 19, and extending through the week there was held a mission at Calvary Church, Fletcher, the Rev. Clarence S. McClellan, rector. The missioner was the Rev. Edward Bryan Andrews, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and recently rector of St. Matthew's Church, Wheeling, W. Va., and now vice-president of the American Guild of Health. The services were held every evening with special meetings for the women, men and young people of the parish during the afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Andrews preached at all services and there were special personal conferences in Calvary rectory.

A handsome bronze tablet on granite boulder was dedicated at Calvary Church on July 3. This is the first memorial to be erected anywhere to the composer of "Dixie". Many noted speakers took part on the program. "O. Henry", James Whitcomb Riley and Stephen Foster are also soon to be honored here by memorials.

The Rev. J. J. D. Hall, of the Galilee Mission, Philadelphia, recently conducted a successful crusade mission for the five settlements in Ashe County, under the care of the Rev. W. R. Savage.

Bishop Capers Advances to the Priesthood Two of His Sons.

Rev. William T. Capers, Jr., and Rev. Samuel Orr Capers, sons of Rt. Rev. William T. Capers, Sr., Bishop of the Diocese of West Texas, were ordained to the priesthood by their father at a beautiful service Sunday, June 26, at 10:30 A. M., in Christ Church, San Antonio.

Bishop Capers presided at the service and preached the ordination sermon. The two young men were presented by Archdeacon B. S. McKenzie. Rev. L. B. Richards read the Gospel, Rev. J. S. Budlong, rector of St. John's Church, the Epistle, and Rev. E. H. Jones, of Cuero, the Litany.

The congregation filled the church to overflowing for the service.

Bishop Capers' sons are both graduates of the Theological Seminary of Virginia. Their father ordained them as deacons at Christ Church a year ago.

Rev. William T. Capers, Jr., will assume duties as Vicar of St. Paul's Church, San Antonio, July 3. Rev. Samuel Capers will have a mission field in the Valley of the Rio Grande, assuming his duties September 1.

They represent the fourth consecutive generation of clergymen. Their great-grandfather was a Methodist Bishop and their grandfather was Bishop of South Carolina.

Bishop Capers' charge to his sons was of peculiar interest in the light of the fact that he had been ordained by his own father ,the Bishop of South Carolina.

Rt. Rev. F. B. Howden, D. D., Bishop.

First Annual Church Workers' Conference.

At a meeting held at the close of the Conference for Church Workers at Cloudcroft, N. M., it was unanimously decided to make of this Conference an annual meeting. The Very Rev. H. R. A. O'Malley, of Albuquerque, and the Rev. Dr. Clavin, of Silver City, were appointed to make arrangements for next year both as regards the program and organization.

The Conference just closed, which was inaugurated more or less as an experiment, proved to be of great benefit to all, and the imperative need of an annual gathering of this kind, especially to serve those closely related Missionary Districts of North Texas, Arizona and New Mexico and Southwest Texas, was keenly felt.

Cloudcroft itself is an ideal location. Situated as it is on the top of the Sacramento Mountains, it is indeed one of the beauty spots of America, and a delightful place to spend one's vacation, offering, with its golf course, tennis courts, opportunities of horseback riding and hiking, many interesting recreational features.

This year's Conference opened on June 15 and closed June 22. The mornings were given over to classes, the afternoons and evenings being free.

A particularly helpful and interesting feature of the Conference was a course on Religious Pedagogy, presented by Mrs. Eunice Payne, principal of the Alta Vista School, El Paso.

The Rev. Paul S. Kramer ,of St. Alban's Church, El Paso, gave a course of lectures on the History and Contents of the Book of Common Prayer. The Rev. F. B. Eteson, of Plainview, Texas, led a helpful Conference on Rural Work. The Very Rev. H. R. A. O'Malley presented the Church's Program. Bishop Howden had daily conferences with the clergy on Preaching and the Pastors' Office. Mr. Walter Davis, organist and choir director of St. Clement's Church, El Paso, spoke on Church Music. The devotional side of the Conference was in charge of the Rev. B. T. Kemerer, rector of St. Clement's Church, El Paso, and his daily meditations were an outstanding feature of the Conference, being helpful and inspiring.

While the attendance was not large, still it was felt that a real start has been made for the organization of an annual Conference which will be of increasing value to those districts concerned.

Demonstration of International Good Will.

On the Sunday nearest Empire Day, May 22, a splendid demonstration of international goodwill was given in an evening service at St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit. The British flag was carried in procession with the flags of America and of the Church. The large congregation sang "The Maple Leaf" and "O Canada". The Rev. Alan P. Shatford, of the Church of St. James the Apostle, Montreal, preached a great non-militaristic sermon on "The Sword of the Lord and of Gideon", which he explained would be more correctly rendered "The Lord and Gideon". The combination suggested was a great cause and a great personality. At the close of the sermon a huge Union Jack was displayed at the chancel steps, and "Rule Britannia" was sung with a heartiness that brought tears to the eyes of many an old Britisher. Then the American flag was presented, and the "Star Spangled Banner" sung with even more than usual enthusiasm.

New School For Boys.

The Sarah Clark Home and School for Boys, a new venture of the Diocese, will open its doors in Batchelder Hall, Romeo, Michigan, September 15 of this year, to sixth, seventh and eighth grade boys. This is the fruit of a bequest made some years ago, by the late John C. Batchelder, who left his beautiful homestead and grounds of fifteen acres as a memorial to his mother, Mrs. Sarah Clark, with the thought that some day it would be used as a centre for the development of the finest kind of boyhood. This idea is about to be realized. The man to accept the challenge and to conceive the plans necessary in such a venture, has been found in the Rev. Charles H. McCurdy, who resigns a successful pastorate as rector of St. James, Birmingham, to undertake this great new work. Assisting him will be his wife, Mrs. Violet Barnes McCurdy, whose experience and training includes such fields as Radcliff, public schools in the vicinity of Boston, and the East Bridgewater High School. Mr. McCurdy has become well known as a boy's leader because he founded and has maintained for nine years the splendid Camp Williams on Lake Huron. Enrollment for the coming year will be limited to twelve boys. Tuition has been set at $600. The Diocesan Commission in charge consists of Messrs. George T. Hendrie, L. A. Morgan, I. C. Johnson, Henry J. McKay and the Rev. O. D. Berkeley.

Anniversaries Observed.

The twentieth anniversary of the establishment of regular church services was recently observed by All Saints' Church, Bergenfield. During the World War a parish hall was added, which is now being used by the various fraternal and other organizations of the community. The congregation paid off the last of the mortgages on this property in timefor a celebration of thanksgiving, which was combined with the rite of confirmation, on June 14.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Church of the Ascension, Bloomfield, was celebrated on May 26, with an anniversary dinner in the parish house. The rector, the Rev. John Thomas, presided. Addresses were made by the Rev. Charles E. McAllister, Mayor Demarest, Ex-Mayor Pilch and Mr. Frank L. Fisher, President of the Chamber of Commerce. A history of the parish was read by Mr. Arthur H. Whitefield. Since the Rev. John Thomas took charge of this work there has been a steady growth in all departments. Ground for the new rectory will be broken in the very near future, funds for its erection being well in hand.

The rector, wardens and vestrymen of Grace, Van Vorst, celebrated the eightieth anniversary of the organization of the parish on Whitsunday, June 5, to Trinity Sunday, June 12. The observance opened with a Corporate Communion of the parish, followed by Holy Communion and sermon by Bishop Lines. This was followed by confirmation and the dedication of the following memorials: A tablet in memory of the Rev. Pelham St. G. Bissell; a brass tablet in memory of Virginia Lehman; a cabinet and service flag in memory of Mrs. Mary A. Valleau, and a Lych Gate commemorating the eightieth anniversary of the parish and the tenth year of the rectorship of Canon Bryan. The Rev. S. C. Hughson was the preacher at Festal Even Song on Whitsunday. An early celebration of the Holy Communion was held each day in the week, with a meeting of the Jersey City Archdeaconry on Wednesday, with sermon by Bishop Stearly at the evening service. On Saturday, St. Barnabas' Day a festival celebration of the Holy Communion was held to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the ordination of Canon Bryan to the Priesthood. The Anniversary was concluded by a series of special services on Trinity Sunday.

The Rev. Marshall Montgomery, rector of St. Barnabas, Newark, announces that in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the parish, an effort will be made to raise $50,000 to pay for the restoration of St. Barnabas' Church. Early in December one transept collapsed and the walls crumbled through the decay rot in the floor beams and the failure of the mortar. There was no cellar under the Church and the restoration required taking eight thousand cubic yards of dirt out of an opening two feet square. Mr. Montgomery and the vestry are to be congratulated on the heroic work done to save this splendid parish.

St. John's, Newark: Another Church, which was threatened with decay, was St. John's Church, Newark. At the beginning of 1920 plans were undertaken for an entire reconstruction of the foundation, the enlarging of the chancel, the shingling of the exterior, a new steam plant, new electric lighting, redecorating the interior and painting the exterior, to cost $17,000. The Women's Guild paid $3,500. An observance of the sixtieth anniversary of the parish in September, 1927, will be observed by clearing off the remaining indebtedness and the church will be reconsecrated for Divine Worship. The Bishop of the Diocese will be present for the anniversary service on September 18. An effort is now being made to pay off the rectory mortgage. The Rev. J. Fred Hamblin, rector of St. John's, deserves great credit for his faithfulness in this effort.

Missioner Presented to Diocese.

Anonymous friend has given Bishop Davies a sum of money sufficient for the support of a Diocesan Missioner for one year. The Rev. George W. Ferguson has accepted the appointment and will enter upon his duties in October.

It is expected that Mr. Ferguson will preach missions, hold retreats and quiet days, address guilds and organizations, and hold conferences with groups of young people and students. His schedule will be planned by the Diocesan Committee on Evangelism.

HARRISBURG.

Rt. Rev. J. H. Darlington, D. D. Bishop.

York: On Wednesday evening, June 15, the members of the public speaking class of the York Y. M. C. A. tendered a banquet to the Rev. Paul S. Atkins, their instructor. Each member delivered a brief address extolling the value of the training received from the course and expressing their indebtedness to the instructor for the inspiration of his personality and teaching. Ten of those present expressed their intention of enrolling again for further study next fall.

Extensive repairs, alterations, and redecorations are being made in Christ Church, Williamsport, Pa., from memorial funds which have been given for that special purpose. It is hoped to have all finished by the fall, if possible.

A Fireside Prayer.

W. F. C.

Spirit Divine bend low and come
To make this house Thy humble home;
Secure these doors, shut out low strife,
Nor let weak thought betray our life.

When human friends and social cheer
Obscure Thy voice, Oh, make me hear;
Lest, by neglect, this soul of mine
Should drive away my Friend Divine.

When food and clothes and business drill,
With slavish tasks the hours fulfill;
Then help me hold my liberty
By bending to Thy mastery.

If gaiety would steal my heart,
Then stir my soul to do my part;
Lest Holy Word and Holy Day
From out my life be swept away.

If testing and affliction come,
And chast'ning rod doth make me dumb,
Make my face shine that it may say,
He said, "I am with you alway".

O Highest Friend, my loving Guide,
Help me to walk close by Thy side;
Then from this house a light shall show
The earthly path the pilgrims go.

The Kingdoms of the World.

King George II of England set at least one example which has commended itself to thoughtful and cultured people when he rose to his feet and stood during the rendering of the Hallelujah Chorus in Handel's "Messiah". We are reminded as we hear it that it comes early in that great oratorio, and that much heart-rending tragedy follows this anthem of triumph. We sometimes wonder if it is in the right place.

The place where the celestial chorus occurs in the Book of Revelation raises the same question. They are singing in heaven, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever", a long time before the kingdoms themselves are aware of any such spiritual transformation. The woman clothed in the sun has yet to make her perilous escape with her child from the fury of the pursuing dragon. The beast with the terrible heads and horns and crowns has not as yet received his deadly wound. Babylon has not yet fallen. Satan is not yet bound. The battle of Armageddon is yet to be fought.

The whole future seems uncertain; yet the song goes on.

If we consider the time when John wrote the book, we find no more cheerful outlook. Nero was on the throne, as many scholars believe. Injustice and persecution were enthroned, and the souls of the martyrs were crying "How long, O Lord, how long"? And yet they were singing in heaven that the kingdoms of the world were becoming the kingdoms of our Lord!

If any one could really think so when the New Testament books were in process of writing, we can think so now. We need not conceal from ourselves a single ominous fact. But some kingdoms are certainly drawing nearer to the ideals of essential righteousness.

There is a greater reverence in the scientific mind, and a more constructive aspect in the formulation of scientific discoveries, than in former generations. If there still are those who believe science to be inherently irreligious, they are not the people who know best the scientific spirit. There is a more genuine honesty in business and a more sincere regard for truth in advertising. There is general recognition in the business world of the responsibilities of power.

We need not think of "kingdoms" wholly as geographical divisions of territory, or spheres of political control. Some very wide areas of human thought and action are steadily becoming more religious in their spirit.

We cannot yet afford to change the position of the triumphant anthem in the oratorio of the centuries. Even now we may sing in hope and expectation that the kingdoms of the world are in process of becoming what was affirmed in the prophetic song of heaven. —Youth's Companion.

The Cure For Worry.

One of the greatest curses of the modern world or at any rate of the average conscientious man or woman in the world we are most familiar with, is the curse of worry. Most people carry about with them a burden of care from which they are seldom if ever entirely free—care about reputation, about one's positions, in life, about making ends meet, about competition, and rivalry in our secular affairs, about our relations with others at home or outside the home, about physical health or the ability to do what is expected of us in this or that particular, about knowing what line we ought to take in a specific crisis or change of circumstances, about the people one loves best and who for that very reason are able to hurt us more than others can, about the measures to be taken to save some of these, perhaps from the consequences of their own folly and sin—from ruin and despair. These and such like are the kind of problems which confront the ordinary decent-living, upright person who bears responsibility bravely in spheres great or small today.

Is it reasonably possible to escape being anxious about them? Yes, it is, or our Lord would never have told us to banish care from our thought about life. Care is one thing, and sorrow is another; no soul goes through life without sorrow; none is ever sanctioned without knowing something at first hand of the fires of affliction. But worry is a different matter; no one is ever the better for it, but the worse. It corrodes the mind, weakens character, destroys that balance of feeling and judgment which should ever distinguish the man of faith. Suffer you may, and that keenly, without feeling a grain of anxiety about the outcome; and, stranger still to him who knows not God, it is possible in the hour of sorrow to draw so sweetly near to the heart of Christ, and so enter into the fellowship of His cross, as to be kept in perfect peace. Peace can exist with pain, but never with worry, anxiety, and care.

The great secret simply is that of sharing with God habitually in meeting what has to be met and bearing what must be borne. It is not sufficient to do it now and then or wait till the time of stress arrives; we must be accustomed to dwell with God in the inner sanctuary of our being, and then nothing can take us unawares that happens on the outside of life. We are what our prayers make us—everybody is. It is not only a man here or there who takes the trouble to pray; if we do not pray to God we are praying to something else all the time; our wishes, words and actions are all prayers. There is no distinction in principle between what we ask for and what we do; for what are deeds but prayers, appeals addressed to life? And where appeal only is possible, with no corresponding power of action to support it, appeal addressed to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, it can no more fail of its due effect than God can change His nature. We are not alone in this or in anything else. The mystery of human solidarity is undeniable; not less so in our solidarity with God. To commune with God in all things, to commit our way unto Him in calm and quiet surrender to His holy will, is to partake of both His power and His peace.—R. J. Campbell, D. D.

Ages since in colors rich and rare
Artists traced with tender loving care
Holy Sriptures, words of praise and prayer.

Missals, too, and music of their day
Sacred paintings saved from all decay,
Though the artist-monks have passed away.

Also nuns in their devotion strong
Loved to paint the words of praise and song,
Such a task could never be too long.

Most of them unknown to fame who gave
All their lives these holy words to save,
Each one sank at last into his grave.

All unhonored yet their names shall shine
In the book of life with sacred sign,
There illumined by a love divine.

I am told that there be those who suppose the Story of Gulliver among the Little Folk of Liliput to be Fiction, but I know that it is true. And I think Guliver must have been a Very Happy Man. And I know that it is so, for I am he.

Now I visited the daughter of Keturah and her husband and her children, and in the early morning, I heard the patter of Little Feet, and my Chamber Door was burst open, and the daughter of the daughter of Keturah jumped into my bed upon the right hand, and my little grandson upon my left, and they snuggled with their heads upon my two shoulders. And the little sister of the daughter of the daughter of Keturah came also, and she rolled and tumbled all over me. And they said, Grandpa can not get up. We will keep him here alway. And he shall tell us Stories. And he shall sing to us.

Now they required of me a song, which is one of the products of my College Education, concerning a Merchant of Holland, who Lost a Leg, and who bought a Cork Leg with an Automatick Attachment. And the song is a long one. For his journey was long. When the leg got started, he could never stop it. And he called to some men with all his might, O stop this Leg or I'm ruined quite, but they heard him aid invite, in less than a minute he was out of sight.

And I had to sing that long song over and over.

And when the long day was done, and evening had come, I sat down with a Book, and would have read, but the little sister of the daughter of the daughter of Keturah climbed into my lap, and compelled me to lay down my Book.

Now hear me, all ye parents and grand-parents. When thou must choose between an Interesting Book and a Little Child fling the book into the flame if need be for the book will be available an hundred years from now, if it be not happily forgotten, but a Little Child must be enjoyed Now or Never. For it will not long be a Little Child.

And she said, Grandpa, sing about the Leg. Sing about the Beam.

And I sang how its joints were as strong as an Iron Beam and its works were a Compound of Clockwork and Steam, which pleased her much.

But the day had been long, and she had played Vigorously. And after a while she said, Grandpa, do not sing any more. And she laid her little Red Gold head against me, and she said. This is a Comfortable Chair. And she gave a Sleepy Yawn, and that was the Last Word she said until morning.

And the daughter of eKturah came and said, Shall I carry her up to bed, or wilt thou?

And the daughter of Keturah came carried thee after I had sung to thee of the Merchant of Holland.

And I returned and sat by the fire, and picked up my book, but I cared little for it for the happy memory of the day.

And as I mused by the fire I thought how many men there be who get an Automatick Leg that runneth away with them, and how much better it is to be Master of our Own Mechanism, which so few men can claim. For while I have endeavored all my life to walk on Two Legs, even the Ideal and the Practical, and to step forward with neither one farther than I could bring the other up beside it, yet I have not always done so, and among my respected associates be many men who have been hopping all over Holland on a Leg which they can not stop.—Exchange.

Switzerland.

The bruised grape its life-blood yields;
O'er dying grain rise golden fields; ,
Midst history's pangs, at God's command,
Were born thy glories, Switzerland.

Refrain:

Oh, Switzerland! Oh, Switzerland!
I love thy virgin snows,
Thine emerald hills
And lakes and rills,
Thy mystic Alpine-glows.
I love thee morn and noon and even—
Thy portals are the gates of heaven!

Against earth's madd'ning strifes and wars
Thy stalwart manhood ever bars
And, every alien foe withstood,
Defends thy triune brotherhood!

Refrain:

Thy day, by God's Almighty Hand,
Hath come to thee, Dear Switzerland:
Thy white cross, lifted high, unfurled,
To thee hath drawn and leagued the world!

Little Accidents Or Big Catastrophes.

What we are going to do about the innumerable little, irritating accidents which tear the children's clothes and bruise their tender flesh or work disaster to the household in one or more of the many other ways? Is it really a momentous occasion when a clean table-cloth gets suddenly soiled, the floor spotted, or the stockings torn? Those things are merely little pinpricks of every day life to the wise mother who keeps the right perspective. The principal care should be to avoid making them seem such terrible catastrophes that they upset the household and do serious harm to the child nature.

"Oh, dear! Mama, see what I've done." The little girl's eyes were scared and teary, her face white, as she came into the kitchen holding on to her bleeding knee and soiled, torn stocking.

"I can fix that right up," said her mother setting about it cheerfully. "Of course, it is too bad it happened, but we won't worry over it. I know you are as careful as you can be of your clothes so as to help Mother.

"I remember when Brother was a little boy I sat mending his stockings one day, and I said, 'I wonder how you get so many little holes in your stockings'. 'Well, you see,' Brother explained, 'when I play, my legs fly out in all directions and catch on things and tears.' I guess you must be like Brother," ended her mother with a smile.

"Oh, Mama, you're so nice to me," said the little girl with a grateful hug. "I don't mind the bump on my knee, but I was so afraid you would scold about the hole in my stocking."

This child was of the sensitive type to whom a scolding beats on the ear like blows on the heart. A gentle word of caution, soothing kindness for the bruise, and a swift mending of the stocking soon destroyed all the trouble, and a loving, happy child went out to play, knowing that she need not be afraid to tell her mother anything.

A girl just entering her teens was staying with an aunt one summer, and in carrying a pitcher across the floor she dropped it and it broke. To the aunt's amazement the girl clasped her hands tightly and cried piteously, "Oh! don't hit me, I didn't mean to do it."

"What do you mean! Of course I wouldn't hit you—especially for an accident," assured the aunt.

"But I have always been hit when I broke anything," faltered the young girl, and she drew a long breath of relief, as she realized that in this household a broken pitcher was not a calamity.

Adults often have accidents which are annoying, but beyond an impatient exclamation and a bit of regret, little notice is taken of them. Why then should children's minds be impressed with the unforgetableness and unforgivableness of their accidents? Usually such an attitude makes them more nervous and awkward and leads to further accidents. It is so much better, when the inevitable annoyances occur, to remedy them quickly and cheerfully with the children's aid, in a matter-of-fact way, quietly suggesting how to avoid future mishaps. When children are habitually careless it may be wise to suggest that they save from their allowances and help replace broken articles, paying perhaps half of the price, or that they assist in buying new clothes to replace those damaged. Most children are willing and eager to do this, if it is presented to them in a kindly way, as they know it is fair and just, and they feel the dignity of being treated with reason and consideration.—Lydia L. Roberts.

The Lausanne Conference.

Why should not every Christian denomination be represented at Lausanne? There will be much to gain and nothing of value to lose on the part of any representative of that conference. It will have no power to pledge or commit those churches participating in it. Its way is the way of understanding and of love. Old prejudices will be dissolved. New appreciations will be stirred and there will be felt a joint responsibility for the welfare of a world. "If I knew all, I would love all." Love never separates. It always unites. The story is familiar in regard to Charles Lamb, how when a friend sought the privilege of introducing him to a man for whom Lamb had a preconceived dislike, he said: "I don't know him; I don't want to know him. I can never hate a man I know." The round table at Lausanne will react on all who participate in it in a better understanding of those from whom they may differ, and that will mean more Christian love. Some one may say: "See how much we are one in spirit now. See how closely we live together now. See how well we work together and the many good things we do together now." Yes, but the one baffling reply is as it has been repeated again and again: "We do not worship together," and the non-Church world passes by and says: "We have no use for a divided Church or the sectarian Christianity it represents." What did the non-Church world say of the early Christians? "Behold how these Christians love one another." And may not the latter be what shall be said of the conference at Lausanne in 1927?—Rev. C. R. Erdman, D. D.

The World's Greatest Hero.

F. B. Stone.

The world, how it worships a hero!
It so loves to pour out its praise,
Delights in extolling his honor,
Exultant his deeds it portrays;
O would that its eyes were but opened
The greatest of Heroes to see,
And all hearts were singing His praises
The Hero of old Galilee.

No other approaches His triumph,
For He is the First and the Last;
No other e'er won in such struggles
Redeeming a world from its past.
O give to Christ Jesus all glory!
Let earth with its glad praises ring,
All voices be lifted to honor
The Christ as our Hero and King!

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

"What Think Ye of Christ?"

M. L. G.

Our Lord lived on this earth thirty-three years. He was a child, running about the streets of Nazareth, caring for the smaller children of His family, helping Mary to bring water from the village fountain, and as He grew tall and strong working with Joseph in the shop. Then He became the Carpenter, and no man in Nazareth had to complain of a table or a yoke He fashioned. Later He spent three years in preaching the kingdom, teaching, healing, showing in His life what God is. And at last He died upon the Cross, and in dying took away the sin that nailed Him there.

"What think ye of Christ?" He asked once, but those to whom He spoke looked upon Him and did not know it was the Christ they saw. "He has a devil," some said sullenly. Others thought Him insane. But some thought He could not do the works He did unless God were with Him. "May He not be one of the prophets? Or John the Baptiser, risen from the dead?" After He gave up His life for the world the priests of His own nation spoke of Him as "that deceiver"; but the Roman Centurion called Him a righteous man, the Son of God.

Peter once, in a flash of sight that came from the revealing Spirit, cried out, "Thou art the Christ"! and later Martha said wistfully, "I have believed that Thou art the Christ, the Son of God, even He that should come into the world". Thomas, slow of heart as he was, finally confessed Jesus as his Lord and God. Paul, who came so well to know Him that life and Jesus meant the same, preached "Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God". And John, grown old in service and friendship with his Master, wrote with trembling hand, "The Word was God; and the Word became Flesh and dwelt among us. And we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth".

But Jesus' question is not yet fully answered, for every soul to whom He comes must answer it for himself. May the Spirit shine into our hearts also, that we may see Him as He is!

Aunt Emily's Surprise.

There was one thing that little Jane Sanders wanted more than anything else in the world, and that was a green dress with tucks in it. Just why she wanted a green dress with tucks in it she did not exactly know, but Marjorie had one. And perhaps that was reason enough for Jane.

Marjorie had been a visitor at Jane's house all summer, and she and Jane had become devoted friends. The only thing they ever really quarreled about was whether the town Marjorie came from was nicer than the town Jane lived in. For a while that was a sore point, and they made each other very unhappy about it until Jane declared that she thought it was a silly thing to fuss about and she wasn't going to fuss about it any more. She kept her word.

No matter how many times Marjorie would say, "Now, if we were only in Frankfort, we could do so and so this afternoon", Jane would not fuss.

Now, if the truth must be told, Marjorie rather liked to fuss and argue and disagree and make up—so when she found that Jane wouldn't argue about towns she tried to start a quarrel about something else.

But Jane wwas determined, and she wouldn't—at least not until Marjorie began to tease her about not having a dress with tucks in it.

"Just think,. you haven't a single dress with tucks in it," said Marjorie.

"I have too," said Jane. "My pink dress has big tucks in it."

"Fine tucks are nicer," said Marjorie.

"I like big ones," persisted Jane. "Well, I have a green dress with tucks in it."

"I like pink just as well." But Jane didn't like pink just as well. She liked green, and she wanted a green dress just like Marjorie's.

She hoped that she would get it as a birthday present, but her birthday came and went without the green dress.

No one, except Marjorie, really knew how much she wanted it, and Marjorie only knew because she had tormented it out of her.

It was forgotten for a while during the excitement of packing Marjorie's trunk and saying good-by to her when she had to start home, but now that there was no one for Jane to play with she had more time than ever to think about the dress.

She determined to ask mother if she couldn't have one. She did ask mother, and mother said that she believed Jane had all the dresses she needed, and that she thought it would be foolish to buy any more.

Then Jane was unhappy indeed! Sometimes she cried a little to herself, but she tried not to let any one know that she was unhappy.

And then one day this great surprise came. It was a letter from Aunt Emily, and it said:

"Tell Jane that I am sending her a little present because she was so sweet to Marjorie and made her have such a good time. Marjorie seems to be sure that she will like it."

And when it came—yes, of course you know—it was a lovely green dress, exactly like Marjorie's, only with tucks just a little bit finer.—Youth's Companion.

The Boyless Town.

A cross old woman of long ago
Declared that she hated noise;
"The town would be so pleasant, you know,
If only there were no boys."
She scolded and fretted about it till
Her eyes grew heavy as lead,
And then, of a sudden, the town grew still:
For all the boys had fled.

And all through the long and dusty street
There wasn't a boy in view;
The baseball lot where they used to meet
Was a sight to make one blue.
The grass was green on every base
And the paths that the runners made;
For there wasn't a soul in all the place
Who knew how the game was played.

The cherries rotted and went to waste—
There was no one to climb the trees;
And nobody had a single taste,
Save only the birds and bees.
There wasn't a messenger boy—not one—
To speed as such messengers can;
If people wanted their errands done
They sent for a messenger man.

There was little, I ween, of frolic and fun;
There was little of mischief and mirth;
The sad old town, since it lacked its boys,
Was the dreariest place on earth.
The poor old woman began to weep,
Then she awoke with a sudden scream.
"Dear me." she cried, "I have been asleep.
And, oh, what a horried dream!"

CHRISTIANS' METHODS OF SALVATION

JESUS CHRIST.

A Full, Perfect and Sufficient Sacrifice, Oblation and Satisfaction For the Sins of the World.

A man in the prime of life lay on his couch. Suddenly laid aside by sickness, from an active business life, and from a place of prominence in the church of which he was an esteemed member and office bearer, he had leisure to think. Never before, in the days of health and religious effort, had he considered his own personal condition in the sight of God, or where he would go when earthly life was past.

On the Lord's day afternoon a friend called to see him, and in the course of conversation said to the sick merchant: "I have more than once been at the very gate of death, and I cannot describe what peace I enjoyed at the prospect of meeting God, simply trusting in the precious blood of Jesus Christ as my only plea, my only title."

The sick man raised himself on his elbow and said: "I have been thinking about the same matter a good deal of late. I feel I have not been sufficiently zealous in religion to enable me to say I can look into the future as you do. I would give all that I possess if I could."

"Religion is not a title of heaven, dear sir," replied the Christian visitor. "Religion never gave anybody peace with God, or a title to His presence. The blood of Jesus Christ alone can do that."

The sick man seemed bewildered. He had been accustomed to think that religion was the very best thing in the world, and that when people spoke of "conversion", "salvation" and "cleansing in the blood of Christ", they simply expressed in that way, and, according to their own peculiar creed, the same thing as he called "raligion". His friend saw his perplexity, and in order to take full advantage of it, to bring before him the gospel of God's salvation, he said: "May I read you a short portion of the Bible?" To which he received a glad consent. The portion chosen was the twelfth chapter of Exodus, in which an account of the Passover, the sprinkling of the blood and the safety of the first born are given.

"Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, in the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house. Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats; and ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening. And they shall take of the blood and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it . . . for I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the first born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the Lord. And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt . . . for the Lord will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel and on the two side posts, the Lord will pass over the door and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you." (Exod. 12:3-23.)

Commenting briefly on the verses, he said: "It was the blood shed and sprinkled, the blood trusted, and it alone, that gave safety to all within the houses that night. All under the shelter of the blood were safe; all outside it, no matter what their character, were doomed to judgment." There was a solemn silence in the room as he finished reading, a silence which the visitor felt unwilling to break, as it seemed to him that God was working deep conviction by His spirit through the word, in the soul of him who lay there.

Sitting up, the sick man stretched out his hand, and, grasping the hand of the visitor, said slowly, with great emotion: "It's all in the blood. I see it now, as I never did before. I have been trusting to my religion and my own righteousness, but now I see clearly that my only title to salvation is in the blood of Christ." The Christian bowed his head in silent thanksgiving to God, and at the request of the sick merchant, now filled with peace and joy, he bowed his knees and gave thanks to God for his deliverance and conversion. God raised him to testify to others of the precious blood of Christ, the sinner's only plea and title to heaven.

How many think that religion is a saviour! How many are trusting to their own righteousness and good works to take them or to help them into heaven, whereas God declares that the precious blood of Christ, trusted in by the sinner, is his only shelter from coming wrath.

"The blood of Jesus Christ"—God's only begotten son—"Cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

And let me still Thy mercy prove,
And let me still Thy mercy prove,
And care for me.

The Fourth-of-July Tree.

It wasn't because Daisy and Dana didn't like the country. They did. But in the city on the Fourth of July there was so much going on! There was the big parade on! There was Punch-and-Judy show in the afternoon; and in the evening mother and father let them stay up very late and see the fireworks in the park.

But mother and father couldn't put off the trip until after the Fourth on account of father's business and so two rather disappointed children awoke on Fourth of July morning in camp among the mountains.

"If we could only hear one firecracker," mourned Dana. "Just one! But it's still! I like the still almost always, but not on the Fourth of July."

"Anyway, we're going to have some sparklers tonight," said Daisy.

"But the parade," reminded Dana.

"Let's have a parade ourselves," said Daisy. "We'll pretend we are a long procession and march round and round the camp. You get the fish pan for a drum, and I'll blow a comb for music."

"Poor children!" said mother to father. "They are so disappointed. But the lunch is ready, and if you'll bring round the auto we shall start."

She went to the door and called, "Daisy! Dana! Come! We're going on a picnic."

The children loved a picnic under the trees in the woods, and soon they were speeding over the mountain road.

While mother was getting lunch and the coffee was boiling merrily on the camp stove, father disappeared and was gone a long time. Daisy grew really anxious, fearing that he had forgotten dinner or lost his way, but mother said she thought he would be back in time; and after all he was.

As he passed Dana a sandwich he asked, "Did you ever see a Fourth-of-July tree?"

"Why, no. Is it like a Christmas tree?"

"In some ways it is, and in other ways it isn't," was father's queer answer.

"No Santa Claus, but an Uncle Sam!"

"Finish your lunch, and we'll go find the Fourth-of-July tree," promised mother.

The children lost their appetites, they were so excited, and could hardly wait to start off with mother into the deep woods. Father had disappeared again, very mysteriously.

"Keep your eyes open," advised mother, "It's not far away. You may hear it before you see it."

"Does it talk?" demanded Daisy. "I never knew a tree could talk."

They went along quietly after that with their eyes and ears wide open.

They came suddenly upon a little clearing, and growing straight and tall was the Fourth-of-July tree. To the end of each branch was tied a tiny American flag. On the tiptopest bough was a big flag. The tiny flags fluttered in the breeze, and the big flag blew proudly out. And, too, when the wind blew, several little cow-bells that were hidden in the branches tinkled noisily, while a half-dozen big balloons tugged impatiently at their strings and tried to fly loose from the Fourth-of-July tree up into the air.

There were mysterious bundles on the tree, too, and while the children wondered what was in them a very tall Uncle Sam appeared near the tree, bowed politely and told them that, if they would be seated, he would now distribute the gifts to those whose names were written upon the bundles.

"Daddy! Daddy!" cried Daisy. "Oh, what a nice Uncle Sam you make. But I never dreamed you were so tall before."

Everything in the bundles was a noise-maker; a drum, squeaking balloons, watchmen's rattles—the children had never dreamed there were so many things to make a racket with.

"Make all the noise you want," said father—that is, Uncle Sam. "Fourth of July isn't Fourth of July without noise."

And they did!—Youth's Companion.

Who Invented Clocks?

If ever you visit London, go to the Kensington Museum, where there is a clock that was made in 1325. It is going still. For more than five centuries it has been kept going. It told the hours long before Columbus came to America. It still measures time, while steam and electricity are moving all around it.

But when it was first made the venerable clock was as much an object of wonder as an aeroplane. Only kings and rich monasteries could purchase a clock.

There are two kinds of clocks, spring clocks in which the wheels are moved by power from the uncoiling of a coiled spring, and pendulum clocks, which are moved by the gradual falling of a weight, the falling being regulated by the swinging of a pendulum. When a pendulum is set swinging, it makes each swing backward and forward in just the same time until it stops, no matter whether the swing is over a long or a short space. Its swing is over a longer space at first than toward the last, when it is about to stop; but it goes faster, so that the time of the swing is always equal.

But the real inventors of the clock were probably the Arabs. These children of the desert were great inventors many years ago. An Arab is said to have brought a clock to Europe during the twelfth century.

The first public clock was raised on a tower at Padua in Italy. A famous striking clock was placed on a tower in Bologna in 1356. From Italy the invention was carried to Germany.

Town clocks and church clocks are made to move by trains of wheels in much the same way; but the wheels are very large and strong, and the weights and pendulums were heavy. It is very hard to wind up one of these clocks. In winding up the clock in the tower of old Trinity Church, New York City, the crank or handle has to be turned around eight hundred and fifty times. Many wonderful clocks have been made, in some of which the machinery moves figures of men and animals in a very curious way. At Heidelberg, Germany, was formerly a town clock which, whenever it struck the hour, caused the figure of a man to pull off his hat, while a rooster crowed and flapped his wings. This clock was later destroyed during the war with France in 1693.

About the year 1500 clocks, which had been too expensive for the poor to purchase, became in more common use, for they were now being made in many cities. Watches seem to have been made also about this time. Today American factories pour out millions of clocks yearly, and we may purchase one for less than a dollar if we desire a cheaply made one.

The most wonderful clock in the world today is at Strassburg, Alsace; and it is called the "astronomical" clock. One part of this clock is a perpetual calendar; and it regulates itself, according to the years, months, days, etc. Many mythological figures are built around the clock, and all are worked by machinery.

Some of the largest clocks in the world are in our country, one of them being in Jersey City; and the light from this one may be seen many miles on North River. Another very large one is on the city hall, Philadelphia.—Julia Wolffe, in the Christian Endeavor World.

It seems to me that the best work in the world is being done by suffering souls who "out of weakness have been made strong". Preachers talk about "the compensations of life", meaning that what is lost here is made up there, and thus the balance is redressed; but this is a shallow notion. The truth is still more wonderful, and it is that loss, bravely and believingly accepted, becomes an exceeding gain; and one does not merely get something in its stead, but through it attains something impossible without.—David Smith.

Deaths

REV. CHARLES D. MALONE.

Entered into rest, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Winn, Route 6, Henderson, N. C., the REVEREND CHARLES D. MALONE aged eighty-one years. The greater part of his years in the ministry was spent in the Diocese of East Carolina, where at one time he was rector of the oldest church in the State in the oldest parish, St. Thomas Church, Bath, N. C.

Mr. Malone was a Confederate veteran, having served faithfully under Stuart in the First North Carolina Cavalry. He retired from the ministry in 1917 by reason of failing health.

Personal Notes

The Rev. John Knight Shryock, who for many years has been engaged in missionary work in China, and until recently headmaster of St. Paul's High School for Boys at Anking, has been appointed assistant to the Rt. Rev. Frank Du Moulin, rector of the Church of the Saviour, West Philadelphia. Mr. Shryock entered upon his duties July 1.

The offices of the rector of Trinity Parish, New York, the Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, D. D., have been moved from 187 Fulton Street to 72 Wall Street, New York City.

The Rev. C. C. Keller, of Temple, Texas, is to have charge of the missions at Belen and Socorro, New Mexico, during the summer months, with headquarters at Belen.

The Rev. Wyatt Brown, D. D., rector of St. Michael and All Angels' Church, Baltimore, Md., is spending July and August at his summer home in Canada. The Rev. George E. Zachary, assistant minister, will be in charge of the parish.

The Rev. William Henry Pettus, rector of St. Mark's Church, Washington, D. C., will spend August and September in Europe.

The Rt. Rev. William Cabell Brown, D. D., Bishop of Virginia, with Mrs. Brown, sailed on June 18 for a two months' trip to Europe. Bishop Brown expects to return to his Diocese about September 1.

ORDINATIONS.

The ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Henry Edwards, which took place on the morning of June 16, at the Church of the Epiphany, Orange, N. J., was made the occasion for a great rally of the clergy, both white and colored, from the diocese and elsewhere. About fifty clergy were in the procession in which were representatives from the Dioceses of New York, Long Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. The ordination was taken by Bishop Stearly, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Dr. Herbert M. Denslow, of the General Theological Seminary. The candidate was presented by the rector, the Rev. George M. Plaskett; the litany was said by Canon Leslie. Mr. Edwards is a graduate of the Bishop Payne Divinity School, at Petersburg, Virginia, and is at present a special student at the General Theological Seminary. He is in charge of the new mission for Colored people recently begun in the City of Passaic.

In Trinity Church, Porto Alegre, Brazil, on May 1, the Rt. Rev. William M. M. Thomas, Suffragan Bishop of Southern Brazil, advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Rodolpho Centeno Rasmussen and the Rev. Henry Dymoke Gasson. The former was presented by the Rev. Charles H. C. Sergel and the latter by the Rev. Mario B. Weber. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Nemesio de Almeida. In the chancel were all the clergy in attendance at the twenty-ninth council. The epistle was read by the Rev. Americo Vespucio Cabral and the gospel by the Rev. Franklin T. Osborn.

On Trinity Sunday, June 12, 1927, in St. Luke's Church, Memphis, Tennessee, Mr. Thomas Earl Dudney was ordered deacon by the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Charles Noyes Tyndell, S. T. D., rector of St. Luke's, who also read the litany. The sermon was by the Rev. Israel Harding Noe, Dean of St. Mary's (Gailor Memorial) Cathedral. The Rev. Alexander C. McCabe, Ph. D., read the epistle, and the Rev. James R. Sharp served as chaplain to the Bishop. Mr. Dudney will be deacon-in-charge of Trinity Church, Winchester, and St. Mary Magdalene's, Fayetteville, which he has served as lay reader while pursuing his studies in the Theological Department at Sewanee.

On Thursday, June 16, 1927, in Trinity Church, Clarksville, Tennessee, his home parish, Mr. Charles Boyd Romaine was ordered deacon by the Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Prentice A. Pugh, rector of the Church of the Advent, Nashville, and Dean of the Convocation, who was himself ordained to the priesthood in Trinity Church. The sermon was by the Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers, rector of St. Peter's Church, Columbia, who also read the litany. The Rev. James R. Sharp read the Epistle and acted as chaplain to the Bishop. Mr. Romaine, who is a graduate of 1927 from the Theological Department of the University of the South at Sewanee, will do mission work in the diocese under direction of the Bishop Coadjutor.

At the Pro-Cathedral Church of the Nativity, Bethlehem, Wednesday, June 15, Clarke Trumboro, graduate of the Philadelphia Divinity School, was ordained to the diaconate by the Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Bethlehem. The candidate was presented by the Very Rev. D. Wilson Gateson, dean of the Pro-Cathedral, under whose ministry the candidate decided to study for orders. The sermon was preached by the Rev. S. Franklin Custard, rector of Grace Church, Allentown. The Rev. John W. Schmalsteig, curate, read Morning Prayer. The litany was read by the Rev. Gordon Jones and the epistle by the Rev. Arthur T. Reasoner, warden of Leonard Hall. The Rev. Clarke Trumboro will continue his studies doing post-graduate work at the Divinity School.

On Trinity Sunday, June 12, 1927, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine,

New York, the Bishop of New York celebrated the Holy Communion, and ordained to the diaconate:

Mr. Paul Duliver Wilbur, presented by the Rev. J. Wilson Sutton, D. D.; Mr. Harvey Albert Simmonds, B. A., presented by the Rev. Frank Simmonds; Mr. Clarence Van Buchanan, B. A., presented by the Rev. Leopold Kroll; Mr. Leopold Kroll, Jr., presented by the Rev. Leopold Kroll; Mr. Theodore M. Burleson (for the Bishop of Spokane), presented by the Rev. J. Wilson Sutton, D. D.; and advanced to the priesthood; the Rev. Thomas Spranger Bradley, B. A., presented by the Rev. J. Wilson Sutton, D. D.; the Rev. Charles Alexander Wilson, presented by the Rev. R. S. W. Wood; the Rev. Francis Slade Danzoll, B. A., presented by the Very Rev. H. C. Robbins, D. D.; the Rev. Frederic Ricksford Meyers, B. A., presented by the Rev. C. Nelson Moller; the Rev John Varian Daly (for the Bishop of California), presented by the Rev. Frank Simmonds.

The Very Rev. H. C. Robbins, D. D., preached the sermon and united in the laying on of hands.

The Rt. Rev. E. C. Acheson, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Connecticut, ordained Mr. F. Percy Goddard, Ph. B., and Mr. Corwin C. Roach, B. A., to the diaconate in Trinity Church, Seymour, on Trinity Sunday morning.

Mr. Goddard was presented by his rector, the Rev. Mr. Roome, who also preached the sermon, and Mr. Roach by the Rev. D. S. Markle, rector of St. Paul's Church, Fairfield, Connecticut.

The litany office was read by the Rev. L. O. Melville, of Plainville.

The Bishop celebrated the Holy Communion, the epistle was read by the Rev. G. E. Fitzgerald, and the Rev. F. Percy Goddard read the gospel.

The Rev. Mr. Goddard has been assigned to work in Texas, and the Rev. Mr. Roach becomes assistant to the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, of New Haven.

Mr. Felix L. Cirlot was ordered deacon June 14 in St. John's Church, Mobile, Alabama. He was presented by the Rev. Gardiner L. Tucker to Bishop McDowell. Assisting in the service were Archdeacon J. F. Plummer, the Rev. Messrs. R. A. Goodwin, J. R. Walker, H. F. Schroeter, T. R. Bridges, D. D. Mr. Cirlot will act as assistant at St. John's this summer, and return to the General Theological Seminary next fall to become tutor.

Mr. Alexander B. Hanson, Jr., was ordered deacon by Bishop McDowell, June 19, at St. Mary's-in-the-Highlands, Birmingham, Alabama. He was presented by the Rev. Oscar deWolff Randolph. The litany was read by the Rev. Ralph J. Kendall. Mr. Hanson will be assistant to the Rev. R. A. Kirchhoffer, Christ Church, Mobile, with charge of Grace Chapel, Oakdale.

On June 15, in St. Luke's Chapel, Sewanee, Tennessee, the Rt. Rev. H. J. Mikell, D. D., Bishop of Atlanta, ordained to the diaconate Granville Gladstone Rogers and George Hazlehurst Harris. The Rev. Russell K. Smith and the Rev. Charles H. Lee, D. D., presented the candidates and the sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. A. W. Knight, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of New Jersey.

Mr. Rogers will become assistant at St. Philip's Cathedral in Atlanta, and Mr. Harris will assist in missionary work in North Georgia.

On May 17, in Grace Church, Sandusky, Ohio, the Rev. Harold Cleaver Zeis and the Rev. Earl Gethus Guthrie were advanced to the Priesthood by the Rt. Rev. Warren Lincoln Rogers, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Ohio. The presenters were the Rev. Canon Charles C. Bubb and the Rev. Donald Wonders, and the preacher was the Rev. I. F. Jones, of Cleveland. There was a gathering of fifteen clergymen, representing the Sandusky Region.

The Rev. William Mitchell Vail Hoffman, Jr., of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, was ordained priest in St. Paul's Church, Brooklyn, on St. Barnabas' Day, Monday, June 13, 1927, by the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., Bishop of New York. Mr. Hoffman received his A. B. from Harvard, and did three years' work in the Harvard Law School. His preparation for the priesthood has been mostly done with the Cowley Fathers in Boston; this was supplemented by a year as special student in the General Seminary, in New York. For the past year he has been in charge of the work for children.

The sermon at the ordination was preached by the Rev. Raymond T. McDonald, S. S. J. E., also a member of the staff of this parish. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Spence Burton, Superior of the American Congregation, S. S. J. E. The Very Rev. Howard C. Robbins, D. D., Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, read the litany. Assisting in the sanctuary were the Rev. Oliver B. Dale, S. S. J. E., the Rev. George A. Meyer, the Rev. Francis B. Roseboro and the Rev. Howard I. Johnson. Mr. Hoffman will shortly return to Boston to finish his work in the Society of St. John the Evangelist.

The rector of the parish, the Rev. Granville M. Williams, S. S. J. E., was not present at the ordination, being in attendance at the Church Congress in San Francisco.

Leland H. Roberts and Leslie A. Wilson were advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. John Chamberlain Ward, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Erie, in St. Luke's Church, Smethport, Pa., on June 21. The Rev. W. E. VanDyke, rector of the parish, presented the candidates, and the Rev. E. J. Owen, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, Sharon, Pa., from which parish the young men originally came, preached the sermon. The newly-ordained priests will continue their missionary work in the diocese.

On Monday, June 20, the Rt. Rev. John G. Murray, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Maryland, assisted by his coadjutor, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Helfenstein, advanced to the priesthood the Rev. Henry Neeson Botts in Mt. Calvary Church, Baltimore. The Rev. Mr. Botts, who is a recent graduate of Nashotah House, is a member of Mt. Calvary clergy staff.

On Wednesday, June 22, Bishop Murray, assisted again by Bishop Helfenstein, ordained to the diaconate in the Prince of Peace Church, Walbrook, Baltimore, Paul G. Linaweaver and James Wilson Hunter. Mr. Linaweaver will serve this summer in St. Matthew's Parish, Garrett County, and Mr. Hunter at St. Barnabas' Church, Sykesville, and Mt. Calvary Church, Howard County.

At Gambier, Ohio, on Trinity Sunday, the following graduates of Bexley Hall were ordained to the diaconate in the Church of the Holy Spirit: Mr. H. H. Griffin, Mr. J. K. McDowell, Mr. J. P. Brereton.

The Rt. Rev. Warren Lincoln Rogers, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Ohio, officiated, and the Very Rev. Dr. Byrer, Dean of Bexley, presented the candidates. The Rev. C. Sturgis Ball, Professor of Homiletics, preached the sermon.

On St. John Baptist Day, June 24, in St. Mark's Pro-Cathedral, Grand Rapids, Mich., Mr. Seward Henry Bean was ordained to the diaconate by the Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick, D. D., Bishop of Western Michigan. The candidate was presented by Dean Ladd of the Berkeley Divinity School and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Lewis, rector of St. Andrew's, Ann Arbor. The Rev. Augustine McCormick, of the Diocese of Rhode Island, acted as master of ceremonies, and the Rev. E. A. Christian as the Bishop's Chaplain. The Rev. Messrs. Whittemore, James H. Bishop, and H. M. Laws took part in the service and the Rev. Messrs. Pipes, Douglas, Farney, Larter, and Dunlop were in the chancel.

The musical service was rendered by St. Mark's choir, of which Mr. Bean was formrely a member, and representatives of St. Paul's Church, Greenville, where Mr. Bean ministered as a lay-reader, were in attendance.

After the service luncheon was served in the parish house by the Campbell Fair Guild. Mr. Bean, who is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and of the Berkeley Divinity School, will spend a year in one of the English universities while pursuing his theological studies.

In Calvary Church, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the Rev. Robert B. Kline, rector Mr. Harry Eustice Elston was made a deacon by the Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, LL. D., on Tuesday, June 21, 1927. The Rev. Mr. Kline presented Mr. Elston, who as a member of Calvary Church for many years has been an earnest worker.

In St. James' Church, Canton, Pa., the Rev. W. H. Robinson, missionary, Mr. Herbert Waldo Manly was made a deacon, on the first Sunday after Trinity, June 19, 1927. The Bishop of the Diocese of Bethlehem ordained Mr. Manley, who was presented by his rector, Mr. Robinson. Mr. Manley is a graduate of Moravian College, Bethlehem, and of the General Theological Seminary, New York.

An impressive service was held on Tuesday, June 28, in St. Andrew's Church, Louisville, Ky., when Richard I. Brown, of Owensboro, Ky., and William Meade Brown of Louisville, were ordained to the diaconate. Both are graduates of the School of Divinity of the University of the South. Mr. W. M. Brown is a great-grandson of the Rt. Rev. William Meade, Bishop of Virginia two generations ago, and his rector, as also the preacher of the occasion, the Rev. John S. Douglas, of St. Andrew's, made mention of this fact in an impressive sermon, using as his text, "I am among you as he that serveth". Mr. Brown, of Owensboro, was presented by the Rev. R. L. McCready, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral; Mr. William Meade Brown, by the Rev. J. S. Douglas. Mr. W. M. Brown is in charge of St. George's Parish, Louisville, and Mr. Richard Brown will work in other parts of the Diocese.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

The good pastor talks more to God than to man about his people.

"No man can be alone when Jesus Christ is his invisible companion."

All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen.—Emerson.

The world judges the Church from the level of the pew, rather than from the standard of the pulpit.

"All that my longing heart can wish
In Thee doth richly meet,
Not to mine eyes is light so dear,
Nor friendship half so sweet."

We will forget what we knew in middle life and in later years, but we will remember what we learned in youth "e'en down to old age". It follows that the chief business of the home is to guard the avenues of the mind of a child, that no evil thing shall enter therein.—The Methodist Protestant.

No labor can take the place of prayer. No learning can take the place of prayer. We are the followers of One who prayed, and praying won His triumph. In living in daily personal touch with God there is strength, as there is joy and peace, for the darkest mile of the untrodden way.—George H. Morrison.

The Spirit of God is still here, at work in us and with us. He still guides us into the truth which is indispensable to such a being as man. God loves His children, seeks to save them from their disobedience and its consequences. To His blessed work we can fix no term. The span of this life is not long enough, nor its content rich enough for a being such as man in whose very heart eternity has been fixed.

He, whom from the Father forth was sent,
Came, the true Light, light to our hearts to bring;
The Word of God—the telling of His thought;
The Light of God—the making visible:
The far-transcending glory brought
In human form with man to dwell;
The dazzling gone—the power not less
To show, irradiate, and bless;
The gathering of the primal rays divine
Informing Chaos to a pure sunshine.
—G. MacDonald.

INTRUDERS

Invisible, intangible, impalpable intruders come and invade our hearts continually. The microscope may detect the most minute microbe that lives in air or fluid or infests our blood, beyond discovery by unaided eyes, and science may teach us how to destroy or baffle it. We can provide protection against the heat or cold or biting wind we cannot see. No magnifying glass is strong enough to reveal nor any medicine or method or research of science adequate to restrain or regulate the intrusive thoughts that beset us, unchartered libertines, straying vagrants, busy demons, needing no air or water or blood in which to live and breed. They hover about us, we do not know where and everywhere, storming at our defences, creeping insidiously through our most careful barriers. The old beliefs in evil and good spirits, deadly fiends and guardian angels attending us constantly, were results of human experience.

Many foes of righteousness and forces of iniquity are at work always in the visible world, but we find earthly help in resisting and combatting them. Courts and governments and power of public sentiment may be enlisted against them and, at least, hold them in check. Sanitation authorities and advisers teach us how to defy the pestilence walking in darkness and bolts and bars, constables and the police, may defend us successfully from the thief of the night. The intruding, disturbing, disorderly thoughts that come soundless, unbidden, unseen, can be fought only by ourselves, with the aid, humbly and earnestly invoked, of the One Power that can prevail over them and help us rout them. They need no hindrance but that which we ourselves, with Almighty assistance, establish. They acknowledge no mastery nor direction, mock at all proprieties, consider no time or place or conditions. They obtrude themselves upon us in bright light of day, in the still hours when we crave and woo sleep, in our churches, homes, offices, shops, while we move among multitudes or are solitary—these thoughts of so many things, past, present and future—thoughts black and ugly, light and frivolous, mournful and hilarious, big and little.

The beautiful wisdom of the Church is illustrated most clearly and realized most vividly by application of the meaning and purposes of its rubrics and ritual and order of services to our personal weaknesses, vicissitudes and needs. The announcement of the coming administration of Holy Communion and the accompanying exhortation to the congregation give warning for special preparation by battle against unworthy and unseemly thought, by consecration of the mind and heart to humility, gratitude and love. One of the sentences for the opening of both morning and evening prayer is the petition that the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts shall be acceptable to the Most High. Yet, if we can imagine a malicious imp enabled to hear the words of our lips and know the meditations and thoughts going with them, he would be stirred many times to demoniac mirth by fearful contrasts, contradictions, inconsistencies in our public and private exercises, too often misnamed "devotions". The law forbids disturbance of religious worship and punishes severely any guilty of that offense; but no human law can prevent the invasion of troops and hordes of riotous thoughts, making the ostensible worship blasphemous mockery and failure more surely than the most obscene mob could. Repeating words humbly confessing ourselves miserable sinners, we harbor thoughts of vanity and self-righteousness and self-exaltation above our neighbors. Audibly begging to be cleansed, we yield to assailing impurities. Beseeching mercy with tongue and lips, we welcome and cherish harsh judgments and criticisms of other people, consider ways to do them harm. Uttering words of resignation and thankfulness, we embitter ourselves with repinings and resentments that have not received according to our own opinions of our own deservings. Amid sounds of solemn dedication to the service of the Almighty we admit to our minds swarms of frivolities and trifles, sordid things, the incidents and sights of the moment, our household, business and social affairs. While the earnest, devout man in the pulpit labors with all the power he has to lead us to right thinking and doing we look into his face and make vain his efforts for us by permitting and encouraging mobs of vagabond, useless, idle, foolish, selfish, impious thoughts to invade and occupy where the preacher is striving to fill with pure purpose and high resolve; so rejecting the good seed and supplying fertile soil for great crops of tares.

The habit of surrender grows. Trying to add a column of figures, work out a business proposition or frame a sentence, attempting to memorize a lesson or absorb the meaning of book or lecture, we are besieged by the alien, distracting thoughts and fancies. When we yield we are led to futility and defeat. In spiritual and temporal life the mob mind is impotent against discipline as any human mob and as likely to run wild to excesses and crime.

As it is with the external life, so it is with the internal. Men become commanders of armies and enterprises by stern self-discipline, by ceaseless vigilance, the courage that conquers inclination and chooses fight rather than the treason of easy surrender. Those who would be captains and commanders of their souls must build within themselves and for themselves those qualities; must carry with them always the full meaning of the psalmist's prayer that the meditation of his heart be acceptable in the sight of his Strength and his Redeemer.

By the Rev. W. G. Lee, Ph. D.

Charleston, S. C.

"Perils of waters, perils of robbers, perils by countrymen, perils by the heathen, perils in the city, perils in the wilderness, perils in the sea, perils among false brethren." —2 Cor. 11:26.

THESE are the words of Paul the Apostle of Christ, the Aristotle and Demosthenes of the Jewish race, who compassed the earth with the truths of redemption. He is speaking in retrospect and in reminiscence, recalling some of his hazardous experiences. These words are especially applicable to our nation today as we speak in circumspect, gazing into the future.

To say this, is not to dim the glory of our nation, not to lower our flag, not to disparage our country. But to show the perils in this great nation which is rich in her endowment from nature, prosperous beyond expectation, influential beyond precedent. We are dangerously near losing the faculties for the higher things that are so necessary for individual and national endurance and permanency. Only those who are so blind they will not see—so deaf they will not hear—will deny that. These are days when it is easy to be cowardly

The Perils of Lawlessness.

We love this great land—her hills, her fields, her flowers, her streams, her mountains, her forests, her plains, her birds—gift of God. We love her for her war record. Braver men never fought, sweeter blood was never spilt, under any flag. We love our flag. We look at it with new eyes as we see in its red the blood from our soldiers' hearts and in its stars the hope that burns in the sky of our faith. But the peril of lawlessness is now a national, a state, a community, a city peril. All talk about Christian citizenship amounts to nothing, as long as Christians do not carry their religion into practical polities, and put principles above party machinery.

It is the duty of every citizen to reverence the laws of the land. Laws are necessary. They promote the well being of the people. Christianity does not destroy patriotism. Christianity but develops and sanctifies it. The Christian citizen should know the laws, reverence them, obey them. True reverence for law should be one of the predominant traits of his character.

Note the disregard for the prohibition law. This shows that we as a nation have not learned that disregard for one law breeds contempt for all law. Attempts to nullify this law are made by the cartoonist, by the jokesmith, by the ha-ha of those who cry aloud about "thirsty days hath September, April, June and November". The American people have spoken—the highest organs of utterance—and it is anarchy for men and women to seek to nullify this great law. The effort to destroy it by ridicule, by private infractions, by home brew, by home sales means that there is more at stake than the prohibition law. The respect of the American government is at stake. I place the bootlegger and those who help him run his nefarious business along with Benedict Arnold. I know this is not apt to win me popular applause or popular praise, but since I seek neither, it is all right. But the fact remains that Benedict Arnold never had part in anything that the bootlegger carries on today.

But the Amendment is in the Constitution—and it is there to stay. Licensed liquor will come back when wives enjoy having their husbands spend their pay checks in the saloon, when children prefer a drunken father, when railroads decide to employ drinking men as engineers and flagmen, when life insurance companies consider steady drinkers better risks than total abstainers, when bankers and business corporations advertise for clerks and bookkeepers who are habitual drinkers, when athletes who train on whiskey, wine and beer beat total abstainers, when credit men decide to class a "rumhound" and "boozer" as a better risk than a sober man, when doctors tell us that a hard drinker has a better chance to pull through a serious operation or case of pneumonia than a sober man. And when that halcyon day arrives Nicholas Murray Butler and Al Smith will be the perfect, logical candidates for President. What I have quoted I approve. And what I say I am ready to fight for, live for, die for.

There is the lawlessness of the lynch law. Showing what? That thousands have never learned that no amend is made for one crime by committing another. Has the biped turned quadruped? And lynchers are usually those who murder by mobs because they are too cowardly to deal individually.

There is evasion of the tax law. And if all the lies that are printed on some tax return slips were published, some would leave town. And a man who evades the tax laws lives on the philanthropy and charity of others.

There is disregard for the sanctity of the marriage law. What terrible grist the divorce mills turn out. There are some men who, because they prefer another woman, and some women who, because they prefer another man, run off to Augusta or elsewhere and get a divorce. But whoever divorces husband or wife for other than Scriptural grounds and marries another lives before God as an adulterer. I lie not.

There is disregard for human life. The murder rate for the registration area of the United States is equal to that of Italy, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, Ireland, Spain, Norway, England and Wales, Quebec, Ontario, Scotland, Holland, Switzerland. There are twelve thousand murder deaths in this country every year. Without further specification I declare that one of the perils that is cutting at the anchor chain of American life, that is digging away at our national foundations, that is walking with dirty and irreverent feet where Washington walked with clean feet—a peril that is rushing in madly and wickedly where angels fear to tread is the peril of lawlessness.

Perils of Material Progress Without Accompanying Spiritual Advance.

President Coolidge says in its main features the Declaration of Independence is a great spiritual document. It is a declaration not of material but of spiritual conceptions. Equality, liberty, popular sovereignty, the rights of man —these are not elements which we can see and touch. They are ideals. They have their source and their roots in the religious convictions. They belong to the unseen world.

Unless the faith of the American people in these religious convictions is to endure, the principles of our Declaration will perish. We cannot continue to enjoy the result if we neglect and abandon the cause. Yet these men who wrought out our Constitution were suspicioned, maligned, abused, misrepresented. But today many climb their family trees, crawl through musty pages of family histories, and scrutinize ancient tombstones in an effort to claim kin with these same men.

Our scientific achievements startle the world. We have added the auto to our feet and run swiftly. But do we know how to walk with God and travel the way God goes —find out the way God is going—and go with Him?

We have added telephones to our tongues and talk across continents and even around the world. But is our voice mighty and eloquent in teaching the truths, the principles, the foundation necessities and the growth essential for a Christian civilization?

We have added the airplane to our body and fly across oceans. Where it took the Pilgrim fathers sixty-six days to cross, the Mauretania crossed in four days, ten hours and forty-nine minutes in 1910. And Lindbergh flew across in thirty-three hours. But can we mount up with wings as spiritual eagles in the spacious and unseen world of the spiritual?

We have learned the secrets of the earth until we get honey from coke, grow oranges in the snow, get medicine from sawdust, and do other wonders that almost awake in us a primeval faith in magic. But have we learned the secret of the Lord, the secret of a peaceful heart?

We have added the X-Ray to our eyes and see the marrow in men's bones, the microscope and see a world in a drop of water, the telescope to our eye and view landscapes fifteen million miles away. But can we see the "city that is very far off"? Can we, and do we, see the things that are most worth-while? Do we see the gold in the common clay of our folks?

We have our factories where seventy men cooperate to make one pair of shoes. Do we know—have we yet learned—that the footsteps of those who visit the sick and seek the lost outweigh the footsteps of all the marching armies of time?

We have our printing presses that reel off thousands of papers a minute. Have we grown efficient in writing godliness and printing truth on the fleshly tablets of human hearts?

We make paths through the wilderness for trains to go a mile a minute where once the covered wagon went with the calendar for a time table. Have we learned how, do we know how, to bring up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord?

"Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

The spiritual was lacking in Babylon—and now Babylon is a garbage can for nations. The spiritual was lacking in Rome—and now Rome is a branchless tree, dishonorably fruitless. The spiritual was lacking in Greece—and now Greece is a crumb in history's rubbish heap. The spiritual was lacking in Egypt—and now Egypt is a shabby sexton of splendid tombs. It was lacking in Spain—and now Spain among the nations is a drowsy beggar watching a broken clock. The spiritual was lacking in Nineveh—and now Nineveh is a dirty door mat for irreverent feet.

The Perils of Impurity.

These powerful perils are with us today. The peril of impure language that manifests itself in salacious stories told before mixed audiences. In profanity that prostitutes the holy name of God which angels hold in highest reverence to lips that are human and dirty and that will soon lie silent in the grave. In vulgarity. And some men seem to delight in vulgarity—as a hog delights in a mudhole, as a buzzard delights in carrion, as a wolf delights in butchery. And sometimes a mother can hardly send her child to the grocery without that child hearing enough smut and vileness to blight its heart for years. I do not mean to say that we are any worse than former ages and former generations in this, but we cannot excuse our cussedness on the ground that others were more cussed in this respect.

The perils of impure literature are with us. It is a reflection on our reading public that Lewis Sinclair's book, "Elmer Gantry", was the biggest seller in one of our big cities recently. Have I read it? Well, well—it is hard to swim through ten miles of sewerage to get one drop of truth.

Where are our young folks oft led to find their heroes and heroines? In the movie? Who are our heroes? David, who fought Goliath? or Gene Tunney, who knocked Jack Dempsey flat? Moses, who refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter? or Babe Ruth? Joseph, who turned down the dirty proposal of Potiphar's wife? or Charlie Chaplin, with his numberless wives, and Valentino with his promiscuous loving that out-paramoured the Turk. Vashti, who refused to obey the king's command to display her beauty? or Mary Pickford and Annette Kellerman? Daniel, who refused to defile himself with the king's meat and with the wine the king drank? or the jelly bean who can "step on the gas" and wiggle through the boll weevil wiggle and hump along in the Camel Hump or girate in the giraffe gambol! What are our national idols today?

I don't want to seem a croaking rain crow predicting a storm, I don't want to seem as one crying wolf when there is no wolf. But I do not want to be as one who cries "PEACE" when the enemy is at the gate. I do not want to be one crying "All is Well" in a sort of sentimental gush. I don't want to be a doctor who will cover smallpox with silk and refuse to use quarantine methods. I don't want to urge the cure of cancer by putting lovely scenery around. Not I. Not I—now. Not I—ever.

Perils of Godless Schools.

We have come to that awful peril today. And many of us are blind to it—and many deaf to the warnings. See the deadly parallel between Tom Paine and some godless schools. Their striking likeness is that they both patronize and flatter Jesus but neither worships Him. To Tom Paine Jesus "was only a man like other men". To the godless school Jesus "was a man like other men". To Tom Paine the stories of Elijah and Elisha are "lying" and "romancing"; to Fosdick and the godless university Elijah and Elisha are "legendary" and "ridiculous". To Tom Paine the miracles of the Bible were "self-evident fables"; to Fosdick and the godless university the miracles of the Bible are "incredible" and "ghosts". To Tom Paine the morality of the Old Testament was "shocking"; to Fosdick and the godless university the morality of the Bible—he is "shocked" by it. To Tom Paine Christ's genealogy was "manufactured"; to Fosdick and the godless university Christ's genealogy was "radically altered". To Tom Paine the Trinity was "absurd stuff"; to Fosdick and the godless university the Trinity is an "arithmetical absurdity". And to both the angels are "an outworn category".

God pity our young folks who have to sit under college teachers who scoff at the Bible and who give them no urge to Church affairs and to spiritual power. How they are often led astray—these fine young folks—by the specious and infidel reasonings. Some of our institutions, when it comes to spiritual realities, are pagan institutions. And poor teachers are they who can teach botany and leave no impression of Jesus, the Lily of the Valley; and astronomy and leave no impressions of Jesus, the Bright and Morning Star. It is bad enough for a man to scoff at the Bible and doubt and all that. But it is of the devil to teach others so to do.

The greatest thievery is to steal the faith of young people in God. The greatest robbery is to rob one going out into the storms of life of the rudder and anchor chains. If Tom Paine were living today he could occupy some Episcopal pulpits, some Methodist, and Baptist, and Presbyterian pulpits and be called the Rev. Thomas Paine, D. D.

If our youth are not given moral training all other success goes for naught and we have been basely guilty in our relation to them. The education of the young should not be narrow or incomplete. It should include all that is necessary to a real education. No student can afford to ignore all the world's greatest literature or all the world's most important history, or some of the world's best philosophy, or all the foundation of the world's laws, or even some elements of science. All this is included within the covers of the Bible which is acknowledged to be the greatest Book of all. If fields are not to be filled with weeds we must sow them thick with the good seed and cultivate them to the limit.

George Washington loved this old Book. Abraham Lincoln loved it. Theodore Roosevelt loved it. Do our schools increase faith in God and the Bible—or destroy it? Do our universities stress and hold to Christian realities? Do our schools help our young people in Church work? Do they come back from colleges to be regular attendants at church and to help teach the young—or are they mere hangers on?

God pity our young people who have to sit under teachers who from behind college chairs, aim their ill-grounded propositions against God's Book and who substitute a "Thus saith the mind of man" for a "Thus saith the Lord". These fine young people are more sinned against than sinning. And I have more respect for a burglar than I have for one who will, by teaching, rob a youth of faith in God's Book and faith in God. If your boy, or girl, doubts the miracles and believes he has a beast ancestry, where did he get it? From some teacher—somewhere? Find out.

I wanted to speak of the perils of the godless home. But so much has been said on this subject until we might seem as one who carries coals to Newcastle. But if by pointing out the perils mentioned in this message I may open our eyes to other perils and make our ears to be keenly sensitized to the warnings of God's Book, I shall feel repaid.

We quote this verse, from Job fifth chapter, as a point of a sword against your heart: "Lo, this, we have searched it, so it is; hear it, and know thou it for thy good."

WELCOMES AN OLD FRIEND.

(From Clifton Forge Va., Review.)

It was no doubt something of a surprise to the friends and admirers of Colonel A. B. Williams to learn of the editorial connection he will have with the Southern Churchman, published weekly in Richmond, as the mouthpiece of the Episcopal Church, in the years to come. This publication having recently changed hands, and the editor chosen by the new owners being unable to report for duty before fall, Colonel Williams was drafted and will be in full charge until further notice. Having had many years of experience as an editor and publisher, we look for him to inject new life in the Churchman and make it one of the outstanding periodicals in the South. Being gifted as a writer and in sympathy with the policies for which the Churchman stands, Colonel Williams will not find it difficult to satisfy, instruct and edify his new constituency. We look for the publication named to maintain a high standard under the new management, and we wish all connected therewith the best of luck.

AUTHENTICITY OF THE BIBLE

By Bishop McIlvaine

V.

AMONG the apocryphal writings, there are two classes. One is that of histories which assumed the names of the apostles, but were literally forgeries and therefore spurious, as well as apocryphal. The other consists of certain writings of a Christian character, and either entirely or in part historical, which are not spurious, but called apocryphal, because their age and authors are unknown, or their authority is of no weight.

Of the first class it may be asserted, without any hazard, that none are quoted within three hundred years after the birth of Christ, by any writer now extant or known; or if any are quoted, it is invariably with marks of censure and rejection. The only possible exception is "the Gospel according to the Hebrews": "which," says Lardner, "was probably either St. Matthew's Gospel in the original Hebrew, with some additions, or, as I rather think, a Hebrew translation of St. Matthew's Greek original, with the additions above mentioned". But this is quoted nowhere without marks of discredit, except in one place in the works of Clement of Alexandria.

Of the second class, none but a book called the "Preaching of Peter", and another entitled the "Revelation of Peter", are quoted, without positive condemnation, by any writer of the three first centuries. These are spoken of only by the same Clement of Alexandria. Compare with these facts the immense mass and variety of concurrent testimony to the books of the New Testament in the writers of the three first centuries—testimonies from all countries and all classes, orthodox or heretics, remember, for example, that you may find in the extant works of Tertullian, or of Irenaeus, or of Clement of Alexandria, more and larger quotations of the small volume of the New Testament, than you can find in writers of all characters, for several ages, of the works of Cicero, though voluminous and always so universally popular; and it will be evident that the apocryphal writings could have presented no difficulties in ascertaining the authentic books of the apostles. None of them were read as having apostolic authority in the Churches of Christians, nor admitted into their sacred volumes, nor included in their catalogues, nor noticed as authentic by the adversaries of Christianity, nor appealed to by all parties calling themselves Christians, as authority in their controversies, nor treated with sufficient respect to be the subject of commentaries, collections, or translations, unless the brief notes on the Revelation of Peter, by Clement of Alexandria, should merit exception. So wide was the contrast between the true and the false; so easily were the true Scriptures distinguished from all unauthorized pretenders to that honorable name.

But this is capable of being exhibited still more impressively. We have stated several important evidences of authenticity, all of which are found in the New Testament and none in any of the apocryphal writings. We will now exhibit certain evidences of spuriousness, all of which are found in the apocryphal writings and none in those of the New Testament.

The reasons which render the authenticity of a work suspicious, are thus enumerated in the learned "Introduction to the New Testament", by Michaelis: 1. When doubts have been entertained, from its first appearance, whether it was the work of its reputed author. 2. When his immediate friends, who were able to judge, have denied it to be his. 3. When a long series of years have elapsed after his death, in which the book was unknown, and in which it must have been mentioned or quoted had it been in existence. 4. When the style is different from that of his other writings; or in case no others remain, different from what might be reasonably expected. 5. When events are recorded which happened later than the time of the pretended author. 6. When opinions are advanced contradictory to those which he is known to have maintained in his other writings. Now it may be affirmed, without fear of contradiction, that the apocryphal books exhibit all these evidences of spuriousness; none of them being exempt from nearly whole list, and few of them deficient in any particular. While, with equal confidence it is asserted that the books of the New Testament books exhibit none of them. In no book of that holy volume, are opinions professed that are contradictory to any which the reputed author is known elsewhere to have maintained; nor are the facts recorded which happened later than the age in which he lived; nor is the style different from that of his other writings, or from what might reasonably be expected from his pen. No book of the New Testament was unknown during a long period of years subsequent to the death of the individual to whom it was ascribed; none can be shown to have been denied by the near friends of the reputed author as his production; no doubts can be proved to have been entertained of the authenticity of any part of the New Testament at the time of its first publication.

That apocryphal writings existed in the first centuries, is a fact which, so far from embarrassing the evidence for the authenticity of the New Testament books and the truth of the Gospel history, very materially confirms it. Had it not been notorious that the apostles did write gospels and epistles, it is not likely that so many would have attempted to pass off spurious gospels in their names. Had it not been that the fame of Christ and His apostles was very great in all lands from the beginning, it is not probable that all these apocryphal authors would have thought of writing about them, or in their names; much less that they would have expected a market for their works. Had it not been notorious and universally allowed, that Christ and His apostles wrought miracles and did many wonderful works, it is not probable that all these writers would have taken it for granted, and sought to build up their particular opinions upon the assumption. "They all suppose the dignity of our Lord's presence, and a power of working miracles, and a high degree of authority, as having been conveyed by Him to His apostles."

That apocryphal books should have been published in the name of the apostles, is precisely what was to be expected from the wide circulation, great popularity, and eminent reverence which their authentic writings had obtained. Current notes soon awaken a disposition to counterfeit them. Popular medicines soon bring into the market apocryphal inventions wearing their names. The effort to pass off the latter is the best proof of the estimation of the former.

The New Testament writers have been treated in this respect precisely like the others. So writes Augustine, "No writings ever had a better testimony afforded them, than those of the apostles and evangelists; nor does it weaken the credit and authority of books received by the Church from the beginning, that some other writings have been without ground, and falsely ascribed to the apostles; for the like has happened, for instance, to Hippocrates; but yet his genuine works have been distinguished from others which have been published under his name". Such also has been the case with many others. Several spurious orations were published under the names of Lysias and Demosthenes. Works were ascribed to Plautus, Virgil, and Horace, which had no title to their names. But it was no difficult matter for the Greek and Roman critics to separate the genuine from the apocryphal works of those authors. Thus it was also with the early Christians. They proved all things and held fast that only which was good. "We receive Peter and the other apostles as Christ," said Sarapion, Bishop of Antioch, "but as skillful men, we reject those writings which are falsely ascribed to them."

Here we might safely leave the question of authenticity; for if the evidence adduced does not prove the New Testament books to have proceeded from the apostles, no book of a past age has any pretention to authenticity; that Milton wrote Paradise Lost must be considered unworthy of credit; that the orations bearing the name of Cicero were composed or delivered by that orator, must be condemned as one of the apocryphal invention of some age of monks and darkness. "I find more such marks of authenticity in the New Testament," said Sir Isaac Newton, "than in any profane history whatever."

But inasmuch as your minds cannot be furnished with too much information on this fundamental subject, I will reserve some important views for a subsequent lecture.

There is a lesson for the believer in what has been exhibited of great practical interest. It is manifest from the testimonies adduced, that the Scriptures of the New Testament were treated among the primitive Christians, not only as true and possessed of inspired authority in reference to all questions of doctrine and obedience, but as very precious—"more to be desired than much fine gold". They loved them as an inestimable treasure; they kept them, consulted them, and exalted them in their hearts and houses and assemblies, as a companion for every trial, a guide in every difficulty, a gift of God, for the preservation and honor of which they were ready to shed their blood. They felt them to be "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness". How does all this rebuke the lukewarmness with which the Scriptures are regarded by too many professing Christians of the present day. In primitive times, believers would read them, though they paid for the privilege with their lives. In these days, multitudes who call themselves Christians can hardly be persuaded to search the Scriptures, though every facility is afforded and the Bible is in honor. What a tremendous account must he give to God, who neglects His Word! Let us imitate not only the affectionate devotion with which the primitive Christians read the Bible, but also the diligent zeal with which they surmounted innumerable obstacles in circulating copies of its books through the world. We possess facilities for such an object which they had not. The press is placed in our hands for this very purpose. It is our gift of tongues. Let us realize the responsibility we are under for the improvement of so rich a talent and speed its work and multiply its branches of application, till the sound of the Gospel has gone out into all the earth, and the words of Jesus to the ends of the world, and there is nothing hid from the light thereof.

PERSECUTION AND REVIVAL IN CHINA

How Prayer Stopped Mobs and Won Souls—Spreading New Testaments Throughout the Land—Revivals in Schools and Churches.

By George T. B. Davis

A LARGE part of China is in the grip of an intense anti-Christian agitation which has resulted in widespread persecution of the Christians. The methods of the movement are more subtle but less sanguinary thus far than in the Boxer Uprising of 1900.

The sufferings of the Christians recall vividly the trials endured by the followers of Christ in the early days of the Christian Church in Jerusalem. Some of the believers in China have been imprisoned; some have been paraded through the streets; others have been beaten and fined and reviled. In some places churches have been locked up and sealed, in others they have been dismantled. Bibles and Hymn Books have been taken out and burned.

In some cases the churches may have received a setback; but in others the persecution has been turned into glorious victory by the courage and faith of the Christians. In one place, as a result of the persecution two members fell away, while the congregation almost doubled in size. In another city, amid intense persecution, two thousand have professed faith in Christ, and the church building has had to be enlarged to accommodate the increased audiences.

The story of the triumphs of faith at Kanchow, in Kiangsi, is a modern counterpart of the Acts of the Apostles. For a full year a revival has been in progress in the midst of persecution. Dr. C. E. Bousfield, of Sun Wu, Kiangsi, recently gave me an account of the Work of Grace at Kanchow, a city of some 200,000 people. He said:

"About a year ago the Rev. Charles A. Jamieson, of the China Inland Mission at Kanchow, began prayer meetings that were held each morning at daybreak. These prayer meetings started a revival. Small soul-winning bands were also organized. They met together for prayer, and then went out two by two to do personal work on the streets, and in the homes, and in the surrounding villages.

"They went to rich and poor alike. They had cases of healing, and one or two demons were cast out. The work spread to the soldiers, and many of them found Christ. The last I heard there were some two thousand who had professed conversion. The meetings in the chapel became so large that an extension was added to the building by the Chinese at their own expense. There was violent opposition, but some of their opponents were saved.

"We sent a delegation from Sun Wu to see the work. One of the delegates came back so much on fire that he began to preach without salary and has been doing so ever since. One of the Chinese leaders of the movement at Kanchow is a man named Mr. Kingdom-of-Heaven-Tan. He is a wonderful man of prayer and also a fluent speaker.

"At Kanchow there has been bitter anti-Christian agitation and persecution. They met it with prayer and courtesy and kept all their services going. Once or twice the soldiers took possession of their chapel. They preached to them and gave them so much Gospel that the soldiers let the chapel alone. The revival continued right through the fighting between the Northern and Southern forces. The church had had dissension for years, but after the revivals began it entirely ceased.

"On one occasion the Christians knew they were going to be attacked and had special prayer beforehand. A body of students gathered a rabble of several hundred roughs. Armed with sticks and stones the mob came around to destroy the entire mission compound. The gates were all open. Mr. Tan went out and talked to them for twenty minutes, and they all dispersed and went to their homes.

"On another occasion, after a visit from the Russian Comrade Borodin, about two thousand roughs came around to destroy Christianity. They went to one mission church and found it barred up. They broke down the door and smashed the furnishings. Then they went to the China Inland Mission Chapel. Here the gates were wide open. All the people were inside praying. When the mob reached the gate they had a row among themselves, and again they dispersed and went to their homes.

"Finally an anti-Christian leader got together a mob of about four thousand of the worst elements of the city. He drove out the Mayor and made himself Mayor in his place. He began a fierce anti-Christian campaign. He put some of the Christians in prison and fined others heavily. He went to such excess in persecution, that even the Kuominchun General told him to be more moderate. The Christians kept on praying. When everything seemed about hopeless, the mob turned on its leader, and drove him out, and the Christians had peace."

Still more recent incidents of victories in Kanchow in answer to prayer, were given to me by Mr. William Taylor, the Superintendent of the China Inland Mission in the Kiangsi province. Mr. Taylor said: "Some companies of Southern soldiers insisted on occupying the premises of the Boys' School in Kanchow. Mr. Jamieson protested, but they took possession. The Christians began to pray for them and to do personal work among them. The latest tidings is that all the officers have professed conversion, and are attending the services, and also a number of the men.

"Recently two military officers, accompanied by some rough soldiers, came in to Mr. Jamieson and demanded the use of the church building. Mr. Jamieson demurred, saying it was needed for their services, but the officers insisted they must have it.

"At length, Mr. Jamieson said: 'This building is not mine.' They asked, 'Whose is it'? He replied, 'It is God's'. Then they said, 'We are prepared to challenge God; and you can report it to Him'.

"Mr. Jamieson at once said, 'All right. I will do it now. Let us pray'. He closed his eyes and offered prayer in their presence. When he opened his eyes he found them in an awed condition. They ordered away the rough soldiers that were with them, and bowed and went off.

"That was on Saturday. The following day they came to the morning service at the church and remained throughout the meeting. At the close they came forward, and in a friendly way apologized for not having been at the prayer meeting preceding the morning service!

"In a recent letter Mr. Jamieson told of a still later attempt of the soldiers to occupy the church building. He told how over one hundred soldiers came to take over their house and chapel, but they quailed in fear before the demonstration of the Spirit of God, and left the chapel in dread. Later they notified Mr. Jamieson that they had found other quarters."

In speaking of the Work of Grace at Kanchow, Mr. Taylor said: "The real power-house of the revival has been the early morning prayer meeting that began a year ago and has continued ever since. The prayer meeting began as early as 4:30 in the summer; but later in the winter. Neither heat nor rain nor storm prevented the people from attending this gathering for intercession. Mr. Jamieson declares the early morning prayer meeting 'has been the basis of all the power that has been put forth to save souls'. The chief human agencies in the revival have been prayer and personal work and open-air meetings."

Coincident with the spread of the anti-Christian movement, there is in progress a nation-wide distribution of New Testaments in connection with the Million Testaments for China Campaign. Funds are now in hand for more than nine hundred thousand Testaments. Thus far between one and two hundred thousand Testaments have been sent out to missionaries and Chinese pastors and others. Plans are being made to carry on the work of distribution, for the present at least, largely through Chinese pastors, evangelists, Bible-women and other workers.

A missionary from Anhwei recently told me of twenty young men, some of whom were influenced by the anti-Christian movement, and were disturbing the meetings. Little pocket Testaments were presented to each of them. Now they are reading them regularly, attend a Bible class, and are helping in evangelistic meetings. Dr. Jonathan Goforth, one of the best known missionaries in China, recently expressed the fervent hope that two million Testaments might be available to "put into the hands of pivotal men of China at this critical period of her history".

Dr. J. E. Shoemaker, of Yuyao, Chekiang Province, who has been a missionary in China for more than thirty years, said to me recently, "I feel it is providential that this distribution of New Testaments has come just at this time when in so many places in China public preaching is prohibited, and churches are confiscated. It gives the workers something they can do. This is good for their own spiritual life, as well as for the salvation of others.

"The breaking down of their own old religions, and the uncertainty of the present situation, is producing a state of mind that is very favorable to the reception of new religious ideas. I was very pleased to have one of our country evangelists report that the twelve Testaments given him had been willingly received, and the people were quite ready to put down their names on cards agreeing to read and carry the Books daily.

"It is a spiritual warfare that is sweeping over China at this time; and the power that can win the victory must be spiritual. Therefore the best service we can render will be rendered on our knees in closets and in prayer groups. It is not mere formal prayer that is needed, but believing intercession. There is cumulative power in united prayer that cannot be measured; and wins victories in spite of seemingly impossible barriers."

There is increasing intercession in China for a great revival, and a growing expectation that the awakening may be near at hand. In some places the fire has already fallen from Heaven, and glorious revivals are in progress. Mr. L. C. Osborn, of Chao Cheng, Shantung, in applying for two thousand copies of the pocket Testament, writes:

"The missionaries of our station are waiting on God many hours a day for a mighty revival in China. He has revived our own hearts, and we are having the greatest results we have ever known. Personally, the Lord has been getting me up as early as three o'clock in the morning to watch and pray. God's Word was never so precious. People have gotten under conviction of sin right in their homes and have prayed through to forgiveness. Our Church is a different Church. People are coming daily to be prayed with. The revival is spreading. Praise God! All glory be to Him!"

At Tamingfu, in Chihli Province, a glorious Work of Grace has been in progress for more than two months. One of the missionaries there, Mr. A. J. Smith, in sending a report to Shanghai of the outpouring of the Spirit, said: "I am sure you will rejoice with us over the mighty Holy Ghost revival God is sending over this field. The revival started in the Men's Bible Training School and quickly spread to the Women's Bible Training School, then to the boys' and girls' primary schools, later to the out-station, and has now reached most of the main stations.

"The missionary from Kuang Ping Fu writes: 'Seems surely as if something miraculous had happened to the Chinese Church here. Many went down in deep penitence confessing many wrongs without our urging them; seemingly only too glad to get the things off their hearts. After they had prayed through, they went out and brought in others, and prayed with them.'

"The revival has also meant a deep humbling of us missionaries before God and the Chinese. It has been a time of real heart-searching for us, but God has given us the victory, and we now find it a pleasure to pray from seven to nine hours a day. We have discovered that we can do more through intercession than in any other way, and the Lord is honoring our prayers. We believe that God wants to send Holy Ghost revivals to all the missions in China. The revival here is spreading."

The fires of persecution are purifying and refining the Church, and probably preparing the way for such a spiritual awakening as has never before been witnessed in China. The fires of revival have already been kindled. You can help in spreading the flame. Will you not set apart some time each day for earnest believing prayer for a mighty revival that will still further cleanse and quicken the Church, and lead multitudes into the light?

And do not fail to pray for a special outpouring of God's Spirit upon the missionaries who are still in China; and for those who have returned to the homelands. Pray also that great steadfastness and boldness may be given to the Chinese pastors, teachers, evangelists, Bible-women and Christians, multitudes of whom are passing through the fiery furnace of persecution.

Let us praise God that nearly a million New Testaments have been providentially provided in this hour of crisis when so many churches are closed, and so many missionaries have been compelled to leave their stations; and let us pray that the Holy Spirit will illuminate the pages of each Book given out, and that the full million or more may speedily be supplied, and prayerfully and carefully distributed.

Pray also for a blessed Work of Grace among the foreign troops that have been concentrated in China in such large numbers in this time of turmoil.

You can also help in mobilizing prayer on behalf of China by reading part or all of this article at missionary and prayer meetings, and to Sunday Schools and Bible classes, in your community; and appealing for prayer for this great and distressed land.

Prayer Book Revision Approved

LONDON, July 6.—After two days of strenuous debate, in which many women took an active part, the Church Assembly by an overwhelming majority accepted today the revised Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England, which has deeply stirred Church circles. The vote was five hundred and seventeen for revision and one hundred and thirty-three against.

In the House of Bishops the voting was thirty-four for and four against; the House of Clergy, two hundred and fifty-three for and thirty-one against, and the House of Laity, twenty-three for and ninety-two against. The four bishops voting against the revised Book of Prayer were the Bishops of Birmingham, Norwich, Worcester and Exter.

The debate in the Church Assembly today was marked by considerable acerbity on the part of the "die-hard" section which, though in the minority, fought stubbornly for the retention of the time-honored formulae and "no surrender to Anglo-Catholicism".

So vehement were the objectors that it was found necessary to impose a five-minute limit on speeches. Much of the discussion centered on the marriage service, from which the passage referring to God appointing that "out of man woman should take her beginning", now is deleted.

Lord Hugh Cecil, a distinguished lay evangelist, emphasized that rejection would mean chaos in the government of the Church. Against this the "die-hards" argued that revision would legalize erroneous doctrines, promote schism and drive people from the Church.

The new Prayer Book now goes for last sanction to Parliament, which cannot amend it, but must either accept or reject it.

See Chaos Resulting.

"Could anything be more unsuitable for a young married couple to be told that nobody believes—that woman was created out of man"? asked Canon Wilson, of Chellenham.

"Prosthes Emin Pistin"

Dissensions in the Christian Churches are almost coeval with the Founder of the faith, and they antedate any union among the scattered bands of primitive believers, that could be called The Church. Acts 15: "Paul and Barnabas and certain other of them should go up to Jerusalem to the apostles and elders about this question." Since then, an incredible number of controversial rocks of almost every degree of significance and insignificance have split and divided the current of Christian belief during its two thousand year long course. By some of these rocks, streamlets have been diverted for a time to curve back later and rejoin the parent flood and other streamlets have diverged farther and farther until their waters have lost almost every vestige of their primal taste.

In recent years, the most considerable diversion of power from the fundamental river bed is into the modern channel and it is with the view of making some brief inquiry into the propriety of this diversion that these observations are offered to The Southern Churchman.

The points of departure from the ancient faith are of no present concern. There is no quarrel with any one on account of his religious belief. 'Tis matter almost solely of early environment and few have inclination and fewer still have ability to think one inch beyond that groove in which they were originally cast. But there is grave reason for rebuke to all who, retaining the name of Christian and continuing to hold fellowship with the Christian Church, deny the essential doctrines and do so on the ground that modern intellectuals are too learned and too logical and too scientific to accept them.

When a man has advanced in his religious career to the point where he is a sincere Deist, if he do no more than acknowledge the existence of God, he has exercised a faith more than enough to carry him over every obstacle in the orthodox belief. No human mind, not even that of Aristotle, can comprehend the existence of a being who had no beginning and will have no end, and the man who attains belief in such a being has performed an act of blind faith with no help from learning, from logic, from science, from any phase of intellectuality, because every attempt to prove the existence of God by material processes outside of revealed religion, from Plato down to today has been a freak failure. A man may be within his intellectual rights to deny the existence of God, and he may be within his intellectual rights to deny the Virgin Birth and the Atonement. But he is surely within no intellectual rights when he acknowledges the deepest of the mysteries, unfathomable by any human mind, and discards others because he cannot fathom them. Littleton Waller Tazewell used to say that he had never met an Unitarian who did not believe in the sea serpent, and the guttural accomplishments of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel is no uncommon feat.

At the outset of the Christian's pathway is belief in God. This gateway is so difficult that nothing but the pilgrim with naked faith may pass through. Every plume of false science and every pennon of vain intellectuality must be shed to secure passage through this straight and narrow door. If farther along the road are seen some travelers flaunting a plumage which they hope to pass off as real, the observer knows that that gaudy tail feather labelled "science" by such intellectual peacocks, is a sham, that the impressive top-knot bearing the legend "intellect" is a fraud and that the fluffy neck ruff with "logic" lettered on it is a delusion and a snare. He knows that the wearer of these adornments, if he were mentally honest, must have left every one of them at the entrance gate, and, far from being impressd by the deceitful show, he classes the wearer with the yokel in the county fair grounds who flaunts in his multi-colored hat band the ticket of admission which more honest folk surrender at the gate. See Cuscinia et acanthus".—"Spectator".

Letters to the Editor

In this Department the Editor will at all times welcome communications expressing opinions on the various topics which are engaging the attention of the Church. But the Editor will not hold himself responsible for such opinions.

No "Letters to the Editor" will appear in our columns except over the signature of the writer.

A SILLY OBJECTION TO THE THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES.

Mr. Editor:

There are certain stock arguments which are constantly put forward by those who wish to dishonor the Thirty-Nine Articles, and banish them from the Prayer Book. One of these is that no one ever reads the Articles, and that therefore it can do no harm to strike them out altogether. As this specious plea is glibly and constantly made, it will pay to examine it briefly.

We will concede, for argument's sake, that our people do not generally read or study the Articles with care. Does it, therefore, follow that they are useless? If any one thinks so, let him apply the same reasoning to other portions of the Prayer Book and see what would be the result.

How often does the average Christian layman read, either carefully or perfunctorily, the offices for the consecration of a Bishop, or for the ordination of a priest or deacon? What familiarity have most of us with these services? Nay, how often are any of them read by clergymen themselves, save when obliged to do so in a regular service? If you think we are wrong, apply the test to a few of your lay friends. See what they can tell you about these services, or about the questions put to candidates, and the answers and promises that must be made by them. Unless your friend has chanced to be present at an ordination or consecration quite recently, it is more than likely that he can tell you nothing.

How many of us have made it our business to read even once the office for the consecration of a church or chapel, or the office for the institution of a minister? How many of us (to our shame be it asked) are in the least familiar with the forms of Family Prayer, either for Morning or Evening? How often do laymen read the Baptismal Office, save when present in church while a baptism is taking place?

Turn from the Prayer Book to the Bible. I will not ask something troublesome and unfair—such as how many laymen can repeat the names of the books of either Testament in order. But I do ask how many of us laymen can speak with any assurance or real knowledge of the contents of certain portions of the Bible not often read in public worship—say, for example, the twelve Minor Prophets? Can many of us tell even the names of the Minor Prophets? Can we quickly locate the chapter and verse in Proverbs where some famous and well-known proverb or aphorism may be found? How many of us can readily find in St. Paul's epistles the location of some of his most striking and spiritual assertions? Do we often read the Nicene Creed for our own private information and profit, or are we satisfied to repeat it only when obliged to join in the Church services?

But who would have the foolhardiness to claim that any of the things I have mentioned in either the Prayer Book or the Bible are so unimportant that they ought to be dropped, simply because the number of Christian people who read and appreciate them is small?

Turn from things spiritual to things political. How many of us Americans who are not lawyers by profession ever read the Constitution of the United States through even once in every year? How many of us have ever got so far as to open and glance over the Constitution of the state in which we live? How often do we read the Bill of Rights of either the federal or state constitution, unless we chance to be at school or college and studying a course on civics? Do any of my readers make it their business to carefully read the Declaration of Indepence through once in every two years? Have we ever read Magna Charta?

I forbear to press for answers, knowing well enough that there are thousands of us busy people who value deeply the heritage we have received from our forefathers in things both spiritual and political, but who are careless about informing ourselves respecting the great documents that have come down to us from the past, in which are enshrined the things which our race loves and prizes above measure. But we are all loyal to these great inheritances, in spite of our carelessness and superficiality. We would no more speak lightly of our splendid Constitution or our famous Declaration than we would insult our father or our mother. And so it is equally true that the great mass of us laymen in our beloved Protestant Episcopal Church are no more ready to sanction a movement to discard our great Protestant Confession of Faith as embodied in the Thirty-Nine Articles, than we would tolerate a plan to lay the Declaration of Independence on the shelf, or to throw the Book of Malachi into the discard. Let us hear no more, then, of the miserable and dishonest assertion that the Articles may be safely omitted from the Prayer Book because nobody bothers his head to read them.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Editor:

We ask that you will be kind enough to give these resolutions space in your paper:

Whereas, In view of the distressing statements reported to have been made by the Rev. Henry Lewis, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, in his extraordinary utterances on the question of marriage and non-marriage, at the recent Episcopal Congress held at San Francisco, and the support given him in these views by Bishop Parsons, of California, and the further statements of Dr. William N. Guthrie, of New York, regarding the books of the New Testament, being written by "thick-skulled chumps".

And, Whereas, Communism is seeping through the Church, and we see on all sides, the pulpit used as the medium of spreading the propaganda of the Pacifists, Socialists, Communists, Insurrectionists, free-love advocates, and a variety of others of the sort:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church, are blessed in having, in our rector, the Rev. Wm. J. Morton, one who is both orthodox in views, and is a steadfast preacher of the pure Word of the Gospel: And we not only desire to acquaint him of our deep appreciation, but we thank God that we have in him a true shepherd of our souls.

And we hereby authorize the Secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary to send a copy of these resolutions to Dr. Morton; also to the Vestry of Christ Church, with a request that this paper be read before the Vestry, and spread upon the Minutes.

MRS. C. E. NICOL,
Secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions, of Christ Church, Alexandria, Virginia.

ENDORSEMENT.

June 28, 1927.

Mr. Langbourne M. Williams, President,
Southern Churchman.
Richmond, Virginia.

Dear Sir:

The undersigned, a group of laymen at St. Paul's Church, Chattanooga, have been engaged for a number of years in lay evangelism or "Personal Work", in the winning of souls for Christ.

We are moved to write you these words of hearty approval and encouragement in the pronounced stand of the "Southern Churchman" under the present management. We subscribe to and endorse the "adherence to the faith of old" as carried recently on the cover of the Southern Churchman. Also we endorse and approve of the article appearing in the edition of June 25, 1927, entitled "Looking Backward".

We believe that the slogan of the Southern Churchman, "Catholic for every truth of God; Protestant against every error of man", as now carried editorially and otherwise in your publication meets a real need of our time and will receive a very general approval and response in our beloved Church, of all who "cherish the faith of our fathers" and who "hold to the historic faith of the Church".

Yours faithfully,

W. J. DODGE. N. L. THOMAS.
WILLARD WARNER. SAM H. SEYMOUR.
ALFRED W. BURKE. WARREN A JEFFORDS.
C. C. STEENBERG. I. L. FAUCETT.
H. C. FLOURNOY. S. BARTOW STRANG.

Mr. L. M. Williams, President,
Southern Churchman.
Richmond, Virginia.

Dear Mr. Williams:

I believe you have the Southern Churchman on the right side and the one that presently will prevail, because it is the side of the people who keep their feet on the ground and who think right because they think with their consciences and their higher emotions.

Yours very truly,

A READER.

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

Executive Secretary, Department of Christian Social Service, Diocese of Southern Virginia.

DISCUSSION groups, such as we have outlined, while they may not always result in any definite action, have this great value: they set people to thinking. And that is the first stage in the vrogress towards better living. It is following the line of least resistance to say: "Oh, well, we always have had, and we always will have sickness and poverty, and war and crime, and sorrow and suffering, so what's the use of doing anything about it"? But when we begin seriously to think about these things, we wonder whether they are necessary after all; and, then after a while we find that there really is something that can be done about it.

Dr. Lapp's Statement.

Dr. John A. Lapp is President of the National Conference on Social Work. The name of this body was formerly the "National Conference on Charities and Corrections". It is composed of experts in the treatment of human problems; of trained researchers into the conditions responsible for these problems. Dr. Lapp said, at the recent session of this Conference in Des Moines: "There are 12,000,000 people in this country who receive some form of relief or are precariously close to needing it. This cost $3,000,000,000 in the United States last year. More than ninety per cent of these people are in need through causes which cannot be controlled by individuals or by small groups, causes such as:

(1) Sickness
(2) War
(3) Insanity
(4) Unemployment
(5) The fixing of wages according to supply and demand of commodities rather than the cost of living.

A Substitute for War.

Now shall we continue to say of the second of these causes, for instance, "There will always be wars", or shall we begin to think whether or not some substitute may be found for fighting. Suppose that we should choose for the chief topic of a discussion group, statement number twenty-two in the list that was given above: "Superior force is the surest protection against war."

The group might include some military men, whose lives have been spent in an atmosphere of expectation of fighting; some extreme pacifists, who oppose the use of force for any cause whatever; and a number who are genuinely interested in the prevention of war, but whose minds are open as to the methods to be pursued in bringing about this ideal.

When the time comes for the general discussion of the statement, the leader, or some other member of the group, should have some reading matter prepared, to be used as a basis for discussion. The booklet, "The Search for Peace", by Laura F. Boyer, is recommended. It may be obtained from the National Council, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, for twenty-five cents.

Appeal From The National Council.

It would be well for the group to know that, at the meeting of the National Council in December, 1924, the following appeal was made to the Church:

"We, the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, recognizing the responsibility that rests on all of us as followers of One called through all ages the Prince of Peace, ask the Bishops and other clergy of the Church to urge upon their congregations earnest prayer during the Christmas season that methods of achieving World Peace may be successfully consummated, that war may be abolished and that the Golden Rule may become the universal law of nations and peoples.

"And in view of the critical importance of this subject and of the enormous responsibility resting on Christian people, we further ask the whole Church, during the season of Epiphany or at such other period as may be more convenient locally, to study carefully the methods of establishing peace now presented before the peoples of the world. We recommend the organization of study groups in the parishes throughout the Church and we designate the Department of Christian Social Service to take charge of this project in the name of the National Council and ask the cooperation of all the Departments of the Council and the Woman's Auxiliary in the promotion of this great effort."

In any discussion on the possibility of ending warfare, Tennyson's great prophecy from "Locksley Hall", written more than fifty years ago should be read:

"For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonders that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nation's airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south-wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging thro' the thunder-storm;

Till the war-drum throbb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were furl'd
In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the World.

There the common sense of most shall hold a fretful realm in awe,
And the kindly earth shall slumber, lapt in universal law."

Miss Boyer quotes Longfellow:

"Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals or forts."

Future Wars.

With regard to the kind of warfare that may be expected in the future unless some substitute can be found for the age-old method of settling the problems of nations, Professor A. M. Low, scientist and inventor, contributes an interesting article to the Fortnightly Review. Among the things he expects to play a part in future warfare are:

"Jets of water, charged with electricity, to kill horses and men. Wireless telephony, sight, heat, power, and writing. Wireless control of tanks and airplanes. Battle plane engines developing wireless power to destroy aircraft within hundreds of yards. Wireless heat to destroy European regions. Giant transport airplanes with incredible speed. Secret war plans ferreted out by wireless telephone and sight, the future war's eyes and ears. Propaganda striking into every home by means of wireless receivers which will be more common than any telephone today. Armored boats, capable of diving under the water and flying in the air, a kind of combined tank-submarine-airplane. Airplanes with electric impulse, their guns firing an enormous number of bullets a second. Electrically controlled rockets, operated on wires, for wrecking planes. A wireless controlled torpedo with wireless sighted periscope, controlled by a secret combination of wave lengths. Gyroscopic, wireless airplanes over which operator, who may also be in sight, has absolute control and can release bombs at will."

To these things add the deliberate releasing of deadly germs, to cause widespread plagues; with not only armies, but men, women and children of whole districts, dying from the diabolical poisons of a merciless enemy. Is this fanciful and far-fetched? Major-General E. D. Swinton, of the British Army, says: "The final form of human strife, as I regard it, is germ warfare."

In a statement issued on February 1, 1925, Secretary Wilbur said: "If poison-gas can be used on one side, it can be used on the other, as Germany found out to her sorrow. If disease germs can be used on one side they can be used on the other."

If we should be able to get people really to do some thinking about this question, rather than to rest content with the bromidic statement, "There will always be wars", the conclusion of James Bryce would be reached: "If we do not destroy war, war will destroy us."

Under the old theory that "might makes right", we reached in the World War, staggering totals of cost, in money, and in human lives.

Sydney L. Gulick, in his book The Christian Crusade for a Warless World, gives the following figures:

I.

Costs of Previous Wars.

Men killed: Nine Big Wars, 1780-1913...	4,449,000
Money Cost, in same period	$ 23,000,000,000

II.

Cost of World War Alone.

Men killed	12,990,571
Money cost	$335,191,719,815

To the 13,000,000 soldiers killed, there is to be added another 13,000,000 lives lost, when one includes the number of civilians who were killed, or who died through causes due directly to the war.

In the light of such facts, one asks the question, "What is the matter with Christianity"? And the answer is: "Nothing is the matter with Christianity, the only trouble is, it has never been tried." On the one hand, there stands out the old method, force, with its appalling failure, as means of maintaining peace; on the other, stands the new method, Christianity, waiting to be tried.

The educated people of non-Christian lands find it difficult to comprehend how Christian nations can reconcile their proffered religion with their battled-scarred histories. There is the story of a native of an Oriental country, who had been listening to an address by a missionary, on Christian Goodwill. The native took him aside, after the address, and said: "You must know that the educated people of this country look upon Christianity as a warring, blood-spilling religion."

Some real progress in the Crusade for a Warless World could be made, if the communicants of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America could be induced to stand as a unit for the principles of Jesus Christ, as outlined, for instance, in the admonition that has been so abused by misuse: "Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also". The Oriental Christ was teaching the great lesson of self-control, of waiting until passions cool, of applying other methods than force to the solution of individual and international difficulties.

"LOOKING BACKWARD."

Such were the words we read in a N. Y. Church paper, in reference to the change of policy recently adopted by Mr. L. M. Williams, who as stated, has purchased a controlling interest in The Southern Churchman, paper. As stated, Mr. Williams announces the changes he proposes to make; that is, in reference to Divine Teaching. They are such as Christ and His apostles taught. We most heartily congratulate Mr. Williams for his sane and timely action. He "Looks Back" to the principles and practice of the "FAITH once for all delivered"; renouncing the "cunningly devised fables" (myths) of illogical and agnostic modernism. We will have more to say in this connection in our next.—A. Corbett, in Life and Light, Sydney, Nebraska.

The Virginia Summer School of Religious Education.

The twelfth annual session of the Virginia Summer School of Religious Education, held at Sweet Briar College, Virginia, June 20 to July 2, was declared by all present to be one of the best conducted in the history of the school. All who had known the late Rev. J. Francis Ribble, D. D., who had given so much of the last years of his life to the upbuilding of this school, noted with sorrow his absence this year. At the opening exercises on June 20 touching tribute was paid to the memory of Dr. Ribble, and his work there, and a brief commemorative service was held.

Taken all together this term of the school was in many ways unique. Every member of the faculty, without a single exception, did fine work, and all struck a high spiritual note. The series of mass meetings running every night through the two weeks were splendid, every one of them being both interesting and helpful. The morning chapel services with addresses by Bishop Strider were the most outstanding features of the school, and made a deep impression on all present. Finally, the behavior of all present was beyond criticism. Though two hundred and thirty-five people were together for two solid weeks, there was not a jarring note in the life of the school anywhere.

The attendance this year was somewhat less than that of former years. Heretofore, however, a Clergy School has been held, with a special faculty for the clergy. It was not held this year, which accounts, in the main, for the smaller attendance. Taken all together, the school lived up to the standard of the past.

The Conference on Lay Evangelism.

The Southern Conference on Lay Evangelism, meeting at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 30 to July 4, was well attended and apparently made a deep impression.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, of East Carolina, who made the opening address on Thursday night, stated that there were sixty-eight million people in this country without church affiliation and that the forty-eight million belonging to the churches were, with the exception of some saints, marking time and failing to save the world. He gave it as his opinion that the world had never before been on the brink of such catastrophe and terrible war as now threatens it. He appealed for consecration on the part of the laity to save such world.

Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York, spoke on Friday afternoon, emphasizing the truth that the only way to know Christ is to follow Him. He also, in the course of his address, dwelt upon the appreciation and gratitude of the other Christian bodies for the Bishops' Crusade of the Episcopal Church.

The Rt. Rev. T. D. Bratton, D. D., Bishop of Mississippi, is Chaplain of the Conference. Some others present were Vice-Chancellor Finney, of Sewanee; Colonel John H. Finney, of Washington; Leon C. Palmer, General Secretary, of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; Mr. William J. Dodge, of Chattanooga; Dr. W. J. Loaring Clark, of Sewanee; G. Frank Shelby, Vice-President of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew; Bishop Junius M. Horner, of Western North Carolina. Very nearly all the Dioceses expected to send delegates were represented.

Young People's Conventions.

The young people of the Diocese of Northern Indiana and of the Diocese of Indianapolis, also the young people of the Province of the Mid-West, met at Lake Wawasee, Ind., from June 24 to 26. An address of welcome was given them by Bishop Gray, after which followed business sessions.

At a joint session of the two conventions, State and provincial, Mr. Harold Barlow, of Milwaukee, presented a full and detailed report of the Young People's Book which has been published by the National Commission of Young People, and is now on the press and will be out by the first of August. The movement for a hand-book started in this province, and the data collected by the Provincial Committee, has been of great aid in the compiling of this book.

By a unanimous vote Mr. Barlow was re-elected as the representative from this province on the National Commission of Young People, to hold that office until after the General Convention in 1928.

Elections of officers resulted as follows:

Provincial Young People.

President, John G. Young, of Youngstown, Ohio; Vice-President, Harold Barlow, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Secretary, Miss Cushman, of Terre Haute; Treasurer, Mr. Palk, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Advisors, Mr. E. E. Piper, of Detroit; the Rev. Maurice Clarke; the Rev. Cleon Bigler, of Kokomo.

Indiana Young People.

President, Prentice Firmin, of South Bend, Ind.; Vice-President, Dexter Haven, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Treasurer, Francis Campbell Gray; Secretary, Miss Cushman, of Terre Haute; Advisors, the Rev. Cleon Bigler, of Kokomo; Mrs. Lewis C. Rogers, of Mishawaka; the Rev. Edwin A. Powell, who will select one other lay advisor.

Wawasee Conference.

There was a splendid spirit of interest and enthusiasm in spite of a smaller attendance than last year at the eleventh annual Wawasee Conference, which was held at Lake Wawasee from June 19 to 25, a joint diocesan Conference for the two Dioceses of Indianapolis and Northern Indiana.

The Conference Bible Class, conducted by the Rev. Edwin A. Powell, rector of St. Paul's Church, Evansville, Ind., took up in succession the following great questions: What is God like? Where am I from? Why am I here? Where am I going? Will the Church endure? The subjects discussed were such as are suggested by the attitude of many inquiring minds, particularly those of college students and young people in general towards religion. His last lectures stressed the fact that only through loyalty to the Master's teaching can the Church endure.

Dr. Bradner's course dealt with the pre-suppositions or implications of Christian Nurture. He emphasized the necessity of preserving the opportunity for special Church teaching in connection with the plan of week-day religious instruction, and advocated also the adoption of the Church School Program of Service in its graded forms.

Mrs. W. R. Royce, U. T. O. missionary in Haiti, in her course on The Missions of the Church, spoke of the difference in her work in the Panama Canal Zone, where one was in a Christian atmosphere among English-speaking people, and in Haiti, where one is hampered by not being able to have any direct discourse with the poorer class of people who speak Creole (not a written language) and having to have specially printed prayer books in French, students in the Seminary having to be taught English before they can take the course. The Thank Offering at the conclusion of the Conference was voted by the committee to go to any work which Mrs. Royce might designate under Bishop Carson.

The Clergy Conference was held daily under the direction of the Rev. Hiram K. Douglass, rector of the Church of the Messiah, Detroit. Topics for consideration by the clergy were: Our Duty as Prophets; Sermon Construction and Delivery; Our Duty as Priests; Our Duty as Pastors; and Our Duties as rectors. Mr. Douglass also delivered the sermons at each of the sunset services.

The Study Book for 1928, A Church Awake, by Dr. Sturgis, was taught by Miss Edna Beardsley, U. T. O. field worker, who has spent the months of May and June in the Diocese of Northern Indiana. Miss Beardsley will return to this Diocese for October and the first of November.

The G. F. S. Conference for Leaders was taught by Miss E. Winifred Dunkle, G. F. S. Secretary of the Province of the Mid-West. G. F. S. Day at the Conference brought to a close the period devoted to the working out of a pageant, "The Spirit of Spring", which was presented at sunset on the lawn.

The class in Hand Work, taught by Miss Dorette Bergemann, parish worker at St. Peter's Church School, Chicago, presented Christian Education as meaning all those things which help to build up a four-square life. Expression work is not mere busy work. It is a means of letting the child express himself in prayer, study, service and giving.

Elected a Member of the Cathedral Council at Jerusalem.

At the recent annual meeting of the congregation of St. George's Cathedral in Jerusalem, Mr. Edward Blatchford, formerly of Chicago, was elected to membership on the Cathedral Council, taking the place of Sir Ronald Storrs, who has left Palestine to become Governor of the Island of Cyprus. Mr. Blatchford is the head of the Near East Relief organization in Palestine, and the election of so prominent an American citizen to the chief Anglican body in Palestine is yet another symptom of that happy cooperation between the English-speaking communities, which is so pleasant a feature of Jerusalem life.

About ten years ago Mr. Blatchford resigned his position with a prominent manufacturing company in Chicago, to engage in war work with the Y. M. C. A. in London. Later he went to Constantinople, where he continued his work as adviser and friend of the British soldiers until they were called home from the Bosphorus. Mr. Blatchford was then asked to become director of Near East Relief activities in Palestine, where he has not only made an important contribution to international good will, but has had a most helpful influence in moulding the lives of the war orphans who found refuge in the Holy Land.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Dedication of Parish House at Salem.

A service of special interest was that conducted at Salem, on Tuesday evening, July 5, when the new parish house of St. Paul's Church was formally dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Robert Carter Jett, D. D.

First, there was a service in the church, at which time one person was confirmed; there being in the chancel, in addition to the Bishop and the Rev. Roland J. Moncure, rector of St. Paul's, the Rev. Messrs. J. Manly Cobb, of Blacksburg; James A. Figg, of Christiansburg, and Alfred C. Bussingham, of Roanoke.

The clergy and congregation then proceeded to the parish house and a simple service of dedication was held. Brief addresses were made by Mr. J. C. Terry, Senior Warden; the Rev. Mr. Moncure, the Rev. John K. Goode, as the representative of the other communions of Salem, and by Bishop Jett. Mr. Terry spoke of the great need for the parish house.

Mr. Moncure, who has been rector of St. Paul's for only a short period, referred to the care and attention given to the erection of the building by those of the vestry who had it in charge and spoke of the great interest being manifested by the people and his anticipation of a happy ministry in Salem.

The Rev. Mr. Goode brought greetings and congratulations from the other churches of the town and testified to the spirit of cooperation and fellowship existing among the various communions there.

Bishop Jett emphasized the fact that the construction of the parish house, while greatly contributing to the convenience of the congregation in its work, added to its responsibility as well, as a valuable addition to the equipment of the parish, it enlarges the congregation's sphere of activity and thus calls for still more faithful and devoted service on the part of the people.

The new parish house is of brick, as is the church, and is joined to the church. Erected at a cost of about $28,000, it was made possible chiefly through a bequest of the late Mrs. Alice Duncan Chalmers. On the main floor is a large auditorium and a well equipped kitchen. The basement is devoted to the Sunday School, having a main assembly room and nine class rooms.

Following the service of dedication, there was an informal gathering, at which solos were rendered by Mr. Gordon H. Baker, of Roanoke, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas W. Spindle, of Salem.

Memorial to a Rector's Wife.

At Trinity Church, near Arrington, in Nelson County, there were recently installed a handsome altar and reredos in memory of the late Mrs. Lillie C. Mezick, wife of the Rev. Frank Mezick, rector of the parish. Mrs. Mezick, who died about seven years ago, served as the organist of Trinity Church during the last ten years of her life and was greatly beloved in the community. The fund, which provided these memorials, was contributed by her many admirers both in the parish and elsewhere, Episcopalians and members of other communions.

The altar and reredos are of walnut and simply designed, in keeping with the lines of the building. They will probably be dedicated when Bishop Jett makes his official visit to the parish in August.

The church building itself has been greatly improved by a general overhauling, the renovation of the walls and the repainting of the inside woodwork, pews, etc. Trinity is now one of the most attractive country churches in this section of Virginia.

Christ Church at Norwood, also in the Rev. Mr. Mezick's parish, has recently been repaired and painted, under the supervision and through the generosity of Mr. J. E. Johnson, Warden. Much will be added to the comfort of the congregation by the fact that amber glass, given by St. Paul's Church, Lynchburg, from the old Epiphany Church there, has been substituted for the clear glass in the windows.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Death of Prominent Layman.

Captain John C. Boyd, U. S. N., retired, died suddenly in London recently and funeral services were held there on July 8, according to cablegrams received. The remains will be brought to this country and interment will be made in Arlington National Cemetery.

Captain Boyd was actively identified with many organizations in Washington, including the Epiphany Church Home and the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital. He was a vestryman of St. Paul's Church.

The Diocesan Pageant and Drama Association will hold its next meeting at the home of Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, Alexandria, Virginia, Monday, July 25. Mrs. Forrest has invited the guests to spend the day as her guests.

This association expects to produce a pageant of note and importance during the meeting of the General Convention in Washington, in October 1928, and is already working on plans toward that end.

HARRISBURG.

Rt. Rev. J. H. Darlington, D. D. Bishop

Death of the Ven. William Dorwart.

The Ven. William Dorwart, Archdeacon of Harrisburg and Vicar of Newport, Thompsontown, Duncannon and York Springs, passed away in the Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia, on Thursday morning, June 23, following a serious operation. He leaves a widow, a daughter and two sons. The funeral service was held in the Church of the Nativity, Newport, being conducted by Bishop Darlington, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Eastment, Heakes and Rogers. During the service a Collect was read by the Rev. Dr. Spangler, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Newport, for many years a devoted friend and neighbor of the Archdeacon. Burial was made in the Newport Cemetery, Bishop Darlington reading the committal service. Other clergymen present at the service were the Rev. Messrs. Asheton-Martin, Atkins, Auld, Bennett, Carruthers, Foulkes, Heilman, Hughes, Judd, McMillan and Treder.

William Dorwart was born in Lancaster, Pa., on July 20, 1864, the son of Martin and Wilhelmina Dorwart. With his younger brother, George, also a priest of the Church, he became a choir boy in St. James' Church, Lancaster, and was graduated from the Yeates School. He was graduated from St. Stephen's College in 1887 as primus of his class, and from the General Theological Seminary in 1890. He was ordained deacon on Trinity Sunday, 1890, by Bishop Rulison, and priest on December 31, 1890, by the same Bishop. On being made deacon he was assigned to the charge of Trinity Church, Steelton, remaining there until All Saints' Day, 1891, when he assumed duty as Vicar of Newport and Thompsontown. To these charges were added the Mission of St. Albert's, Duncannon, which was founded by him, and later Old Christ Church, York Springs.

Archdeacon Dorwart's ministry has been marked from the beginning by an active missionary spirit, and he covered the whole of Perry and Juniata Counties in his visitations. Being also ready to respond to calls outside, he started the Mission of St. Bartholomew's in Millersburg in 1907, retaining charge there until he started the Mission of St. Albert's in Duncannon in 1917. A story of his missionary journeys would read like an epic, but lack of space precludes such a record. In 1916 he was elected Archdeacon of Harrisburg, and he undertook his additional duties in earnest. He was greatly beloved by the clergy and people of the whole Diocese, as well as those of his Archdeaconry. Due largely to his unstinted support of his Bishop's program, there is not a single church or rectory in the whole Archdeaconry that is not in excellent condition.

Mr. Dorwart was three times elected a Deputy to the General Convention and once an Alternate Deputy. He was also elected to many other important diocesan offices, and this in spite of the fact that he declined calls to larger parishes and dedicated himself to what many would call "the obscurity" of the small town and country parishes.

SOUTHERN VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. A. C Thomson, D. D., Coadjutor.

Special Service at Jamestown Island.

Holy Communion was celebrated at the memorial service commemorating the First Communion Service held in the first permanent English settlement in America at the Robert Hunt Shrine, Jamestown Island, on Sunday morning, July 3. It was conducted by the Rt. Rev. A. C. Thomson, Bishop Coadjutor in the absence of the Rt. Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, D. D., LL. D., who was called to Charles Town, W. Va., because of the death of a relative.

The old communion silver of 1661 was used at the service and a silver paten presented to the Jamestown Church by Governor Edmund Andros in 1694 on which is engraved the story and date of its presentation to the church. Since then, however, the paten has wandered away from the possession of a church in Mobile, Ala., and was restored by Mr. Hugh Monroe, of Mobile through the Rev. Mr. Leacock to the Diocese of Virginia and was by action of the Virginia Council given to the Vestry of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, to be by them held in trust for the Church at Jamestown.

This service marked the three hundred and twentieth anniversary of the celebration of Holy Communion by the Colonists and Robert Hunt, on the third Sunday after Trinity. It was pointed out by Bishop Thomson that the third Sunday after Trinity 1607 was July first.

Bishop Thomson spoke of the men who established the Jamestown colony and made the foundation of this government and commented on their undivided faith in God. A service was also held by Bishop Thomson at the Shrine in the afternoon at which an address was delivered by the Rev. E. Ruffin Jones, former rector of Bruton Parish.

Many visitors from Williamsburg, Newport News, Richmond, Hampton and other nearby places attended the services.

Mrs. Laura Titus, a Negro woman, who died recently in Norfolk, left her estate of about $20,000 chiefly for religious, charitable and educational projects, the bequests including $500 to her parish, Grace Church, $500 to St. Paul's School, Lawrenceville, and property to be used for a clinic for sick children and babies. She has been known for many years for her charitable work.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. W. C. Brown, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. H. St. Geo. Tucker, D. D., Coadjutor.

The Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, occupied the pulpit at the Jewish Synagogue Friday night, June 24, and delivered an interesting sermon, on the Twenty-third Psalm.

This was the first occasion that a minister of the Protestant Church has preached in the Synagogue since it was founded in 1870.

MARYLAND.

Rt. Rev. J. G. Murray, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, D. D.,

Confirmations.

Since January 1, confirmations in the Diocese of Maryland have totaled 1,370. Of these, one hundred and seventy-five have been confirmed by the Bishop Coadjutor in special classes supplemental to regular visitations. These supplemental confirmations are largely adults and represent one fruit of the Bishops' Crusade.

The Rev. John Gibson Gantt Retires.

After fifty years of service in the sacred ministry, the Rev. John Gibson Gantt has resigned the rectorship of St. Peter's, Solomon's Island, and Middleham Chapel, and has retired. At the present time he is traveling in Europe and, on his return, he will reside in Baltimore. Mr. Gantt has served many parishes in his long ministry, including: Severn Parish, Md.; Trinity Church, Red Bank, N. J.; St. Luke's Church, Wheeling, Va.; Holy Comforter Church, Baltimore; White Marsh Parish, Talbot County, Md.; Worcester Parish, Maryland, Denton, Md.

Church Normal School.

During the summer the Church Normal School, under the Directorship of Miss Jane Millikin, is planning a number of changes in the system and schedule for the coming year. In the past there has been one lecture to the whole school on some general subject, such as the Prayer Book, and a series of courses corresponding to the grades of the Christian Nurture series. In the future the eight courses of the Christian Nurture will be taught by grades and in addition eight elective lectures will be given so that the scholars may thus have the choice of one grade and one lecture each evening. The school will meet twice a month hereafter, and will close before Lent. The subject of the elective lectures are as follows: The Old Testament; Program of the National Church; Young People's Leadership; Church History; Church Doctrine; Stories and Story Telling; Principles of Teaching; The Prayer Book.

MISSISSIPPI.

Rt. Rev. T. DuB. Bratton, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. M. Green, D. D., Coadjustor

Good Work Among the Colored People in Jackson.

Under the guidance of the Rt. Rev. Theodore D. Bratton, D. D., the Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor, and the Rev. James T. Jeffrey, minister-in-charge, of St. Mark's Mission, Jackson, an outstanding achievement in Church extension and development among the Colored people in the diocese has been attained. From a very small beginning, a score or so of years back, this work in Jackson and vicinity has advanced until now it is on a basis promising greater development and a more fruitful harvest for the years to come.

The present rector, a native West Indian, of the Anglican Diocese of Jamaica, but an alumnus of Bishop Payne Divinity School, Petersburg, Virginia, took charge of this field in January, 1921.

When Mr. Jeffrey took charge of St. Mark's mission, he found one bona fide communicant, and less than a dozen nominal members. Today, there are a total of seventy-five communicants, and a parochial school in which are enrolled one hundred and thirty pupils, instructed by four teachers, and operating a full nine months' term. From the outset the rector has had the sympathetic interest and encouragement of Bishop Bratton, whose work for and among the people of the Negro race has been an outstanding characteristic of his entire ministry—as pastor, educator and bishop.

The new St. Mark's, as it stands now, and not entirely finished and furnished, is a combination of church building, school building and community house, the cornerstone having been laid on Low Sunday, 1927, by the Grand Lodge of Negro Free and Accepted Masons, with an address by Bishop Bratton.

The community house is an important adjunct to the work of the rector and the increasing Colored congregation in Jackson. It has three class rooms for grade work, one room set apart as a day nursery, two fitted up as free clinics; one room for use as an employment office, and still another for use as a bed-room for transient women and girls, under the care and supervision of an organized social service squad. A rector's study and library and choir vestment room, are included in the equipment.

With the cooperation and under the leadership of the two bishops, the Rev. Walter B. Capers, D. D., rector of St. Andrew's Parish, and a building committee from St. Andrew's, the new St. Mark's was designed and built at a cost of about $30,000. A generous contribution to the building fund was given by Mrs. Fannie Johnston, a devoted Churchwoman of Vicksburg, conditioned on a reasonable amount of self-help by the people whom it is to serve.

While the new St. Mark's has not yet been consecrated, it was recently dedicated, with impressive services. Bishop Green was the celebrant, assisted by the rector, at the first service held at the early morning hour. There was also a mid-day "jubilation" service, which accompanied regular Morning Prayer, and a second celebration, with addresses by Bishop Green, and several laymen, white and colored. In the evening there was choral Evensong. and confirmation service, when eight were confirmed.

Funds are still needed to procure needed furnishings and fixtures. Any donations sent in care of the Rt. Rev. Theo. D. Bratton, the Bishop's Home, Jackson, or to the Rev. J. T. Jeffrey, 905 West Pearl Street, Jackson, Mississippi, will be gratefully received and duly acknowledged.

Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. F. W. Sterrett, D. D., Coadjutor.

Anniversary Celebrated.

The last week of June St. Peter's congregation, Tunkhannock, celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the church in this place. Once it was a prosperous congregation, but of late years had dwindled down to almost nothing. The Bishop asked the Rev. Mr. Neikirk, Editor of the Bethlehem Churchman, to take this mission under his care and new life has come to it. On Sunday afternoon a fellowship service was held when the other pastors of the town came with some of their people and congratulated St. Peter's little band upon their arrival. On Wednesday there was a big open-air service on the large lawn of Mrs. Jordan, whose people have been identified with the church from the very beginning. The choir, some twenty, from St. James' Church, Pittston, came more than twenty miles to sing.

St. Luke's Church, Lebanon.

Three interesting items from this old parish claimed the attention of the Church and community lately. Bishop Talbot made what he thinks will be his last official visit on Whitsunday. At this time he confirmed the second class for this year, consisting of twenty-seven persons. The rector, the Rev. R. F. Philbrook, expects another in the fall. Three classes in one year!

A beautiful window in memory of the late George Ebert Kline was placed in the southeastern transcept of the church by the heirs and blessed by Bishop Talbot on Whitsunday. The subject of the memorial is "The First Whitsunday". It is thirteenth century, antique style, made by the D'Ascenzo people of Philadelphia, and is said to be one of the most magnificent windows in the diocese.

Collect for Fifth Sunday After Trinity.

Grant, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that the course of this world may be so peaceably ordered by Thy governance, that Thy Church may joyfully serve Thee in all godly quietness; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Seven Men of Galilee.

Percy Foster Hall.

Seven men of Galilee
Held the tempting Lake in view.
Simon said, "I'm going to fish".
Six said "We will go with you".

Seven men of Galilee
Fished in vain all through the night.
Coming home they saw on shore
A Stranger in the dawning light.

Seven men of Galilee
Heard Him asking what they caught;
Asking, "Have ye any meat"?
Sullenly they answered, "Naught".

Seven men of Galilee
Heard His quick, commanding shout,
"Cast the net on the right side".
They cast, and could not draw it out.

Seven men of Galilee
Saw the catch and heard the word.
One alone, beloved John,
Recognized the blessed Lord.

Soft he whispered to his friend,
"It is the Lord", and instantly
Peter girt on him his coat
And cast himself into the sea.

Six strong men of Galilee
Brought their boat and net to land,
And saw a fire of coals ablaze
And bread and fish upon the strand.

Seven men of Galilee
Heard Jesus, "Bring your fish to Me".
Peter drew and counted out
One hundred and fifty-three.

Seven men of Galilee
Gazed in wonder as He spoke;
And noted, though so many fish,
The burdened net in no part broke!

Seven men of Galilee
Awestruck could not speak a word;
Dared not ask Him, "Who art Thou"?
Knowing that it was the Lord.

Seven men of Galilee
From Jesus' hands ate fish and bread
This was the third time He appeared
After His rising from the dead.

Men of our beloved Church,
Shall we have power to answer aught,
When Jesus some day says to us,
"Bring of the fish that ye have caught"?
"Fishers of men," He bids us be,
Casting our nets as He has taught;
Seeking the lost with eager zeal,
Saving the souls His Blood has bought.

Honor.

The heroic has its appeal. It urges us on to nobler endeavor, even to the point of risk and sacrifice. The heroic in the past has public honor. Monuments are everywhere, paying respectful tribute to the heroes of the past. This is as it should be, for these monuments tell their story silently but strikingly. The blood surges more swiftly when we see these memorials.

Special days are set apart by church or by nation to keep alive the names of these heroes. There is a desire to remember those whose labors have made possible our inherited blessings. Some of these days have to do with the victories of war, others with the achievements of peace. But whatever they celebrate they stimulate a living generation to greater endeavor. Men love their country more when they remember what it has cost the heroes of former days. We love the Church more dearly when we recall the sacrificial service, even to martyrdom, rendered by the followers of Christ. The pioneers of the Church and of the nation come in for a deserved praise, and to their names praises are sung and on their graves tributes are placed. Somehow we do not tire of honoring the men and women in whose trail we are walking successfully and comfortably.

We have seen tablets on church walls bearing the names of devoted pastors, of faithful superintendents, or of consecrated teachers. Probably outside that narrow circle, centering around that church, their names were unknown, at least were given no special honor. But in the heart of that community their memory lived on, honored because of what they were and what they did. Some influence of their lives clung to others who could not forget them and who planned that succeeding generations should know about them.

Could we but see the hidden traces of uplifting influences on the hearts and conducts of thousands who have never erected monuments or unveiled tablets, we would read there finer tributes than were ever chiseled in marble or wrought in bronze. Most of the noblest men and women today, noble because filling their place in life well, owe what they are, partly at least, to what they received from others; and these others are their heroes. The good they may do is the best honor they can show to these potent personalities that influenced them.—Selected.

Adventures in Friendliness.

It would be impossible for an American organization to enter an area for purposes of humanitarian relief and education and touch intimately the lives of a million and a half people and not leave an impress that was American. In the administration of philanthropies the lanes down which adventure has led us are legion and the Near Eastern people have received many lessons in friendliness and cooperation.

Few realize the problem of practical education in the Orient, which must include training in team work among extremely individualistic people. Our adventures in this line perhaps have been more "friendly" than in any other.

In America the normal child has friends in his home, in school and in many social institutions that supplement the work of the school. In our orphanages the school must be parent, teacher, pastor and friend. The atmosphere of the institution itself must have the friendliness of the home. It would not do to spill out into the life of the Near East a generation of "institionalized" young people. If the work is to continue permanently effective it must furnish ideals for after-orphanage community life that will counteract the racial antagonism that heretofore has caused strife and degeneration among the conglomerate peoples of the Oriental countries.

In the orphanages, which are no longer called orphanages but "children's homes", every effort is made to give the children a home atmosphere. We have discovered that there are essentials of personality or character that develop only in response to affection; that loyalty and trustworthiness grow best in a home environment and in response to love. The highest paid of our local personnel are our "house mothers" who are chosen for their motherliness. Older children are placed in charge of younger children. Many other methods have been developed to create and maintain the home atmosphere.

Post-orphanage work has lowered moral fatalities in an amazing way in a society that is unbelievably disorganized because of the uprootings and transplantings of the last ten years. This is borne out by the fact that our boys and girls, well-trained in our vocational schools, are succeeding where adults with years of experience are out of employment.

It has been the aim of Near East Relief in its great adventure of rescuing little human beings from starvation and death and training them to meet their own great adventure of adult life to eliminate from their consciousness the hatred that their past experiences have taught them and send them out into the world with friendliness and goodwill toward their fellowmen.—The New Near East.

The Born Girl.

Gregor North.

Unchanged by the bonds of precept and example, natural, unmoulded, and in primitive simplicity, the born girl must be caught young. The veneer of convention covers over her inborn traits much sooner than her brother's. Whilst he boldly displays what is in him with force and directness, she begins very soon to conceal it instinctievly as her best defense. Force is his weapon, hers is camouflage, especially in the presence of other girls. If the girl has a preference, she dissembles, whilst the boy never dreams of hiding it. He marches direct on his object, she approaches it in devious ways, and early uses the conventions of her sex in such matters, for she finds them a welcome aid. An interest she may feel, but she knows it is her right to be sought, his to seek.

All her dolls are feminine, and the mysteries of their dressing and undressing are never exhibited before boys. As soon as intelligence dawns, it is the same with other primitive urges.

Doubtless she is as hungry as the boy, but the craving is early restrained in the presence of others. Again, her modicum of cruelty finds vent in more varied, hidden, and indirect ways than with the boy. In this her best weapon, early exercised and polished, is the tongue. The boy naturally realizes this, and very seldom engages with her in a battle of words after his first ignominous failures, for her inborn intuition unfailingly reaches the joints in his armor. Intuition is her first and constant battle line. Should this fail, which is not often, then tears infallibly put others in the wrong.

On the other hand, the elder sister, though physically stronger, very soon drops resort to force with her brother. It is altogether too "chancy" in a quarrel. Her side-slaps, scratches, hair-pulling and pinches are less damaging than his direct fisticuffs. Girls are not fighting animals physically. They never throw stones or wield sticks, and their instinct is always to separate combatants rather than to egg them on as do boys, who always admire the stronger fighter, whilst she usually pities the loser.

She is not so inconsequent as the boy. While he rushes direct from one unrelated thing to another, she always has some aim ahead towards which she marches. Her bent is rather to mould to her purpose things in ease, than to force or wrench them thereto as does the boy.

Girls always hunt in couples, foreshadowing her destiny—to mate. Does the Bible account of her origin embody a profound truth in this connection? Eve began life with a partner already provided, whilst Adam for a time was self-sufficient. The boy is certainly more so in his earlier years than is the girl. She desires affection, yet only seems to accept it. When the longing does arise, his impulse is to seize—hers to attract. He has not passed his early years feeling after love like his sister.

Tidiness is natural to her. Dirt, dust, and disorder on or about her she dislikes in any shape or form, and filth is the last horror. She delights above all to play at keeping house. Her brother will only stay the cruise of a pirate ship, or an Indian war raid. A tent or cave may come in, but only because it is so unlike a house, and because the cooking can always be done outside.

She admires strength and agility, but not the tom-boy. Her tact preserves her from moth-eaten friendships. She slides easily out of one into another without visible disagreement as a rule, but each party knows why, though neither will proclaim it. Jealousy is the commonest cause, but wild horses cannot drag out the admission. "Daddy" oftenest has her dearest love, and blessed thought! She it is in after times who best conserves his failing years. Her sorrows are long and keen, held in secret, and never revealed from choice. She is constant in affection and care for her belongings, but an old dress is a sad cross. Patient and obliging, she is nevertheless quietly persistent in her thoughts, though outwardly obedient.

She excels in the "spot-light", and uniformly shines where the boy would be awkward if not extinguished. Beautiful things she loves, but flowers more than trees, things dainty and colorful, rather than the majestic and magnificent. Why is the little girl not afraid of the terrible mouse? It may be that here we are in the presence of the greatest triumph of feminine convention.

Finally, such as she is, God made her—not of the dust, but of dust already exalted into humanity. So by nature she is always a step nearer the Divine than her counterpart. When she reigns there will be no more war.

The Pines.

Anna Hamilton Wood.

They stand so still, a stately row,
Watching the seasons come and go;
The creeping fingers of the spring,
The autumn's rich unburdening;
Midsummer's glory, and the wide
White barreness of winter's pride.

They bow beneath the storm's rough hand,
And answer to the sun's command.
All through the quiet nights they wait
In worship, inarticulate.
They whisper with the stars, and keep
Nocturnal secrets, strange and deep.

At touch of twilight hour they rest
Their heads upon the sky's pale breast.
When scented needles shower down
From limb and bough, from twig and crown,
Perhaps they speak of a wee King
And pine trees trimmed for honoring!

The Men God Wants.

When God wants a worker He calls a worker. When God wants a great servant He calls the busy man. Scripture and history attest this truth.

Moses was busy with the flock at Horeb. Gidea was busy threshing wheat by the wine-press. Saul was busy searching for his father's lost beasts. David was busy caring for his father's sheep. Elisha was busy plowing with twelve yoke of oxen. Nehemiah was busy bearing the King's wine-cup. Amos was busy following the herds. Peter and Andrew were busy casting the net into the sea. James and John were busy mending their nets. Matthew was busy collecting customs. Saul was busy persecuting the friends of Jesus. William Carey was busy making shoes. John Milton was busy mastering the classics. John Bunyan was busy tinkering pots and pans. Martin Luther was busy performing penance. Admiral Judson was busy investigating religious truth. Charles Spurgeon was busy as a preacher. Roger Williams was busy as a stenographer.

God never called an idler into His service. The indolent young man who looks longingly toward the gospel ministry will never get a call from God. The busy workers are the men God wants.—H. L. Hastings.

Jesus and Children.

There was one thing about Jesus which no one could fail to notice: His great popularity with children. A certain fullness of humanity always seems to attract children. In Jesus this constituted an irresistible attraction. They ran after Him—they clung to Him—they shouted for Him. His must have been a joyous presence. This power of attracting children seems to be one of the hall-marks of good men. The children's unspoiled nature seems to cling to unspoiled souls—as like cleaves to like. "They brought young children to Christ." Ah! there was no need of that, for they came to Him of their own accord—nor did He ever refuse them. How shall we bring the children to Christ? How shall we win them to love and follow Him? The best way is by being Christlike ourselves. Let them see in us nothing but His kindness, wisdom, strength, tenderness and sympathy, and they will learn to love Him, and grow close to Him as in the days when "He took them up in His arms and blessed them".—Selected.

It's All In The Way You Take Things.

How much poorer the world would have been if Beethoven had yielded to his deafness, or if Milton, the poet, had gone off by himself and sulked in sour self pity!

When he was a lad, Henry Hawkins was made blind by a hunting accident. He said, "I made up my mind in ten minutes that it should not seriously affect my career".

He became Postmaster General of England, as well as a Professor of Political Economy in Cambridge University.

The tone and spirit of Basil King's book, "The Conquest of Fear", is deeply enhanced by the realization that as he was writing those exalted sentences, proving the unconquerabieness of the human spirit, the light on physical things was gradually being shut out from his mind.

But it is evident, as we read the words and between the lines of King's "Conquest of Fear", that the light which shines upon a soul that has really made its connection with the Divine is greater and more beautiful than that which merely reflects the contour and color of things of the physical world.

It's all in the way you take things.

Little difficulties bow down and break a person who takes life wrongly. The more tremendous problems do not daunt a spirit which lives in tune with the Infinite.

It's all in the way you take things.

And regardless how exaggerated your problems may have grown in your own conception of it, there are living examples throughout the length and breadth of the land of a way to handle that problem which lets the bearer live on top. It is promised in Holy Writ, that God will not tempt us beyond our ability to bear.

So nothing can conquer the human spirit that endeavors to rightfully meet the occasion.

It's all in the way you take things. Torture lies one way. Life lies the other.—Exchange.

Cheerful Giving.

Martin Luther was once asked to help some cause when he really had no money to give. Still he did not refuse his assistance, but, going to a drawer in which he kept a valuable and highly prized medal of Joachim, the elector of Brandenburg, he drew it out, saying, "What are thou doing here, Joachim? Dost thou not see how idle thou art? Come out and make thyself useful."—Christian Age.

However small our faith, however slight our consciousness of the Life of the Spirit, let us act upon this faith and upon this consciousness. When love and pity are stirred within us, let our very selves flow out on every lovely and brave and self-forgetting impulse. Never speak of "a mere impulse". Impulses such as these are the calling of the Infinite Good which is about us and around us, inspiring the good that dwells in the depth of our own beings.

For the Young Folks

"Are You There?"

I like to play close by my father's den,
Where he's at work, and every now and then
Ask, "Father, are you there"? He answers back:
"Yes, son." That time I broke my railroad track
All into bits, he stopped his work and came
And wiped my tears, and said: "Boy, boy! Be game!"
And then he showed me how to fix it right,
And I took both my arms and hugged him tight.

Once, when I'd ask him if he still was there,
He called me in and rumpled up my hair,
And said: "How much alike are you and I!
When I feel just as boys feel when they cry,
I call to our Big Father, to make sure
That He is there, my childish dread to cure.
And always, just as I to you, 'Yes, son'.
Our Father calls, and all my fret is done!"

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

Thy Will Be Done.

M. L. G.

We who are the soldiers and servants of Christ are pledged to His cause. "God wills it!" the old Crusaders wrote upon their banners; and in every new work undertaken for Him we should be able to cry, "Thy will be done"! No human rallying-call ever had half the force of this one, and we need only to learn something of what that will is, to find direction for our whole lives.

These things we know He wills: that the Gospel be preached in the whole world; that His friends may be united as one in Him; that some day we may all, the innumerable company He came to save, be with Him where He is. We know He is the same Jesus who healed and taught and loved little children and cared for the down-trodden and His will is the same now as it was then.

So when you think what you will do with your life—and every honest work is in line with that great on-sweeping Will of God—pray that His Spirit may direct you to choose that task which will make you of most use to Him. It may seem a small one; but if it helps to feed His sheep, to extend the knowledge of Him or to bring about goodwill among men, it is His will, and cannot fail of His blessing upon it.

The Magic Gardens.

Lucile Blanchard Boyd.

It was the middle of September, the time when Florida farmers begin to plant their gardens. In large pails on the seed store counters were thousands of peas and beans. In large packages were whole families of vegetable seeds. In small envelopes were hundreds of willing flower seeds, just waiting for some warm brown earth where they could send down their white roots and shoot up their green heads.

They were talking among themselves one morning about the work that they must do, when they noticed that branches of the pine trees were swaying in the wind. Soon the rain began to blow against the windows.

"I never heard such a dreadful wind," whispered little Mary Marigold to her sister.

"The water is coming into the store," shouted Bennie Bean to his relatives, as he looked over the edge of the pail and saw a stream of water coming down the middle of the floor from the door.

"The storekeeper has locked the door, and left us all by ourselves," cried Polly Peas with a trembling voice.

The hurricane raged on, and the water from Lake Okeechobee poured into the streets of the city. It rose higher and higher. At midnight all of the seeds found themselves afloat, carried away through broken windows, and separated from their friends. They knew something unusual was happening, for they had never heard their parents or grandparents tell of anything like this storm.

The next day Polly Peas saw that she was floating beside Bennie Bean. She had lost track of her family, and felt very lonesome.

"Bennie," she said, "I'd rather sink than lose my family and friends. I can't find any of my family, and they can't find me. What shall we do?"

"Why, Polly, don't be discouraged. We'll find a landing place after a while. Just stay near me. There's land somewhere. Look ahead of you. See that boat. There, a man with three children floating just the same as we are. He hasn't lost his courage. Come on, Polly, swim!"

Bennie felt his skin wrinkling, for he was as water-soaked as a brave little bean could possibly be, yet he tried to make Polly cheerful.

So it was with the rest of the seeds who had lived together in the store before the storm. Some were discouraged and sad. They gave up hope, and sank. Others looked at the sun, as it sent its bright rays to the water. They remembered what they were going to do during the winter, and even if they sank to the ground they were hopefully planning to do their duty.

A week after the storm most of the water had gone back into the lake, or had been dried up by the sun. One bright morning Bennie opened his eyes to find himself on the ground in the midst of a group of seeds of all kinds. There were some of his relatives present, as well as Mary Marigold, Nellie Nasturtium, Polly Peas and several cousins, Tony Tomato and his brothers, and a number of other families with whom he had never been acquainted.

"Well, I'd like to know what we're going to do about it?" asked Tony Tomato. "It seems as if we ought to make ourselves useful. But I can't see that there's a single person left in this country to take care of us."

"Maybe we will learn to look after ourselves," replied Bennie Bean. "I think we'd better get started in doing what we were expected to do. Let's plan a surprise for the people who lost their homes by the storm, and will come back here later on. We'll all do our best and make this land beautiful for them, so they'll be happy.

"I'll start right away to send my roots down into the soil," said Mary Marigold. "Then I'll send out green leaves and yellow blossoms to thank the sun for drying up the water."

"I'll do as you say, Bennie," said Polly, "and I know my cousins will, too. We never would have found each other again if you had not cheered me when I was ready to sink. We'll grow as many peas as we can, so that the farmers won't be discouraged as I was last week."

Now, this sort of a gathering was held in many places all over the city, wherever a group of refugee seeds happened to find themselves together. They started to grow. By November there were thrifty plants in all parts of the country, on lawns, among bushes, in fields, in gardens, and everywhere the land provided food, and the sun warmed the ground. As the landowners came back to build their homes again, they were greeted by these magic gardens, which no man had planted. By January there were crops of vegetables and flowers to give food and joy.

Bennie Bean had grown to be a very tall vine. He had climbed up a small pine tree until he could look all over the nearby land. He saw Nellie Nasturtium and Mary Marigold blossoming at his feet. He saw Polly Peas and her little cousins blooming and making pods at the same time. He saw Tony Tomato spreading his arms wide open, and many little yellow blossoms and green balls hanging down from them. He felt pleased with the work that they had done. As he looked down on his friends he called to Polly.

"Polly, aren't you glad that you didn't lose your courage last September? You see we've made the world brighter by our work and cheerfulness, and in doing so we've made ourselves happy."

Polly looked up to Bennie and smiled. "It pays to do the best we can, Bennie, and I'm glad that you have shown me the truth of it."

The Guests Who Were Not Invited.

Charles and Charlotte found it very hard to go away and play, for there were such sweet smells coming out of the kitchen doors that they simply had to stay and take long sniffs. They flattened their noses against the screen door and saw wonderful little cakes coming out of the hot oven, and later a smooth pink or brown or white coating put on the little cakes, and last of all a shining ornament or tiny flower.

"Mother, are you sure you will have enough?" asked Charles anxiously.

It was not the first time he had asked the same question, and his mother had to laugh. "Quite certain, son," she said. "Even if every boy and girl that you and Charlotte have invited to your party should be here, there will be plenty."

"But some might come that we are not expecting," said Charles.

"It is hardly likely," said Mrs. March. "Guests always wait for an invitation."

After the games and music next day the children were resting a little while. Mrs. March and several ladies who were helping her began spreading the table under the big apple tree, for the picnic supper was to be served out in the open air. There were fresh little rolls with jam and honey and fresh butter and preserves, sandwiches, cakes, tarts, and so many good things that the children could hardly wait to be called, and then suddenly the air was full of whirling, circling insects, and the children could hardly see the table for them.

"Quick! Into the house! Don't wait a minute!" called the ladies. "A swarm of bees is going to settle in the apple tree."

Behind the big window in the living room safe and sound the children watched the strange guests. Presently a few gathered on an apple limb just over the table. Then more and more until there was a mass as large as a basket all crawling and turning and twisting in the sunlight. By that time two men with queer-looking bonnets and veils over their heads were in the yard, one of them carrying a box and the other a ladder with which to capture and remove the bees.

"Give us a tablecloth, and we'll take care of your party all right," said one.

They covered the good things on the table and then carried the table to a safe place far from the humming, buzzing mass on the old apple tree. Then one man gently sawed off the limb and shook the mass in front of the box or hive the other carried. Presently the little procession started in just like children going to school, and it was not long before the men carried the hive off with them, the few circling bees following in the air.

"Not a thing hurt!" said Charles with a little sigh as they ate the good things. "I wonder what brought them."

"Maybe the honey on the table and maybe the good place to settle down, as it was getting late," said his mother. "It is the first time I ever knew guests to come to a party when they were not invited."

All the children laughed, and Charlotte said: "But they didn't stay for refreshments."—Christian Observer.

The Cloud-Climbers.

The Cloud-climbers were small sprites who worked for Queen Golden Glow. They had to dust the clouds, keep the cobwebs out of the sky, and polish and smooth the surfaces of the sun and the moon.

The Queen had provided special gloves for the Cloud-climbers to keep their hands from getting burned or badly scratched as they rubbed the sun. She gave them little hammers also, with which to trim and break off the rough bits. This work had to be done always at night, so that the sun would be ready each day.

The Cloud-climbers had some great larks as they worked together. They loved to slide off the great, fluffy clouds and play hide-and-seek around the moon. When the cool twilight came, they wanted more than ever to play pranks and frolic about. Again and again the Queen warned them that their work must be done before they could play. But they liked to play better than to work.

One evening, after a very warm and trying day, when all of the sprites had been working as hard as possible at their tasks, the Cloud-climbers started out to polish the sun. As they went, they flew gayly about, chasing each other around the clouds and playing leap-frog over the evening star. They pulled on their little gloves and, without thinking to be careful, they started to hack and chip roughly at the sun with their hammers. How surprised they were when a spray of sparks flew from beneath their hammers. So, instead of gently tapping and smoothing the surface as they usually did, they struck off showers of these pieces of the sun into the air.

When they tired of the game they polished off the broken edges of the sun as well as they could and crept into the clouds to bed.

That night, when the Queen had drawn the velvet curtain of night over the sleeping world, all at once, in every direction, thousands of sparkling points of light went darting through the air.

Never had anything like it been seen in Cloudland. Of course the Queen knew what had happened, and she felt very sad. She watched the falling points of light all night, and it was only when the sun rose that she saw the lights fade away. Later in the morning the Queen gathered all of the sky folks together and told what the careless Cloud-climbers had done.

"I feel very sorry about what happened last night," she said gravely. "I did not think that even the little Cloud-climbers would be so thoughtless. Of course, the people of the great world beneath us saw the lights falling through the sky, and they called them shooting stars. But we all know just what the trouble was and how rough and uneven the sun's edges are as a result. It was a wasteful thing to do, and I must declare a punishment for the Cloud-climbers.

"Since these little folks are so fond of fireworks, from now on they must make their own. Every night they must light up the gardens and the forests and guard the flowers and opening buds for the morning."

That is why on every summer night may be seen the tiny, shining, darting creatures that we call fireflies. While they still fly gaily about, playing tag and hop-scotch among the flowers, they try not to be careless or wasteful.—Selected.

The Doctor.

He comes to see me every day,
Or very nearly so,
The dearest doctor, you will say,
As every one should know.

He smiles so very pleasantly
I cannot but be glad,
And, when he stops to look at me,
I laugh if I am sad.

His medicine I love to take—
It has no naughty taste,
And, when he calls me, I forsake
All else in utmost haste.

Indoors he will not let me stay,
But out upon the lawn
He bids me play the live-long day,
And calls me at the dawn.

You ask what doctor this may be.
Who bids me romp and run,
And makes the ills of earth to flee?
His name is Golden Sun.

So if your little head should ache,
When lesson hours are done,
Remember the advice to take
Of Doctor Golden Sun.

—Robert MacGowan.

An Exciting Night.

The household of Miss Disbrow and Miss Welte, of St. Agnes' School, Kyoto, had just settled itself for a peaceful sleep, one night last March, when the cook came rushing in at ten o'clock with the cry of fire, and the household arose to find the $25,000 building of the Doshisha School burning down, just across the street. It housed three hundred dormitory girls, but they were in perfect control. Fortunately there was no wind.

"As we came downstairs," Miss Welte writes, "a fireman ran into our kitchen to tell us not to worry. He proved to be our old carpenter and with great ceremony presented his card. Then for more than an hour we received friends, school girls, merchants, the banker, neighbors, graduates, all expressing sympathy and solemnly leaving their cards. At eleven o'clock a runner from a prominent merchant arrived and presented us with five tiny hand towels, all carefully stamped with 'sympathy from Masuda'.

"Monday we spent thanking people for their interest in our welfare, discussing our great danger, rejoicing that Doshisha's loss had not been worse, and wishing for a quiet hour's rest. At 6:30 when we thought we had seen our last sympathetic friend and were planning to slip off to bed very early, came the earthquake. You have read about it by now. Our house shook and swayed and then settled down with a determined push. . . . . Only the natives who have gone through these earthquakes know what it means. . . . I cannot think of any worse calamity than a serious earthquake in Osaka. It is the hub of industrial Japan and its factories are mere shells holding tons of machinery. Its streets are, many of them, too narrow for an automobile, and its people live huddled together in tiny match-box houses. . . If only this nation, and every other nation too, would spend some of its millions now spent in manufacturing warships, for earthquake study and protective measures and concrete factory buildings, how much safer Japan would be for its seventy million souls. . . . . The people are not pessimistic. In spite of rain and floods, wind and earthquakes, the tiny towns will soon hum with activity, and life will go peacefully on."

Summer.

Winter is cold-hearted,
Spring is yea and nay,
Autumn is a weathercock
Blown every way:
Summer days for me
When every leaf is on its tree;

When Robin's not a beggar,
And Jenny Wren's a bride,
And larks hang singing, singing, singing
Over the wheat fields wide,
And anchored lilies ride,
And the pendulum spider
Swings from side to side.

And blue-black beetles transact business,
And gnats fly in a host.
And furry caterpillars hasten
That no time be lost.
And moths grow fat and thrive
And ladybirds arrive.

Before green apples blush,
Before green nuts embrown,
Why, one day in the country
Is worth a month in town;
Is worth a day and a year
Of the dusty, musty, lag-last fashion
That days drone elsewhere.

"'Bout eleven o'clock."

"No, let 'em work on till dinner time. 'll just swim around till they come."—The Christian Evangelist.

Yield thy poor best and ask not how or why,
Lest one day, seeing all about thee spread
A mighty crowd and marvelously fed,
Thy heart break out into a bitter cry:
"I might have furnished, I, yea, even I,
The two small fishes and the barley bread".

SOUNDNESS FIRST—SIZE AFTERWARD

Here at the First and Merchants we first seek sound accounts—size is a secondary consideration after we have satisfied ourselves that they measure up to our standards of quality.

This policy means safety to all our depositors.

Our large resources enable us to meet the demands of sound business in the Southeast—Transportation, Manufacturing, Jobbers, Retailers and Personal accounts.

COME WITH US TO THE HOLY LAND

"Southern Churchman" Readers and their Friends will Visit the Holy Land on Two Surpassing Cruise Itineraries

Such a trip has been more or less of a dream to most of us. But now our "Southern Churchman" Cruise Parties make the dream a very practical possibility—easily arranged and inexpensive as never before. Two new trans-Atlantic Cunarders have been chartered, hotel accommodations, special trains, motors, etc., have been reserved. You, too, can share in the benefits and savings thus made possible. The smooth-functioning Clark Management, with the experience of 32 successful Cruises, will solve for us all the difficulties of foreign travel.

You will have as companions congenial and cultured Americans among whom you cannot be lonely. Mutual adventures shared in foreign places of absorbing interest will result in delightful friendships and a store of memories of never-to-be-forgotten days. Carefully planned shore trips are included in the initial cost; and in fact, every necessary expense on ship and shore except purely personal items.

The ship will be your Cruise-home, with the luxuries and refinements of a comfortable club, and insuring the most efficient use of time. You need be away only long enough to escape the severities of Winter. But if time permits, stop over in Europe in the Springtime without additional steamer expense.

We want you with us. Which of these glorious itineraries will you choose?

Deaths

LAIRD: Died, suddenly, of heart disease on July 7, 1927, JOSEPH PACKARD LAIRD, M. D., son of the Rev. Wm. H. and Rosa J. Laird, and grandson of the Rev. Joseph Packard, D. D.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL EDWARD WEST NICHOLS, LL. D.

Unto Almighty God we commend the soul of our brother departed, EDWARD WEST NICHOLS.

He was confirmed in this Parish by Bishop Whittle on Sunday, February 24, 1882, presented by the Rev. Dr. William N. Pendleton, some time Chief of Artillery of the Army of Northern Virginia, and for forty-five years was a constant worshipper in R. E. Lee Memorial Church. He was for many years a Vestryman of this Parish, declining election this year because of the condition of his health.

During his long connection with this Parish he has been a source of spiritual strength—to the cadets of V. M. I., and to the community he has stood foursquare as a man of God and a Christian.

A father to the cadets, an officer of the Church, a true friend and a leader with a real sense of spiritual values, we mourn his loss and offer our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Nichols and the other members of his family.

Be it resolved that a copy of this expression of our regard be spread on our Minutes, a copy be sent to the town papers, and to the Church publications, and a copy be sent to Mrs. Nichols.

RECTOR AND VESTRY OF R. E. LEE MEMORIAL CHURCH, LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA.

Adopted at Vestry Meeting July 3, 1927.

ELIZABETH MOORE HORNER.

Died June 15, 1927.

There are those quiet saints in our midst who make no effort to gain popularity, but who are the very blessings of God. Always serving others and hiding themselves, they are like ministering angels, often unknown, and yet the messengers of peace. Such was our friend, Miss Horner. Well-known and loved by her friends in Warrenton, Virginia, and in Philadelphia, her devotion to those who needed her, and her faith in the Master she followed, made her life like rich but quiet music in the midst of earth's jangling discords.

A reader of the Southern Churchman for many years, she loved the Episcopal Church in all the blessed simplicity of her worship. The world is better for her life. Paradise has received a Child of Christ.

FLOYD W. TOMKINS,
Rector of Holy Trinity Church.
Philadelphia.

J. WILLIAM BROWN.

J. WILLIAM BROWN, of Charles Town, West Virginia, entered the higher life in the Communion of Saints from the Charles Town General Hospital the last day of June. The funeral service was held in Zion Episcopal Church by the rector, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Mitchell and Davidson. His mortal remains were laid to rest in Zion Churchyard at five o'clock the first day of July, 1927.

Dr. Brown was born in Charles Town in June, 1847. He was a member of the drug firm of Brown and Hooff in Charles Town for thirty years. He had previously practiced his profession with success in Baltimore, Hagerstown and Lynchburg, and served with distinction for a number of years as member of the West Virginia Board of Pharmacy. He was regarded with high esteem and strong affection by members of his distinguished family; also by friends from every walk in life, many of whom he had helped in poverty or distress in the quiet, unannounced fashion of a Christian brother. And to him remains his Master's "Well done". His memory will be cherished and his eternal personality added to the force and fellowship of the Communion of Saints.

beautiful stone chapel. This is another of the once prosperous missions, then dead missions, and now revived missions of the diocese. Vandals had destroyed the windows, defaced the walls, despoiled the furniture, wrecked the place. The vestry of the parish church replaced the windows and put in a new furnace. The people of the vicinity repaired the roof, painted inside and out, and put in many new furnishings. Too much praise cannot be given the rector and the people for the self-sacrificing work they have done here to restore this well-built chapel.

Christ Church, Stroudsburg.

The rectory belonging to the parish was too large. The vestry sold it and are now building a very attractive old English style rectory on the Church lot. It is almost completed and will be a memorial to the late Rev. LeRoy Eltringham, the rector, who fell dead last February, 1927.

The parish plans immediately after the rectory is finished to build a parish house also; then it will be fully equipped.

The Rev. C. A. Grayhurst, of St. George's, West Philadelphia, will supply St. Luke's Church, Lebanon, during August, while the rector is on his vacation.

The Rev. Glen B. Walter, of Christ Church, Springfield, Mo., will supply Trinity Church, Easton, during the rector's vacation.

Old Church Erects Tablet To Composer of "Dixie".

Through the efforts of the rector of Calvary Church, Fletcher, the Rev. Clarence Stuart McClellan, Jr., the first memorial to be erected in the South to the composer of "Dixie" was unveiled at Fletcher on Sunday afternoon, July 3, at a "Dixie Festival". Nearly two thousand persons were in attendance at the festival.

The tablet to "Dan" Emmett, composer of "Dixie", is of handsome bronze and is affixed to a granite boulder five feet high, three feet thick and three feet wide. It stands close to the Asheville-Hendersonville Highway, along which thousands of tourists pass every day. It tells the story of Emmett's life and how he wrote "Dixie" in New York City in 1859. Behind it a United States Flag on staff waves, and before it small Confederate Flags stand. The tablet is the gift of S. J. Newman, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Newman Manufacturing Company, in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The program began on July 3 with a short service in the church. The Rev. Mr. McClellan spoke on "Dan Emmett and the Origin of 'Dixie' ". He also exhibited several Emmett relics in his possession. Emmett's favorite hymns were sung in the church.

The program on the church lawn at the memorial began with reveille sounded by William Paul Gearing, cornetist, who also played during the program, "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny" and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground".

Bascom Lamar Lunsford, collector of folk songs, played "Dixie" on the banjo, as the Calvary rector unveiled the Emmett tablet and a male quartet from Hendersonville sang "Dixie". Greetings were brought from all Confederate organizations in Western North Carolina, and one of the Confederate veterans gave the "Rebel Yell" after the tablet was unveiled.

A group of Negro singers from Charleston, S. C., rendered a program of "Old Negro Spirituals" at sundown on the edge of the graveyard of the old Fletcher Church.

"The Open Air Westminster Abbey of the South," as Calvary Church is called, commemorates the great idealists of the South—poets, musicians, artists, short-story writers, pioneers.

The Rev. Mr. McClellan plans for over fifty memorials here in the form of bronze tablets on granite boulders. Six tablets have been so far erected this year—Robert E. Lee, Sidney Lanier, "O. Henry", Stephen Collins Foster, Dan Emmett, and James Whitcomb Riley.

Personal Notes

The Rt. Rev. James deW. Perry, D. D., Bishop of Rhode Island, sails on July 15 for Havre on the Caronia, for a two months' trip abroad. He will attend as a delegate the Conference on Faith and Order in Lausanne, in August. He was accompanied by Mrs. Perry and their two sons.

The Rev. George S. Vest, for the past six years rector of Grace Church, Berryville, Va., has accepted a call to Emmanuel Church, Braddock Heights, Va., and expects to take charge October 1.

The Rev. John W. Day, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Oklahoma City, Okla., who has accepted a call to become Dean of Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Kansas, expects to take up his new work in September.

The Rev. Conrad H. Goodwin, rector of Zion Church, Charles Town, W. Va., has accepted the call recently extended him to become rector of St. John's Church, Helena, Arkansas, and expects to take up his new duties shortly.

Bishop Juhan, of Florida, will leave for Sewanee on July 18, and should be addressed there until the close of the Young People's Division of the Summer Training School on August 9.

The Rev. Truman Heminway, formerly chaplain at St. George's School, Newport, R. I., has accepted the call to be rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Winchester, Mass., and expects to enter upon his new duties September 1.

The Rev. John G. Larsen, formerly rector of St. John's Church, Deadwood, S. D., has accepted a call to St. James' Church, Fremont, Nebr.

The Rev. William Way, D. D., rector of Grace Church, Charleston, S. C., has returned to his parish after attending the International Rotary Convention at Ostend, Belgium.

The Rev. Charles E. Craik, Jr., formerly on the staff of Incarnation Chapel, New York City, has accepted the call to be vicar of Emmanuel Chapel, Springdale, Stamford, Conn., and will enter upon his new work September 1.

The Rev. Albert N. Roberts, formerly minister-in-charge of the Church of the Saviour, Rio Grande, Brazil, is now rector of Church of the Nazarene, Livramento, Brazil.

The Rev. William Barnes, of St. Paul's Church, Goodland, Kansas, will take charge of St. Alban's Church, Cimarron, Kansas, September 1.

The Rev. George Donald Pierce, formerly curate at St. James' Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., has taken charge as locum tenens of St. Matthew's Church, Sunbury, Pa.

The Rev. T. L. Sinclair, formerly rector of Resurrection Church, Kiukiang, China, is now in charge of Trinity Church, Zamboanga, P. I.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity has recently been conferred by Washington and Lee University upon the Rev. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints' Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The Rev. Harry H. Gillies, formerly of Trinity Church, Kingman, Arizona, has accepted a call to St. Andrew's Church, Tioga, Pa.

The Rev. Theophilus T. Pollard has accepted and taken charge of the work of St. Philip's Parish in Jacksonville. St. Philip's is the only Colored parish in the Diocese of Florida. The Rev. Mr. Pollard comes to Florida from the Diocese of Upper South Carolina, although for the past two years he has held the positions of Dean of the Theological Department, and Professor of New Testament Language and Exegesis in Livingston College, Salisbury, North Carolina.

ORDINATIONS.

The Rev. Everett Holland Jones was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Capers in Grace Church, Cuero, Texas, on July 3, being the Third Sunday after Trinity. The Bishop preached the sermon and was assisted in the ordination service by the following clergy of his diocese: Archdeacon B. S. McKenzie presented the candidate, the Rev. Samuel Capers, a classmate of the Rev. Mr. Jones, read the litany, the Rev. Fred. M. Brasier, of Port Lavaca, read the epistle, and the Rev. K. L. Houlder, of Gonzales, read the gospel. The neighboring parishes closed their services for the morning and joined with the people of Cuero in attending the ordination service. Mr. Jones has just graduated from the Theological Seminary of Virginia, near Alexandria, Virginia. Before going to this Seminary, Mr. Jones had one year at the Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

At the conclusion of the ordination services a luncheon was held for the clergy and the people who were at the service; the gathering taxed to its utmost capacity the large dining room of the hotel. Bishop Capers acted as toastmaster, and brief talks of welcome were made by representatives from other Christian denominations: the Roman Catholic, the Baptist, the Presbyterian and the Lutheran.

Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Jones presented his first confirmation class and preached. The Church property has been put in beautiful repair and every preparation has been made to give the young rector the full support of his parish. It is believed that under his leadership Grace Church Parish will carry forward a most important work in the life of the Diocese of West Texas.

DEPOSITION.

Notice is hereby given that, acting in accordance with the provisions of Canon 36, Section 1, with the consent of the Standing Committee, and in the presence of the Reverend Charles B. Ackley, D. D., and the Reverend Cranston Brenton, Presbyters of this Diocese, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in the City and Diocese of New York, on the eighteenth day of June, 1927, I deposed from the Ministry of this Church the Reverend a Presbyter of this Diocese, he having declared to me in writing his renunciation of the Ministry and having asked to be deposed solely because of his marriage contrary to the Canons of the Church.

HAROLD ARTHUR LYNCH

WILLIAM T. MANNING,
Bishop of New York.

MY CHURCH AND I

My Church is the place where the Word of God is preached, the power of God is felt, the Spirit of God is manifested, the Love of God is revealed, and the Unity of God is perceived.

It is the home of my soul, the altar of my devotion, the hearth of my faith, the center of my affections and the foretaste of heaven.

I have united with it in solemn covenant, pledging myself to attend its services, to pray for its members, to give to its support, and to obey its laws.

It claims the first place in my heart, the highest place in my mind, the principal place in my activities, and its unity, peace and progress concern my life in this world and that which is to come.

I owe it my zeal, my benevolence and my prayers. When I neglect its services, injure its good name, I lessen its power, I discourage its members, and I chill my own soul.

I have solemnly promised, in the sight of God and men, to advance its interests, by my faithful attendance, by reading the Holy Bible, by never neglecting its ordinances, by contributing to its support, by meeting with my fellow members, by watching over their welfare, and by joining with them in prayer and praise and service, and that promise I this day renew, before God my Father, Christ my Redeemer, and the Holy Spirit my Sanctifier.

"There is only one Life, it will soon be past,
Only what is done for Jesus will Last"

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

Grace grafts best on the tree that is green.

"Every duty we omit obscures some truth we should have known."

Don't judge Christianity by the mistakes of its friends.

God's law for your soul is as unvarying as the sun.

When a man has not a reason for doing a thing he has at least one reason for letting it alone.—Sir Walter Scott.

If we took as much pains to keep the tender lambs as we do to convert the tough, old wolves, the latter would soon die of starvation.—Exchange.

Never fear when the Lord bids you go down to the way "which is desert". The moment you set your foot in the wilderness you are the Lord's guest, and He ever keeps His table right royally furnished.—Guy Mark Pearse.

"We are so sinful, Lord, so oft we fail,
And Thou forgivest in Thy mercy great,
May we, too, pardon, since our errors call
For Thy strange patience with our low estate."

You can unlock a man's whole life if you watch what words he uses most. We have each a small list of words which, though we are scarcely aware of it, we always work with, and which really express all that we mean by life or have found out of it.—Henry Drummond.

Christianity is not worth the snap of your finger, brotherhood is a fiction, sonship with the Eternal is a myth, unless it makes men love men. To put the matter more concretely, unless you and I love men and do by them as we would that they should do by us, we are not the sons of God.—Alexander Lewis.

"Lives are like money in that their chief function is to be spent. The great matter is not whether we live or die, but what we accomplish by living or by dying. Three hundred dollars represents a vast expenditure of human labor. So regarded it is in a way a consecrated object. One might call it a vast expenditure of human life. It would be well if we thought more of money in terms of human life and not so much of human life in terms of money."

Do not look forward to the changes and chances of this life in fear; rather look to them with full hope that, as they arise, God, whose you are, will deliver you out of them. He has kept you hitherto. Do you but hold fast to His dear hand, and He will lead you safely through all things; and, when you cannot stand, He will bear you in His arms. Do not look forward to what may happen tomorrow. Our Father will either shield you from suffering or He will give you strength to bear it.—Francis de Sales.

ALTITUDES

As we ascend from the general level of the earth we find cleaner and purer air. The disease germs diminish in numbers and virulence. It is so, too, with our mental and spiritual life. To reach higher altitudes for these we do not need to leave home nor spend money. The poorest, most straitened, most closely restricted, of us may determine for ourselves whether our souls and minds shall live in high places and wholesome air or linger where the germs infest thickly and multiply continually.

It is an unhappy fact of human nature that what usually is called rising in life, gaining wealth, place, power, social or official position, too often means shameful and ruinous descent and decadence. A strong and thoughtful novel published a few years ago described the steady rise of a man in thought, impulse and purpose through a series of losses and disappointments, until, ruined in material things, he rose magnificently in character. Successions of histories of real life, familiar to most of us who have lived and observed a few years, tell us of exactly contrary results, of men and women and families rotted, ruined, destroyed, by what the world calls success. In all the condensed and comprehensive wisdom of the Litany there is no wiser sentence than that in which we beseech the Almighty to deliver us in time of our prosperity. The frequent association of high living and low thinking gives us the epigram that from shirt-sleeves to shirt-sleeves is a matter of three generations—a father acquiring riches laboriously, children wasting them industriously, grandchildren struggling for bread. In such instances cause and effect are plain and clear as addition and subtraction in simple arithmetic. Children trained in an atmosphere of money worship must tend to apply money to its lowest uses.

No other word is so slandered and profaned in common use as "education". Probably the most disastrous error of the present age is that of parents entrusting the "education" of children entirely to teachers. The heathen mothers of India who used to throw their babies to the crocodiles were merciful and kindly compared with fathers and mothers who shirk the responsibility of training, guiding, leading, the minds of their children—which is the real and noble meaning of "education"—and attempt to shift it upon instructors in schools, colleges or universities, usually lacking the time and frequently the inclination to trouble themselves with individuals. What we get from the books is considered by too many of us as the completion of "education", while really it is but the beginning. The child led, taught, guided, from earliest consciousness to measure all things by the standard of the dollar and the child taught to measure by the quantity of book knowledge are equally unfortunate and perverted.

Many of us know poor, plain, humble, illiterate people who live in high altitudes, are mental and spiritual aristocrats. Perhaps unable to repeat accurately a line from St. Paul's wonderful chapter on Charity, they live and illustrate its spirit. Their aspirations and meditations are of a real God and Saviour, their dreams and hopes of a real Heaven to be reached, their impulses kindly, generous, clean, their fervent desire to serve and help. We find on library shelves books by talented and highly cultured men who have poured out volumes of filth and wallow and gloat in it; other books by other men of like kind and capacities who can find no meaning or lesson in anything, animate or inanimate, beyond what they can see and feel, weigh and measure. Almost daily we see or read of men and women with ample fortunes and limitless opportunity for travel and study, but incapable of lifting their minds above the smallest and meanest of pomps and vanities, coarse ostentations, degrading follies and frivolities. Unhappily, far too often, the churches have members whose souls are clogged with envy, hatred and malice and all uncharitableness, comprehending nothing of the beauty, glory, majesty, purity of the faith they profess.

"Who did sin, this man or his parents?" the disciples asked the Master regarding the victim of blindness from birth. Their question asked and answered now would fix a fearful burden of guilt on parents of many who are going through life blind to all its higher meanings and purposes, held to grossness, futilities and shams, unable to rise to the clean and serene atmosphere of the mountain tops of Truth. The number, the excellence and the cheapness of our schools in this country make a special temptation to negligence in performance of one of the most sacred duties and splendid privileges humanity knows, and result in direful peril. Conscientious and faithful as so many teachers are, they can not give the most necessary and valuable education, which is the leading, guiding and training of the individual mind to seek and abide among the altitudes of thought and hope and inspiration. Minds and souls can not be moulded and directed by machinery. No two of them are precisely alike, as there are no exact duplications of bodies. The training to be surely effective must be in the homes, given with love and care and patience and watchfulness. We can not assure to our children fortune or distinction or power. We can give them the impulse and the guidance to think and feel nobly and cleanly, do our parts to endow them with a heritage to sweeten and glorify life, whatever good or whatever ill may come into it, to guard against the corrupting and destroying maladies that must attend mental living in low places.

ALFRED B. WILLIAMS.

THE NEW AND REORGANIZED PORTER'S

By the Right Reverend W. A. Guerry, D. D.

THE Porter Military Academy was born in faith, nurtured in prayer, sustained by a spirit of consecration, worthy of the best ideals and traditions of the South. It was, indeed, the spirit of the New South that rose up in the breast of its founder, the Rev. A. Toomer Porter, at the grave of his child, which led him to devote himself to the cause of Christian education. His case can be paralleled only by the example of such men as Generals Lee, Kirby Smith, Gorgas and a number of other loyal and public-spirited Confederate Generals and soldiers, who having sheathed the sword of battle, turned from the grim business of war to reconstruct the shattered civilization of the South upon the enduring foundations of Christian education and faith in God. Among these great pioneers and statesmen of the New South, Dr. Porter deserves a foremost place. In my opinion South Carolina has produced no man since the War Between the States who has done more for the cause of education or more to save the civilization of his native state than the Rev. A. Toomer Porter of blessed memory.

Dr. Porter states in the account which he gives of the founding of the school that his aim was "to save for the Church and the country at large the representative families of the state", who had lost everything by the war, and to give an education to deserving boys who otherwise would have been deprived of an education. Accordingly in the fall of 1867 he sent out a circular letter to the clergy of the diocese asking them to send him "a list first of orphans in their congregations, of widows' sons, of motherless boys, or of boys whose parents were alive, but unable to send them to school". He then notified his tenants who occupied his house on Ashley Avenue, adjoining the church, that he would need the house for school purposes. He next looked around for a Principal, and selected Mr. John Gadsden, who at that time was teaching a small school in Summerville, telling him he could offer no regular salary, but would pay him what he could. Mr. Gadsden, seeing the need of such a school, and actuated by the same motives of unselfish service and patriotism to his state, accepted the position. In the meantime responses to the circular letter began pouring in from every direction. From the lists of boys sent in he carefully selected thirty-three as boarders in the school. It then occurred to him that he might utilize the schoolhouse to its fullest capacity by adding day pupils. Accordingly, on December 9, 1867, after a full service in the Church of the Holy Communion, and addresses by Bishop Davis and others, the Day School was formally opened with four hundred and twenty-five boys and one hundred and twenty-five girls. The Boarding Department was not opened until March 21, 1868, and within a week after that date the thirty-three boarders, which was the full capacity of the home, were in attendance. Thus, within less than six months after his visit to his son's grave the "Holy Communion Church Institute", as it was then called, was fully organized and at work. A most extraordinary accomplishment! It is doubtful if any similar enterprise on such an ambitious scale was ever conceived and put through in so short a time.

The school continued at its original site until the winter of 1880, when it was moved to its present location on the Arsenal grounds. The story of its move is no doubt familiar to all. But for the sake of posterity, and for the information of those who have never heard it before, it is recorded here.

Porter Academy and the U. S. Government.

During the burning of Columbia, where Dr. Porter and his family were refugeeing during the War Between the States, a young lieutenant, John A. McQueen, of the Fifteenth Illinois Cavalry, showed him and Mrs. Porter such kindness that Dr. Porter felt greatly indebted to him. After the Federal troops had evacuated the city, Lieutenant McQueen still lingered behind, fearing some stragglers from the army might do the family harm. In grateful recognition of the services of this gallant young officer and Christian gentleman, when he was leaving the house Dr. Porter tried to prevail upon him to accept a gold pencil case of his wife's as an expression of appreciation of his services. But failing in this, he finally persuaded him to accept a letter, which, should he fall into the hands of Confederates, might prove of some service. In this letter Dr. Porter recorded the generous and chivalrous treatment which he and his family had received at the hands of Lieutenant McQueen, and commended him to the kind offices of any one into whose hands he might fall, if wounded. That letter, as events proved later, was the means of saving the young man's life. For shortly after, in a skirmish near Darlington, Lieutenant McQueen was wounded and captured by a detachment of Confederates. And such was the feeling of bitterness and resentment engendered by the burning of Columbia, that seeing a Federal officer wounded and lying on the ground, one of our men cocked his pistol, and was about to put an end to his life, when McQueen held up the letter Dr. Porter had given him. Upon reading the letter his life was spared, and the wounded soldier was sent back to Camden to recuperate. Dr. Porter, who had in the meantime gone with his family to Anderson, S. C., hearing that his young Yankee friend had been wounded, determined that he would go to Camden and see what he could do to aid his former benefactor. Leaving the train at Newberry, he walked forty miles on foot to Columbia. There he procured a vehicle and drove thirty-eight miles to Camden, where he found his young friend in an old house which was being used as a hospital. As soon as Lieutenant McQueen was sufficiently recovered to travel, Dr. Porter determined to take him and place him within the Federal lines. Together, by buggy and train, they traveled from Camden to Chester, and from Chester to Greensboro, N. C., and thence to Raleigh, where the young officer finally joined his command, and bade his Confederate friend and benefactor an affectionate good-bye, swearing eternal affection and gratitude to one who had risked so much for his sake, and who had traveled seven hundred miles by train, buggy and on foot to show kindness to a man who had once been his enemy. This generous and Christian act was destined in after years to bear fruit far beyond what any one dreamed of at the time.

When in 1879 the Government of the United States decided to withdraw its troops from the Arsenal grounds, Dr. Porter thought he saw his opportunity for a larger and better equipped school. Going to Washington he immediately called on General Sherman, who was familiar with the story of young McQueen's capture and liberation, and who had, on several occasions when meeting Dr. Porter, asked him what the Government could do for him in return for his kindness to an officer of the Federal Army. At last the time had come when Dr. Porter had an answer ready for that question. Calling first upon General Sherman he unfolded his plans, and explained that he wanted the Arsenal grounds for a school for the youth of the state. General Sherman gave the project his unqualified endorsement, and it was due to his great influence in Washington at the time, together with the hearty cooperation of the two Democratic Senators from South Carolina, General Wade Hampton and General M. C. Butler, that a bill was passed in both houses of Congress transferring the Arsenal property to the Rev. A. Toomer Porter and a Board of Trustees, which he would appoint for a period of ninety-nine years. In due time this lease was extended, the only condition attached to the deed being that the property should be used for educational purposes. This transfer of the property took place on December 19, 1879. On January 8, 1880, Dr. Porter and the Trustees took formal possession of the Arsenal grounds, and on February 11, 1880, Mr. Gadsden and Miss Seabrook, with the faculty and boys moved into their new quarters.

Change of Name.

The next event of greatest importance in the history of the school took place in 1886, when the Board of Trustees, during the absence of the rector, changed the name of the school from the "Holy Communion Church Institute" to the more appropriate title of the "Porter Military Academy", which by recent action of the Board has been again changed to "Porter Academy".

Passing rapidly over the events of the intervening years, we come to the recent reorganization of the school and the decision of the Board at its meeting on May 9, to cut out the military and to use its best efforts to raise scholastic standards and to put Porter's Academy in a class with the best Southern and Eastern schools. The following statement, prepared by Bishops Guerry and Finlay at the request of the Board, gives the best idea of what changes are contemplated, with some account of the new Headmaster.

"It gives us pleasure to inform you that we have secured a new rector for Porter Academy in the person of Mr. William S. Gaud, M. A., University of Chicago, who for the past year has been the Assistant Headmaster of the Asheville School, Asheville, N. C. Before going to Asheville, Mr. Gaud conducted a private school for boys in Charleston, where he made many friends and left behind him the reputation of being an able teacher and an excellent school man. Mr. Gaud also taught at the Phillips-Exeter Academy, and during the World War he was made Educational Director of the Third Army Corps, under General Pershing. He is a communicant of the Episcopal Church, a man of high ideals who has left an impress for good upon the boys who were under him. Under his leadership Porter's looks forward to a brighter future, and an enlarged field of usefulness.

"Owing to the rapid growth of high schools in recent years throughout the South, and especially in our own State of South Carolina, it has become abundantly evident that Porter's can no longer compete unless she is prepared to give something distinctive in the way of education and do a higher and more thorough grade of work than is to be found in the average high school. It was this consideration more than any other which moved the Trustees to leave out the military feature in order to give the students more time for study and for class-room work. Mr. Gaud and the faculty of Porter's are agreed that this change of policy is necessary if we are going to raise scholastic standards and put Porter's in a class with the Asheville School from which Mr. Gaud comes, and with Woodberry Forest and the Episcopal High School in Virginia. None of these schools, which are recognized as among the best preparatory boys' schools in the South, have the military feature. This change has been made in the interest of the boy, and in the firm belief that it will make for better habits of study and for higher scholastic standards.

"We wish especially to stress the fact that Porter Academy is a Church School and is conducted under the auspices of the Episcopal Church in the two Dioceses of South Carolina and Upper South Carolina. It was founded by a clergyman of the Church in faith and prayer and dedicated to the cause of Christian education from its inception. It has been from the beginning a recruiting station for the ministry of the Episcopal Church and of all the churches represented in its student body. The records, we believe, will show that it has sent more men into the ministry than any other Episcopal School in the Fourth Province.

"The Rev. Homer W. Starr, Ph. D., the Head of the Department of Religious Education in this Diocese, is the acting Chaplain, and will be in charge of the religious instruction. While all students will naturally be required to attend the regular religious services of the school, no attempt will be made to weaken or impair the allegiance of any boy to his own Church.

"Thirty thousand dollars in cash and pledges has been raised, leaving only $5,000 to be collected to make up the $35,000 needed to pay off our current indebtedness for the past three years, put the dormitories in good condition and defray other necessary expenses incident to the opening of the school in September.

"After the $35,000 has been raised we will still continue our efforts to increase our assets so as to cover any possible deficit which may occur in 1928. We are confident, therefore, that a new day is dawning for this splendid old school, which for sixty years has served the Church and people of this State and section."

PRAYER BOOK REVISION IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

ON a recent visit to England I had the opportunity to see and hear much that was taking place within the dear old Church of England, and was able to listen for two days to the great debate in the combined conventions of York and Canterbury, all the Bishops and many of the clergy being present. Since the time of the Oxford Movement there has been an effort put forth to bring back the very doctrine that the reformers went to the flames to abolish. The position of the reformers was that nothing should be incorporated in the Church that was not clearly taught in Holy Scripture. The Prayer Book of 1549 removed many of the false doctrines then taught in the Church, but not all. In the Prayer Book of 1552 the reformers concluded their cleaning and issued the Prayer Book of that year, which is substantially our own Prayer Book here in America.

The Roman Church teaches that tradition is of equal value and authority with Scripture. If that be true then every doctrine of Rome is true and every one that she may see fit to promulgate in the future will be true also. The Apostles and many of the popes lived and died and never heard of some of the doctrines that Rome now says we must believe under penalty of her anathema. I can remember her last colossal figment or decree, Papal infallibility.

Cranmer and his followers stood firmly against the medieval position and sealed their belief with their blood at the fiery stake. The Protestant Episcopal Church adopted the view of the reformers, namely, that nothing should be taught that was not contained in Holy Scripture, and therefore very wisely called our Church the Protestant Episcopal Church, protesting against all errors whether of Rome, or of Geneva. It has always seemed to me that Rome is the greatest Protestant of them all, for she protests against Bible reading and against some of the teachings of the Bible.

The Roman influence in the Church of England and in our own Church has been working for years to undo the work of the Reformation, and if the revised Prayer Book is adopted, they will have succeeded in large measure. The new book will have authorized: First, reservation of the Elements; second, an alternative Communion service with teaching greatly modified in the direction of the Mass, and third, prayers for the dead. I will not go any further. I believe that John Wycliffe was right when he said, "Prayer for the dead is but the smoke of Purgatory".

It was a great cause of grief to all lovers of the Bible as the standard of faith to see quite a few Evangelicals and most of the Modernists willing to surrender these points for the sake of peace. Be it fully understood by every one that the Romanizers on both sides of the water are not satisfied with the book as proposed, because it does not surrender enough, and since they did not hesitate to break every law and rubric that they did not like in the present one, is any one so blind as to believe that they would obey the new book?

Few of our readers have access to the works of Cranmer. I want to give in this brief notice some of his words on this momentous subject. He says:

"The papists teach that Christ is in the bread and wine; but we say, according to the truth, that He is in them that worthily eat and drink the bread and wine. They say that Christ is received in the mouth and entereth in with the bread and wine; we say that He is received in the heart and entereth in by faith. They say that good men eat the body of Christ and drink His blood only at the time when they receive the Sacrament; we say that they eat, drink and feed on Christ continually, so long as they be members of His body. They say that the body of Christ is every day many times made, as often as there be masses said, and that then and there He is made of bread and wine; we say that Christ's body was never but once made, and then not of the nature and substance of bread and wine, but of the substance of His blessed mother. They say that the mass is a sacrifice satisfactory for sin, by the devotion of the priest that offereth, and not by the thing that is offered; but we say that their saying is a most heinous lie and detestable error against the glory of Christ. For the satisfaction of our sins is not the devotion or offering of the priest; but the only Host and satisfaction for all the sins of the world is the death of Christ and the oblation of His body on the Cross, that is to say, the oblation that Christ Himself offered once upon the Cross, and never but once, nor never none but He. And, therefore, that oblation, which the priests make daily in their papistical masses, cannot be a satisfaction for other men's sins by the priests devotion, but is a mere delusion and subtle craft of the devil, whereby Antichrist hath many years blinded and deceived the world."

While in Oxford I stood on the spot where Ridley and Latimer and Cranmer, the three greatest lights of the Reformation period, ascended to heaven in a chariot of fire for their convictions. I knelt on that spot and prayed that God would give the Church the conviction necessary to hold the Church true to Him and to His Word.

The issue at present stands thus: The convocations passed the recommendations of the Bishops by a large majority and it must go next to the Church Assembly which meets in July and there be fought out again. If passed there the next step is in the House of Parliament, where it must be passed by a majority of both Houses. The real fight will be there where the representatives of the entire Church of England and people interested will be fully heard. In these various stages the entire work of revision must be accepted or rejected in toto, no amendmend or revision is possible. In every Cathedral town, meetings of protest have been held to declare against what many believe to be a surrender to those who would undermine the pure faith of the Church of England as founded on the Word of God.—The Iconoclast.

A STATEMENT TO CHINESE FRIENDS

By a Group of Nanking Missionaries.

IN a recent article telling of a visit to the Capital of Nationalist China published in the Southern Churchman of April 9, I closed with the statement that our provincial government was about to throw in its lot with the Nationalists and that after that we might have quite a different story to tell. I did not think the story would be so different, nor that the necessity of telling it would come so soon.

We were taken over by the Nationalists early in March, but did not locally as a result have serious trouble. Some of our buildings were occupied by units of soldiers, but when we reported it, the Military Headquarters issued orders forbidding it. Our schools and hospital were not interfered with, and the attitude of the new civil and military officials seemed entirely friendly.

Then, as a bolt from the blue, came the news of the Nanking outrages in which seven foreigners were killed, others wounded, including two consuls; and upwards of a hundred foreign residences looted or destroyed, including the three consulates. This was done by Nationalist soldiers, in Nationalist uniforms, apparently acting under officials orders, and according to a carefully pre-arranged plan.

As there was no certainty that these Nanking outrages might not be repeated in other places, and be the precursor of a general anti-foreign policy of the Nationalist Government, the various foreign powers began immediately to evacuate their nationals. Nearly all of the Anking foreigners were taken away by the destroyer Hulbert on March 29, the others following by river steamer a few days later. Our residences have since been occupied by the Nationalist forces and have, we understand, been to a large extent looted.

Now it is true that these Nanking outrages were probably conceived and carried out by the enemies of General Chiang Kai Sheh, and were disapproved of by the moderate wing of the Nationalists. At the same time they are responsible and this is one of the things by which they must be judged. I am, therefore, sending herewith a statement recently issued by a group of Nanking missionaries, two of whom are honored members of our own Mission. This statement though it seeks to deal faithfully with the situation, is fair and moderate, and has met, I believe, with the entire approval of the missionary body. It should be illuminating to the Church at home.

EDMUND J. LEE.

Shanghai,
May 13, 1927.

The following statement was called forth by the visit of a delegation from Chinese Christians of Nanking, that met with Nanking missionaries sojourning in Shanghai. After the delegation had been heard, a committee was appointed to draft a reply. The committee in preparing the statement felt that it should be addressed to a wider constituency than that represented by the delegation.

We believe that momentous issues which we all, both Chinese and foreigners, have at stake, and the widespread misapprehensions which exist regarding them, require us to state as candidly and sincerely as we can our view of recent events and our convictions on certain current questions.

We acknowledge our profound gratitude to many Chinese in Nanking who helped us in our time of danger. They exerted themselves to the utmost and even risked their lives in our behalf. Nothing can ever deprive us of this cherished memory.

The Nanking Affair.

With regard to the unhappy events which occurred when Nanking passed into control of Nationalist forces, it seems to us no good can come from attempting to minimize or excuse what happened. Those of us who were eye-witnesses of those events have convincing evidence of the following:

1. The looters were identified as Southerners through their speech and physical appearance, by both Chinese and foreigners in all parts of the city.

2. The plan to attack foreigners was premeditated and preconcerted. This is proved by the uniformity of acts and statements of the troops who carried it out; by the simultaneous nature of the action in all parts of the city; by the thoroughness and swiftness with which it was carried out; by statements overheard by some of us in hiding, unknown to the speakers; and by statements made to numbers of us by Chinese friends, while we were concealed and they were in communication with the soldiers.

3. The acts were permitted, if not ordered by, officers. In numerous cases officers were among the groups who were active and even took part in the looting and threatening. The soldiers were called off by bugles after the warships fired. Officers are known to have shielded places which they had a personal interest in protecting. This leads to the conclusion that other officers could have wielded equal restraining influence had they chosen to exert it.

4. The soldiers who committed the outrages were guilty of wanton, deliberate looting, burning, murder, and indecent attacks on women. No excuse or palliation can be offered for their conduct. Yet, so far as we know, they still remain enrolled as a regular part of the Nationalist armies, and have not been called to account in any adequate way.

Reasons for These Statements.

Our reasons for making the above comments are not to oppose the national aspirations of the Chinese people. With them we have the utmost sympathy. We have no desire to use the Nanking incident to make capital against the legitimate nationalist aims, provided the two can be clearly separated. That is why we prefer to see all patriotic Chinese emphatically repudiate the conduct of those who committed the Nanking outrages, or who were in any way responsible for them; instead of seeking, as we think has been too generally the case, to minimize and gloss over those occurrences. This whole affair has lowered China's prestige in the eyes of the world, and we, who love the people because of our years of friendly fellowship with them, suffer as do all right-thinking Chinese because of this. Surely, the Nationalist movement as a whole does not stand for such tactics as these, and its cause would be strengthened by making that fact unequivocally clear.

Some Chinese reports state that the numbers of troops engaged in the lawless acts were few, even placing the number as low as two hundred. We are convinced that the number actively engaged was many times two hundred. But even if they were relatively few in proportion to the whole army, the actual number is comparatively unimportant. It is the enormity of the outrage that constitutes its significance, and not the number of those who accomplished it. To say, as some do, that an incident such as that which happened at Nanking is the inevitable accompaniment of a revolution and that we must not make too much of a single case is not a line of argument which we can accept. This was the deliberate act of official troops acting under orders. It is the inevitable result of a widespread anti-foreign propaganda in which there is much untruth. And it is not an isolated case, though actually worse than any of the other cases where attacks by Nationalist troops have been made, such as Foochow, Wuhu, Kiukiang, Chinkiang, and many other places.

The Foreign Bombardment.

The naval action by certain foreign ships on the afternoon of March 24 was taken as the last possible resort to save a group whom Nationalist troops were then making every effort to kill. It was certainly the means of saving the lives of this group of forty-eight foreigners who were beseiged in a foreign house overlooking the Hailing gate at Hsiakwan, among whom was the American Consul and his family, and it probably saved many other foreigners in the city. The action was carefully restrained and as moderate as could be to accomplish the object in view. There was no deliberate destruction of Chinese life or property, but every precaution was taken to avoid such a result. In view of exaggerated statements which have been circulated as to the number of lives lost, we would call attention to the fact that responsible Chinese official sources do not report more than six civilian deaths. The bombardment can be regarded as an act of assistance in suppressing a lawlessness which right-thinking Chinese themselves must condemn. It is certain that if the Chinese authorities had been preventing the violence, the foreign forces would not have intervened. And the intervention saved China the far more serious international complications that would have resulted from taking the lives of a consul and of a large number of nationals of a friendly state.

Anti-Foreignism.

With regard to assurances of good-will toward foreigners and promises of protection by the Nationalist government throughout its jurisdiction generally, it seems to us that the actual facts about conditions do not bear out these assurances. It is a matter of fact that violent anti-foreign agitations have occurred repeatedly and appear to be more widespread and active at present than ever before. Foreigners are steadily being forced out of all parts of China under Nationalist control, and the government, despite all its assurances, is either unable or unwilling to alter the situation.

The same facts are true regarding opposition to Christianity. The Christian religion is being persistently and systematically attacked, its leaders are being maligned and persecuted, its properties are being desecrated, looted and seized, and no power or influence appears able to check this conduct.

Treaties and International Relations.

We are aware of those legitimate claims which China has for the past several years been presenting to the other nations and we have used our influence to support them. Strong endorsement of China's claims has been given by the principal Mission Boards, and those claims have been conceded by the various foreign governments.

Candor compels us to say, however, that in our judgment the time has come when the securing of equal recognition in the family of nations depends more upon China's own efforts than on the foreign governments. Although we have taken a stand against the objectionable treaties, we feel that such phrases as, "imperialism", "toleration clauses", and "unequal treaties" have become mere catchwords with which to explain the present chaotic conditions in China. We must in frankness point out that these slogans are being overworked. They are being used to explain too much. Foreign nations have taken actual steps in meeting China's legitimate claims, and are eager to go further. But the Nationalist government has not kept its promises nor fulfilled its obligations. Such recent agreements as the foreign governments have negotiated with the Nationalists (as for example, the Chen-O'Malley agreement) have not been observed in an equal spirit by the latter.

Our Friendly Efforts Defeated.

With special reference to requests that we use our good offices to present China's case in the best possible light before our home nations, it is necessary to recognize that we who have been termed "idealists" in our attitude toward China, today stand discredited before the world as a result of the course of recent events. We are known to have protested against the gunboat policy and other forcible measures. As recently as the first of February this year, one hundred and twenty-seven missionaries in Nanking, at considerable labor and expense, prepared and sent a cablegram to the American government and public, protesting against the use of force in dealing with China, and urging a policy of conciliation and the prompt negotiation of new treaties on a basis of equality. In but little more than a month after that, we had to depend on the use of foreign force to save our lives. We have favored the return of concessions to China, but today a foreign settlement is our only place of refuge. We have assured our people abroad that the Nationalist movement was not anti-Christian nor anti-foreign, but now we are driven from our homes and dispossessed of our property. We who remained in Nanking on March 24 were not personally depending on extraterritorial privileges nor any other form of foreign protection, but were putting our trust in the assurances of the Nationalists. The events show that our faith was not justified. In all these matters, the facts of the situation flatly contradict our words. Everything we have said in behalf of the national movement is made to appear false. For us to say more in the present situation would be futile.

Conclusion.

We present these statements of our views not because we wish to discourage our loyal friends. On the other hand, we believe that the only way to bring about a change in these circumstances, is first frankly to face the facts and admit the conditions that exist. We know there are many Chinese people who see these events as we do and who sincerely regret them. But regrets and good wishes are not sufficient. Those sections of the Chinese public who really disapprove of the conditions we have pointed out, should find some way to make their influence and goodwill effective. We do not presume to say how this shall be done, nor even to say that it must be done. We make no demands of our Chinese friends. We are merely pointing out what in our judgment is the way to continued helpful relations. In so far as our Chinese friends see their way to extend their efforts in this direction, they will have our sympathy and cooperation to the extent of our ability.

The underesigned committee takes full responsibility for this statement, but in the preparation of it they have consulted all the Nanking missionaries who were accessible in Shanghai, and have tried to express the views of the whole group.

1824—AN UNUSUAL SERVICE—1927.

One hundred and three years ago, the Greeks were struggling for liberty against the cruel oppression of the Turks. The Turks had slaughtered their people, burned their homes, and carried away their women to Turkish harems. The Greeks appealed in vain to the Christian governments for help. American private citizens answered their cry. A young lawyer of Morristown, New Jersey, only twenty-four years old, delivered in Trinity Episcopal Church, Newark, an eloquent, beautiful and classical address in behalf of the Greeks. The lawyers of Newark were so impressed that they requested the manuscript and had it printed in pamphlet form, with a brief introduction by Archer Gifford. The young lawyer, William W. Miller, sent abroad for his health, by his physician, died of hemorrhage in Paris, when only twenty-eight, and his memory was baptized with tears by his resident American fellow countrymen, who buried him in Pere La Chaise and erected a monument over his grave.

One hundred and three years later the third of this July, his grandson, the Rev. J. de Hart Bruen, held a service in the church of which he is pastor, the First Presbyterian of Belvidere, New Jersey, in which the other churches, and the patriotic orders of the city, united to hear him read his grandfather's address, with its powerful appeal to patriotic sympathy, and Christian fellowship for the Greeks, contending for liberty and for the Cross against the Crescent, and suffering now as an hundred and three years ago from the terrible persecutions of the Turks. Again an offering was received for their help.

To be humble and loving—that is true life. Do not let insult harden you, nor cruelty rob you of tenderness. If men wound your heart, let them not embitter it; and then yours will be the victory of the Cross. You will conquer as Christ conquered, and bless as He blessed.—F. W. Robertson.

Some place their religion in books, some in images, some in the pomp and splendor of external worship, but some with illuminated understandings, hear what the Holy Spirit speaketh in their hearts.—Thomas a Kempis.

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

Executive Secretary, Department of Christian Social Service, Diocese of Southern Virginia.

PRISONS.

SOME time ago, a friend, in talking about crimes and punishment, said: "If a man breaks into my house, or kills my brother, I want to see him punished, and punished to the limit. I don't want anybody molly-coddling him and taking him flowers and cigarettes, and victrolas and radios."

That's the sentiment that underlies much of the old method of treating criminals. That is one of the purposes of punishment, as it has been administered through the ages, revenge. The social worker of this generation is proving by investigations that this is not the correct purpose of punishment. The Christian social worker, who is trying to apply the principles of Christ to modern problems, is not in doubt for a moment. He knows that revenge is not the correct purpose of punishment.

Consider a second purpose: the protection of society. This has always been present, among others, as one of the motives behind the punishment of criminals. The chief question here becomes: "What form of punishment is most effective to make this protection sure?" It is thought by many that severe treatment of a captured criminal will so terrify others who are criminally inclined, that their evil impulses will be restrained.

It is recorded, however, that most of the pocket-pickings that took place under the old English law, were in the crowds that attended the hanging of pick-pockets!

Thomas Mott Osborne said here in Richmond several years ago: "Depriving one of his liberty is sufficient for punishment. After the criminal has been confined, the efforts of the authorities should be directed towards his reformation. One man, sent back into the community with a new point of view as to his responsibilities in citizenship, is a greater deterrent from crime, than ten men who have been brutally punished."

This brings us to a third purpose of punishment; the reformation of the criminal. At one of the sessions of the National Conference on Social Work, some years ago, the special committee's report contained this statement:

"It is the judgment of this committee that fifty per cent of the boys and men sent to our reformatory and penal institutions are abnormal. . . . We are firmly of the opinion that the other fifty per cent can be returned to society as useful and honorable men."

The general secretary of the American Prison Association, Mr. E. R. Cass, delivered an address to the National Conference on Social Service of our Church, at Cleveland last year, on the subject County Jails. He said, in part:

"In the year 1704, now more than two centuries ago, a Pope of Rome, Clement XI, built the juvenile prison of St. Michael, and inscribed upon the marble slab inserted in the wall immediately over the door this admirable sentence, 'It is not enough to restrain the wicked by punishment, if you do not make them good by education'. . . . Nothing truer, deeper, or more exhaustive can be said concerning the treatment to be afforded to prisoners than was said by Paul, when he describes the prisoner 'as a man overtaken in a fault', and pointed out that the noblest work that can be accomplished in the prison is to 'restore such an one', and that it is idle for any one to attempt to, who is not himself 'spiritual', and who does not realize that he, too, has been 'tempted', and that if tempted as his brother has been he might have fallen as he has fallen."

Mr. Cass pointed out that, while many of our larger reformatories and penitentiaries were really conducted with a view of making good citizens of the inmates, the great majority of the county jails throughout the country were breeding places of crime. He said:

"Far too often the visitor to the county jail hears the callous and weary statement of those in charge, 'We have only bums and drunks in a place like this'. Yet the plain truth is that 'places like this' are institutions through which hundreds of thousands pass (according to the 1923 Federal Census nearly 320,000 for that year), many of whom are presumably innocent under the law, and many of whom also are later sent to reformatories or prisons where efforts at reformation are uppermost in mind. What a paradox in our treatment of offenders that we make them pass through our worst schools first, debasing, filthy training schools of vice and hopelessness.

"The secretary of the Howard Association of London, stated at the time of the International Prison Congress in 1910, 'The great conviction which thrust itself upon the minds of every one of the foreign delegates with whom I have spoken was the extraordinary quality of your American reformatories, and extraordinary defects of your town and county jails. Every jail I saw ought to be wiped off the face of the earth'. I do not feel that we would all be inclined to be so iconoclastic, but there is a deplorable amount of truth in the gentleman's statement.

"The county jail has not found a defender in the many years that it has existed. There are approximately 3,038 of these institutions in the United States. The county jail is a combination of evils known, exploited, deplored. The entire jail system is iniquitous, and the jails themselves are but centers of pollution, deftly if unintentionally distributed."

Many innocent people are temporarily confined in jails, waiting to be tried, or being held as witnesses; on the other hand many guilty criminals are held in the county jails for one reason or another, when they ought to be on the roads, on a prison farm, or in some larger institution, where they would have a better chance for mental, moral and physical development.

It is suggested that communicants of our Church, who are interested in human beings as such learn more about the conditions in their city and county jails.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question: What is the Virginia law concerning child labor?

Answer: Section 1808-a. No Child Under Fourteen Shall Work at gainful occupation, other than on farms, orchards and gardens, except as herein specified.

Section 1808-b. No Child Under Sixteen Shall Work (1) more than six days a week, (2) more than forty-four hours a week, (3) more than eight hours a day, (4) nor before 7:00 A. M., or after 6:00 P. M., except on farms, orchards and gardens. Employers shall keep these facts posted.

(Children under sixteen must have an employment certificate from a school officer. Subject to certain restrictions, boys under fourteen may work on the streets as newsboys, bootblacks, etc.)

Question: What persons may not enter the United States at all?

Answer: The following classes of aliens are excluded from admission: All idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, chronic alcoholics, persons afflicted with tuberculosis or other dangerous contagious diseases, paupers, professional beggars, persons likely to become public charges, persons found by the examining physician so physically or mentally defective that their earning capacity would be affected; those who have committed a crime involving moral turpitude, polygamists, anarchists, prostitutes, children under sixteen years of age unaccompanied by parents; at the discretion of the Secretary of Labor, persons who have been induced by offers of employment to come to this country to perform labor, persons who are natives of certain islands adjacent to Asia, or natives of any country in Asia within certain longitude and latitude. (Asiatic limitation does not apply to professional persons, students, teachers, travelers, etc.)

Question: What are the advantages of the consolidated almshouse?

Answer: The inmates can have more scientific and humane care at much less cost to the counties, than under the old system. In place of ten or twelve superintendents and their families, there would be one; in place of ten or twelve plants, there would be one; there would be wholesale purchasing; there would be larger production. A trained superintendent, a physician, matron, two nurses, and two attendants could be provided, and it is estimated that the cost of the whole would be $7,500 less than the cost of the ten separate institutions.

"THE ORTHODOX CATHOLIC REVIEW."

Mr. Editor:

So many inquiries have reached us concerning the ORTHODOX CATHOLIC REVIEW, published in Brooklyn, New York, claiming to speak authoritatively for the Orthodox Church, that I am asking you to publish the enclosed letter from Metropolitan Platon, which speaks for itself.

June 29, 1927.

Rev. Thomas Burgess, D. D.,
Secretary Foreign Born Americans,
281 Fourth Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Father:

Referring to your letter of June 23, 1927, I express my deep regret over the articles already published in the ORTHODOX CATHOLIC REVIEW concerning the Episcopal Church.

I wish to inform you that those articles do not represent the views of our Orthodox Eastern Catholic Church as a whole and that the responsibility therefor should rest on the editorial staff of the Review.

The fact that they have published such articles is sufficient enough to deprive the above publication of any right to the official standing in our Church.

Very sincerely yours,

X METROPOLITAN PLATON,

A CORRECTION.

Mr. Editor:

On page fourteen of your issue for July 9, you give, over the signature "J. M. W.", an account of St. John's Church, Cleveland, Ohio. In the course of it you state that I was at one time a rector of that parish. May I correct this unintentional error. My father, the Rev. Lewis Burton, D. D., was for twenty-four years the rector of that parish, succeeding therein his brother, the Rev. Miller Burton. During my father's rectorship, he founded and brought to the point of consecration two churches originally missions of St. John's Church, established and conducted by him, namely: St. Mark's and All Saints' Churches, Cleveland, Ohio. For the first seven years of my ministry I was associated with my beloved father in the care of these two parishes, namely: St. Mark's and All Saints' Churches, originally established by him as missions of St. John's Church.

Though my father did not found The Church of the Ascension, now situated in Lakewood, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, he brought it to the point of financial independence and of being made a parish, it now being a very substantial and prosperous church.

My father's parish, for which St. John's was the church, extended some nine miles west and nine miles south of that church. Within that area there are now at least seven churches besides St. John's, the mother of them all.

The Great Commission

CHINA NEWS.

The following cable has been received from Shanghai: "Have received the following message from Hankow: 'Convent of St. Anne, Shasi, residence at Ichang, looted by soldiers. Movements of our missionaries Wuchang, Hankow, free from interference. We do not anticipate any danger.' "

(Signed) BISHOP GILMAN.

Bishop Roots calls the attention of the Department of Missions to the need of a layman as treasurer in our business office in Hankow. In addition to being a careful accountant and a man with a reasonably broad business experience, Bishop Roots says:

"What we need is a person whose passion is the Christianization of the business methods of the Church from top to bottom through Mission Offices down to country vestries. I do hope we can get such a man."

There is a profound significance in Bishop Roots' remark.

The Rev. A. B. Parson, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, will be glad to supply particulars.

NEWS ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM LIBERIA.

The cornerstone of the new building for the House of Bethany, at Cape Mount, Liberia, was laid on Ascension Day. The Rev. Josselyn Reed, acting rector of St. George's Church and acting superintendent of the Cape Mount District, officiated. The principal address was made by the county attorney, Hon. J. A. Jones. A senator and representative spoke also and, of course, Miss Ridgeley, who has been at the House of Bethany since 1904. Many leading citizens of the town were present, as well as the teachers and students of the House of Bethany and St. John's School. An interesting and beautiful service marked this forward step in work for girls at that end of Liberia.

News of the Good Friday Offering for work in Jerusalem takes a long time to come from Liberia, but this does not lessen interest in the fact that Liberian parishes sent over thirteen shillings for this purpose, nearly half of which came from the Christians in and around Masambolahun.

The Church of the Incarnation, at Pandemai, far back in the Liberian hinterland, was consecrated by Bishop Campbell on his visit there in the spring. This is where the Rev. James Dwalu, an African, is working as priest and master of the Ramsaur Memorial School.

WORK IN CUBA.

The Rev. S. E. Carreras, a Cuban, is the missionary at Santa Cruz del Norte, Cuba, on the other end of the Island from Havana. He shares with all the other missionaries the responsibility for some 60,000 West Indians who have come from other islands and have been trained in the Church of England, and does what he can for them in addition to his main work, which is for the Cubans. Of this, he writes:

"Our Cuban Sunday School has an enrollment of one hundred and fourteen children from five years old up to twenty. . . . . The Church's influence is growing every day. We hold services from time to time at La Sierra, a place six miles distant from Santa Cruz, where I go on horseback up a steep hill. If we had an automobile we could hold services in other places and often. Around Santa Cruz there are half a dozen places, five to ten miles away, to which one can go by country roads. In all these the missionary cannot remain over night as there are no places where to stay. The houses of the Cuban farmer are very primitive in construction and in some the whole family sleep in one room.

"I have gone to La Sierra, San Matias and Echeverria to baptize children, but to go to those places cost round trip from $4 to $6 the automobile. The people are poor and they send for the Padre when they have three or more children to baptize. Then the parents of the different children get together in one house and meet the traveling expenses."

WORK AMONG THE JAPANESE IN WESTERN NEBRASKA.

There have been twenty-one baptisms of Japanese in Western Nebraska, where Mr. H. Kano, a lay worker, is working among the sugar-beet farmers of that region. Mr. Kano has a Japanese young people's group organized. It is an indication of the type of people he has that two Japanese girls, members of our Church School, graduated from the North Platte High School last year, each with an average above ninety. At Grand Island when the Hall County Red Cross asked for Flood Relief, nearly a tenth of the amount came from the Japanese. Mr. Kano travels about in all weathers, especially at seasons when the farm work is in abeyance, and holds meetings in homes, schools and hotels, attended by Japanese from many miles around. He has classes for them in agricultural methods and civic matters as well as religion. He also talks to native-born Americans, telling Women's Clubs about Japanese art, and Church groups about missionary work in Japan.

NEWS FROM MEXICO.

In these days the discretionary fund of a bishop of Mexico has to be used for unforeseen purposes. In a recent letter Bishop Creighton says:

"I have a report from Caballero that one of our men was arrested and fined in San Nicolas Obispo for no dereliction save membership in our Church. Hhis fine will be a charge against my Discretionary Fund as the man is a poor peon."

A little later, the Bishop says: "Some time ago our Deacon Cespedes came to me with the rather startling information that his father had disappeared. This was not an unusual thing as the rebels account for the disappearance of some people, and others go North with the army. However, as the young man was much worried, I gave him his carfare and ten days off to hunt for his father. The search was successful and Cespedes is now back in Mexico City. But again the expenses of this search are a charge against my Discretionary Fund."

In another connection, Bishop Creighton writes: "Our Deacon Ramirez and one of our young men looking forward to Orders, Eli Melendez, were arrested in Toluca for distributing circulars inviting people to the church, but they were dismissed from the Comisaria with a word of regret for the inconvenience caused them."

Bishop Creighton confirmed fifty-one young Mexicans in his Cathedral on Trinity Sunday. They were presented from nine places. Many of the Church papers in the last few weeks published an appeal for a sum of $150 to enable the Bishop to bring Mexican candidates in the vicinity of Mexco Cty to the Cathedral, as permission had been given him to confirm them there. He writes that sufficient funds were received to enable him to do this.

LEADING SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR LAUSANNE CONFERENCE

Fourteen countries and all the leading Protestant denominations are represented in the list of speakers announced by the Program Committee for the principal addresses to be delivered at the World Conference on Faith and Order which opens on August 3.

Seven of the forty-one speakers will come from the United States. They are the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, Episcopal Bishop of Western New York, who will preside at the Conference and deliver the opening address; the Rev F. J. McConnell, Methodist Bishop of Pittsburgh; the Rev. William Adams Brown, of New York (Presbyterian); the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, of Brooklyn (Congregational), President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; the Rev. M. G. G. Scherer, of New York (Lutheran); the Rev. Robert A. Ashworth, of Yonkers, New York (Baptist), and the Rev. Peter Ainslie, of Baltimore (Disciples).

The forty-one opening speakers have been assigned to make formal addresses on the seven fundamental subjects selected for discussion at the Conference. These subjects are: (1) "The Call to Unity", (2) "The Church's Message to the World—the Gospel", (3) "The Nature of the Church", (4) "The Church's Common Confession of Faith", (5) "The Church's Ministry", (6) "The Sacraments", (7) "The Unity of Christendom and the Relation Thereto of Existing Churches".

The speakers from outside the United States chosen to introduce the discussion of these subjects are:

England—The Rev. H. B. Workman (Wesleyan Methodist), the Rt. Rev. Charles Gore and the Rev. Canon O. C. Quick (Church of England), the Rev. J. Vernon Bartlet (Congregational Union of England and Wales), Bishop of Manchester and the Rt. Rev. A. C. Headlam (Church of England).

Germany—Prof. Dr. Werner Elert, Prof. Adolf Deissmann, Pastor Friedrich Siegmund-Schultze, Gen.-Sup. D. Zollner, Dr. "theol. A. Lang, and Praelat Scholl, all representing the Protestant Church of Germany.

France—Prof. Wilfred Monod (National Union of the Reformed Churches of France.)

Sweden—The Most Rev. Nathan Soderblom and the Rev. Jonas Lindskog (Church of Sweden).

Norway—Prof. Dr. "theol Olaf Moe and Bishop Peter Hognested (Church of Norway).

Scotland—Hon. Lord Sands (Church of Scotland) and G. F. Barbour (United Free Church of Scotland).

Ireland—Archbishop of Armagh (Church of Ireland).

Bulgaria—Dr. Nicholas Glubokowsky (Church of Bulgaria).

Denmark—The Rt. Rev. Harald Ostenfeld (Church of Denmark).

Greece—His Holiness The Metropolitan Chrysostom (Eastern Orthodox).

Hungary—Bishop Alexander Raffay (Lutheran).

India—The Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Bombay (Anglican) and the Rev. John J. Banninga (South India United Church).

Czecho-Slovakia—Prof. Dr. Francis Zilka (Presbyterian and Reformed).

Canada—The Rev. Prof. J. M. Shaw (United Church of Canada).

Eastern Orthodox Church—The Most Rev. Metropolitan Germanos, of London.

The formal addresses delivered by these men will be printed in three languages—English, French and German—and distributed in advance to the five hundred representatives at the Conference for discussion at the general business sessions.

The American representatives have been assigned to introduce the following subjects: Bishop Brent, "The Call to Unity"; Bishop McConnell and Dr. Brown, "The Church's Message to the World"; Dr. Cadman, "The Nature of the Church"; Dr. Scherer, "The Church's Ministry"; Dr. Ashworth, "The Sacraments" and Dr, Ainslie, "The Unity of Christendom".

The division of subjects among the speakers from the European churches is as follows:

"The Call to Unity"—Elert, Germanos, Archbishop of Armagh, Choisy.

"The Church's Message to the World"—Deissmann, Glubokowsky, Ostenfeld, Monod, Keller, Hadorn.

"The Nature of the Church"—Chrysostom, Raffay, Bishop of Manchester, Workman, Siegmund-Schultze.

"The Church's Common Confession of Faith"—Gore, Zollner, Lindskog, Sands, Moe.

"The Church's Ministry"—Bishop of Bombay, Banninga, Zilka.

"The Sacraments"—Bishop Nicholai of Ochrida, Bartlet, Quick, Scholl.

"The Unity of Christendom"—Soderblom, Headlam, Shaw, Kury, Barbour, Hognested.

The Press Bureau for the Conference has established headquarters in the University Building adjoining the Aula, where the Conference meets. The Bureau is in charge of Allan P. Ames of New York, who has been conducting the press work of the movement for the past year and a half. Mr. Ames will be assisted by a competent staff, including trained journalists and writers from the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany. He will also have the counsel and advice of an international press committee which includes the Rev. B. A. Abbott, D. D., Editor of "The Christian Evangelist", St. Louis, Mo.; Prof. G. Aulen, D. D., of the University of Lund, Lund, Sweden; Pastor Roger Bornand, Editor "Semeur Vaudois", Moudon, Switzerland; the Rev. James E. Clarke, D. D., LL. D., Editor "The Presbyterian Advance", Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. Wm. E. Gilroy, D. D., Editor "The Congregationalist, Boston, Mass.; the Rev. W. H. Greever, D. D., Editor "American Lutheran Survey", Columbia, South Carolina; Lic. Hinderer, Director Evangelischer Pressverbund for Deutschland, Berlin, Germany; James R. Joy, LL. D., Editor "The Christian Advocate", New York City; the Rev. Paul S. Leinbach, D. D., Editor "Reformed Church Messenger", Philadelphia, Pa.; the Rev. Wilfred Monod, Dr. Theol., Faculte de Theologie, Paris, France; the Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., Secretary United Church of Canada, Toronto, Canada; Frederic C. Morehouse, L. H. D,, Editor "The Living Church", Milwaukee, Wisconsin; and the Rev. Canon Tissington Tatlow, D. D., London, England.

YORK MINSTER ANNIVERSARY

By the Reverend Thos. F. Opie, D. D.

It was the thrill of a lifetime to attend the thirteen hundredth anniversary festival at York Minster Cathedral in Northern England. This celebration, coming in early July, drew clerics and lay-people from many parts of the world. Among the speakers were Bishop Manning, of New York, and Bishop Brent, of Western New York, both of whom were heard by audiences of six or seven thousand people. Bishop Manning brought greetings from the Diocese of New York to the Primate of Old York, which was most happily phrased, and the parchment, encased in leather, now hangs on the walls of the Cathedral, in the sacristy.

York dates back to 627 A. D., and is one of the largest and most exquisite of all England's Cathedrals. Archbishop Lang, of York, is termed "the primate of England" (while the Bishop of Canterbury is the primate of all England").

There is an ancient and well authenticated tradition that Edwin the first Christian King of Northumberland, a pagan warrior who married Ethelburga, daughter of Ethelbert, King of Kent, was baptized at the ancient well now to be seen in the cathedral crypt, and that the present minster goes back to the little wooden church erected by Edwin after his conversion to the Church in the seventh century.

For an entire week the festivities were in progress and thousands upon thousands of pilgrims thronged the immense cathedral every day. Among the speakers were the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of London and Durham and Southampton. Mr. T. Tertius Noble, organist of St. Thomas', New York City, and formerly organist of York Minster, gave an organ recital during the festival, and the famous Mass in B Minor by Bach was sung by a joint choir of a hundred or more voices.

The Church Assembly and the Anglo-Catholic Congress were other important ecclesiastical gatherings held in England in July, both meeting in London during the week of the third.

In August the World Conference on Christian Unity will be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, to which clergy and laity of every Christian land will come for consideration of questions of faith and order.

Church Intelligence

LAY EVANGELISM.

Report of Committee on Recommendations, Southern Conference on Lay Evangelism, Blue Ridge, N. C., June 30 to July 4, 1927.

The Committee on Recommendations on behalf of the Southern Conference on Lay Evangelism wishes to extend its thanks and express its gratitude to the Blue Ridge Association for the hospitality and facilities enjoyed by the Conference. The Committee feels that the success of the Conference is due in no small measure to the cooperation of the Blue Ridge Association.

We desire also to express our profound appreciation of the impetus to the spirit of evangelism given by the Bishops' Crusade, and to register our conviction that the most potentially valuable result of the Crusade will be the mobilization of the laity for personal evangelism. We believe also that the evangelism of youth presents a particularly strategic opportunity.

We recommend as follows:

(1) That the laymen of the Church generally be urged to recognize the fact that responsibility for the practice of personal evangelism is implied in their baptismal and confirmation vows; and that we express our confidence in the initiative and leadership of the clergy in this endeavor.

(2) That in accordance with the recommendation of the National Commission on Evangelism all laymen read and study the book entitled, "The Ministry of Laymen—A Plea for Lay Evangelism", by Leon C. Palmer.

(3) That in each parish, where in the judgment of the rector it is feasible, there be organized regular or Crusade Chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and of the Daughters of the King, or some equivalent organization.

(4) That local groups interested in evangelism give consideration to the program outlined in the leaflet entitled, "Suggestions for the Follow-up of the Bishops' Crusade", issued by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the Daughters of the King.

(5) That where authorized by the Bishop and approved by the rector laymen be asked to give informal addresses and talks on practical Christian living; and that more laymen offer their services to the Church in this capacity.

(6) That we promote the circulation of Church literature on Evangelism.

(7) That we stress the importance of group prayer meetings and corporate communions.

(8) That a conference similar to this be held next year, and, as the need develops, conferences of like character be held in smaller territorial units, including local community conferences.

Respectfully submitted,
GEORGE B. TOWNSEND,
Chairman.

Another Good Statement..

As of July 1 we have received approximately ninety per cent of the minimum amount due.

Forty-four Dioceses and Missionary Districts have paid over the minimum amount due, an increase of four over a year ago, and five others have almost paid the amount due.

The next statement will be issued shortly after Labor Day—

Question—What will happen in the meantime?

Answer—"Pay as You Go" and we will issue Another Good Statement.

Greetings from the Church Missions House.

CHARLES A. TOMPKINS,
Assistant Treasurer.

The Earthquake in Jerusalem.

No direct word has come from Jerusalem in regard to the earthquake on July 11, except that the Rev. C. T. Bridgeman, American chaplain teaching in the Armenian Seminary in Jerusalem, had been in Bagdad and returned to Jerusalem just after the earthquake. A report from the American Consul to the State Department, in the New York Times of July 14, says that no Americans were killed or injured, as far as known. A report from Jerusalem, in the same paper, says that there are many cracks in the walls and arches of the Armenian Convent.

Summer Plans of Baltimore Churches.

During the vacation of the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of Old St. Paul s, the Rev. Mr. Orrick, the assistant, will be in charge. At Emmanuel Church the pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Benjamin Lovett and the Rev. Mr. Weyrich, formerly Secretary of the Church and recently ordained to the diaconate. At St. Michael and All Angels the assistant, the Rev. George Zachary, is in charge. At Grace and St. Peter's the Rev. Clarence Parker will preach in July; the Rev. William S. Blackshear, of Versailles, Kentucky, in August. Until the Rev. Benjamin Lovett assumes the rectorship of Memorial in September, the Rev. Mr. Gettier, the assistant, is in charge. At the Church of the Messiah, the Rev. James A. Mitchell has assumed the rectorship, and the rector emeritus, the Rev. Peregrine Wroth, is spending the summer in Westminster, Maryland. Mr. Mitchell also holds services in the afternoon during the summer, at the Chapel at Gibson Island.

Conferences.

A number of Maryland clergy attended the Summer School at Ocean City in June. The Blue Mountain Conference at Hood College, Frederick, which becomes increasingly popular each year, is in session from July 11 to the 23, with a large attendance.

The newly-created Field Department of the Diocese, the Rev. Roger A. Walke, chairman, is making plans for a Clergy Conference at Monterey Inn, Blue Ridge Summit, September 21 to 23, when plans for the coming year will be discussed. Following this conference it is proposed to hold a conference for laymen from the twenty-third to the twenty-fifth. Representative laymen from each parish are now being recruited under Mr. W. Howard Hamilton as chairman of the Lay Committee.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools are being conducted during July in seventeen Episcopal parishes in the city. The attendance is approximately that of other years, between 1,000 and 1,200. This work is carried on in conjunction with the various denominations. The chairman of the Committee is Miss Eliza Ridgely.

The Girls' Friendly Camp on Bush River has opened as usual and services are held on Thursdays by various clergy in the diocese.

Kalamazoo Summer Conference.

The first annual Summer Conference for the diocese was held in Kalamazoo, at Kalamazoo College, from July 2 to 9, and will be recognized as one of real worth. The spirit of fellowship and helpfulness was present throughout the conference and loyalty and devotion was most remarkable.

The Chaplain of the Conference was the Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick, D. D., who was in attendance not only for service as Chaplain but as leader and director in the discussion groups for the clergy and the class in the New Testament.

Classes were held daily from nine to twelve, and were followed by noon-day prayers and intercessions.

Opportunity was offered for study in the Missionary Work of the Church under the Very Rev. Charles E. Jackson, of St. Mark's Pro-Cathedral, Grand Rapids. Studies in the Book of Common Prayer were given by the Venerable incoln R. Vercoe, Archdeacon of the Diocese.

Mrs. Lucy E. Kurtzmann, of Detroit, handled acceptably the classes in pageantry, and presented on Friday evening, the last night of the conference, a helpful and inspiring pageant entitled "The Pageant of Light".

Miss Vera Gardner, Religious Worker for Grace Church, Grand Rapids, had charge of the coaching courses in Christian Nurture, and was ably assisted by a corps of twelve faithful workers.

Choir Work was under the direction of Mr. Henry Overley, organist of St. Luke's Church, Kalamazoo, who also had charge of the music at the Sunset Services.

The class in Personal Religion for Young People, also the studies in the Altar Chapter and Work were under the direction of the Rev. William G. Studwell, rector of St. Thomas' Church, Battle Creek.

One of the most interesting courses probably of the conference was that in Child Psychology under the direction of Miss Helen R. Stevens, Director of Religious Education, at St. Mark's Pro-Cathedral, Grand Rapids, and who was also Dean of the Faculty.

Young People's Work was ably handled by the Rev. Gordon M. Reese, of Vicksburg, Mississippi.

Wednesday of the Conference was devoted to the Woman's Work of the Diocese, and special emphasis was placed upon the work of the Woman's Auxiliary. Mrs. Burritt Hamilton, of Battle Creek, Vice-President of the Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary, presided. Mrs. Charles E. Jackson, of Grand Rapids, and Mrs. William G. Studwell, of Battle Creek, presented strong messages relative to the work of the Auxiliary and the Corporate Gift.

The Rev. James H. Bishop, rector of St. Luke's Church, Kalamazoo, served as Business Manager of the Conference, and had under his jurisdiction a corps of faithful workers.

The Venerable Lincoln R. Vercoe headed the Committee on Membership and Hospitality, and the work of Publicity was in the hands of the Rev. William G. Studwell, of Battle Creek.

Special addresses were made at the Sunset Service by Dr. Allen Hoben, President of the Battle Creek College; Dr. Dwight B. Waldo, President of the Western State Normal College, of Kalamazoo; the Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Northern Indiana; the Rev. G. P. Symon, of Glendale, Ohio, and the Rev. Lewis B. Whittemore, Director of the Conference. The opening address at the Sunset Service was given by the Chaplain of the Conference, the Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick.

Many words of praise have been uttered in connection with this first conference of the Diocese of Western Michigan, and there is every reason to believe that the conferences of future years will be looked forward to with real enthusiasm.

One of the important features of the conference was the Book Store under the direction of the Rev. Edwin G. White, of Ionia. This was recognized as one of the best book shops ever offered at a summer conference, and from the sales made, ought to prove a helpful asset in carrying on the work of education.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Death of a Prominent Layman.

Hon. Henry White, LL. D., a member of the Washington Cathedral Chapter, and former Ambassador to France and Italy, and American delegate to the Paris Peace Conference, died at his home in Lenox, Mass., on July 15. Mr. White is survived by his wife and daughter, Countess Herman Scherr-Toss, and a son, John Campbell White, of the State Department, Washington.

The funeral was held in Trinity Episcopal Church at Lenox, and after cremation, the ashes will repose in the Cathedral at Washington, where his first wife's body rests. Visitors to the Cathedral will remember a beautiful marble tablet in the entrance to Bethlehem Chapel, which is erected there in memory of his first wife. Mr. White has always been a warm friend and loyal supporter of the Washington Cathedral and was a devoted communicant of his own parish church at Lenox, Mass.

His distinguished career has given him an outstanding name in the diplomatic world.

The Laymen's Service Association is continuing its splendid work this summer in holding service in the otherwise closed churches of the diocese. Dr. Sinclair Bowen, Dr. Larkin Glazebrook and Commander T. C. Jewell are among those active in this work. The Association responded to an appeal from old St. Barnabas' Parish (three hundred years old) recently, and made an unusual effort to awaken interest in the old church, by having service at 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. and taking a number of people from Washington to "swell the number" and give encouragement to the faithful few who were anxious to see the old interest in the church revived. The day was a splendid one for all concerned and such cooperation is being planned for other days through the summer.

Epiphany Parish: The last issue until fall of the "Parish Guide", the weekly paper of Epiphany Parish, contains digests of the reports given at the Annual Parish Meeting held in the spring, and in this way gives a general idea of the work of the parish under the able leadership of its rector, the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, D. D. Organizations reporting are: Daughters of the King, Epiphany Men's Association, Thursday Morning Club, Periodical Club, Epiphany Church Home, Chancel Guild, Morning Branch Auxiliary, Night Branch Auxiliary, Mothers' Meeting, Church School, Young People's Society and Epiphany Branch of Girls' Friendly Society. All of these reports show great activity and interest on the several organizations.

Consecration.

St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Nuangola, was consecrated on July 4, 1927, the festival of the Translation of St. Martin.

On Armistice Day, November 11, 1926, the natal day of St. Martin, the cornerstone was laid.

A throng that filled the new edifice to overflowing attended the services. More than one hundred persons were unable to gain admission. The Bishop Coadjutor, the Rt. Rev. Frank W. Sterrett, LL. D., consecrated the church. He was assisted by the rector, the Rev. Joseph Groves, of St. Clement's Church, Wilkes-Barre, the Rev. Robert F. Kline, of Calvary Church, Wilkes-Barre, and the Archdeacon of the Diocese. A number of other clergy of the diocese were present.

St. Martin-in-the-Fields is of old English Gothic architecture. It is built entirely of stone taken from the field upon which it is erected.

A beautiful chancel memorial window was given by the widow of Thomas Edgar Bechtel. The window depicts certain incidents in the life of St. Martin—dividing his cloak with the beggar—giving away his gold—his dream—his conversion.

Mr. A. M. Hildebrand, the contractor and his wife gave a beautiful altar.

The Parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields of London, England, sent the old Hymn Board from their church.

Nuangola a few years ago consisted of a number of summer cottages, occupied by people from Wilkes-Barre. A number of these people have changed their bungalows into houses and the town will be permanent and is growing rapidly. For once we are the first in the field and have an opportunity of serving the entire community. For the present the different clergy from Wilkes-Barre and vicinity will serve the congregation on Sunday afternoons, the Rev. Mr. Groves directing affairs as St. Martin's is a parochial mission of St. Clement's Church.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Vacation Bible Schools.

Reports show that 6,000 children are enrolled in the Daily Vacation Bible Schools in the Borough of Brooklyn.

Of these schools, fifteen are under our own Church, some of them financed by the parish in which they are working, and some by Women's Boards, etc.

A most successful one is that at St. George's Church, Flushing, the Rev. George F. Taylor, rector, where one hundred and fifty-five children presented themselves on the first day.

A week-day Church School has been started at Westhampton, under the care of Mr. Richard S. Martin, of the General Theological Seminary, and members of the Summer Colony. This is doing valuable community work.

The Rev. Charles Henry Webb, for many years Archdeacon of Brooklyn, and for the last five years Director of Long Island's great philanthropy, the Church Charity Foundation, sailed on the Celtic on Saturday, July 16, for a two months' trip abroad. This is partly a celebration in recognition of the fact that Mr. Webb has just completed twenty-five years in the ministry.

Mrs. Webb and her sister, Miss Mildred Brown, Director of Pageantry on Long Island, accompanied him.

Church Building Activities: At St. John's Church, Springfield Gardens, a new parish house and church are to be built at once, the contract having just been signed.

The Colored Mission at Corona is to begin new buildings also, as well as the Mission of Floral Park.

St. Faith's Summer School, which was held at Saratoga Springs, is the youngest of the group, and intended for younger students than the others. It has tried having only one course for each pupil, which is a new venture, and has worked splendidly, discussion methods were used altogether and there were three courses to choose from.

Another successful innovation was having two of the English Church Army Crusaders assisting them.

The Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D., confirmed a large class at St. John's Church, Southampton, on Sunday, July 17. On the same day he confirmed another class at St. Mary's, Hampton Bays, and dedicated a new organ at St. Ann's, Bridgehampton; these churches are all in charge of the Rev. Samuel C. Fish, B. D.

Rt. Rev. Jno. C. Ward, D. D., Bishop.

Anniversary of St. Peter's Church, Waterford.

St. Peter's Church, Waterford, celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of its founding, Wednesday, June 29.

Bishop Ward was the celebrant at the Communion Service, assisted by the Rev. Roger Charnock, a former rector; the Rev. Henry Post, the rector, and Archdeacon Kanaga.

Bishop Ward read a letter from the Rt. Rev. Boyd Vincent, Bishop of Southern Ohio, in which Bishop Vincent said it was with great regret he was not able to attend the centennial services of the church in which his father and mother were married, and where his brothers and his sister were baptized.

The address of welcome to the guests was made by P. W. McKay, of Waterford. The Rev. Henry Post presided at the afternoon services and addresses were made by John Dick, of Meadville; the Rev. Mortimer Ashton, of Beaver Falls, Pa.; the Rev. Roger Charnock, the Rev. Sisto Noce, of Farrell, Pa.; Archdeacon Kanaga, the Rev. William Heilman, and Senator Miles Kitts, a former member of St. Peter's.

The Very Rev. Francis B. Blodgett, of St. Paul's Cathedral, Erie, told of the work of the Rev. Bennett Glover, who, in the year 1836 divided his time between St. Paul's Church, Erie, and St. Peter's, Waterford, receiving from the Erie congregation a salary of $450 a year, and $150 from Waterford, and had what in those days was considered a good living.

The Very Rev. Martin Aigner, D. D., of St. John's Church, Franklin, was the preacher at the evening service. The choir of Emmanuel Church, Corry, assisted by Mrs. Rollo McCray, of Waterford, rendered the music.

SPOKANE.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Cross, D. D., Bishop.

The Spokane Church School.

Over one hundred and forty attended the Spokane Church School, held at McDonald's Point, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. It followed the Idaho Summer School at the same place which had an attendance of seventy-eight.

The courses were on "Religious Drama and Pageantry", by Dr. Phillip E. Osgood, of Minneapolis; Dr. Frank H. Hallock, of Seabury Divinity School, "The Prophets and Modern Thought"; Dr. Louis G. Wood, of the National Council, "The Church's Program in Parish and Mission", and Dr. L. B. Ridgely, of China, on "The Church in China and the Conditions There".

Several local leaders discussed features of Church School work.

The afternoons were devoted to recreation, especially to water sports. Bishop E. M. Cross closed the day with a brief evening service, followed by a meditation.

Freeman Howard Daughters, Lay Reader, Drowns.

The sad news of the death by drowning of their son, Freeman Howard Daughters, aged twenty-three, in the Copper River Rapids at Cordova, Alaska, was received by his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Daughters, of St. James' Church, Spokane. Mr. Daughters had charge of St. Paul's Church, Pomeroy, Washington, for a year while attending College and another year he had charge of St. Peter's Church, Spokane. He was a lay reader of the jurisdiction of Spokane, but last winter he taught a government school at Cordova, where he was a great help to the Rev. Leicester F. Kent, of St. George's Church, Cordova, Alaska. Plans had been made for him to study for the ministry. Besides his parents, he leaves five brothers and sisters.

The Executive Council.

The newly-elected Executive Council of the Diocese met in Holy Trinity Parish House, Greensboro, on June 22, for the purpose of organization, and outlining its work for the coming year. The Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor, acted as chairman. The Rev. C. E. Buxton was elected secretary. Chairmen of the various departments were elected as follows: Finance, Mr. Kemp P. Lewis; Field, the Rev. John L. Jackson; Missions and Church Extension, the Rev. Henry G. Lane; Religious Education, Dr. Wade R. Brown; Publicity, the Rev. Theodore Partrick, Jr.; Social Service, the Rev. Isaac W. Hughes. The Rev. Messrs R. E. Gribbin, John L. Jackson and Mr. Fred W. Glover were appointed a committee to make investigations relative to the election of an Executive Secretary for the Diocese.

Young People's Camps.

Two very successful summer camps for the members of the Young People's Service League of the Diocese of North Carolina have been held at Little Switzerland, in Western North Carolina. Camp Cheshire, for boys, was under the direction of the Rev. Messrs. Henry G. Lane and L. H. Hughes. Camp Penick, for the girls, was under the direction of Mrs. Frank Challen, Executive Secretary of the Y. P. S. L. Mrs. Challen was assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Theodore Partrick, Jr., and W. A. Lillycrop. The site of the camp was that formerly occupied by a Brotherhood camp, Finney.

FLORIDA.

Rt. Rev. F. A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop.

Camp Weed.

The fourth annual camp of the diocese opened at Beacon Beach, on June 15, with nearly one hundred in attendance. Camp was quickly organized and the program of activities was presented, which caught the interest of all in the beginning, and kept it to the end.

The Rev. Menard Doswell, rector of St. John's Church, Jacksonville, and the Rev. Ambler M. Blackford, Housefather of the St. John's Home for Boys, of Jacksonville, taught a Credit Course on the Bible; the Rev. G. Hendree Harrison, D. D., rector of Christ Church, Pensacola, gave a Credit Course on Church History; the Rev. John B. Matthews, rector of St. Luke's Church, Marianna, another Credit Course on the Church's Program, and Mrs. Elizabeth Cobb, of Tallahassee, still another Credit Course on the Teacher. The Rev. Melville E. Johnson, student pastor at the University of Florida, and Mrs. J. O. M. Cornell conducted daily classes on the work of the Young People's Service League. These classes consumed the entire morning; then followed dinner and rest hour, after which sports and contests were in order until five o'clock. At this hour the boys and girls gathered separately with the Rev. Wm. S. Stoney, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Gainesville, and Miss Hope Baskett, the student worker-elect for the girls of the Florida State College for Women next winter, who led discussions in Personal Problems and Personal Religion. Supper and Camp Fire on the Beach, with helpful Service eLague Programs, followed by evening devotions, closed each day.

The work of this camp has undoubtedly established a standard and a record, which will be a challenge to the Church in this diocese, to maintain and prove. It marks an epoch in the forward movement of the Young People's Work. Like many movements in the Church, the Young People's Service League, and camp activities have gathered weight and importance each succeeding year.

Young People's Service League Convention.

One of the best proofs of the earnest intelligence at work in our young people was seen in the sessions of the Diocesan Convention of the Service League, which took place during the sessions of the camp. For two days, these boys and girls stuck to a well prepared program of Service League business, under the guidance of their own presid-

St. Bartholomew's, H.-H.-Kus: A resmoothness and effectiveness. Especially satisfying and praiseworthy were the reports of the achievements of each Parochial League, through its chosen delegate.

Officers of the Service League elected for 1927-28 are:

President, Miss Frances Sawyer, Jacksonville; First Vice President, Malcolm Brown, Pensacola; Second Vice President, Robert Jamison, Pensacola; Third Vice President, Miss Grace Atkinson, Federal Point; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Alene Rawls, Jacksonville; Recording Secretary, Miss Helen Youngberg, Jacksonville; at large—Miss Sara Cawthorne, Tallahassee; Miss Eleanor Buck, Pensacola. Counsellors—Miss Margaret G. Weed, Jacksonville; Miss Hope Baskett, Tallahassee; the Rev. Francis B. Wakefield, Jr., Palatka; the Rev. Wm. S. Stoney, Gainesville.

Another Camp For Florida.

The minister-in-charge of Christ Church, Cedar Keys; St. Mark's, Starke, and the Mission at Bronson, the Rev. Russell S. Carleton, finding that none of his young people would be able to attend the Diocesan Camp at Beacon Beach, organized his own camp, and took some fourteen boys and girls to Kingsley Lake for one week, during the month of June. The campers divided the expenses and the work of the camp and found the experience both profitable and pleasant. Next year Mr. Carleton plans to send at least two delegates to Camp Weed, so that they may be trained to take charge of his own vacation camp.

NEWARK.

Rt. Rev. E. S. Lines, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. R. Stearly, D. D., Coadjutor.

St. John's, Passaic: All repairs and improvements to the Church and Parish House have been completed at a cost of about $38,000. Work has begun on the new rectory and it is expected that the same will be ready for occupancy in October. Recently four plaques, two clergy stalls and desks were presented to this church by the rector, pastor, and congregation of the Chapel of St. Bartholomew's, New York City. The old pulpit of St. Bartholomew's Church, a handsome and dignified piece of workmanship, has been offered to St. John's and arrangements are being made to have the same installed during the summer.

St. Peter's, Morristown: The vestry announces the acceptance of the gift of the lighting fixtures for St. Peter's, offered by Mr. and Mrs. Ridley Watts and their children, in memory of Mrs. Hoy, mother of Mrs. Watts and the parents of Mr. Watts. Related to this is the gift of a beautiful Spanish lectern from Mr. Robert H. McCurdy, in memory of Mrs. McCurdy. By the end of the summer the new St. Agnes' window for the tower vestibule and the Warren window now being made in England, will be installed.

6St. Bartholomew's, Ho-Ho-Kus: A recent gift to the Church School by the Woman's Guild was a beautiful banner of blue silk and gold to be awarded for the largest increase in contributions for the Lenten Offering. The banner was won by the young people of the parish. Three recent gifts for the building fund for the new church totaled $575. To commemorate the rectorship of the Rev. R. J. Thomson for an eighth of a century a beautiful processional cross from England was recently presented to the church; $200 has also been received toward the purchase of a pulpit. To these gifts should be added a new set of hangings. The vestry has decided to offer for sale the land facing on the Franklin Turnpike, which was purchased as a site for the new church.

Vacations: Dr. Tinker expects to spend July and August at Maryland Point Camp, Third Lake, Old Forge, New York. He will return in time to be present at the Clergy Conference at the G. F. S. Holiday House, Eagle's Nest Farm, in September.

The Rev. Donald MacAdie plans to spend part of his vacation in the Ohio State Reformatory. He will study the lives of the "Shut-Ins" and for three weeks will live with the three thousand inmates, ranging from seventeen years of age to twenty-eight.

The Rev. R. J. Thomson expects to spend his vacation on Nantucket Island. Miss Rowland, of the Western Counties Missions will go to a summer conference for rural workers in Madison, Wisconsin, and the Rev. E. S. Ford will attend a similar conference in Ithaca, New York.

The Rev. and Mrs. Albert J. M. Wilson and family will be at Amagansett, Long Island, for the months of July and August.

The Rev. W. F. Venables, of the House of Prayer, sailed for Glasgow June 18, to be abroad two months. The Rev. A. E. Lyman-Wheaton and family will leave for Arkansas on August 1, returning about September 1. The Rev. Charles E. McAllister and family will spend their vacation at Twilight Park. The Rev. R. P. Pressey, of Grantwood, during July is in charge of the services on Sundays at St. Mark's Church, Augusta, Maine. The Rev. A. Serent of Calvary Church, Bayonne, plans to leave for St. Paul's School, Concord, about August 1, where he will conduct church servces on Sundays in the absence of the rector.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

Rt. Rev. Chas. L. Brent, D. D., Bishop.
Rt Rev. D. L. Ferris, D. D., Coadjutor.

St. Paul's Church, Buffalo.

Two legacies have recently been received and added to St. Paul's Permanent Endowment Fund. From the estate of Dr. Samuel D. Flagg of Saint Paul, Minnesota, the sum of $1,000 has been received, and from the estate of General Edmund Hayes has come $50,000. Dr. Flagg has been absent from Buffalo for nearly half a century, and his bequest shows the unbroken tie of affection which bound him during his long life to the Church of his childhood and early manhood. The bequest of General Hayes makes St. Paul's parish additionally indebted to him for his wise and munificent contributions to the Endowment Fund, upon the income from which it is becoming more and more dependent for the support of parish work as the years pass.

General Hayes' bequest is a memorial to his wife, the interest and income of which is to be applied in perpetuity to the maintenance of religious worship in the present edifice or in another belonging to the same parish and relatively situated as a downtown church.

The Rev. C. A. Jessup, D. D., rector of St. Paul's Church, plans to attend, as chaplain to Bishop Brent, the World conference on Faith and Order, to be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, from August 3 to 21. He sails from New York July 23 on the S. S. "Homeric", and returns by the S. S. "George Washington", sailing from Cherbourg or Southampton September 1.

The Hillsdale Conference.

Hillsdale Summer Conference closed July 6, after ten days profitably spent on the old college campus, which for six years now has housed leaders of the diocese for their "Summer Seminar".

Hillsdale's proudest boast is the successful harmonizing on the campus, of the activities of the older and younger groups. Harmonizing, rather than blending, for while the "seniors" and "juniors" attend meals, assemblies and services together, the classes and other

God Spoke To Me.

Mary Davis Reed.

God spoke to me today: on every side,
From tree and bud and grass, I heard His voice.
The sparkling sunbeams and the surging tide
Bore messages that made my soul rejoice.

It was a flower that told me of His love—
A pretty, fragrant, dew-kissed crimson rose;
My doubt and worry it did then reprove,
And to my restless spirit brought repose.

It was a bird that told me of His care—
A little robin singing in the rain;
He made me feel his joy was mine to share,
And that God's love will banish grief and pain.

I heard Him in the soft wind's gentle sigh;
It brought a healing from the distant hill
Of pine and balsam as it wafted by,
Dispelling from my heart all fear of ill.

The tiny rain-drops cheerful tidings brought;
I pray that His voice I may daily hear,
With love and tenderness and comfort fraught,
To let me know that He is ever near.

The Bricklayer Meets the Carpenter.

If we centre our attention on this man we see him as a quite ordinary person. He was one of the crowd of undistinguished people who go to church upon the Sabbath day. Tradition says he was a bricklayer, and quite probably that is true. It at least indicates the old belief that this was a quite ordinary person. And one of the striking things about the gospel is its perennial and amazing power over ordinary people like this bricklayer. He is not like Lazarus, or even Bartimaeus, whose names have come ringing down the aisles of time. The only name his fellow-worshippers had for him was "the man with the withered hand". And that, from the first, is just the kind of man whom the gospel has been powerful to handle and to give back to usefulness again. That is what makes it a universal gospel—that heavenly power over nameless people. If lack of culture made it ineffectual it could never be preached across the world. And the very fact that it is so preached, and preached with signs and wonders following, proclaims it as of the Son of man.

Again we recognize him as a person who had had a hard and embittering experience. We feel the force of that more vividly when we turn to the Gospel of St. Luke. One of the charming things about Luke's Gospel is his illuminative touches in the miracles. Luke was a doctor, with a doctor's eye, quick to observe everything pathological. He tells us that the leper was "full of leprosy", and that Peter's mother-in-law was down with "a great fever"; here he reveals that the hand was the right hand. Nor, mark you, had the man been so from birth. This cruel affliction had come upon him gradually. His hand grew stiff; he lost the power of it; gradually it shrank and atrophied. Until now, when people passed him in the street, they glanced at him with commiseration and called him "the man with the withered hand". One thinks of everything that must have meant in a day when there were no insurance or doles. His work gone—his children without bread—his wife a broken-hearted women. It was a cruel thing, to all appearance meaningless, one of the taunting ironies of heaven—the years had brought him, when he was never dreaming of it, a hard and most embittering experience. Such peoples are always a great company. Nothing is so hard to bear in life as bitter things that seem devoid of meaning. And the beautiful thing is that it was just that kind of person whom our blessed Saviour singled out that day, in a synagogue which would be crowded.

And then, equally evident is this, that this man had not lost his faith; for first of all the Saviour healed him, and faith is indispensable to miracle. Mark you, faith is not always mentioned, in the miracles, nor is there any reason why it should be. It seems to me that faith, like beauty, is often in the eye of the beholder. Had you asked this man if he had faith, he might probably have answered in the negative, but Christ saw more in him than the man dreamed. I think that many people have more faith than they are ever willing to admit. Life is compact of faith; we could not live without it; we walk by faith through every common day—but it has never been turned upon the Lord. That is why Christ did not ask if he had faith. The man would probably have answered "No". But Christ knew him, and read his inmost heart, and saw there what the man had never seen. That is why often the Lord can work so wonderfully and perform His miracles of grace on folk who lament they have no faith at all.

And then this man had not given up the Church; that also is a witness to his faith. After his hard and embittering experience he was in the synagogue on that Sabbath day. One can picture him in the old, happy days coming to church with his wife and children; for life was pleasant then, and God was good to him, and there was work, and bread upon his table. But now, impoverished, dependent upon others, with hungry children and a despairing wife—could you have wondered if he had stayed away? "The Lord is my Shepherd, and I shall not want"—and his wife and children were in want. "The Lord God merciful and gracious"—had He been merciful and gracious unto him? Quite evidently this was a great big soul, still simply trusting in the God of Jacob, and that the Lord instantly recognized. After that cruel irony of heaven, after that seemingly meaningless catastrophe, there he was in his familiar place, listening to the gracious news of heaven. What need to ask him, "Hast thou faith"? That sweet and simple continuance declared it—and, "being in the way", he won his crown.

But I keep the best wine to the last, for there is one thing more to be said about this bricklayer. He was a man who found that he could do what up to that hour he had deemed impossible. Do you not think his wife had often said to him, "Husband, try to stretch your hand this morning"? And he, feeling a little better perhaps, had tried, and always tried in vain. The delightful thing is that when the Lord commanded, somehow or other it was not in vain: the Lord said, "Stretch it out", and he just did it. He did not pray about it, or discuss it, or plead that it was utterly impossible. To his own intense amazement he just did it, though I daresay he could never tell how he did it. But we, who know the mind of Christ far more intimately than the despairing bricklayer, are cognizant of the secret of the Lord. There may be seeming ironies in life: there are none in the commands of Christ. When He enjoins, He enables. When He commands, He gives the power. Despondent, on the margins of despair, with an enfeebled or withered heart, I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me.—G. H. Morrison, in Presbyterian Banner.

New Work in the Philippines.

Far down in the southern end of the Philippine Islands, on the Island of Mindanao, there are 17,000 Tirurai, living in the mountains, south of Cotabato, in the district of Awang. Upi is the central barrio, thirty-five kilometers south of Cotabato, in a section of eight thousand hectares of excellent agricultural land, well adapted to the growing of rice, coffee and other upland crops. It is two thousand feet high, with a climate much cooler than in the lowlands.

The influence of the Jesuit missionaries of the early Spanish times did not extend as far as Epi, so this is indeed "virgin field". Certain pagan observances and beliefs make the Tirurai very responsive to our Church teachings. They have a belief in one God. They believe that they were people of heaven who wandered away and were lost, and they expect and await a Saviour who will take them back to heaven.

Near Cotabato is a mountain peak that resembles an overturned boat. This is thought to have been the boat on which the Tirurai left heaven, which capsized, and they were unable to right it. The mountain is held in reverence as a sacred spot, and no member of the tribe will set foot on it.

They believe that "cruel" people will be severely punished. It is "cruel" to steal from an old woman and leave her in want. Ordinarily "stealing" from some one who has plenty is not "cruel", only "bad". They believe that they have two souls, one similar to our conception of "soul", the other a soul that gives form to anything, even inanimate things. A bench, for instance, has a soul. If the bench is destroyed the soul is lost. . . .

Weddings are arranged by parents. The boy's parents contribute a dowery to the girl's parents, and also to several immediate relatives. This is a guarantee that he will be faithful. In the event of a separation, if the boy is to blame he receives none of this money back. If the girl is to blame it is returned. A wife has a right to ask for a separation if the husband is at fault. This differentiates them from other tribes. In such case the father will accompany the wife and they will lay the facts before some old and influential man of the district. Then a long conference will ensue, often lasting a week or ten days, while the merits of the case are being taken into account.

After the birth of each child the couple are remarried, and another dowery is given. . . . Polygamy is fast disappearing among the Tirurai. The better classes acknowledge the right of the wife to object to polygamy on the part of the husband, who may not marry a second wife without the consent of the first.

The Tirurai people as a tribe do not use alcohol. They are fond of ornaments. They wear bracelets and anklets, and earrings that extend from one ear to the other, with strap under the chin, with pendants. The waist is tight-fitting. The skirt, usually a plain bright color, yellow or cerise. Their necklaces are long, made in sections with a small gold bead of intricate design between the glass beads that form the greater part of the chain. Their ornaments are often valuable and many have been handed down from generations. The women color their lips and cheeks. They shave and pluck the eyebrows, making them a fine, thin line. . . .

They believe in purgatory. When a person dies a path is thought to open from his home to purgatory. It takes seven days to make the journey. At the end of the seven days the mourners feast in celebration of the soul's entry into the purgatory, where all Tirurai will remain until the promised Saviour comes and takes them back to the heaven from which they have wandered away. . . . They have a minute description of the trail between house and purgatory; at one place on the road a change is made from earthly clothing. The deceased is supposed to walk very slowly along the trail, with covered head. He dares not look back, for any one upon whom he looks will also die. Their judgment will consist of their passing over a bridge, under which is a cauldron of boiling water. The "cruel" ones will fall in—the others pass over in safety.

Both men and women work in the fields of necessity, so when there are young children an older one must remain at home to care for the smaller ones. The Rev. and Mrs. C. G. McAfee are planning to start a day nursery for the younger children—something absolutely unheard of among these pagan people of the Philippines. It is also believed that this unique undertaking will open the way to reach the older people, and by teaching them how to bathe, feed and care for their babies, may have a marked result on the infant mortality, now over sixty per cent. There exists a pathetic expectation that young babies will not live. It is most encouraging and amazing to see how readily these children respond to a little care. A bath and a glass of milk seems to improve them over night.

The Creed of An Atheist.

(And a Still Small Voice.)

C. M. E.

O God, you are not there.
(My Own, my Dear,
It matters not. I know that I am near.)

Remorseless forces swing
The earth and sky
And all the universe.
(No, 'tis I.)

I cannot pray to Naught.
My heart is numb.
(Shall tenderness be less Toward the dumb?)

Brute life takes life to live
And so must I
(Half-open eyes see beauty
All awry.)

And death cuts short our love,
It rots to mold.
(Your love, a seed! In time it Shall unfold.)

Immense, Inscrutable,
You, I defy,
With joyous courage living.

Jesus Christ as the Great Comrade.

Faraday, who made some of the fundamental discoveries in chemistry and electricity on which modern progress is based, was at first a book-binder's apprentice, and he rose from that to his eminent position as a great pioneer scientist largely through the friendship of Sir Humphrey Davy, the great scientist and inventor.

Many captains of industry, many leaders in other callings, and many whose names have not been widely heralded, have become great because of some friendship which inspired them.

Outside of men who have become great, countless thousands have been happier and better and have got more out of life through some friendship which helped them through the hard places, and which made the good things of life still better.

A great friendship almost always transforms the circumstances of life for a young man who is fortunate enough to have a really great friend.

What then would it mean to be the intimate friend of the greatest Man who ever lived? A young man once said he would like to be the close friend of the Prince of Wales because some day he will be a king of a great empire. But how could that compare with being the intimate friend of the Son of God? Friendship with Jesus Christ would be wonderful, if it could be obtained, wouldn't it?

That often is the first question. The answer to it is that Jesus promised He would be the Friend of any human being who really wanted His friendship. He would not have promised an impossibility. The reason a few people enjoy His friendship is because they do not seek it.

Some people seem to think that real friendship between a human being and God is impossible, because God is so far above human beings. Even some scientists are so wrapped up in the study of some one branch of science that they know very little about other things, and do not comprehend spiritual things which cannot be measured or tested like the things they do understand.

The proof of anything is how it works out, and thousands and thousands of people who have acted upon the promises of Jesus Christ declare they are true. They declare that He does give strength and joy and understanding greater than they can describe. They not only declare it, but their lives prove it.

So, though some otherwise learned men may question these things, followers of Jesus Christ can nevertheless go on to experience and enjoy His friendship, and need not at all be deprived of its wonderful help by the mistaken opinions of those who do not have it.

It is just like when baseball players first learned to curve and twist the ball. Many high school and college professors argued against the possibility making a ball change its course after it had left the pitcher's hand, except that it might curve downward, or might take a slight uniform curve to one side or the other by rotation of the ball. But the boys didn't worry about the theories and arguments of the learned professors. They just went ahead and mastered the curves and shoots and all the other twisters which modern baseball pitchers use to put down a batter.

We have Christ's promises and the words of His followers that fellowship with Him is possible, and in the same way as the boys did, instead of listening to or arguing with "learned" skeptics, we can go right ahead and experience this great privilege for ourselves. Then we won't need to "reason" about it. We will know.—Francis A. Williams, in St. Andrew's Cross.

What Dr. Jowett Learned.

In reviewing his first pastorate, which was at Newcastle, England, Dr. J. H. Jowett said: "I have learned this lesson 'that sin is mighty, but God is mightier'; I have learned that man is impotent to redeem himself; I have learned that no man need be regarded as beyond redemption; I have learned that for the ruined life there is restoration, a power, a peace, and a joy unspeakable; I have learned that the care and the misery of this Church are in the homes where Christ is absent; I have learned that the happiest and most beautiful homes connected with this congregation are the homes of the redeemed. These are the lessons of my ministry. Upon the experience of these severe years of labor I declare with a glad and confident heart that Jesus has power and willingness to redeem everybody."—Exchange.

The Shop.

"If I could hold within my hand
The hammer Jesus swung,
Not all the gold in all the land,
Nor jewels countless as the sand
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
'Round which His fingers used to cling.

"If I could have the table He
Once made in Nazareth,
Not crowns of kings nor kings to be,
Nor pearls unnumbered from the sea
As long as men have breath,
Could buy from me that thing He made—
The Lord of lords who learned a trade.

"Yea, but that hammer still is shown
In hands of honest toil,
And round that table men sit down
And all are equals, with a crown
No gold nor pearls can soil;
The shop at Nazareth was bare,
But Brotherhood was builded there."

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

How To Know Jesus.

M. L. G.

Jesus is not hard to know. He does not hide Himself. He said to the Samaritan woman by Jacob's Well in answer to her half-puzzled, "I know that when Messias cometh", "I that speak unto thee am He". And to the man born blind to whom He had given sight, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God"? "Who is He, Lord," asked the man, and Jesus answered, "Thou hast seen Him and He it is who speaketh with thee."

So He delights to reveal Himself. He meets our poor reaching-out to Him more than half way. If we give Him our friendship, He gives us His own again, in full measure, pressed down and running over. It is true we can never come to the end of His love, His grace. But we can begin, and the longer we know Him, the richer our friendship will be.

We can speak to Him by prayer. Talk simply to Him, in your own words. You need not explain very much, for He knows already. And listen for His Voice. We cannot hear it as the Samaritan woman did or the man born blind. But by faith (and remember He said we are blessed if we could believe having not seen), we can most surely live in His presence and learn His will.

And in the pages of the Gospel we can learn of Him. Say to yourself when you read or hear some story of His love and mercy, "This same Jesus is my Friend, here and now".

Another way to know Him is to tell others of Him. Some of us will be missionaries, spreading the light where men sit in darkness. Some will be fathers and mothers and teachers, with the happy task of bringing young children to Christ. Remember that no one ever spread that light without being himself enlightened, and none ever brings another to the Master without himself drawing near.

The Speaking Rose.

A rose that talks! Who ever heard of such a thing!

Rupert laughed loudly at the idea. Rupert knew a lot about roses, for he was a gardener's son and had played with flowers all his life. And even now, while the other boys followed him about telling him the news, he had to keep busy, watering, digging, working at the shrubs that were his father's business.

But Dolpho was certain. Yes, that's what the squire had said. The boy who brought to the fair a rose that could speak, and could speak of the most splendid things, should win a wonderful prize.

"Then I wish I might win that prize," declared Rupert. "For if it be many gold pieces as the prize was last year, I might send for the great surgeon from the court to come and heal my little sister's lame foot so that she could run about again."

He could not stop thinking of that, while he worked. What a shame that the squire did not ask for just a beautiful rose! For here was his own rose that his father had given him for his hard work. Every day Rupert dug about the roots of the rose, and watered it, and washed away the little insects that wanted to nibble it, until its leaves sprang out green and glossy, and already one great white bud was hanging there ready to open.

Rupert enjoyed his work so much that he never missed the hours of play that might have come to a lad who did not work so hard. Only one sorrow was ever in the garden—merry little Marjorie May could not walk. She laughed about it, and asked why a girl should want to walk when she could sit in her chair and have all the flowers talk to her? But Rupert had seen her watching him and the others as they ran and jumped, and he knew that she would love to skip about, too.

And did not the great surgeon from the court heal the Lord of the Manor's little boy who had never walked? If only he had those gold pieces.

"Oh, look, Rupert," called Marjorie May. "The big peony is nodding at me. He is telling me that the sun is coming to visit him right away."

"A rose that speaks! Why, Marjorie May says they speak to her!" thought Rupert.

And with that he had an idea. Surely no one would have a rose that could really talk. Why not do the best he could with his rose and take it to the fair? And perhaps it would be so beautiful that it would win the prize.

So Rupert set to work. He had his task to do every day just the same, but he worked about his own white rose with all the love and strength he had, for he was working not only for his own rose, but for Marjorie May.

The day before the fair there hung on the bush the biggest, whitest bud that Rupert had ever seen. Just in time! Marjory May clapped her hands when she saw it.

But there came Dolpho and Edward with stories of their own flowers. And what were they saying?

"No one ever heard of a flower that talked," mocked Dolpho. "But I have asked the gardener at the castle to give me a big rose from the garden there? He is my own uncle and he will give me one. And it will win the prize.

"A rose from the castle!" Rupert's heart fell. Could any boy raise a rose like those in the castle garden.

"But I thought the boy must bring it from his own garden," said Marjorie May.

"I shall put it in my garden for a while before I bring it," laughed Dolpho.

Rupert shook his head. This did not seem fair to him.

"Sho!" said Edward. "There will be plenty of roses from the castle. I am going to dye a rose with the blue dye that my mother uses to color the faded clothes."

"A blue rose!" Surely, thought Rupert, none else would have such a thing.

He sighed. His own white rose hung, so gay and proud that his heart sang in spite of him, and he worked away again.

And next day, in his cleanest smock and brightest necktie, he was off, carrying the biggest, whitest, loveliest flower he had ever seen. Off to the fair. Down the crooked streets, between the city walls to where—

To where sat the palest, whitest, sorrowfulest little girl he had ever seen. She was watching the people pass, and he saw that she sat quiet in her chair because her foot was helpless like Marjorie May's. And as she saw him pass, she leaned out and her face lighted up and she pointed to the rose.

"Oh!" she cried. "Oh, lovely, lovely!"

Rupert waved at her, and stopped and let her smell the rose. Then he started on, then looked back, and she was watching him with tears in her eyes.

"She has no flowers," thought Rupert. "She is lame, but she has no flowers as Marjorie May has. And how could my rose win against a blue rose and one from the castle? Here, little girl," and he had thrust it into her hand and had run on to the fair, without any rose at all.

Roses and roses and roses! Finally the judges had laid them all aside but two. Then the squire rose to speak.

"We called for a speaking rose," he said. "This one speaks to me—of a boy who borrowed another's work. This one," the blue one, "of a boy who thought he could do better work than nature. This one"—and what was that? He had Rupert's white rose!—"of a boy who thought more of a little sick girl than a bag of gold. It speaks the best story. It wins the prize."

For, what do you think? The little girl was the daughter of a wealthy friend of the squires, who had sent for the great surgeon to heal his little girl. And they found her with her cheek against the rose and heard the story of Rupert on his way to the fair. And the doctor went straight off to see Marjorie May—whose foot was to be cured after all.

So Rupert's rose spoke, as all things speak, of the good that they see in the world.—Junior World.

The Red Hen's Duck Son.

The Red Hen was feeling woefully sad. A heavy rain storm had drowned all her children—nine of them, every one she had in the world.

Big Brother Ben regarded her with pity. It was rather late in the season to start a fresh setting of eggs. Still, it was hard to see her breaking her heart over her loss.

Little Sister Sue begged Brother Ben to put another setting of eggs beneath the warm fluffy body.

"She's the best mother in the barnyard," pleaded Sister Sue.

So Brother Ben consented. And what do you suppose? In a nest of fresh straw he put a duck egg, a turkey egg, a guinea egg and a goose egg.

"I am sorry we have no more chicken eggs left," said Brother Ben, "but I think she'll be happy."

"Won't she be surprised at her family when she hotches out these eggs?" laughed Sister Sue.

The Red Hen regarded the four eggs of various colors and sizes with amazement. Surely no hen in her barnyard had laid these. Still, they would be children; so with great content she sat on her nest and crooned and sang to herself.

Day after day for three happy weeks she sang, and then one morning, "Peck! Peck!" she heard. And "Crack! Crack!" The babies were breaking through their shells and peeping forth into the world.

The cracking continued for some time, until by and by, one by one, the babies wriggled forth.

Down from the nest stepped the Red Hen to regard her children.

"Where on earth did they come from?" screamed Chanticleer racing up. "Surely, they are not your children!"

"They are indeed," replied the Red Hen with great dignity, hiding her own astonishment. Never in her life had she hatched out such children!

One was round and short like a partridge; another was awkward and bony; the third had a long neck; while the fourth held his body close to the ground and was bright yellow.

"Why, that chick looks as though he might belong to Silver Lace," insisted Chanticleer, pointing at the bony child.

"He does not." The tones of the Red Hen were withering. "He may be a turkey but he is mine. Silver Lace has ten children, and there she goes with all of them."

Silver Lace swept by, shooing her ten youngsters before her. She was the most majestic bird in the barnyard and so beautiful that she was permitted to wander about the flower gardens, being considered an object of art and an adornment. She was exactly described by her name, for her gown was a deep, iridescent black, over which she wore a cloak of silver lace. She always moved gracefully.

In spite of much teasing, the Red Hen reared her brood. But it took all her motherly patience and understanding to do it. There was never a moment that her four children didn't puzzle her.

He who was round and short like a partridge, and who skimmed over the earth like a butterfly, grew into a gallant white-and-black guinea cock with a shrill cry. After he grew up, he would never stay by his mother's side, but instead hurried off to join the other guinea fowl in the barnyard with whom he chattered and roamed all day.

He who was awkward and bony, developed into a snob, for, growing into great beauty, his head was turned entirely, and he no longer felt he could associate with the simple and gentle Red Hen who had reared him, when he belonged to the family in which Silver Lace moved.

The Red Hen sighed. She loved her children. Very proud she was and capable and it hurt her pride to have her children running away.

And the third child left her. The little goose, who was always silly, was not satisfied until she finally paraded in a long line with all the other geese in the yard.

But the fourth child, who at first had been bright yellow and held his long body close to the ground, grew into a dazzling white duck. He was the only one of his kind in the yard and was quite content to stay with his foster mother.

Daily they took walks, these two, wandering about the barnyard, and at the persuasion of her young son the Red Hen would sometimes accompany him to the meadow land behind the barn.

And there one day he smelled the creek.

"Mother! Mother!" he quacked in high glee. "I smell water! I do, indeed! Fresh, running water."

And away he hurried her across the meadow, he waddling eagerly, she taking high, dainty steps and keeping up with him only with difficulty. The creek in sight, he broke into short, running steps and plunged into the cool water.

The Red Hen stood on the bank.

"Are you, too, leaving me?" she wailed. "Have I raised all my children only to have them leave!"

But a quick quack of sympathy was her reply.

"No, indeed, mother. Never shall I leave your side. Only let me swim a little each day."

So you may see them to this day, the happy Red Hen and her duck son, whom she still regards with amazement, for she will never quite understand him. Not for worlds would she thrust her own fluffy red feathers into the water, but every day she goes across the meadow to the creek with him and stands on the bank, her eyes gleaming with admiration, while he swims backwards and forwards like a gallant white-winged ship.—Youth's Companion.

River Fairies.

Helen Bayley Davis.

Fairies of the river are sparkling things
With sea-green gowns and iridescent wings.

They live in the hollow of a rush-covered log
And ride on the back of a spotted, jade frog,

Bathing and splashing in a water lily's cup:
On butterfly's eggs they dine and sup.

Where the sunset flushes the river's face
They pause to launder their scarfs of lace,

Till the cricket thrums his ebony guitar—
Then they climb up a moonbeam and hide in a star!

The Sunday School Picnic.

"I can't go to the Sunday-school picnic," sighed Marjority to the group of girls gathered around her.

"Why not? Oh, you must!" they all cried.

"That's the day our strawberries must be picked. This year every one is so busy that I have to pick them all alone. And it will take a whole half-day."

The other girls felt almost as badly as Marjory because they liked so much to have her with them.

Wednesday morning came bright and clear. Marjory was thinking of what a pleasant time the other girls were going to have that day at the picnic grounds. She thought of the high swings, and how well she liked to swing, as she took her basket and started through the dewy grass to the strawberry patch.

Half-way across the first row she paused and stood up to look across the garden toward the house. What could be happening? There were all the girls with their old dresses on, shouting and running toward her. Wasn't there going to be any picnic after all?"

"Won't this be fun?" cried one. "How many may we eat?" asked another.

"Why—what—are you going—to do?" stammered Marjory.

"We've come to help you pick strawberries. It will take all of us only about an hour. Then you can go to the picnic, too," they cried.

"But that will be too late to go in the truck, and you will have to miss it," Marjory objected. "You'll get your clothes soiled and then you can't go, anyway."

"No, we brought our picnic dresses with us, and we will dress here after the strawberries are finished. Then Mr. Davis is going to drive this way after us. Now we must hurry."

How fast they picked! They were through before the hour was past. Then Marjory's mother gave them enough fresh strawberries for their picnic dinner. Such a picnic dinner as they had! And the strawberries were the most luscious part.

The Socable Lon.

This afternoon mother had gone shoping and left Harry all alone in the big house. He felt very lonely and hoped that she would return as soon as possible. Every little noise that he heard frightened him, for it was such a great big house and he was just a lonesome little boy.

Suddenly he heard a curious scratching noise at the front door, and, thinking that it was mother trying to open the door, he hurried downstairs to let her in. As the door swung open Harry received a shock that he will never quite forget. Instead of mother, he found himself gazing into the fiery eyes of an enormous lion. With a cry of terror, Harry sprang back, and, leaving the door open, ran half way up the stairs. His strange and most unwelcome visitor, purring in a very friendly manner, walked into the house just as if he had lived there all his life, looked around, growled softly to himself and then walked into the parlor, where he lay down and seemed to sleep.

When Harry discovered that the lion did not intend to chase him upstairs he hurried on up and then locked himself in the library, very much out of breath and exceedingly nervous. Harry loved all kinds of animals, including lions, when they were in cages, but he could truthfully say that he was not fond of them when they came so unexpectedly and visited his home.

"I wonder where he came from?" exclaimed Harry to himself, very much puzzled and still exceedingly frightened, for he knew that big lions did not walk around the streets like human beings did. "He must have escaped from some circus or the park. How can I ever get rid of him? If mother dear should return suddenly and find him in the parlor she would be frightened to death."

Just then Harry happened to think of the telephone, which was in the same room. He decided that central would be able to help him, so he lifted the receiver off the hook and cried to the puzzled central: "Oh, central, there is a great big lion in my house. Will you please help me get rid of him before mother comes back."

Harry had to repeat his strange request several times before central fully understood him, and then she told him not to worry, but to remain locked in the room where he was and that she would send help to him as quickly as possible. Harry hung up the receiver and then crept to the door to listen if the lion had come upstairs, but, hearing no noise, decided that he must still be in the parlor.

It seemed ages to Harry before he saw three big policemen and another man enter the house. Then it was not very long before he saw the lion being led out of the house by the man, evidently his trainer, with a rope around the lion's neck. The lion was still purring in a very contented manner. Then one of the policemen came up and knocked on the door and told Harry that he was safe now. Harry unlocked the door and let the policeman in.

"You must have had a good scare, young man," laughed the policeman. "I don't think that I would care very much myself to open the door and find a big lion facing me. However, this one is absolutely harmless, for he is very old and has no teeth. He got away from a circus and was just wandering around, looking for some one to make friends with."

The big policeman remained with Harry until mother returned, and when she heard what had happened she gave Harry a big loving hug and declared that she would never leave him alone in the house again. Harry soon recovered from his curious experience and also received a reward of fifty dollars from the circus people for the recovery of the lion.

Now, when Harry opens the door he always asks first who is on the other side of it.—The Child's Gem.

Day and Night.

A day is such a lovely thing,
With time for work and play,
That when the night and bedtime comes
I wish for more of day.

But night comes in so sweet and cool
And tucks me in so tight
That when the morning comes again
I wish for more of night.

—Marion LeBron.

He, too, needed to walk by faith, needed to be filled with the Holy Spirit, needed to be lifted above natural discouragements, needed the sympathy of loving friends, needed the strengthening that is gained in private prayer. His strong and beautiful serene and holy life so fills the eye, that we lose sight of His secret intercourse with the Father, out of which came all its beauty and all its power.—G. H. Knight.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE

activities are absolutely distinct. Hillsdale leaders have always felt that the conference should be a cross-section of the Church, representative of the many age-groups found in the ordinary parish. Of late years they have stood out against a somewhat hysterical cry for complete segregation.

A splendid trio headed the young people's group: Rev. "Jack" Hart, Miss Hazel ("Red") Hardacre, and the Rev. R. A. D. Beaty. The girls under twenty-five were housed in the Women's Dormitory ("East Hall"), where Mrs. James H. McDonald was the "Social Director", assisted by a number of counsellors, captains and lieutenants who headed the various room-groups. The boys occupied the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity House on the edge of the campus, under the direction of the Rev. R. A. D. Beaty, rector of Grace Church, City Island Avenue, New York.

The seniors in attendance were housed in the new Frances Ball Mauck Dormitory, whose rooms are equipped with every comfort.

In addition to the usual courses on Church School subjects, Woman's Work in the Parish, Drama and Pageantry, Hillsdale offered some new courses which elicited the greatest interest. Dr. David McCamel Trout, Dean of Men and Professor of Psychology at Hillsdale College, gave two very popular and instructive courses: "Experimental Character Education" and "A Study of Personality". Miss Helen G. Arthur, Specialist in Pediatrics, Grand Rapids Public Schools, gave a course on "Creative Expression Through the Dance", and the demonstration given by her pupils on the campus were a convincing plea for the inclusion of this activity in children's play-time programs, and as an adjunct to religious drama.

Bishop Campbell Gray, of Northern Indiana, preached the sermon at the opening Campus Service Sunday evening, June 26. The Campus Service Sunday evening, July 3, was conducted entirely by the young laymen in attendance, and the address, on "Present Conditions in China", was given by Mr. Philip Sullivan, Professor of Political Economy in St. John's University, Shanghai.

An interesting occurrence, which was listed as one of the regular items on the Conference Program was the institution, in the local parish Church of St. Peter, of the Rev. Edward L. Aldworth as rector. Archdeacon Ramsay acted as institutor for Bishop Page; the sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Lewis, rector of St. Andrew's, Ann Arbor; the Letter of Institution was read by the Rev. Allan N. McEvoy, of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit. The Rev. Eric Tasman, rector of St. Paul's Church, Lansing; the Rev. Harold McCausland, rector of Trinity Church, Bay City, and the Rev. Austin DuPlan, rector of Grace Church, Port Huron, also took part in the service.

A happy thing about the Hillsdale Summer Conference is the generous hospitality afforded year by year by the Baptist College and townsfolk of every denomination to an Episcopal gathering. Hillsdale Conference is in large part the creation of Mr. Ernest E. Piper, Superintendent of Religious Education in the Diocese of Michigan. He was again this year the Dean of the Faculty, which he had gathered from various parts of the country.

Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Davies D. D., Bishop.

Clergyman From Jerusalem To Take Charge of Syrian Church.

Worcester is shortly to have a Syrian Jacobite clergyman from Jerusalem, the Rev. Paul Samuel, who comes to take charge of St. Mary's Syrian Church. He was set apart in the Church of St. Mark, in Jerusalem, which tradition says occupies the site of the house of St. Mark and the Upper Room. The Patriarch of the Old Syrian Church of Antioch made Father Paul a chorepiscopus, which, in the Syrian Church, is a priest who is married, who exercises jurisdiction over other priests. The name means a country-bishop. Syrians migrating to this country have brought with them their ancient church, in direct descent from the first Christian congregation founded in the city of Antioch by St. Paul and St. Barnabas.

Personal Notes

The Rt. Rev. Frank W. Creighton, D. D., Missionary Bishop of Mexico, arrived in New York on Sunday, July 10. His present plan is to take charge of the summer church at Saltaire, Fire Island, N. Y., for several weeks.

The Rev. Thomas Shoesmith, for the past eight years rector of All Saints' Church, Lehighton, Pa., has accepted the call to Christ Church, Stroudsburg, Pa., and expects to begin his new work on September 1.

The Rev. Walter E. Bentley, Missioner of Port Washington, L. I., has taken charge of his old parish, the Church of the Ascension, Brooklyn, N. Y., for July and August. His address is 129 Kent Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Rev. H. Lorraine Tracy, of Jackson, Miss., has resigned his position as Head Teacher in the Mississippi State School for the Deaf in order to become General Missionary to the deaf in the four Virginia Dioceses and the Diocese of Washington.

The Rev. A. Hugo Blankenship has resigned as rector of Emmanuel Church, Braddock Heights, Alexandria, Va., and has accepted the position of Dean of Holy Trinity Cathedral, Havana, Cuba. Mr. Blankenship expects to take up his new duties October 1.

The Rev. Hubert G. Wrinch, formerly rector of Grace Memorial Church, Wabasha, Minn., has accepted a call to be assistant at Gethsemane Church, Minneapolis, Minn., and expects to take up his new duties September 1.

ORDINATIONS.

On July 6, in Meade Memorial Church, Alexandria, Va., the Rev. Isaac I. McDonald and the Rev. Millard F. Newman were advanced to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Virginia. The ordination sermon was preached by Bishop Tucker, and the Rev. Mr. McDonald was presented by the Rev. William J. Morton, D. D., rector of Christ Church, Alexandria, and the Rev. Mr. Newman by the Rev. G. M. Brydon, Secretary of the Diocese of Virginia.

Mr. McDonald will continue as minister-in-charge of Meade Memorial Church, Alexandria, and Mr. Newman will continue as minister-in-charge of Osgood Memorial Church, Richmond, Virginia.

On June 30 the Rev. John B. Matthews, rector of St. Luke's Church, Marianna, and minister-in-charge of the Mission of St. Mark's, River Junction, Diocese of Florida, was advanced to the Priesthood, by the Rt. Rev. F. A. Juhan, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese, in St. Luke's Church, Marianna. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Francis B. Wakefield, Jr., rector of St. Mark's Church, Palatka, and the sermon was preached by Bishop Juhan. Other clergy present at the ordination were the Rev. Messrs. Melville E. Johnson, Thomas A. Schofield, Randolph F. Blackford, William S. Stoney and G. Hendree Harrison, D. D. All assisted in the service and in the laying on of hands.

On Friday, June 24, St. John the Baptist's Day, at St. James' Church, Hackettstown, N. J., Bishop Stearly ordained as deacon, Mr. Albert Ferryman Chillson, and ordered priest the Rev. Lewis Rice Howell. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Victor W. Mori, of Madison, and the litany said by the Rev. Worcester Perkins, of St. John's Church, Jersey City. Mr. Chillson was presented by the Rev. William M. Mitcham, and the Rev. Harry L. Rice, of the Diocese of Long Island, presented the Rev. Mr. Howell. The service was attended by a large congregation and a number of the clergy of the diocese.

The Rev. Mr. Chillson is taking up work on the staff of St. John's Church, Jersey City. Mr. Howell will continue in charge of the work for boys at Gracemere Camp, Tarrytown, New York.

On Friday, June 24, Nativity of St. John Baptist, in Holy Cross Church, Poplar Bluff, Missouri, Mr. Frank Maples was ordained Deacon by the Rt. Rev. F. F. Johnson, D. D., Bishop of Missouri. The candidate was presented by Archdeacon H. T. Marsden. The Rev. J. Courtney Jones, D. D., rector of Immanuel Church, Webster Grove, preached the sermon.

Mr. Maples will be deacon-in-charge of Holy Cross Church, Poplar Bluff, which he has served as lay reader while preparing for Holy Orders. Mr. Maples was formerly a minister in the Congregational Church.

On June 24, in St. Stephen's Church, Providence, R. I., the Rev. James M. Duncan was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Perry. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Bassett, of the Church of the Epiphany. The Rev. Harold R. Carter presented the candidate. Mr. Duncan has just graduated from the General Theological Seminary. He has already entered upon his duties as curate at the Church of the Epiphany.

On Sunday, June 19, in the Church of the Saviour, Philadelphia, the Rt. Rev. Frank DuMoulin, acting for the Bishop of Pennsylvania, ordained to the diaconate, Harry Grant Mershon. Dean Bartlett of the Philadelphia Divinity School preached the sermon, and the candidate was presented by the Rev. Dr. Royden K. Yerkes.

Mr. Mershon is a graduate of Yale and has had a successful pastorate in the Congregational ministry. A year ago he was confirmed, since which time he has been a member of the staff of the Church of the Saviour, in charge of religious education, and has pursued his studies at the Philadelphia Divinity School.

In St. Luke's Church, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, on June 26, the Rt. Rev. Middleton S. Barnwell, D. D., Bishop of Idaho, ordained deacons Victor E. Newman and James Opie. Bishop Barnwell preached the sermon and Bishop Fox of Montana joined in laying on of hands.

Mr. Newman, presented by the Rev. Thomas Ashworth, of Fayette, is to be in charge of missions at Glenns Ferry and Mountain Home, with address at Glenns Ferry; while Mr. Opie, who was formerly a minister in the Methodist Church, was presented by the Ven. H. Stoy, Archdeacon of Kansas. He is to be missionary of Shoshone and Hailey, with address at Shoshone.

On Tuesday, July 5, in the Church of the Transfiguration, New York, the Rt. Rev. Charles B. Colmore, D. D., Bishop of Porto Rico, advanced to the priesthood the Rev. John Ladinlam Villalonga. The epistle was read by the Rev. Joseph Sabin of St. Stephen's Mission, South Ozone Park, N. Y.; the litany was said by the Rev. Culver B. Alford of the Church of the Transfiguration, who acted also as master of ceremonies. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. William S. Claiborne of Sewance.

In the Mission Chapel at Cass Lake, Minn., on June 26, the Rt. Rev. G. G. Bennett, D. D., Bishop of Duluth, advanced the Rev. Leslie William Hallett to the priesthood. He was presented by the Rev. Oscar Lindstrom, rector of St. Peter's Church, Duluth, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. James Mills, rector of St. Paul's Church, Duluth.

The Rev. Mr. Hallett is to continue in his present field, Holy Trinity Church, International Falls, and associated missions, with address at International Falls.

DEATHS.

The Rev. Lionel Audibert Wye, non-parochial priest of the Diocese of South Florida, died at his home in West Palm Beach, Florida, on Tuesday, June 28, following an operation for acute appendicitis, performed the preceding Saturday.

He was buried from Holy Trinity Church, West Palm Beach, Friday, July 1. The officiating clergy were the Rt. Rev. John D. Wing, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of South Florida; the Rev. William P. S. Lander, rector of Holy Trinity Church, the Rev. Robert T. Phillips, rector of Trinity Church, Miami; and the Rev. Charles R. Palmer, rector of Holy Cross Church, Buena Vista, Miami.

The Rev. William Stone Hayward, non-parochial priest of the Diocese of Central New York, died of heart failure at his home in Syracuse, N. Y., on Monday, June 27, aged eighty-seven.

Funeral services were conducted at Grace Church, Syracuse, on Thursday, June 30, by Bishop Fiske, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Herbert G. Coddington and the Rev. W. L. Bennett. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery.

The Rev. Jacob Hiatt, aged sixty, who had been suffering from asthma for some time, died July 12, at Spokane, Washington. He was stationed at Salmon City, Idaho, and leaves, besides his wife, three daughters. The funeral was held at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and interment was in Forest Cemetery.

I Look Not Back.

I look not back; God knows the fruitless efforts,
The wasted hours, the sinning, the regrets;
I leave them all with Him who blots the record,
And mercifully forgives, and then forgets.

I look not round; for then would fears assail me,
So with the tumult of earth's restless seas;
So dark the world, so filled with woe and evil,
So vain the hope of comfort or of ease.

I look not in, for then am I most wretched;
My self has taught on which to stay my trust.
I look not at my failures and shortcomings,
And weak endeavors crumbling into dust.

I look unto the radiant face of Jesus,
For there my heart can rest, my fears are stilled;
And there is joy, and love, and light for darkness,
And perfect peace, and every hope fulfilled.

—Selected.

However small our faith, however slight our consciousness of the Life of the Spirit, let us act upon this faith and upon this consciousness. When love and pity are stirred within us, let our very selves flow out on every lovely and brave and self-forgetting impulse. Never speak of a "mere impulse". Impulses such as these are the calling of the Infinite Good which is about us and around us, inspiring the good that dwells in the depth of our own beings.

How hardly man this lessons learns,
To smile, and bless the hand that spurns;
To see the blow, to feel the pain,
But render only love again!
This spirit not to earth is given—
One had it, but He came from heaven.
Reviled, rejected, and betrayed
No curse He breathed, no plaint He made,
But when in death's deep pang He sighed
Prayed for His murderers and died.

"I paused one day beside the blacksmith's door
And listened to the anvil ring the evening's chime.
And looking in, I saw upon the floor
Old hammers, worn with beating years of time.

" 'How many anvils have you had–' said I,
'To wear and batter out these hammers so–'
'Just one,' he answered, with a twinkling eye,
'The anvil wears the hammers out, you know.'

For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet, though the noise of infidel was heard,
The anvil is unworn—the hammers, gone!"

A MODERN CLASSIC AGAINST MODERNISM

The

LEAVEN of the SADDUCEES

By ERNEST GORDON

"The greatest broadside against Liberalism that has been put out in this generation"

An indictment of modernism on grounds of moral obliquity. . . . An interesting and important exhibit in the present controversy.—Chicago Evening Post (Literary Review).

I have read, marked and partially digested The Leaven of the Sadducees. This is grace after meat. . . . Every statement is backed. . . . The Sadducee, like the snail, destroys the leaves of healing from the under side, hiding and gnawing.—Dr. O. Z. Gifford.

The Leaven of the Sadducees is a startling exposure of Unitarian designs on the evangelical churches of the United States. I think that all of us who have the ear of the public should seek to promote its wide circulation. If the facts which it contains are brought to the attention of the evangelical churches I believe they will be aroused to the most vigorous opposition to all these betrayers of trust.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, M. E. Church, South.

The most complete and convincing setting forth of the essential facts in the case of evangelical Christianity versus Modernism. . . . The saying, "the best defense is a rapid fire," is shown to be preeminently true by The Leaven of the Sadducees. I commend the book and bespeak for it the widest circulation.—W. Phillips Hall, President of the American Tract Society.

Written especially for the information of Ministers, Trustees of institutions, Fundamentalist leaders, Editors of the religious press, Teachers in seminaries, training schools, and colleges; and Christian laymen who are not informed of the real situation.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

A shining light is ever a burning light.

We are all liable to be tripped up by our triumphs.

God's silences are as instructive as His speech.

If Sunday does not open a door into higher things it is apt to be a trap into lower.

Christianity is the religion of a special providence. It presents a Heavenly Father who watches over and cares for His children—who hears their heart-cries when they pray, and who, if it is wise to do so, interposes to answer them.

"We weary watching wave on wave, and yet the tide neaves onward;
We build like corals grave on grave, but have a pathway sunward.
We're beaten back in many a fray, and yet great strength we borrow,
And where the vanguard rests today, the rear may camp tomorrow."

A converted Indian gave the following reason for his belief in the Trinity: "We go down to the river in the winter, and we see it covered with snow; we dig through the snow, and we come to the ice; we chop through the ice, and we come to the water; snow is water, ice is water, water is water; therefore the three are one."

It is not essential to make long prayers, but it is essential to be much alone with God, waiting on His will, hearkening for His voice, lingering in the garden of Scripture for the coming of the Lord God in the dawn or cool of the day. No number of meetings, no fellowship with Christian friends, no amount of Christian activity can compensate for the neglect of the still hour. —F. B. Meyer.

Our Saviour found lost souls wherever He went—by the wayside well, on the seashore, among the tombs, up a tree, and even on the cross. Nineteen times it is recorded that He stopped to talk with a single person, and if we will adopt the habit of watching for opportunities we shall be surprised to see how often they will come. Matthew was converted in a custom-house, Moody in a shoe-shop, and Peter and John while mending their nets.—The Rev. Howard W. Pope, D. D.

What folly it is to imagine that I may not expect God to be with me every moment! Look at the sunshine! Have you ever said, "Oh, how can I keep that sunlight, and be sure I shall have it while working"? Is not God, who made the sun to shine, also willing and able to let His light and presence so shine through me that I can walk all the day with God nearer to me than anything in nature? Praise God, He can do it. Why then does He do it so seldom, and in such feeble measure? There is but one answer: you do not permit it.—Andrew Murray.

DOUBTS

Some have the idea that you should welcome doubts, and that a period of doubt is necessary in the life. After it is over they say that you will be stronger than ever. We doubt the correctness of their reasoning. No doctor ever suggests that you should expose yourself to as many diseases as possible so that after you have caught them all you may then enjoy perfect health. No one suggests that you ought to go through a period of doubt concerning the character of your mother and that after you have gone through this you will be stronger than ever. Why, then should it be necessary to doubt a loving God?

The writer of this paragraph went through a period of doubt, but while troubled by it he never felt that he ought to be doubting and now that he has recovered he does not feel the stronger for having doubted. Much less was he foolish enough to preach his doubts or to think that they were something unknown in the history of the world, or that the Lord ought to change His laws in order to suit Himself to the doubts of any person.

The view that we should go through a period of doubt would be bad enough of itself, but today it is getting to be so that some never get through, but begin to preach their doubts. There is a peculiar egotism in the human heart that makes many feel that their particular doubts are unique in the history of the world. They realize that there have been doubters before, but this crop is NEW, and their newness invests the doubts with a special sanctity. No matter if these doubters will soon be dead and gone, the universe must change to accommodate itself to their minds. "The modern mind," the consensus of modern scholarship (meaning the speaker in question) decides a certain thing and it must be so. The Word of the Eternal God must be made to please these few ounces of grey matter.

We were reading in a Christian work of the Second Century some of the objections to the story of the Virgin Birth. They sounded as though they had been written by a liberalist of today. We believe that it would prove true in the majority of cases that the doubts of today are just a rehash of the things that have troubled people for centuries. The vast majority of these doubts spring from one source, doubt of God, of His power and of His Word. Most of them come, not because of an active intellect, but because of a disobedient will. A little investigation and it would be seen that there is really little new in them. Even the youth movement began with the revolt of Absalom.

If we remember God, His majesty, His power, and His love, we shall not doubt. How can we doubt One who can take wrecked and ruined lives and transform them into lives that are loving and pure?

FRANK COX.

MODERN CRITICISM OF THE PENTATEUCH

There seems to be a real need of some simple and untechnical statement and explanation of much that modern scholars, under the title of "Higher Criticism", are diligently teaching about the Bible. The generality of Christian people should inform themselves in regard to these recent theories now almost universally accepted and enthusiastically expounded in most of our theological schools and other institutions of learning. There is danger that conservative Christians, who constitute the rank and file of our Churches, should wake up some day to find themselves deprived in large measure of the Scriptures as the inspired Word—certainly of the Old Testament Scriptures in anything worth while.

Few people are aware of the revolutionary character of these professedly scientific critical theories. The majority consider such questions the business of scholars alone, and are willing to take without question and without personal examination what such men tell us about Moses and the prophets. A great many regard the discussion of such matters as of little practical importance, being persuaded that by it the Christian faith is in no manner affected.

Nothing is more certain, however, than that the principles of Biblical criticism now in vogue, especially as applied to the recasting of the books of Moses, would, if applied to the New Testament, leave us little or no real history, and would make it quite uncertain what Jesus taught.

As might be expected, indeed, this application of the radical theories of Old Testament criticism to the New, is being rapidly made; for certainly a method which is allowed to be so profitable and thoroughly scientific in the one case, may not in reason be denied in the other. In proof of this may be instanced a popular one-volume commentary, highly recommended by theological professors to younger clergy, in which it is stated that belief in the infallibility of Jesus Christ is a modern form of an old heresy. It is frankly asserted that Jesus did not know many things that He thought He knew, and that He certainly taught as knowing. It is freely granted that our Lord, in His views of the Old Testament, is what these scholars call a "traditionalist". He held and taught views of the Old Testament that many modern scholars, in high positions in the Church, hold to be erroneous. And this is explained in two ways: either that our Lord did not really know what He professed to teach about the Old Bible; or, knowing the errors of current Jewish traditionalism, He condescended to use them for His purposes. To such limiting of the knowledge or impugning of the moral character of the Lord Himself, are eminent and earnest men driven in their devotion to a fascinating theory.

I submit that the simple Christian should not surrender unconditionally to a theory that leads to such results. And I am persuaded that however valuable expert scholarship may be in its place and however great the benefits it has bestowed upon Biblical study, no more is needed than plain common sense to perceive the truth in this matter. Great scholars are wonderful in discovering and setting forth the facts; they are often the very least competent to discover their explanation and coordination. Eminent jurists assert that of all testimony that of experts is to be most carefully sifted and tested.

But, indeed, as to the present preponderance of so-called or self-styled eminent scholars in favor of modern radical views, it is to be remembered that thirty years ago English-speaking scholars at least were, with few exceptions, on the conservative side. While at the same time it must be admitted that nothing new as to documents or history has since then been discovered, except the findings of archaeology; and they are prevailingly on the side of the old views. No new facts have come to light; only a new set of theories have been evolved. And profound learning and expert scholarship are not needed to test theories that pretend to explain facts.

I venture, therefore, with no claim to great scholarship, to outline in the simplest possible way, for those who wish to know the facts, the thorough, not to say cruel, recasting of the Pentateuch in its vital part, i. e., the law, that is now generally accepted by Old Testament critics.

We are told that the laws of Moses were a development, somewhat after the fashion of the British Constitution. They came into being only as exigencies arose. They were not supernaturally revealed, but were naturally evolved as the history proceeded.

There are said to be in Israel's history three law-producing periods.

First: There is the Law of the Covenant, consisting of Exodus, chapters 20 to 23, inclusive, together with some other short sections, such as Exodus 34:10 and Exodus 34:14-26. In short, it is the Ten Commandments and the precepts and practical regulations that go with them. This code is called C. It is said to be Mosaic, though not given by Moses. It was put together about 800 B. C., long after the time of Moses. Moses himself is by the thorough-going critics considered a largely mythological character, with whom the author of the Code conjured the people.

Second: There is Deuteronomy, or what is called for short D. This did not see the light, and perhaps did not exist at all till the year 623 B. C. It was the book found in the Temple in the time of King Josiah, as recorded in chapters 22 and 23 of 2 Kings. Because the pious Josiah and his people did not know the book, it is asserted that it must have been written either then and there or a little earlier.

So that up to the year 623 B. C., though all the great history of Israel lies back of that date, there were no written laws of divine appointment and authority, except the Ten Commandments and the short C. code. Then Deuteronomy was mysteriously hid in the Temple, either by its writer, or some zealous patriot, was wondrously found, and more wondrously still accepted without question as God's law through Moses.

To the ordinary man, with no theory to maintain, this seems quite strange and highly improbable. It seems impossible that the great settled times of David and Solomon should have had no written law—not even the Ten Commandments—but only scattered oral traditions or disconnected documentary fragments.

Third: The third great law-producing period, we are told, is the year 444 B. C. In that year Ezra came to Jerusalem, and together with Nehemiah gave to the returned exiles the completed law book. This book is called the "Priest's Code", or P. C. for short. It was composed, we are told, by Ezra and his fellow priests during the exile. It was read to the people, and because it was new and unknown to them, it must have been, so we are told, written about that time. For it is an accepted axiom among these critics that ignorance or disregard of laws by people who ought to know and obey them, is proof that such laws did not exist before that time. If a law appears to be unknown at a certain date, it must have originated at or after that date. Such is the "scientific" axiom of this boasted historical criticism.

We are told, therefore, that up to the year 444 B. C., the only laws that the Iraelites had were Codes C. and D. It was not till after the exile that the rest of Exodus, and Leviticus and Numbers were composed and given to the people! Thus we are to believe that in all the long, thrilling years of their history, the people had no laws of divine authority, except Deuteronomy and a small part of Exodus, and that even these latter were had only during the later and declining periods of their national life. It was only after their return from exile and their establishment in Palestine that they are supposed to have needed a careful legal code stamped with the authority of God by the hand of Moses. In other words, these great laws were produced not in the time of the nation's vigorous life and political greatness, but in the days of its weakness and political subjection.

Again, to the man who has no brief to hold and who is not fascinated by a brilliant theory, all this seems even stranger and more improbable than the extraordinary writing, hiding, and finding of Deuteronomy.

Now, of course, there are modifications of this incongruous scheme. Each critic has his method of working out the theory. But the above is a fair outline of the famous Graff-Welhausen theory, considered by most higher critics as rigidly orthodox, outside of which there is no place for anybody who desires to be considered a student of the Bible. Wellhausen, for instance, says, with regard to the origin of Deuteronomy, that it is admitted "in all circles where recognition of scientific results is at all depended on". If you do not accept this theory, you are unscientific, which is a new way of saying that you are anathema.

To recapitulate briefly:

1. Moses neither wrote nor caused to write any laws or history at all. What we have are Mosaic traditions, written down long afterwards, much as Livy wrote down for the first time in order the legends of Rome.

2. The Covenant Code C. was written perhaps in 900 or 800 B. C., long after the time of David.

3. Deuteronomy or D. was written by nobody knows who, about the Seventh Century. According to Wellhausen, "It was produced at the time it was discovered".

4. The P. C., or Priest's Code, including all the rest of the Pentateuch, was not written till after the exile. In it Ezra and his fellow priests give us a sort of idealized history of Israel, creating an archaic background for the sacrifices, the civil regulations, etc., which till then had no recorded existence.

In this extraordinary scheme, one can not help feeling pity for Moses. For thousands of years he was the undisputed author of all of these great books, the august agent through whom God condescended to convey His revelations to His people; but now the inexorable science of these modern critics leaves him not a line.

There is a story of a man of great wealth, who entered into partnership in business with his cousin. At the beginning of the association, the man had the money and the cousin had the experience; but as the business went on, it came about that the cousin had the money and the man had the experience.

This seems to apply to the association of Moses and the critics.

JAMES W. MORRIS.

THE MESSAGE OF MODERNISM

By the Reverend Henry K. Pierce

"When suave Politeness, temp'ring bigot Zeal, Corrected, 'I believe', to 'One does feel'."

MODERNISM, it has been said, is not a creed but an Attitude of Mind. It is an attitude of mind acutely sceptical and agnostic as regards the facts asserted by the Christian religion, although generally combined with a robust credulity as regards its own infallibility and the latest theories of science. Now doubt and agnosticism are not particularly modern phenomena. They long ago ceased to be startling. But the Modernist is startling. There is a piquancy, a "news value", about him and his teaching. And the reason for this is, that the Modernist is a sceptic or an agnostic within the Church; one who claims for himself the right to retain his position as an official teacher or minister of a religious body whose faith he has abandoned. He professes a most worthy motive: he is going to make religion palatable to the modern scientific mind. Whether he does so is more than doubtful. But one thing is certain: the religion he offers is not the Christian religion.

What is the new message of Modernism? What does it offer, as the foundation of our life and conduct here and our hope for the future? It has been said that in cases of divisions among Christians either party is right in what it asserts and wrong in what it denies. The difficulty of discovering the message of Modernism is, that all its assertions are denials. It not only denies most of the articles of the creeds: it repudiates the notion of any creeds at all. Dr. Major says: "The Catholic Church of the future will demand neither dogmas nor sacraments as essentials of membership. She will substitute 'Amo' for 'Credo' in her formularies." "I should keep the Te Deum and drop the 'Three Creeds',' says Dean Inge. "Our age is not only incompetent to revise or rewrite the Creeds, it even questions the rightfulness of a formula as a test of membership," says the Rev. F. E. Hutchinson. Seven members of the faculty of the Cambridge Episcopal Theological School have composed a book ("Creeds and Loyalty") urging the dropping of the creeds. Dr. Bethune-Baker would not "continue to use them for any other purpose than as devotional canticles and historical landmarks", though it would seem one might be somewhat put to it to extract devotional uplift from the solemn profession of beliefs one no longer believes.

Our Blessed Lord asked S. Peter, "Whom say ye that I am", and S. Peter replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God", and Jesus went on to speak of the founding of His Church. From the days of the apostles until the Modernists came to set us right it had been supposed that these two things, the Christian Church and the belief in Christ, could not be separated. The Modernists are distressed at S. Peter's dogmatism. Dr. Bethune-Baker says: "We must absolutely jettison the traditional doctrine that His personality was not human but divine. . . . . I do not for a moment suppose that Jesus ever thought of Himself as God." Dean Rashdall says: "Jesus did not claim divinity for Himself." The Rev. Professor Kirsopp Lake says: "Jesus never claimed to be divine at all. The central doctrine of Catholic theology was unknown to Jesus and to those disciples of Jesus who first recorded His life." That being the case, it hardly seems necessary that Professor Lake should add, as he does, "(The church of the future) will not require as a condition of membership that we should accept any opinion about Jesus, not even His own". "Let it be clearly realized," says Dr. Major, "that Jesus Himself did not claim to be the Son of God. . . . in a metaphysical sense such as required by Nicene theology. He claimed to be God's Son in a moral sense, in the sense in which all human beings are Sons of God." Jesus, then, being a mere man, what acute discomfort must afflict the devout Modernist clergyman when he is forced to recite in the Litany, "O God, the Son, Redeemer of the world, have mercy upon us". This is nothing less than monstrous idolatry, creature worship; fit to rank with the old paganism. Indeed Canon Glazebrook says: "The ancient Greeks and Romans paid homage to many heroes or demigods, who by their virtues or their services to humanity had obtained seats among the gods of Olympus. . . . Can we be surprised if the early Christians, although they were Jews by race and education, were disposed. . . . . to follow the line which was suggested by Greek story?" We must free our Christmas observance of idolatrous superstition. Mr. H. J. Flower tells us: "Adoration of the Child Jesus is fraught with the greatest dangers to our religious life. . . . The thought, shared by more people than we are apt to imagine, the thought, namely, that while Jesus was a babe at His mother's breast, He was also God over all the world, is as revolting to our intellect as it is against the plain teaching of Scripture. . . . We are distorting a festival into a day of idol worship, if we go beyond the mere fact of commemorating the birth and begin to adore the child."

Naturally, Jesus being a mere man, He not only could be, but was often mistaken and ignorant. "There is no more reason," says Dean Rashdall, "for supposing that Jesus of Nazareth knew more than His contemporaries about the true scientific explanation of mental diseases which current belief attributed to diabolic possession, than that He knew more about the authorship of the Pentateuch or the Psalms". This is not surprising from a Modernist, but one is a little startled to find Bishop Gore saying: "I should suppose that He did not know what the progress of critical science has made fairly evident to us." Dr. Major lays down: "The consciousness of Jesus was a full human consciousness . . . it was not supernatural or miraculous in any sense that cannot be attributed to a human personality. The consciousness of Jesus was conditioned just as ours is. . . . As to His Passion and Death, it seems to me impossible to guess how long beforehand He foresaw them." "According to our earliest Gospel it was not until His Baptism, when He was about thirty years old, that He became clearly conscious of His Messiahship." And He was not only ignorant but sinful. Dr. Bethune-Baker admits it candidly: "The full manifestation of love of God seems to require participation in the extremest sufferings of man, and at an earlier stage in His life the baptism of Jesus at the hands of John implies His own consciousness of the need of repentence and so the sense of sin."

Of course so fallible a prophet could deliver no infallible message as to God's will in regard to moral matters. Dr. Lake puts it plainly: "The religion of tomorrow will assuredly have much to say as to conduct; but it will have to work out its problems in its own way, not by trying to find a short cut to their solution in the teaching of Jesus or any one else." In fact (here we are on somewhat delicate ground) the Modernist position requires considerable adjustments in the moral sphere. Old fashioned men were accustomed to speak harshly of one who, to retain his position and honors, was willing publicly to profess, "I believe in . . . . Jesus Christ His only Son our Lord . . . born of the Virgin Mary . . . . the third day He rose again", when he believed none of these things. But let him take heart. There is no dishonesty in this. He can, so Bishop Lawrence teaches, ease his conscience by a mental reservation. "There are," says the Bishop, "as we all know, clergymen, a number of them, who find it difficult if not impossible to accept the doctrine of the Virgin Birth. . . . Inasmuch as the two Creeds stand for the essentials of the faith, and as belief in the Virgin Birth is not to them an essential, I am clear that with an honest heart they may join in the recital of the Creeds."

"The Modernist believes in a perfectly human non-miraculous Christ," says Dr. Major. And that word miraculous gives us the key. One foundation disbelief underlies all the other disbeliefs—the disbelief in the possibility of miracles. Bishop Lawrence says: "Modern science has convinced us that a just God would not or could not autocratically break through the laws of nature and work wonders." And Dr. Percy Stickney Grant: "I cannot love God with my mind and at the same time believe that the laws of nature were ever violated; for the simple reason that God Himself has taught me, as He is teaching all our sons and daughters in every modern university of the Western World today, that those laws are immutable throughout eternity." Here is a dogmatic certitude which would make many men of science catch their breath. Dr. Parks says that belief in miracles "degrades religion from a supreme spiritual experience to an acceptance of belief in a non-rational universe". The poor apostles, with their degraded beliefs! And what a light on the character of Jesus. For, whether He worked miracles or not, He certainly intended His disciples to believe that He performed them. But we, though we missed being present by nineteen hundred years, are not to be so easily taken in, by a mere man with "a useful talent for curing people who had nothing the matter with them". And as God can't or won't change the preordained course of nature, it is a superstitious waste of time to ask Him to; e. g., to "give us this day our daily bread". "I do not believe," says Dr. Lake, "that the religion of tomorrow will have any more place for petition than it will have for any other form of magic."

Let us leave it at that. One could fill a book with similar teaching from these and other Modernists. I have tried to indicate, in a few pages, what is the Message of Modernism, which is to interpret Christianity and make it acceptable to the intelligent modern mind. My quotations, which are fairly representative, are from recognized Modernist spokesmen. Dr. Major is Editor of the Modern Churchman and Principal of Ripon Hall, Oxford, where he prepares candidates for holy orders; as does Dr. Bethune-Baker, who is Professor of Divinity at Cambridge University. Dr. Kirsopp Lake is also Professor of Divinity. Dr. Rashdall was Dean of Carlisle. Dean Inge, and our own Doctors Leighton Parks and Percy Stickney Grant, need no introduction.

There are differences of opinion among Modernists, but their message may be summarized as follows: Miracles do not and cannot happen. Therefore the Virgin Birth and the physical Resurrection are lies—pious fables, but lies nevertheless. Prayer of petition is the practice of magic. Jesus Christ was not Incarnate God but a mere fallible human teacher. To worship Him is therefore idolatry. They still believe in a God, not on the strength of any supposed revelation, which they have discredited, but, largely, on the strength of the feeling that one needs a God—that there must be one. Knowing so little about Him, no creeds are possible. Yet, as a temporary concession to the exigencies of their somewhat anomolous positions in the Christian Church, it is somehow consistent with honesty to continue publicly to profess the abandoned creeds.

Having performed this drastic major operation, which has removed the head and all the vital parts, the Modernist surgeons proudly and hopefully display this dismembered corpse of the body of Christianity in the firm belief that by its beauty and its plausibility it is going to bring back the world to "Christianity".

Testifying for Christ

By Amos R. Wells.

"Publish glad tidings,
Tidings of peace,
Tidings of Jesus,
Redemption and release."

I shall always remember one little incident in connection with the London Christian Endeavor Convention of 1900. I was returning from the meetings late one night, and in the compartment was a bevy of bright English girls, a little old man being in one corner. He was a tiny, dried-up old man, and before we had gone far he began, in a thin piping voice to line out a hymn. Having completed a stanza, he set out to sing it and the girls, giggling and shamefaced, joined in. So went the second stanza and the third, until the hymn was finished.

Then the little old man, in his piping voice, began to tell his religious experience. He went back to the start and related how he had found Christ, and what Christ had been to him all these years. By the time he was through we had reached his station and I shall remember to my dying day the quaint picture he made, standing on the dimly lighted platform framed in by the doorway of the car and baring his arm to show us, tattooed upon it, the words, "God is love". "I hope we shall all meet up there," said he, pointing to the skies. "Good night, young ladies," and our train moved away. The bright English lassies wore thoughtful, earnest faces. "What a dear old man!" they said to one another.

Now wasn't that fine? And doesn't it teach us a lesson in Christian testimony? I shall be readier all my days to speak a word for my Master, because of that old man's brave words.

I have learned from him that my testimony must be after my fashion. I couldn't do what he did. I should be ridiculous, and not impressive. But neither could he testify in my way. And I have a way.

He taught me also that testimony must be "out of seaing. In those brief minutes he testified by song, by the telling of experience, by a picture, by a gesture. God wants ingenious Christians.

He taught me to vary my words and ways of testifyson" as well as "in season". Indeed testimony "out of season" often turns out to be the most seasonable kind of testimony.

He taught me also that testimony must be "out of seamust spring from life, if it is to reach lives.

At the same time he taught me that this personal testimony must be very humble. It was farthest from our thoughts that the old man was advertising himself.

A man was persuaded by an ardent admirer of Spurgeon to go to hear the great preacher. When asked the next morning, "What did you think of him"? The man replied, "Nothing at all". "Nothing at all! why, what do you mean?" The answer came with tears in his eyes; "I was not thinking at all of the preacher; I was thinking of the preacher's Christ."

Finally I learned that testimony must be sincere. As bells are spoiled by the slightest foreign element in the bell-metal, so no testimony rings true with the slightest admixture of self-seeking, exaggeration, or hypocrisy.

Speech is the noblest power of man, and to speak of Christ is the noblest kind of speech. May Christ add grace to our lips and courage to our hearts!—American Tract Society.

A Pleasing Setting for a Famous Quotation from Lee

The following is an interesting extract from a leaflet printed by Berkeley Minor, of Charlottesville, in November 1926:

"In an old letter (of April, 1904, of Captain R. E. Lee, my old comrade of the Rockbridge Artillery), I find some comforting words of his father. I had said to Captain Lee that I wondered why our Heavenly Father had allowed such a cause as ours and such a leader as General Lee to fail. Captain Lee wrote: 'As to finding out why Providence allowed our cause to fail, I'll send you what my father said in a letter to Colonel Marshall in the darkest hour of his own life and of the fortunes of the Southern people.

" 'My experience (he wrote) of men has neither disposed me to think worse of them nor, in spite of failures, which I lament, of errors, which I now see and acknowledge, or of the present aspect of affairs, do I despair of the future. The truth is this: The march of Providence is so slow and our desires so impatient, the work of progress is so immense, and our means of aiding it so feeble, the life of humanity is so long, and that of the individual so brief, that we often see only the ebb of the advancing wave, and are thus discouraged. It is history that teaches us to hope.' "

General Lee knew, no doubt, Pope's verses to the same tenor, and not more forcible than his prose:

"Safe in the hands of one dispensing power,
Or in the natal or the mortal hour,
All nature is but art unknown to thee,
All chance, direction which thou canst not see,
All discord, harmony not understood,
All partial evil universal good,
And spite of pride and erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear, whatever is, is right."

How calmly and wisely Lee views that "ebb of the advancing wave" which he had so bravely and steadily resisted for four long years of fierce battle, yielding at last to the inevitable, recognizing the hand of Providence in its all, though so disastrous to all he loved best.

I never read Thackeray's "End of the Play" without thinking of General Lee, hardly keeping back the tears:

"Come wealth, come want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part,
And bow before the awful will,
And bear it with an honest heart;
Who misses, or who wins a prize,
Go, lose or conquer as you can;
But if you fail or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman."

THE DEITY OF JESUS

THE central truth of all truth is that concerning the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was man on earth and His life here closed upon a malefactor's cross, and He is a man now at the right hand of the Majesty on High, having been raised again from the dead by the glory of the Father. But He who was man in humiliation on earth, who is still a man in exaltation in heaven, and who will never surrender manhood for ever, is also God, eternal in being and omnipotent in power. He was God before He took up manhood; He did not cease to be God when He tabernacled amongst men, and what He was, He is, and shall for ever be.

The necessity of the Deity of Jesus meets us first in relation to men being brought to God in righteousness, for no purpose of God in regard to them could be realized if men were not brought to Him righteously, and established before Him according to His eternal justice and the holiness of His nature. How could this be done, and who was able to do it? The question is not a new one. It was asked by Job long centuries ago when he cried, "How should man be just with God"? (Job 9:2). And the question was not one of passing interest, that engaged his attention for a moment merely; it received his most earnest consideration, for he realized how vital a question it was. In the ninth chapter of his book we find him testing one by one the suggestions that arose in regard to it, and finally, apparently hopeless of finding an answer, breaking out in that soul-stirring lament, "HE IS NOT A MAN AS I AM, that I should answer Him, and we should come together in judgment. NEITHER IS THERE ANY DAYSMAN BETWIXT US, THAT MIGHT LAY HIS HAND UPON US BOTH. Let Him take His rod away from me, and let not His fear terrify me: then would I speak and not fear Him; but it is not so with me".

Do you perceive where he stood, and can you interpret his feelings? He said in effct: 'I know that I have sinned against Him, and if He were a man, as I am, I could, having the feelings of a man, understand His displeasure; I could estimate the extent of my offence, and I could go to Him and make restitution for the wrong that I have done, and so be at peace with Him. But He is not a man as I am, and I cannot enter into judgment; with Him; I do not know where to begin the argument; I cannot measure the demands of His justice. I have no ground upon which to stand before Him; the gulf between us is immeasurable from my side; He is almighty, holy and just, and I am weak, sinful and guilty; His very holiness is a terror to me; it makes me afraid."

Only could Job have hope if a daysman, or mediator, appeared in the case, fully qualified to take it up; and see how accurately he had gauged the situation: He must be one who can stand betwixt us—between God, infinitely holy and just, and the sinner, guilty and conscience-stricken —and put his hand upon us both; and, says he, I know an one, longed for Him, sought for him, but I have not anone, longed for Him, sought for Him, but I have not found Him.

Mark well the qualifications that the needed mediator must possess: He must stand betwixt God and the sinner, and by so doing declare His willingness to take up the case, and He must be able to put His hand upon both; and I beg of you not to miss the meaning of that. I might come to you and lay my hand upon your shoulder and talk familiarly with you, for we are equals, but I could not stand beside His Majesty the King and lay my hand upon Him; it would not be proper even if I had the opportunity; how much less could a man lay His hand upon God, or upon the throne of God! It is recorded that when David would bring the ark to Zion, that ark being God's throne in Israel, and the symbol of His presence there, that Uzzah put forth his hand to steady it, and the moment his presumptuous fingers touched that throne of God he fell to the earth a corpse. Learn from that solemn incident that no man could put his hand upon God, or upon the throne of God and live. And yet the mediator for whom Job cried in his despair must be able to put His hand upon God; He must be God's equal; none less could intervene, or be of use to Job or to us. But he must also put His hand upon me; He must be one of us, able to take our part and to identify Himself with our vast indebtedness. HE MUST BE GOD AND MAN.

It should be evident to us all, as it was to Job, that such an one we cannot produce, for no man, even the best, could exalt Himself to Deity; the attempt to do so, which will be made by the coming superman, the beast of Revelation 13, will be the climax of all blasphemy, and will result in that impious and devil-inspired personage being cast alive into the lake of fire (Rev. 19). Men cannot bring forth the needed mediator; here they come to their wit's end; they have no hope except in God, the one whose glory has been challenged by their sin. But man's extremity is God's opportunity, and the one whom Job could not find on earth has come from heaven, and our part is to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.

The New Testament is the book of the Mediator. In its first chapter there stands twice over, in capital letters, the name of its great subject, its true title, JESUS. "Thou shalt call His name JESUS for He shall save His people from their sins" (ver. 21). "She brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name JESUS" (ver. 25); and Jesus is Emmanuel: GOD WITH US. The prophetic Scriptures, to cheer the faith of those who lived in those dim days, had foretold His coming: "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he came forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting" (Micah 5:2). That word was fulfilled when Jesus was born in Bethlehem; then He appeared who was able to speak to man on God's behalf, and to speak to God on man's behalf, for He is God and man.

Being God, He knew according to God's perfect estimate what the effect to the universe of man's disregard of His will was, how and to what extent God's glory was jeopardized by man's sin, what the demands of the eternal throne were in regard to the violation of its just decrees. He knew how completely man's self-will had made him the slave of Satan, how great was the gulf that separated him from God, how utterly powerless he was to rectify the awful wrong that he had committed. He knew the penalty that had to be paid, the conflict that had to be waged, the work that had to be done. It was the will of God that every problem that man's sin had raised should be taken up and settled in a way in which every attribute of His should be glorified and salvation secured for us, and He, the Son, came to accomplish the will of God. He said, "A body hast Thou prepared Me . . . Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me) to do Thy will O God" (Heb. 10:5-7). He became man to stand in our place before God, to take the bill of our terrible indebtedness, and meet it to the full, so that God Himself could write "Settled" across the account. This involved for Him the sorrows of Calvary; and there, as the holy Substitute for men, He "gave Himself a ransom for all". The sacrifice that He made has met all the claims of the throne, and He is now "THE ONE MEDIATOR BETWEEN GOD AND MAN, THE MAN CHRIST JESUS". But only one who could estimate things according to God's own measure of them could do what He has done.

What a Saviour is Jesus! How fully worthy is He of our fullest praise! He stooped to us that He might put His hand upon us, degraded though we were, and He has done it tenderly and graciously, so that we are not afraid. There is ne terror for us in His hand; we do not shrink from Him. He has touched us with the touch of a man, and bound us with cords of love. Yet he was never less than God, and God has touched us in Him. He has put one hand upon us, and the other is placed upon the throne of God, and He is the one mediator. With the one hand He has offered the fullest satisfaction to the righteous claims of God, and with the other He has bestowed fullness of grace upon us. He brings us to God and gives us a place in His presence without fear, and in everlasting peace, a peace established upon the infallible and immovable foundation of divine righteousness, secured for us by a divine person for the eternal glory of God.

Thus we are justified before God, and all our fear is removed, and we are free to behold the hand that has been placed upon us, and to mark the fact that it is a wounded hand, a hand that was nail-pierced for us when He identified Himself with us, as we stood subject to the judgment of God, that He might save. We know the power of this hand, too; it has smitten death for us, and will not relinquish its hold upon us for ever. As He is now a man in heaven, so shall we be there, He the firstborn among many brethren, we His associates identified with Him in an everlasting oneness. He will never surrender that true humanity which He has taken up, and as He is, so are they also who are His. The purpose of God is that we should be conformed to His own image. And so we shall be, and yet never shall we forget that He is "over all, God, Blessed for evermore".—Scripture Truth.

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

Executive Secretary, Department of Christian Social Service, Diocese of Southern Virginia.

WAGES.

ABOUT three fourths of the population of the United States are wage earners and their families. So, for the Christian Social Worker, who is interested in the well-being of the people as a whole, the question of a living wage looms large. It is probably true that the American laboring man today is the most fortunate in the world; and that greater progress has been made in the reformation of our industrial life as a whole, than in any other phase of our national life.

But that may indicate only that the laboring man in other countries is in a state of wretchedness and misery, deeper than in the United States; and that his poverty and distress in past ages has been more pitiful than it is at present. In other words, the state of affairs may be comparatively good, though not absolutely good. Certain it is, that in many sections of the country, and in many industries, conditions are such that they constitute a challenge to all thinking people.

Southern Clergymen's Letter.

In an open letter to the industrial leaders of the South, forty-one representative Southern bishops and ministers recently made an appeal to them to "take the initiative in friendly cooperation of employers, employees, churches, educators, and state officials, in building in the South a greater and more powerful industry constructed solidly upon goodwill and cooperation, higher wages, shorter hours, labor representation and the absorption of the mill village by the larger community."

The letter continues:

"We bring before you the necessity for the improvement of certain social and economic conditions, especially in the textile industry, but existing also in other industries. These are, to speak briefly: the isolation of population in the mill village; the long working week, extending in many industries even to fifty-five and sixty hours; a certain amount of the seven-day week which still exists in some industries; the employment of women and of children between fourteen and sixteen at overlong periods of labor; low wage standards in some industries, with consequent depressed standards of living; the general absence of labor representation in our factories."

They maintained that by so doing Southern industry "will avoid the waste and bitterness of industrial conflicts and the intensity of the class struggle".

Those who signed the appeal were:

James Cannon, Jr., Washington, D. C.
Will W. Alexander, Atlanta.

John E. Edgerton, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, made a lengthy reply to the appeal of these gentlemen. After calling attention to the advances made in the industrial life of the country at large, and intimating that the bishops and clergy didn't know as much as they might, about industrial conditions, he continued, with reference to "the isolation of the population":

"Mill villages in the South are the natural products of conditions in that section. The South has very few cities of considerable size. To a large extent its industries are in small towns and the rural districts, which have been unable to furnish adequate housing facilities for industrial enterprises. Corporations have therefore had to build their own houses for their people. Otherwise there would have been little industrial development. As fast as housing facilities are provided by the so-called 'larger communities', mill villages will be inevitably absorbed. But it cannot be done by social or political decrees or by artificial processes. Owners of textile or other plants will not object to this natural absorption, and perhaps the ministers are right in their conclusion that it will be best."

As to the wage scale, Mr. Edgerton has the following to say:

"There is not a respectable industrial employer in the nation who does not wish to pay his employees as much as not only justice demands, but as the condition of his business will permit.

"The wage standards will be advanced on the whole as rapidly as economic conditions permit. They are not now, never have been, and never can be determined by the necessities of men, nor by moral requirements. Christ Himself did not determine rewards that way, and men can not do it."

Mr. Edgerton is a splendid type of man, who has shown himself to be genuinely interested in the welfare of his employees and he is a power in the manufacturing world. It is gratifying to hear from him, that, in spite of the assertion that wages "never can be determined by the necessities of man, nor by moral requirements", yet they "will be advanced on the whole as rapidly as economic conditions permit".

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question: Is there any settled policy among social workers, as to the treatment of men and women who ask for money to get them on to another town?

Answer: Yes. Any one having such an application made to him should refer the case to a local social agency. If there is no agency in the community, transportation aid should be refused, unless an investigation should show that the person making the request has a legal residence and financial resources in the town to which he wishes to go. This is in line with what is called "The Transportation Agreement" and practically all social agencies abide by this agreement. It is not good policy merely to transfer a problem from one community to another.

Question: How much difference is there between the so-called "living wage", and the average income of the wage-earner in the U. S.?

Answer: It is impossible to answer this question categorically. The living-wage is variously estimated at from $1,800 to $2,200 for a family of five. The average industrial wage was estimated at $1,330 right after the war.

Question: What is the "Church Mission of Help"?

Answer: This is an organization of the Episcopal Church for applying the best modern social methods to the problems of wayward youth, delinquency, and illegitimacy. The work is extended to young women and girls of every class, color and creed. The President is Mrs. John M. Glenn, 1 Lexington Avenue, New York City. There are branches of the organization in the following dioceses: Albany, Central New York, Chicago, Connecticut, Long Island, Maine, Newark, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Southern Ohio, Tennessee, Vermont, and Western New York.

A MATTER OF HISTORY.

Mr. Editor:

I have read with much pleasure the Rev. W. G. Lee's excellent sermon on "Perils" in the Southern Churchman of the sixteenth instant. But I beg to differ from him when he says: "Abraham Lincoln loved it"—the Bible. "Lamon, his intimate friend," tells in detail of the writing and the burning of a "little book" written by Lincoln with the purpose to disprove the truth of the Bible, and the divinity of Christ, and tells how it "was burned without his consent by his friend Hill, lest it should ruin his political career before a Christian people".

"Herndon (his friend and law partner) describes the essay or book as an argument against Christianity, striving to prove that the Bible was not inspired, and therefore not God's revelation, and that Jesus Christ was not the Son of God." "Lamon gives (page 480) a letter of Nicolay, his senior private secretary throughout his administration, which states that he perceived no change in Lincoln's attitude toward religion after his entrance on the Presidency."

The above is copied from "The Real Life of Lincoln", pages 27-28, by Minor, a copy of which Dr. Lee can secure, at small cost, from "The Confederate Veteran", Nashville, Tenn. May I also object to the learned doctor's quoting: "The Pilgrim Fathers" adventure in crossing the ocean in sixty days, when, as an act of justice, he might have quoted the adventure of crossing the ocean thirteen years before the Pilgrim Fathers by the good old parson Hunt of the Church of England, and his Cavalier companions, landing at Jamestown on the thirteenth of May, 1607. With these two exceptions I commend to your readers, Mr. Editor, the excellent sermon on "Perils", by the Rev. W. G. Lee, Ph. D.

Respectfully yours,
(REV.) GILES B. COOKE.
(Only surviving officer of General Robert E. Lee's staff.)
Mathews C. H., Virginia.

To the best of our knowledge and belief, Major Giles B. Cooke is entirely correct in the above statement; and we would like to ask any one who is not in accord with this statement, whether it is true that a book called by some such name as "The Gospel According to Ruben", written by Abraham Lincoln, had to be suppressed because of its vulgarity.

L. M. WILLIAMS.

WHAT IS INVOLVED IN THE PROPOSAL TO OMIT THE ARTICLES OF RELIGION FROM THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER?

Mr. Editor:

It is proposed to omit the Articles of Religion from the Prayer Book, because they are seldom read; and because they are not of a devotional character, and therefore, it is argued, not properly to be included in a book of worship; and, perhaps some would add, that they are no longer authoritative, because a large latitude of interpretation is permissible.

To very many of us these arguments seem well-nigh frivolous, or at least to betray a very inadequate estimate of the great historical and practical importance of our Articles of Religion. One of your correspondents compares them very happily to the Declaration of Independence. It would create a false and injurious impression if the Declaration ceased to be printed, yet it has less present-day importance or authority than have our articles. Historically, they constitute the distinctive platform of our Church. The two great creeds we hold in common with the whole Catholic Church, but the articles were solemnly promulgated by the Church of England to explain and justify her position in the critical era of the Protestant Reformation. They were most carefully considered and revised, and, while not acceptable to extremists, either of the Roman or Calvinistic parties, they were cordially welcomed by the great body of the English Church, and have stood for centuries as our great doctrinal basis; and how splendid and fruitful has been the history of the great Anglican Communion developed upon them.

Very naturally and wisely the founders of our American Communion accepted and established them in 1801 as our doctrinal basis; and such they will remain until good cause is shown for their modification; and when that time arrives, if ever, there ought to be a debate on the main question, not on a minor point of their omission from the Prayer Book.

The important issue, therefore, for present discussion is that of their intrinsic worth. There are some who have ceased to value them, and some, it may be, positively dissent from their declarations. Such there have always been, and in the past they have been known as dissenters, and have been content to accept their exclusion from the fellowship of the Church, and have formed other religious communions. Such a course seems to be open and justifiable. So also there have been others, who were willing to accept the articles, and remain within the Church, but who have inclined to interpret them differently from others of their brethren, and have come to be known, as High, or Low, or Broad, according as their sympathies swayed them in one or other of these directions.

But, since the days of John Henry Newman and his early associates, and largely through his influence, a school has arisen within the Church, both in England and in this country, who defined their loyalty as primarily due to the Catholic Church, and to the Anglican Church, only as a part of it, and assumed their right and their ability, to determine how far the articles are in conformity with true Catholicism, as they understand and interpret its teachings. This is a subtle line of argument, and a novel attitude, and one difficult to deal with, for its substitutes for their recognized standards and the constituted authorities, themselves as the authorities, and their own opinions as the standards. The so-called appeal to the Catholic Standards is no appeal at all. True Catholicity is not an intellectual and spiritual concept, held by individual thinkers. It is an historical reality, a continuity of life, actually existing today in the Church of Christ, as it has done in all ages, and it is with and in the Church today, because it has continued to be there from the beginning, and therefore it is an element of the actual Church, as it exists, and not as theorists may feign it for themselves.

Let me urge in conclusion that while some may neglect and others dislike the articles, they have been held in love and reverence by the great body of the Church through all their history, and still are so held today, and that, because they establish a central position, where both Protestant and Catholic can meet, our Church offers, as Bishop W. T. Manning has recently declared, the great opportunity to work for the Reunion of Christendom. Let us all unite whole-heartedly in that mission.

FLOOD CONDITIONS IN MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. Editor:

Now that the flood water is subsiding in this district, I want to thank those of your readers who responded to the appeal for aid. Gifts of clothing have been so numerous and of such good quality as to witness a spirit of real sacrifice and loving sympathy. For the most part those assisted are Negro tenants, white farmers and laborers who lost their possessions and those who have been thrown out of employment. We have been able with the money given to rehabilitate the homes of a number of people who did not come within the technical rules of Red Cross assistance, but who were nevertheless in great need. This work of clothing and rehabilitating flood sufferers still continues.

Within the past few days I drove over the upper part of the flooded district and found that the devastation exceeds my worst fears. In many places buildings have been swept from the plantations and the land itself plowed in great furrows or heaped with sand. The country side for great areas resembles a desert; piled in places with drift wood or wrecked buildings. More than half the flooded delta will remain untilled this year and it will take several years to restore the destroyed property. Various organizations, such as the Elks, the Masons, the Christian Scientists, Knights of Columbus and Salvation Army have established relief work here and I want to assure your readers that our Church is also performing a service which reaches far and wide owing to the loving generosity of our people everywhere.

Most sincerely and gratefully,

Greenville, Miss. (REV.) PHILIP DAVIDSON,
July 19, 1927. Rector St. James.

A MATTER OF BELIEF.

Mr. Editor:

The Vicar of Cheltenham takes too much on himself when he says (or is reported as saying) on page ten of the Southern Churchman of July 16, that "nobody believes that woman was created out of man".

A truth of Genesis that I believe, and millions have believed, and now believe, and will believe, until He comes, to set us right, if we are wrong.

BERKELEY MINOR.

Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Mr. Minor:

We believe as you do, that woman was created out of man.

L. M. WILLIAMS, President.

LETTERS OF APPROVAL.

The Rev. Pembroke W. Reed,
Associate Editor, The Southern Churchman.

My Dear Sir:

May I express to you my great satisfaction in the fact that, under your leadership The Southern Churchman has taken up such a definitely and positively Evangelical attitude. Leadership of this kind is what is sorely needed in the Church today, and I, for one, rejoice in the testimony, which is being borne, both editorially and by contributed articles, to the foundation principles of the Gospel and of Evangelical faith.

I have not, heretofore, been a subscriber to the Southern Churchman, but I wish to have the paper and send herewith my check for a year's subscription.

Believe me to be, my dear Mr. Reed,

Yours very sincerely,
(REV.) WM. S. BISHOP (D. D.)

1912 Belmont Road,
Washington, D. C.
July 13, 1927.

Mr. Editor:

It has done my heart good to see the bold way in which you are standing for the Bible and its blessed truths.

It truly seems to me a time for all Christians everywhere to ask for boldness to speak forth the truth of their belief.

May the Churchman continue in its good work and bear much fruit.

One of the very least of Christ's Kingdom and your readers,

MRS. LLOYD TAYLOR,
Of St. Paul's Parish.

Chattanooga, Tenn.

Be still, my heart, these anxious cares
To thee are burdens, thorns and snares;
They cast dishonor on thy Lord,
And contradict His gracious word.

Brought safely by His hand thus far
How canst thou now give place to fear?
How canst thou want if He provide
Or lose thy way with such a guide?

When first before His mercy seat
Thou didst thy all to Him commit,
He gave thee warrant from that hour
To trust His wisdom, love and power.

Did ever trouble yet befall
And He refuse to hear thy call?
And hath He not His promise passed
That thou shalt overcome at last?

Though rough and thorny be the road,
It leads thee home apace to God;
Then count thy present trials small
For Heaven will make amends for all.

God from on high has heard thy prayer,
He will thy ruined state repair,
Nor shall thy watchful Monarch cease
To guide thee in eternal peace.

SUMMER SCHOOLS AND CONFERENCES

THE WELLESLEY CONFERENCE.

The Wellesley Conference for Church Work and Summer School for Church Music maintained this year the high traditions of scholarship and inspiration that it has steadily upheld during the years of its existence.

The sessions were held June 27 to July 7 in Wellesley College, Wellesley, Massachusetts. The buildings and grounds of the College were in themselves a great attraction. The sunset services on the shore of Wellesley's beautiful Lake Waban will never be forgotten by those who have had the privilege of attending them.

There were enrolled this year three hundred and thirty-three students in the classes of the Conference and the Music School. The members of the faculty and staff brought the total number present up to a little over four hundred, coming from forty-six dioceses and missionary districts of the Church. The curriculum offered twenty-one courses in the Conference, and seven in the Music School as follows: General subjects, four; the Bible, three; Missions, three; Religious Education, seven; Social Service, four; Music, seven; a total of twenty-eight courses in all.

The faculty included members of the staff of the National Department of the Church, professors in several of the Theological Seminaries, leaders in various lines of Church activity and outstanding musicians. Readers of the Southern Churchman will be interested to know that the South was represented on the faculty by the Rev. Charles L. Wells, Dean of the Theological School of Sewanee, and the Rev. Gardiner L. Tucker, Executive Secretary of Religious Education in the Province of Sewanee, and Grace Chalmers Thomson, Mus. Doc., St. Philip's Cathedral, Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Burton Scott Easton and Dr. Charles H. Boynton, both of the General Theological Seminary and well-known to students of the Sewanee Summer Training School, were also members of the faculty.

Every person attending the Wellesley Summer School is impressed by the wonderful efficiency of the official staff. It would be hard to imagine a summer conference in which every detail of arrangements for the comfort of the members and the efficiency of the work are more carefully attended to than at Wellesley.

Bishop Slattery, of Massachusetts, was Director of the School, assisted by a large staff. Among these might be mentioned Miss Josephine F. Bumstead, who has for many years been a leading spirit in the Wellesley Conference, and Miss Marian De C. Ward, the Secretary. Dr. Boynton was Dean of the Faculty.

The Wellesley Conference has always made the missionary motive very prominent. One of the impressive evening meetings of the Conference this year was given over to a formal presentation of twenty missionaries from various fields of the Church, foreign and domestic, who were attending the Conference. Eight missionaries from China alone were present. A brief oral "Bulletin" of information was given by the delegation from each field represented.

As always, Church music was an outstanding feature of the Conference. In addition to the classes in the music school, the program included organ recitals, choral services, singing meetings and chorus rehearsals.

Among the special lectures may be mentioned two addresses by Bishop Johnson, of Colorado, on "The Development of the American Church", and an address on "The Church and the Nation: a Study in Loyalties", by Dr. Vida D. Scudder, Professor in Wellesley College.

A group of young people, members of the Young People's Fellowship, attended the Conference. Special courses and conferences were provided for them, and they were under the guidance of their own leaders and counsellors. They blended well with the conference, as a whole, however, and never obtruded manifestations of the "youth-conscious spirit".

One attending Wellesley for the first time is impressed by the notes of dignity, efficiency, and spirituality. No doubt each of our Summer Conferences makes its own special contribution of its own special excellence. Wellesley's contribution of ideals and standards is a distinct enrichment of our Church's life.

SUMMER SCHOOL FOR THE CAROLINAS.

The Valle Crucis Summer School for Religious Education at Valle Crucis, N. C., directed by the Departments of Religious Education in the five Carolina dioceses closed a two weeks' session Saturday, July 16, having secured excellent attendance from the churches and cities of the Carolinas and neighboring states. Those attending came largely from Raleigh, Wilmington, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Charlotte, Oxford, Edenton, Asheville, Gastonia, Hickory, Marion, Hendersonville, in North Carolina cities, and from Columbia, Charleston, Greenville, Spartanburg, in South Carolina.

The faculty of fifteen were gathered from Philadelphia, the Carolinas, Jacksonville, Florida, and Louisiana. Thorough teaching was given to the various groups of Church men and women concerning better Church School Education from primary to Bible classes, and in Church program training for the parish, the community, the diocese, the nation, and the world. The Life of Christ was taught by Captain Bernard E. Hirons; Personal Religious, by the Rev. Homer W. Starr, Ph. D., both of Charleston, S. C.; the Bible by Leon C. Palmer, General Secretary, Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Philadelphia; The Principles of Teaching, by Mrs. John Loman, of Philadelphia; The Pupil, by Miss Annie Morton Stout, of Memphis; a course on Prayer and Auxiliary Work, by Miss Margaret Weed, of Jacksonville, Fla., and on The Mission of the Church, by Mrs. M. B. Hutchinson, of Columbia, S. C. Dr. Wade R. Brown, of North Carolina College for Women, gave an interesting series of lectures on Church Music and Congregational Singing. A valued member of the faculty the Rev. Cameron McRae, had recently returned from China, where he had spent twenty-five years as an active missionary.

There were many evenings of pleasure, which included two excellent concerts directed by Dr. Wade R. Brown. There was swimming in the Watauga, Dutch Creek Falls, and the school pool. A seventy-mile swing around Grandfather Mountain, which was found in gushing waterfalls after a cloudburst, was a rare experience, especially to the faculty. At no time was the road level below 2,700 feet, and at times 5,000 feet.

The Rev. J. Preston, rector of the Valle Crucis School, and his staff, looked well to the comfort of the Summer School. Valle Crucis Summer School has been announced for next summer, July 2-14, with the same officers: the Rev. J. W. Cantey Johnson, of Gastonia, director; the Rev. W. H. K. Pendleton, of Spartanburg, Assistant Director, and the Rev. Homer W. Starr, of Charleston, S. C., Dean.

THE MADISON CONFERENCE.

The sixth annual Conference of Rural Clergy, held at Madison, Wisconsin, June 27 to July 8, as never before has exemplified the importance of rural work in the Church today.

Clergymen and women workers from twenty-five dioceses, and missionary districts were in attendance and spent at least five hours each day studying the needs and problems of the rural communities.

Especially at the morning group conferences were the many questions answered by the leaders in their special fields, which brought home to every one the necessity of earnest, spiritual men spending their lives out in the open spaces, where the Church needs real, live workers to further its interests.

The first group session was taken up with introductions, after which the several specialists in their lines were neard, and their ideas and problems thoroughly discussed.

Miss Edna B. Eastwood, of Billings, Montana, who has charge of the "Scattered Sheep" in the Diocese of Montana, gave an interesting talk on her work among the scattered people of that diocese, which received earnest attention and, by the questions asked and answered at its close, proved beyond a doubt, that many rural sections have the same problems to solve.

Miss Agnes Penrose, Secretary of the Church Mission of Help, Diocese of Albany, was the next specialist in certain phases of the rural work. She gave concrete examples of the importance of the rural clergyman's work along the lines of delinquency among the girls and boys in the smaller places, showing how the practice of love and wisdom on his part will straighten the paths of many wayward ones.

The Rev. Frank Gavin, Professor of Ecclesiastical History of the General Theological Seminary, of New York, gave an interesting address on "The Modern Trend of Religious and Philosophical Thinking", in which he stressed the fact that the world is athirst for the truth, unvarnished and unbiased by doctrinal prejudice.

Dr. M. A. Dawber, one of the leaders in the Methodist Church on rural work, was the next speaker of importance.

In summing up his address, the clergy and women present were thoroughly convinced of the close touch a rural clergyman must have with every activity of the community, physical, mental, moral, and spiritual.

There were other able discussions led by men who are specialists in their particular lines, the foremost of those being the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst,

D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of East Carolina, and leader in the Bishops' Crusade. The Bishop thrilled every one with his word pictures of the future possibilities to be derived from a continuance of the Crusade in the coming years. The Church hath awakened, as never before, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ shall be preached by word of mouth, as well as by Christian examples in all walks of life. The world is the workshop, and mankind the machinery, each to be brought into perfect accord with the other. He says that the Church dare not recede from its great step forward and the rest of the Christian world will realize its significance and follow where we have led the way.

Mr. Charles L. Hill, of Rosedale, Wisconsin, one of the state's prominent farmers, President of the National Dairy Association, and chairman of the State Rural Life Committee, made a forceful appeal for a closer contact between clergymen and farmer. His words were well received.

There were many discussions on Church School Literature, ways and means of carrying out projects, and various problems that confront the rural Church today.

After the sessions of the summer school were over, the report of the Committee on Findings of the Conference was read and approved as were the resolutions.

Church Intelligence

Latest News From China.

A cable received on July 16 states: Miss Lucy Graves, of Shanghai, sailed on July 15 on the Shinyo Maru, due in San Francisco August 8. Miss Graves is coming to this country for study at the University of California. There seems to be no possibility of reopening St. Mary's Hall during the academic year of 1927-1928.

Mr. W. F. Borrman and family, and Miss Olive H. Pott, of Shanghai, sailed on July 16 on the Empress of Asia, due at Vancouver July 31. Both are coming to this country on anticipated furlough, because of the present impossibility of carrying on the educational work with which they are connected.

Bishop Huntington and Mrs. T. L. Sinclair and children sailed from Shanghai on July 16 for Manila, on the Empress of Canada. Due at Manila July 23. Bishop Huntington goes for a brief vacation. Mrs. Sinclair of Anking, with her children, will join Mr. Sinclair, who is transferred to the Philippine Islands for temporary work until conditions become more settled in China.

Miss Alice Gregg, of Anking, is leaving for America on August 27. Name of steamer not given. Miss Gregg is returning to this country at her own expense for further study.

Bishop Creighton On The Church In Mexico.

Bishop Creighton, who is having a two months' rest on Long Island, said that the Episcopal Church has conformed to all the requirements of the Constitution of Mexico, and is meeting with no difficulties in its work. The clergy of the Episcopal Church in Mexico have all registered under the law, all Church property has been declared as the Constitution requires, and all of our clergy have been given "permises" or certificates permitting them to officiate.

"Included in the work we have in hand," said Bishop Creighton, are thirty-two native churches and missions, and three foreign, that is, English-speaking. There are nineteen native clergy. We have four schools, of an entirely secular character, one social service station and one hospital. Our English-speaking staff is limited to five, which includes the Archdeacon and the Bishop."

Bishop Creighton declined to discuss the situation in Mexico outside of his own particular work. "I have met with nothing but kindness on the part of Mexican officials," he said, "who, with proverbial Mexican courtesy, have explained the requirements of the law, and have assisted us in every way to bring our Church and clergy under the requirements of the Constitution. The policy of the Church, not only in Mexico, but in all foreign lands where it operates, is to obey the law, and that that is what we are doing. In my work I make no attempt to stress the American point of view.

"Mexico has culture and patriotism. Our whole effort among those with whom we come in contact is to make good citizens of them—loyal to God and country. Specifically we keep entirely aloof from politics and all other things which are distinctly Mexican."

DEATH OF BISHOP BROWN OF VIRGINIA.

Just as we go to press news is received of the death of the Rt. Rev. William Cabell Brown, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Virginia. Bishop Brown died suddenly from a heart attack on July 25, in the Victoria Hotel, London, according to cables received in Richmond. His body is being shipped to Virginia and is expected to reach Richmond August 18.

Bishop Brown had been urged by his diocese to take a rest, and with Mrs. Brown sailed June 18 for a pleasure tour in England and Scotland. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Ida Mason Dorsey, and four children: the Misses Margaret and Katherine Brown, now in New York City; Robert Brown and John D. Brown.

Bishop Brown was born in Lynchburg, November 22, 1861. He was educated at Norwood High School and in the public schools of Nelson County. For seven years he taught at the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, then entering the Theological Seminary of Virginia. He was graduated in 1891. That same year he was ordained deacon, and advanced to the priesthood.

He served as missionary in Southern Brazil for twenty-three years, returning to Virginia in 1914, when he was consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Virginia in St. James' Church, Richmond.

Editorial notice of Bishop Brown, by his closest associate in the mission work in Brazil, the Rev. James W. Morris, D. D., will appear in next week's issue.

Bible First Book to Cross Atlantic by Air.

In appreciation of Commander Richard E. Byrd's carrying a Bible in the trophy box of the airplane "America" on its first flight to Europe, a large copy of a leather-bound Bible was presented to him on behalf of the American Bible Society by Mr. Gilbert Darlington, its treasurer, at the close of the ceremonies at the Eternal Light, Madison Square, which ended New York City's first day of welcome to the homecoming ocean flyers. A gold-lettered inscription on the cover of the Bible reads: "Presented by the American Bible Society to Commander Richard E. Byrd and the crew of the 'America' who were the first to carry the Bible to Europe by air."

It was a book of no such proportions as that given Commander Byrd at Madison Square that nestled in the America's trophy box along with the bit of flag fashioned by Betsy Ross's fingers and the other historical American trophies which had already accompanied the Commander on his flight over the North Pole.

When Commander Byrd, because of the significance of the non-stop flight to Europe, expressed a wish to add a copy of the Bible to the distinguished company of the trophy box, Mr. Rodman A. Wanamaker provided the Commander with a miniature Bible, its pages about the size of a postage stamp and its weight one ounce.

What could be more appropriate than that the Bible, which is the first book that has been translated and printed in over six hundred languages and dialects, should also be the first book to cross the Atlantic by air?

Warning.

Clergy and others are warned against a man giving the name of L. N. Sayre, about thirty-five years of age, about five feet eleven inches, fair, medium brown hair. One tooth in the lower jaw is missing and the vacancy is quite noticeable. This party claims to be a relative of the Executive Secretary of the Church Pension Fund, and claims to represent the National Council in seeking information as to Tabor College. He works partly through fake telegrams. Further information may be secured by addressing the Rev. E. J. Randall, 6 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Georgetown Churches Hold Combined Services.

Christ Church and St. John's Church, in Georgetown, will follow the custom of many years and hold combined services from July 31 to September 1. These services will alternate between the two churches and will be under the care of the Rev. Edwin B. Niver, formerly rector of Christ Church, Baltimore, and recently retired from chaplain service of the U. S. Marine Corps. Mr. Niver is making his residence in Georgetown and will be available for any pastoral calls during the absence of the rectors of the two churches. The Rev. F. Bland Tucker, of St. John's Church, is traveling with Mrs. Tucker in Europe, and the Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, of Christ Church, with Mrs. Wroth, and his two sons, will spend his vacation in the Pocono Mountains.

Washington Cathedral.

"The Glory and Beauty of Washington Cathedral" is the subject of an interesting illustrated lecture, delivered recently by the Rev. A. B. Rudd, Canon of Washington Cathedral at the Art Association of Newport, R. I.

Canon Rudd showed new slides of the Cathedral, including some just made of the completed work on the new Norman Chapel of Joseph of Arimathea. Cannon Rudd has been the guest of the Rev. A. C. F. Bratenhal, Dean of Washington Cathedral, and Mrs. Bratenahl at Gloucester, Mass., and will probably plan other cathedral lectures to be given in that part of the country, this summer.

Washington Cathedral is left a bequest of $5,000 by the will of Julia M. Stout, who remembers altogether seven worthy institutions.

The Laymen's Service Association is taking care of the services at St. John's Church, Bethesda, Md., during the month of July, and some member of the Association is occupying the pulpit each Sunday.

Christian Healing Services are being conducted each Sunday night in the parish house of St. Paul's Church, by the Rev. William Thomas Reynolds and many persons are attending and receiving real benefit.

Conference For Church Workers.

The fifth annual Conference for Church Workers at St. Margaret's School, Tappahannock, was held from July 11 to 16, and proved to be the largest and most successful yet conducted.

The Rev. H. S. Osburn, dean of the Rappahannock Valley Convocation, was in charge of the school, and the presence of the Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, D. D., throughout the session, was an inspiration to all. He delivered a course of lectures on the history and future of Foreign Missions.

Accredited courses were given by the Rev. J. C. Wagner, D. D., Professor at the Bishop Payne Divinity School, and by Mr. and Mrs. Leon C. Palmer, of Philadelphia. Other courses were taught by Mrs. Jacquelin Smith, Miss Louisa T. Davies, Miss Sallie Dean, Miss Margaret Barbour, and the Rev. Fred. D. Goodwin. Recreation was in charge of the Rev. C. W. Sheerin, assisted by Miss Lena C. Hundley, a graduate of the Richmond Training School.

The evening devotional services were impressive. The Rev. Kimber H. Den, a native presbyter of China, preached an inspiring sermon, dealing with the present situation in his native country. Miss Hundley, at a special young people's service, made an address on "Choosing One's Life Work", and the Rev. Mr. Goodwin was the preacher on the third night.

The Laymen's Association held their annual meeting on Thursday, July 14, and, under the leadership of Mr. Robert Beverley, conducted a program full of interest. Addresses were made by Mr. Leon C. Palmer, Bishop Tucker and Mr. Beverley. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mr. Robert Beverley, of Caret, Va.; Vice-President, Mr. James Lewis, of Tappahannock; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. J. Carson Phillips, of Tappahannock.

A total registration of three hundred and ten made this conference one of the largest in the Church. This was partly made possible this year by the fact that the Piedmont Convocation officially joined with the Rappahannock Valley Convocation in sponsoring the school. The two convocations were assisted financially by the Diocesan Board of Religious Education.

New Executive Secretary For the Church Mission of Help.

The appointment of Miss Mary S. Brisley as Executive Secretary of the New York branch of the Church Mission of Help has recently been announced. Miss Brisley comes to New York in October, from the Family Welfare Association of Minneapolis. In addition to work in Minneapolis, which has won wide recognition, Miss Brisley has served as director of the Louisville School of Social Work and has been instructor in social work in the University of Missouri. Her experience in training students and volunteers will be of great value in developing the program of the Church Mission of Help in the Diocese of New York. The resignation of Mrs. L. Frederic Pease, who has been Executive Secretary of the New York Church Mission of Help since 1915, becomes effective October 1, owing to her removal to New Haven, Conn.

Laying of Cornerstone, St. Peter's, Lakewood.

This stone is called by the rector, the Rev. D. LeBaron Goodwin, the "inscription" stone, because the walls are all built, and the roof completed, leaving only an opening near the tower door, for the cornerstone. Bishop Rogers, and the Masonic Commandery, which conducted him to the church, had just gone inside when the great thunder and rain began. The Bishop, with his ready speech, kept the crowd under control during this trying ordeal. Bishop Rogers performed the ceremony, assisted by the Masons and surrounded by his clergy: the Rev. Messrs. D. LeB. Goodwin, E. G. Mapes, F. S. Eastman, J. M. Withycombe, Roy E. DePriest, F. J. Hauck, Canon Mallett and J. E. Carhartt.

The mission was started about twenty years ago on a small street. For many years it struggled under many men, till Mr. Goodwin came. During the almost ten years of his ministry the mission has risen to a parish, and a splendid property procured on the corner of West Clifton Boulevard and Detroit Avenue, and at the north-east end of which stands a fine rectory, coming through the liberality of Mrs. Fannie Southern.

By the zeal and untiring efforts of Mr. Goodwin and his faithful vestry, they have raised a beautiful edifice, which will soon be completed.

St. James' Churchmen's Club.

The St. James' Churchmen's Club of Alexandria, was organized in 1923, with twenty-seven men of the congregation present. The meeting was held in the parish house, with Mr. H. W. Palfrey, presiding as temporary chairman. The membership has since grown to large proportions.

Many worth-while objects have been accomplished by the club. Among them is the establishment of a men's adult Bible class, which is regularly attended by a large number of the club members, the holding of noon-day religious services during the Lenten period, open to the public and presided over by the clergy; the more active attendance of male members of the congregation at its regular devotional services; assisting in the annual membership campaigns of the congregation, including the securing of pledges for the construction of the new church, assisting the Boy Scout troops, ushering during the Bishops' Crusade services, and doing such other work as is assigned them by the rector, the Rev. W. S. Slack, and officers of the congregation.

The present officers of the club are: E. I. Larid, President; A. L. Scott, Vice-President; J. J. Young, Secretary, and E. M. Shumake, Treasurer.

"Gospel Bus."

One of the most successful institutions at Grace Church, Anniston, Alabama, is its Gospel Bus.

In order to secure the attendance upon the Church School of children living at a distance from the church, the rector, the Rev. J. M. Stoney, some time ago enlisted certain automobile owners of his congregation, who went out every Sunday and brought to the school "them that were far off" but not "them that were nigh". So many children were found who wished to attend that this hap-hazard method proved inadequate, forcing the congregation to purchase a regular school bus for the purpose. This vehicle rejoices in the name of "Gospel Bus". It makes five trips each Sunday, usually carrying more than eighty children to Grace Church in the morning and to the Chapel of the Resurrection in the suburbs in the afternoon. Through Mr. Stoney's influence the Bus is operated under the same form of license as those controlled by the public school system. No difficulty is encountered in securing drivers from among the congregation. In time a second bus may have to be added, as it frequently happens that children are left behind, for lack of accommodation.

This is an experiment that other Church Schools might try to advantage.

The Rev. Watkins Leigh Ribble, D. D., a recent graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary, with his bride, is spending July and a part of August with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Ribble, at Bessemer.

Mr. Ribble was married on June 10 to Miss Constance Strobel, of Virginia. He is to be ordained to the priesthood at Halifax, Va., the latter part of August, by Bishop Tucker, of Southern Virginia, prior to sailing for Brazil, September 3. Mr. Ribble was born in Santa Maria da Bocca do Monte, Brazil, when his parents were missionaries in that field. It is fitting that he should feel the call to return to the land of his birth, where he will join the mission staff. He will be stationed at Porto Alegre, in the province of Rio Grande do Sul.

Rt. Rev. T. I. Reese, D. D. Coadjutor.

The Rt. Rev. Theodore I. Reese, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of the diocese, with Mrs. Reese, sailed for England on Saturday, June 25.

Last winter Bishop Reese undertook, in addition to his regular appointments, a schedule of vestry group conferences covering the whole diocese, and overspent himself. He spent several weeks in the hospital seeking a complete rest.

In view of these facts the standing committee of the diocese urged Bishop Reese to take a long rest. He and Mrs. Reese will spend the summer in England, and it is impossible to tell at this time whether the Bishop will resume his appointments in September or postpone his return until the first of the next year.

The Church Army's Visit.

The recent visit of a detachment of the Church Army to this diocese seems to have been of much spiritual value. I talked with a few of the rectors of parishes that enjoyed a visit from the Army men, and after that I got into communication with Captain Mountford at the Diocesan House, in New York, where the Army makes its American headquarters for this crusade. Captain Mountford was good enough to give me a brief report of the Army's work in this diocese. He writes as follows:

"After the general send-off of thirty evangelists by Bishop Manning, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on the afternoon of Ascension Day (May 26), two teams crossed to the Diocese of Long Island. The first parish visited was St. George's, Hempstead, where the men spent Thursday to Sunday, inclusive, under the direction of the rector, the Rev. John S. Haight. On Sunday, May 29, the Senior Honorary Evangelist of the Church Army, the Rev. Captain Philip Prior (forty-five years in service), preached at the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City. At six P. M. the Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Stires, D. D., Bishop of Long Island, received the two groups of Crusaders, welcomed them to his diocese and gave them his blessing. The column visited the following parishes in the diocese between that date and June 16, when they terminated their work here: Hempstead, Freeport, Garden City Merrick, Rosedale, Amityville, Babylon, Flushing, College Point, Rockville Center, Sea Cliff, Whitestone, Richmond Hill, Bayside, Mineola, Oyster Bay, Setauket, Sag Harbor, Southampton, Patchogue and Sayville.

The work in the Diocese of Long Island was full of encouragement and showed us that visits of longer periods, or properly prepared for preaching missions, would be of great value in the diocese. Many requests are reaching us, asking for week-end preaching, and some are asking the Church Army to conduct missions in their parishes. A team of six men is booked to the Rev. George F. Taylor, of St. George's, Flushing, January 26 to February 5 next. Captain Mountford has also accepted an engagement to preach at the Church of the Resurrection, Richmond Hill, on 'Parish Sunday', October 2.

We would like to pay tribute to the kindness and helpfulness of the clergy, without whose good will our work would be impossible.

If desired, the Church Army would be pleased to loan one or two men to cooperate with rural clergy in an attempt to follow up the Bishops' Crusade."

Since receiving Captain Mountford's statement, I have had conversations with a few more of the clergy visited, so that I have now talked with eight of these rectors. Without exception, they speak of the work of the Army in the highest terms, and are sure that the people of their several parishes have been benefited by the Army's visit.

The usual routine of the visit seems to have been about the same, yet there was notable variation in detail in various places. So far as I have learned, the men slept, and usually were fed, in the parish hall. They slept on the floor, without other bedding than their own blankets. Meals were usually provided by the women of the parish. In some cases groups of people were invited to eat with the Army men; in one place at least, a good number of school children, after attendance at an early Communion, breakfasted with the visitors. In one place a number of young men were invited to supper with the Army men. A good deal of street preaching was done, both in day time and in the evening. Usually an invitation was given for the listeners to follow along to the church, and many times the churches were filled to overflowing in this way. Sometimes these street processions were made up of vested choristers and clergy as well as the Army men; sometimes only of the Army men and their band, and the rector in street clothes. In one village, on the second evening of the Army's crusade, a Presbyterian minister brought the attendants at his Bible class with him to the Episcopal Church to hear the Army men. A typical out-door service consisted of several hymns, usually quite familiar, striking texts of Scripture excellently recited by one after another of the men, one or two short, appealing and effective addresses, an invitation to church, prayers, and final hymn. Services in church were straight Prayer Book services, but often with interesting and rather novel additions. For instance, in one church after Evensong and two addresses, the people were urged to come to the altar rail and rededicate themselves to the service of God. The rector went to the altar, the Army men knelt at the rail, and about twenty others came and knelt there. A prayer of dedication was offered on their behalf, and the blessing followed.

The early Communions, which were a regular feature of the Army's work, were very well attended at all the places I have heard from. In one place, at 7:30 on a week-day morning, nearly fifty per cent of the communicants of the parish were present.

One rector was particularly impressed with the men's use of the Prayer Book. In the street services, they were ready with appropriate prayers in the language of that book, with the contents of which they were thoroughly familiar. Another rector expressed his pleasure with the effectiveness of the men's appeal to children. In his parish they held an out-door service near a public school with an attendance of more than three hundred children.

Another rector spoke earnestly of the character of the Army men, all of them young men of ability, some of them college graduates, who could have secured and held positions of importance and responsibility; but content to endure hardship for the sake of giving their testimony to the power of the Gospel of Christ.

In one of the first places visited, a number of the clergy of near-by parishes came to look on, perhaps a little sceptical of the value of the Army's methods. Some of these observers afterwards invited the Army to their parishes.

In short, the testimony of the clergy of the parishes visited, so far as I have been able to get it, is all to the effect that the Army's work is of much value, its men of a fine type, its methods excellent, its visits stimulating and invigorating.

Building Activities on Long Island are increasing rapidly. In addition to those reported last week, we learn that St. Peter's, Bay Shore, the Rev. William R. Watson, rector, is building a new parish house, which is being rushed to completion, and will be the finest edifice in Suffolk County, when finished.

Admission Service.

On Sunday morning, July 17, five nurses were admitted to the Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses by the Rt. Rev. Campbell Gray, D. D. The admission service was held in Christ Church, Huntington, just preceding a Celebration of the Holy Communion, the Ven. H. R. White, Archdeacon of the Diocese, celebrant, and the sermon being preached by Bishop Gray. As this city is the location of the Huntington County Hospital, a branch of the Guild here is important. Miss Elizabeth Springer, Superintendent of Nurses, has done much to further the work of the Guild, and of the Church in general.

To a Picture in My Study.

That man of Galilee with drooping head
And pleading hand
Hath overcome my soul, and to Him led
By love's demand
I bow my knee, my deepest thoughts unsaid.

Hushed are the pleadings of my vulgar mind
That rushed to speak.
Aye, e'en the offer of my service blind
Is shamed and weak.
My gifts, my treasure store are left behind.

I do not fear! Ah No! I love Him there,
My heavenly Friend.
His bleeding wounds and cruel would I share,
His name defend,
The reeking oaths and cruel mockings dare.

Still do I silent wait, as waits the flower
At early morn
For sunlight stealing thro' the misty shower
To bud and thorn.
Oh wait, my soul, wait for His love and power!

O Jesus, look on me and hear my cry!
I would be free
From chains that hold me, mounting to the sky.
I give to Thee
My strength, my weakness, naught would I deny.

And from the silent figure into mine
Unheard, unseen,
Save for an holy confidence, true sign
Of love between,
His Spirit comes, and life is all divine.

Reverence: the Key to Religion.

Louis Deschamps.

It was a rainy Sunday evening. Dusk was falling, and the chill of approaching winter matched the chill of despondency in my heart. Disillusionment and doubt made me wonder why life's vanities and pleasures failed to satisfy, why weariness persisted even amid the glamor and music. Volumes of profound philosophy served only to deepen the mystery of life's paradoxical facts. Diversified interests and the round of work and amusement had only the temporary effect of an hour of mirth. Having laughed, dreamed, loved, and rejoiced much, yet I had also suffered much and thought deeply. The soul was tired, and sought a place to rest. I longed for a calm contemplation of life from some viewpoint different and clearer than any attitude of purely human understanding. It is difficult to attain that peace of the consciousness of being apart from and yet a part of life. What I sought was a communion with the Past, a faith in the Future, and a relief from the noise, speed, and dust of the Present. There was an almost mystic urge in my restlessness.

The street lights suddenly glowed through the mist of rain. My restless thoughts kept me walking, walking without apparent sense of direction. I felt desolate. A quick resume of my life, after all its work, joys, and sorrows, seemed to take the form of two grim words, separated by meaningless dates: Born....., Died..... The habitual routine of my daily work and life had seemed to pause, leaving me in a state of perplexity before the philosophical aspects of my life. Some strange presentment had startled me out of my normal complacency. There was a vague consciousness of being on the Outer Edge of things, yet the impulse to return to the old ruts was challenged by the lure of the unknown.

It happened that my walk had taken me to a large city church. It suddenly loomed out of the dusk like an apparition. Its lofty spire was lost in the mist. The tall columns suggested the pillars of an ancient temple, obscure in the dim fog of antiquity. The general impression was foreboding. My mind was assailed by ideas of stern judgment, Death, and relentless dogma. Then the memory of a pious person, long since passed beyond, made me recall that the Church is of God, its faults being the sins of mankind, not its own. Other approaches to God are casual, spasmodic, uncertain—the Church being the expressly built Temple of the Most High. A faint gleam of light was glowing through a window. It was over an hour before the evening service would begin. The high vaulted interior of the deserted church was dimly lighted by a single light from some fixture in the chancel. My glance fell on a large brass plate nearby. The words, "In Memoriam", seemed to echo the very thoughts that had been challenging my mind.

Reverence is indeed a gift of God. No cold philosophy could ever have brought the peace and comfort to my soul that the very atmosphere of that sacred place called forth in response to one reverent word of prayer. True reverence is primarily self-forgetfulness, a relinquishing of one's own conceits. Doubts and theories rack the mind, but reverent prayer alone satisfies the soul in mystic communion. As I stood with bowed head in an obscure corner of that church, while shadows hid the limits of the structure, I seemed to have attained at last the place apart, where life's din was hushed and its cares dispersed. Reverent, heart-felt prayer amid the sacred surroundings of the church brought a happiness alone surviving every condition, circumstance, and fate. I was like an unlettered seaman in the presence of the great Aurora Borealis. Years of study, supposedly exact sciences, learned philosophy, cynical disillusionment—all these were silent in the presence of the deep, universal, eternal Hymn of Life that only the soul can hear. Worship answered philosophy, service replied to ethics, love challenged cynicism.

"Imagination and emotion only!" exclaims a learned, though cynical, psychologist.

"The toys of a childish fancy!" laughs the atheist. Yet, if the experience was real to me, if its memory lasted through years of turbulent youth, if its convictions of God have given me real meaning to life, enabling me to see the beauty, truth, and holiness in spite of life's hideous tragedies . . . if my life is enriched because of this experience, the opinions of others are meaningless.

"Because I Tell You To."

He was about four, I should judge, and had come down-town with his mother on the street car. As they got off, he spied one of those machines that holds balls of gum, wrapped in black, red, and yellow. You deposit a cent, push a rod and—lo and behold! —as if by magic a ball of gum drops out into your hand. Can't you see how fascinating it might be to a child.

The little chap had rushed toward it, crying, "Mama, please give me a penny; I want some gum."

"No!" returned Mother, walking right along briskly.

Perforce her son had to follow, but tearfully he persisted, "Mama, can't I have just one?"

To which his mother replied brusquely, "I said, 'No'!" and started across the street, with the boy wailing lustily beside her.

Well, maybe Mother didn't have a penny, or possibly she didn't approve of the gum habit for small boys, or she might have been in a great hurry to accomplish her shopping and get back again. But just think back to the days when you were a child—what would such a short, brusque denial as, "I said 'No'!" have done to your emotions? Wouldn't you have felt injured and rebellious? Even now, with an adult consciousness, how do you react when some one makes a short, dogmatic statement, without proof, in refutation of your opinion? It doesn't "set well", does it?

My mother invariably when I pressed her as to an adequate reason for her insistence on my doing something I did not want to do said, "Because I tell you to". For her that ended the matter, and many a scolding I received because I sulked afterwards. But to my childish mind it did not seem a sufficient reason for having to do something that I disliked. Now, I would apply the word "arbitrary" to such a statement, and though my vocabulary did not then contain that word, my thought was the same.

I noticed another arbitrary mother on a street car the other day. She ordered her little daughter to come and sit by her. The child was sitting quietly right across the aisle, looking out of the window, and the car had few people in it. The child evidently enjoyed being alone—perhaps playing that she was going shopping by herself. Her brow clouded, and she asked, "Why, Mother"? I too, wondered, and then I heard, "Because I tell you to".

It seemed to me, privately, the only reason the mother could give—she was merely showing her authority in public. The little girl obeyed reluctantly, all her pleasure gone. Tears filled her brown eyes, and she cried softly until her mother threatened to punish her when they got home if she didn't "straighten up".

My sympathy was entirely with the child. None of us like to be ordered peremptorily to do things, and the stronger our personalities, the less we can endure it. Why not, then, be reasonable with the children? Don't deprive them of innocent pleasures for no real reason, and if you have a reason that the child has not appreciated, why not try to explain so that he will understand?

Children are becoming increasingly restive under any restraint, and the more rebellion they store up in their souls while they are little, the sooner they will break away from discipline in adolescent days. But even the tiny ones are surprisingly logical, and while they resent unfairness and arbitrariness, they appreciate justice and fairness quite as much.—Ethel Peterson.

"Switzerland."

The poem, "Switzerland", in our issue of July 9, was written by the Rev. Wm. P. Taylor, of the Diocese of Newark. It prefaces a novelette, "Solved—a World-Consolidation Formula", from which we quote the following significant thoughts:

"The Five-Formula:

1. The full staturing of every human, 2, his or her proper placement in the Kingdom, as revealed; 3, universal sympathy; 4, Respect for all points of view; 5, The open mind."

"As they walked and talked, a Kremlin church-bell, sounding through the air, brought from the one-time anarchist, these words: 'That will free Russia'."

"Do you agree with the asservation of an American clergyman that the world's richest conception of Christ is to come out of China? The reply was, 'Yes, and not only so, there are those in the field who have the intelligent conviction that real Christian unity will there first find practical demonstration and that, as an expression of the fullness of Christ'. China—from her mass-thinking and her devotion to tradition—will expand, coordinate, and complete the Christo-centric tendency such as that at present under way in India. Think of it! The 'West' shall thus again, gain from the 'East' the very Christ—the Christ of each man, that is, the Christ of India; and the Christ of the race, that is, the Christ of China (henceforth the thesis of Chinese Christianity). Yes, I see the Kingdom coming, as come it must. There can be no surprises or defects outside divine calculation. All has been provided for. 'I have overcome the world'. The groanings of the Orient are but the travail of earth's new-birth. God speed the day when His Son shall come to His own: the whole heart of each child of man and the heart of an ordered mankind!"

The True Sight.

There is much sorrow which would instantly be turned to joy if those who weep could see things as they really are. The loss of a friend is grieved over, but if we could follow the friend into the glory of heaven we should rejoice. The things we think are calamities and causes for sorrow, if we could see them as God sees them, would appear to be blessings. If Mary had found the body of Jesus in the tomb as she expected to do, it would have been cause for grief. The empty tomb at which she grieved was the reason for the world's hope. Mary did not recognize Jesus. How needless her sorrow was, for, if she had known Him, joy would have filled her heart. Is it otherwise with us in our times of fear? Jesus is beside us, even speaking to us, but we do not know it is He, nor do we hear His words of comfort. We grieve and let ourselves be crushed by our sorrows, not knowing that the sorrow is only the shadow of a great joy, and that what seems to us emptiness and loss is really the blessedness of heaven.—Evening Thoughts.

The Mountain-Born, Facing Blindness.

K. C. S.

I lift mine eyes up to the hills,
My poor, dim eyes that vainly try
To see familiar forms that stand
Outlined against the deep blue sky.

Born 'neath the shadow of those cliffs,
Encircled always by their strength,
I've toiled, with hope 'mongst them to rest,
When evening shadows fall at length.

Though now, through memory's glass alone
May I behold these pictures rare,
On brain and heart they're graven clear:
The hills that rise so fresh and fair.

The wooded summits, green and cool,
The fir crowned fastnesses so grim,
The mighty crags so stern and gray,
The distant ranges, blue and dim:

Rising at dawn from pearly mists,
Or bathed in noontide's fiercest light,
Purple against the sunset's gold,
Or sleeping under moonbeams white;

Through changing day and darkening night
The mountains stand, serene and tall,
With cloud-capped turrets, snow-clad towers,
A massive, strong, protecting wall.

No need for mountain-born to see
The dear loved country of his birth;
Antaeus like, he need but feel
The strengthening touch of Mother Earth.

When to the seer on Patmos came
The beatific vision grand,
Did he not see, all glorified,
His own beloved mountain land?

The heavenly city, shining high,
With gates of pearl and jeweled wall,
We, too, may view, when westering sun
Throws dying glory over all.

Through days of storm and stress and care,
Through nights of grief or nights of pain,
To lofty crests I've raised my eyes,
Nor ever failed new hope to gain.

And still to them mine eyes I lift,
Though strength may fail and sight may fade.
For patience, courage, light I look,
Above the hills, whence comes my aid.

Your Summer Opportunity.

One's vacation period, rather than being considered a release from service to the Church, should be esteemed a privilege for continued service. Not that we are to carry on the same work we do at home, but surely that we shall regularly attend the Church services and willingly accept opportunities that may come to encourage, help and support the Church in summer places and throughout the countryside. A writer in the Newark Churchman has visualized the vacation opportunity of Church people in a manner that challenges one's loyalty:

"Wherever our Church people go they ought to find out where our Church services are held and give a good example by attending them. In the smaller places they ought to give any encouragement in their power to the resident clergy or to those who have charge of the summer churches. The summer visitors who do not go to Church are often an injury to the parish and the dependable parishioners are glad when the summer visitor is gone. The summer visitors who go into the rural places and display their possessions and their manners do much mischief and show very bad taste, while those who show an interest in the little churches and quietly give a helping hand do much good. It becomes us all to take our religion with us wherever we go and make ourselves worth as much to the Church in summer as in winter."—St. Andrew's Cross.

Citizenship.

Citizenship is a much more considerable affair than registering and voting. It goes far beyond the taking out of naturalization papers to qualify as one of the body politic in the land of the brave and the free. Citizenship has a duty for every citizen, not simply on election day or in the primaries, but the whole year round; and it is a duty that is social and not merely political.

To be a good citizen is to be a good friend and neighbor. It is to manifest loyalty and integrity in business relations. Good citizenship acts to build up not alone the prosperity of a private concern, but the welfare of commerce and trade in general.

The good citizen, singly or corporately, pays his debts. He does not keep others waiting for the money they have earned and therefore own. He has an instinctive horror of borrowing without a definite and understood prospect of repayment.

He keeps his appointments. He respects the right of other men to the same consideration from him that he wants from them. He feels that as each man does his part, is true to his own trust, minds his own business, is responsible and reliable in his own person, the average level of credit and prestige for the whole community will rise.

Citizenship means a realization on the part of one man that all men are helped or hindered by his individual performance. The mean and discreditable things we do that count against us react on the rest as well.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

God's providence never places you where His grace cannot keep you.

When we despair, not only our compass, but our ship is gone.

For the Young Folks

The Man Born Blind.

He stood before the Sanhedrin;
The scowling rabbis gazed at Him;
He recked not of their praise or blame;
There was no fear, there was no shame;
For unto one upon whose eyes
The whole world poured its glad surprise
The open heaven was far too near,
His first day's sight too sweet and clear
To let him waste his new-earned ken
On the hate-clouded fear of men.
But still they questioned, "Who art thou?
Where was thou born? What art thou now?
Thou art not he who yesterday
Sat here and begged beside the way,
For he was blind". "And I am he;
For I was blind, but now I see".
He told the story o'er and o'er;
It was his full heart's only lore;
A prophet, on the Sabbath day,
Had touched his sightless eyes with clay,
And made him see, that had been blind.
Their words passed by him like the wind,
Which raves and howls, but cannot shock
The hundred-fathom-rooted rock.
Their threats and fury all went wide,
They could not touch his Hebrew pride;
Their sneers at Jesus and His band,
Nameless and homeless in the land,
All could not swerve him by one word.
"I know not what His name may be;
Sinner or saint, but as for me,
One thing I know—that I am he,
Who once was blind but now can see.'
They were all doctors of renown,
The great men of the famous town;
Their deep brows wrinkled, broad and wise,
Beneath their wide phylacteries;
The wisdom of the past was theirs,
And honor crowned their silver hairs.
The man they jeered and laughed to scorn
Was unlearned, poor, and humbly born;
But he knew better far than they
What came to him that Sabbath day;
And what the Christ had done for him—
He knew, and not the Sanhedrin.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

How to Serve Jesus.

M. L. G.

"What shall I do?" asked the rich young man. And Jesus told him to get rid of his burden of riches that he might be free to follow Him. So I think He would say to us, of whatever stands in the way of our walking with Him. If the young man's riches could have been used as Mary's ointment was used, to symbolize the gift of love to the Master, he could have kept them—they would have been poured out in service, hardly noticed save as they enabled the young man to serve, to follow, to give. But if, instead of serving, those riches demanded for themselves the service of that young man's heart, then they were no help, but a barrier, and his only hope lay in getting rid of them.

When we give ourselves, we must be given as one said, "Clean away to Jesus". Then His Spirit can possess us, our whole selves, soul and body. It is just a question of giving and meaning it, as He gave Himself to us and meant it, though it cost Him His life. We do it at our Baptism, and at Confirmation, and at every Communion Service, for ours is a living gift, and we need to renew it so that we may never forget Whose we are and Whom we serve. He does not demand it. He let the rich young man turn away sorrowful, though it left the Master more sorrowful still. It must be a free gift.

But if we do give ourselves we are like wires that have been connected with a great current of electricity. Power flows through us, not our own, but making us the way by which light and strength can be carried. All power in Heaven and Earth is His, and we are His! What can He not do with us His friends, if we will keep our hearts open to Him, in living touch with Him.

There is work enough to do. The Gospel is not carried yet into all the world. He was the Prince of Peace, but men are still at war. He wanted the children to come to Him, but ignorance and greed still hold them back. He prayed that His friends might be as one, but even in his Church there is strife and division.

Let none who calls Him Friend serve Him with less than a whole heart, that His Kingdom, which only our half-heartedness hinders may come at last!

The Happy Campers.

With eyes swimming in tears against which he manfully struggled Bobby Dick stumbled up the back steps and into the house. Coming into the room where his aunt sat in a low rocking-chair beside the geranium-filled window, darning stockings, he leaned against her comforting knee.

"What is the matter, sonny boy," she asked, laying down her sewing that she might stroke his soft curls.

In spite of his manful efforts, Bobby Kirk's chin began to quiver.

"The fel-fellows are playin' cowboy," he swallowed, "an-and they won't let me play."

Auntie's hand slid from Bobby Dick's hair to his shoulder, which she patted encouragingly.

"They won't?" she asked. "How is that, dear?"

"They say I don't look a cowboy, an-and anyway I haven't got any red bandana, and all cowboys have to have red bandanas."

"Dear me," exclaimed Auntie, "no red bandana! Well, never mind," she went on reassuringly. "Suppose you and I go out in the back yard, and make a fire and play we are campers."

A beam of sunshine broke over Bobby Dick's face, chasing away the tears. "Oh, Auntie!" he cried delightedly, "you do think of the bestest things!"

Busily they set to work building an oven with some old bricks and soon had a fire crackling cheerily within it.

"Bobby Dick," said Auntie, as she bustled about, "you run into the house and get some potatoes, some onions, and that half box of bacon. Jane will give them to you."

As Bobby Dick, with arms piled high, returned from his errand one of the cowboys, riding his steed at a furious pace down the alley, caught sight of him. Passing, he peered through the panels of the gate. "What you doing?" he asked.

"Playing campers," shouted Bobby Dick as he dumped his burden beside the oven and hastened after more sticks.

With nose thrust between the palings, the rider watched with eager interest. At last he edged into the yard. "Say," he asked, "can I play campers?"

"Certainly," came Auntie's hearty reply, and, dropping his stick, the boy set to work with a will on peeling potatoes.

A second boy astride a stick horse came to a sudden halt as he appeared around the corner of the house. Wistfully he stood gazing upon the happy campers about the fire.

"Oh, Jack!" cried Bobby Dick, catching sight of him, "we're having such fun! Don't you want to come and play?"

Jack needed no second invitation, but rushed eagerly forward to join in the game.

"Dear me," cried Auntie, "we have forgotten the bread! Jack," she added, "suppose you run in the house and ask Jane for a loaf of bread."

My, how busy they were! And how good the smell of the frying bacon, onions, and potatoes! Drawn by this appetizing odor, one by one the rest of the cowboys abandoned their horses to join the campers.

Auntie cut the bread, piling each slice high with bacon, onions, and potatoes, and Bobby Dick passed them around.

"This is lots more fun than playing cowboy," said one of the boys as he reached for his slice. "How did you ever think of it, Bobby Dick?" and he gazed admiringly at the curly-headed lad, who, to his shame, looked nothing like a cowboy and who, alas! possessed no red bandana.

"Auntie thought of it," cried Bobbie Dick, smiling joyfully up at his auntie as she passed on her way into the house to glance over the happy group, "she always thinks of the bestest things!"

The Lost Package.

As Robert whizzed around the corner of the cement sidewalk on his roller skates he saw a square parcel lying in the weeds.

"Oh! Look here! A package in the weeds!" he cried suddenly, bracing himself for a sharp turn.

"I see it," answered Clifford, and managed to come to an abrupt halt. Eagerly he picked up the square box. "It's mine! I picked it up first," he claimed, opening the package. It contained a brand-new baseball mitt.

"No, sir! That glove belongs to me. I saw it first!" asserted Robert stoutly.

"I say it's mine. Finders are keepers," insisted Clifford, beginning to skate away with the article.

Robert's face covered with an angry frown. "Well, if you're that kind of a boy, you needn't go with us on the hike to Haystack Mountain tomorrow," he called after the other boy.

Clifford did not answer, but skated rapidly away, the package under his arm. He was thinking of the fun he would have with the new mitt. A new baseball nine had just been formed and he was the catcher. The glove would certainly come in handy. And he surely had picked it up first. He couldn't see why Robert should have a right to it.

As he skated slowly past a tall hedge, he heard voices on the other side. They were girls' voices; so Clifford thought he wasn't interested in what they were saying. Anyway, he didn't want to be an eavesdropper. But one of the voices sounded tearful. A few words, choked and muffled, reached the boy's ears. He stood still a moment; then with a quick jerk he grasped the glove tightly under his arm and skated briskly away. "This glove is mine!" he muttered gruffly. "Anyway, I picked it up. Rob only looked at it."

The next day was just the kind for a hike in the mountains. Haystack was a huge elevation on the upper part of a farm belonging to Robert's uncle. From the summit one could get a wonderful view of the surrounding country. Robert had been up there the summer before, with his uncle, and he had learned many curious things about it.

There were to be four in the party; besides Robert and Clifford, Jean, Robert's sister, was going. Then Jean had invited her chum Marian, and altogether a good time seemed ahead. They planned to stop on the mountain somewhere for a weiner roast, about five o'clock.

As the party reached the foot of the oddly shape dmountain—it looked like an immense haystack—Clifford was not present.

"We won't wait for him," announced Robert abruptly. "To tell the exact truth, I don't care if he comes or not."

"Why, Robert, I thought you were a good friend of Clifford's," reproached Jean, a soft-eyed girl of eleven.

"Well, I'm not his friend any more, and he knows why, too!" declared Robert, the dark frown appearing once again on his usually pleasant face.

"It's too bad you boys have to quarrel over nothing, and on your birthday, too," said Jean soberly. Then she seemed to remember something, and a worried look beclouded her face.

"Well, I have reason enough," began Robert grumblingly.

Just then they heard running feet behind them.

"Why, there comes Clifford now!" exclaimed Marion.

Sure enough the boy was sprinting along at top speed, a package under his arm.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Jean. "Clifford always helps us to have a good time."

Robert said nothing, but pretended to look at the mountain in front of them.

Clifford came up breathlessly, his face a glowing red from his violent exercise.

"What made you late?" demanded Jean as the boy slowed down beside them.

Clifford laughed mysteriously. "Can't tell you, Miss Question-box," he laughed good-naturedly. "Say, Robert, I got some dandy weiners for our roast," he said.

But Robert would not answer. He plodded steadily onward up by the winding trail. He couldn't forget so quickly. Of course, the reason Clifford was feeling so good was very plain, the glove was in his possession. But it didn't really belong to him, and he knew it.

Clifford hesitated a moment. He was about to tell Robert something; but just then Jean gave a little cry.

"Just look at those wonderful rocks up there by that clump of trees! Let's see which one can reach them first."

With shouts they all started off. Clifford, however, took a short cut and was seen several yards ahead. At that moment a queer rumble was heard from above. Robert and the girls paused to see what caused the strange sound. Clifford was racing ahead.

"That's only thunder," he shouted. "I'm going to beat you!"

But the sound was not thunder. In a moment small stones and soil began to tumble down, followed by larger boulders and more soil.

"It's a landslide!" cried Robert warningly. "Come back!" he cried, for Clifford was right in the path of the falling rocks.

Clifford saw his danger too late to return. He must hurry on to get out of the way. Abruptly he changed his course and ran to one side of the landslide.

Robert was in despair. He knew Clifford could not go far that way. He would soon reach the edge of a sharp bluff, where he must halt. If the rocks continued to fall he could not get out of their path. He would be helpless

Jean and Marian cowered to one side under the shelter of a single pine tree. "What shall we do to help him?" moaned Jean in terror. Marian clasped her tightly as she stared at the boy on the other side of the slide. He had turned to them a pale, frightened face, for he had reached the bluff and knew now he could go no farther.

Robert was looking at him desperately. After all, Clifford was his friend. He must help him if he could. But how?

Then suddenly Robert remembered the trip he and his uncle had made up this very part of the mountain. The old Indian passageway! He strained his eyes upward. Yes, there was the very clump of bushes concealing the opening. His uncle had shown him how cleverly the Indians had concealed the mouth of the narrow corridor from their foes.

Quickly Robert made up his mind. He turned to the trembling girls. "Now don't be afraid. I'm going to help Clifford. I'll be careful, but I must go, or he may be hit by some of those large rocks if he stands there much longer, and knocked off the bluff. You girls stay right here under this tree."

He narrowly missed the falling rocks. Now there was a lull. With a bound Robert tore across the path of the slide. In a moment he was on the other side, racing toward Clifford.

"Come on with me," he shouted as he grasped the arm of the bewildered boy.

Together they struggled up the mountainside, dodging rocks and other flying missiles as they went.

"We're making for those bushes," gasped Robert, pointing upward.

"Yes, I see," answered Clifford, straining to follow.

A minute later the two boys reached the friendly bushes. Robert pulled them roughly aside. The opening loomed up black and forbidding.

"It's all right," cried Robert. "I've been here before." He dashed inside, followed hurriedly by Clifford, just as a huge rock bounded heavily over them.

"We're safe, but we've had a close call, all right!" panted Robert, as he sank down on a rock.

Clifford looked at his companion. "Where are we, anyway?" he asked curiously.

"Why, this is an old Indian passageway," Robert assured him. "It's hundreds of years old, my uncle told me. It leads right through the mountain here. This is only a narrow bluff. We'll be safe on the other side and can soon reach the top from a trail leading from the exit."

Clifford was silent a moment. "Before we go on, I want to tell you something, Bob," he said. "I didn't keep the glove after all. I left it at your house this morning. That was why I was late getting here."

Robert looked at him in complete surprise. "You didn't keep it!" he echoed.

"No. It's at your house now. I heard your sister crying because she had lost it and it was to be your birthday present, she said," went on Clifford slowly. "But I didn't intend to keep it, anyway, for you saw it first. I decided I had no right to it, after all."

"Shucks!" cried Robert warmly. "I guess you can use that glove whenever you want to, Cliff. Come on, let's get out of here and wave to the girls from the top. Then they can come on, for the slide must be over now."

The two boys scrambled through the long narrow cavern and quickly reached the exit on the other side. It, too, was covered with concealing bushes. In a few minutes they had reached the top of the trail and were waving to the astonished girls from the summit of Haystack.

"Come up, and we'll have our weiner roast up here," they called lustily.

As the happy girls began climbing the boys built the fire among some round stones.

"It'll take more than baseball mitts to make enemies out of us, won't it?" said Robert, as he blew on the tiny flame.

"Yes, and I don't think I'll ever believe finders are keepers again," answered Clifford, untying the package of wieners which would soon be sizzling on the hot, clean rocks.

When the girls reached the scene of the roast, the boys were spearing wieners with peaked sticks ready to hand to them.

"Come on and have one," they offered. "Then we want to show you the Indian passageway we came through."

Eagerly the girls listened to the tale of the curious cavern, quite ready to explore it.

Then Clifford interrupted shortly: "Don't worry any more about the glove, Jean. It's at your house now. I left it there."

Jean's face became radiant. "Clifford, you're the best boy I know, next to Robert."

And Clifford felt quite rewarded for the loss of the mitt.—Junior World.

Golden Wings Is Saved by Mr. Thumpety-Bump.

Early one bright morning Golden Wings was sitting on the front porch of her little green house looking out over the daisy field. Pretty soon she heard a big noise—zo-o-o-on—like an aeroplane. It was Mr. Thumpety-Bump, the beetle. Now, Mr. Thumpety-Bump is so awkward in his movement that he bumped right into Golden Wing's house and fell down on his back right before her. When Golden Wings saw his funny efforts to right himself she began to laugh and said, "Well, if I couldn't fly any better than that, I'd quit. Just watch me". Then she spread her golden wings and floated gracefully out across the daisy field.

But as she flew she was thinking about her pretty wings and how gracefully she could fly, and not watching where she was going. And what do you think? She flew right into a big web that a hungry spider had made the night before. The tiny threads of the web became so wrapped around her pretty wings and body that she could not get away.

Then she heard the hungry spider coming out of his house. He began to climb up the web to where Golden Wings was, and soon he was close enough for her to see his hungry eyes and ugly mouth. She was terribly frightened and began to wonder if, when the spider had eaten her, her little friends of the daisy field would ever know what became of her.

But just then Mr. Thumpety-Bump, who had kicked himself straight again, came flying along. And before he knew it, he had bumped right into the web where Golden Wings was. But he was so big and strong the threads could not hold his wings. He tore the web to pieces and set Golden Wings free.

After that Golden Wings never laughed at Mr. Thumpety-Bump's awkward movements any more.

IN MEMORIAM.

Miss Mary Kennon Scott.

On July 13, 1926, the saintly MARY KENNON SCOTT entered into the rest that remaineth for the children of God at her home at Manakin, Powhatan County, Virginia, and though a year has passed since her passing she is still greatly loved, missed and mourned. She was born at and lived on Manakin Plantation, one of the old and great estates of the James River Valley, which has been owned and occupied by her people since 1727, when Mr. Edward Scott came to Powhatan County and became a member of the Vestry of King William Parish. Her ancestor, Captain John Scott ,had settled in New Kent County and became a member of the vestry of St. Peter's Parish, in 1703, after which some of the family came to Powhatan County and others went to Albemarle County and established Scotland Plantation and the town of Scottsville. These Scotts have been members of and vestrymen of the Church ever since.

Miss Mary K. Scott's father was Edward Scott and her mother was Mary Kennon Scott, a descendant of Princess Pocahontas tehrough the Bollings and her mother died when she was but a week old. She was educated at private schools in Virginia and took the profession of teaching and taught in private and public schools in South Carolina, Maryland and Virginia with great success. She was an admirable teacher, a great reader and highly cultured. She also taught music and was an excellent musician in both instrumental and vocal music. In 1906 she took up the study of stenography and became a professor of stenography and taught it for seven years at the Virginia College in Roanoke, Va.

She had a reputation as a beauty in her young womanhood and never lost it —being to the end a Christian gentlewoman of great charm of mind and manner, always cheerful, unselfish, generous, charitable in her judgments, interested in others, active in every good work and concerned with public affairs. Her greatest love and devotion was old Manakin Church, established in 1700, and located on Manakin Plantation. Her funeral was held within its walls and she was buried in its church yard.

She left four brothers, C. Selden, John L., Robert H. and Samuel Scott, and one sister, Miss Lucie Beverley Scott, all of Powhatan County. Her departure is a great loss to her family and a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She was ever popular and greatly beloved and this consistent and earnest Church woman, though gone, will not be forgotten.

Camp Capers.

The Episcopal Church Camp, Ellison Capers, was held at Brevard, June 18 to July 1.

One hundred and ninety-two campers were registered this year, and of these thirty-three came from Charleston, and about half from the lower diocese.

Counsellors and Campers are agreed that this year's camp was the best that the joint dioceses have held yet, and already some of the members are looking forward to the 1928 camp.

Chapel For Rice Institute, Houston.

Mrs. Edwin L. Neville, of Houston, has given a chapel in memory of her brother, Edward Albert Palmer, as the second unit in a comprehensive plan of work for the 1,400 students and professors of Rice Institute at Houston.

The first unit of this plan is the Autry House, built six years ago under the administration of the Rev. Harris Masterson, Jr. The building of the Palmer Chapel marks the close of the first year's work of the Rev. Francis M. Osborne, the present rector of Autry House. The chapel will be finished in November, when Autry House will be the social and Palmer Chapel the religious center of Rice Institute students and professors, all under Mr. Osborne's direction.

The building will be of masonry construction throughout and consists of chapel, tower, and cloister. The chapel will be given, completely furnished, at a total cost of $100,000.

Heaven over-arches earth and sea,
Earth-sadness and sea-bitterness,
Heaven over-arches you and me,
A little while and we shall be—
Please God, where there is no more sea,
No barren wilderness.

Heaven over-arches you and me,
And all earth's gardens and her graves
Look up with me, until we see
The daybreak and the shadow flee;
What though tonight wrecks you and me
If so tomorrow saves?

I often think that the best-spent minute in a man's life may be that on which he says to our Lord: "Please go with me" before he starts out to his day's work. Revolutions slumber in that simple petition.

A MODERN CLASSIC AGAINST MODERNISM

The LEAVEN of the SADDUCEES

By ERNEST GORDON

"The greatest broadside against Liberalism that has been put out in this generation"

An indictment of modernism on grounds of moral obliquity. . . . An interesting and important exhibit in the present controversy.—Chicago Evening Post (Literary Review).

I have read, marked and partially digested The Leaven of the Sadducees. This is grace after meat. . . . Every statement is backed. . . . The Sadducee, like the snail, destroys the leaves of healing from the under side, hiding and gnawing.—Dr. O. Z. Gifford.

The Leaven of the Sadducees is a startling exposure of Unitarian designs on the evangelical churches of the United States. I think that all of us who have the ear of the public should seek to promote its wide circulation. If the facts which it contains are brought to the attention of the evangelical churches I believe they will be aroused to the most vigorous opposition to all these betrayers of trust.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, M. E. Church, South.

The most complete and convincing setting forth of the essential facts in the case of evangelical Christianity versus Modernism. . . . The saying, "the best defense is a rapid fire," is shown to be preeminently true by The Leaven of the Sadducees. I commend the book and bespeak for it the widest circulation.—W. Phillips Hall, President of the American Tract Society.

Written especially for the information of Ministers, Trustees of institutions, Fundamentalist leaders, Editors of the religious press, Teachers in seminaries, training schools, and colleges; and Christian laymen who are not informed of the real situation.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

Who conquers indolence will conquer all the rest.—Zimmerman.

'Tis looking downward makes one dizzy.—Browning.

"The greatest of faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none."—Carlyle.

There is not a young life under the sun but what may wisely go down upon its knees and pray, "O Lord, make me loyal".

Every child comes into the world with the messages that God does not yet despair of man.—Rabindranath Tagore.

No service in itself is small,
None great, though earth it fill;
But that is small that seeks its own,
And great that seeks God's will.

The Transfiguration has shed its light upon all ages. A glimpse of the divine beauty has broken through the darkness and has cheered the humblest pilgrim.—F. D. Maurice.

Better be cold than assume to feel. In truth, nothing is so cold as an assumed, nosy enthusiasm. Its best emblem is the northern blast of winter, which freezes as it roars.—Channing.

Missions is a drive against localism, which is clean against the spirit of Christianity. The greatness of the missionary task will force the Church to close its ranks and seek divine power. —J. R. Mott.

There are two good rules which ought to be written on every heart. Never believe anything bad about anybody unless you positively know it is true. Never tell even that unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary and that God is listening while you tell it.—Henry Van Dyke.

Such help as we can give each other in this world is a debt to each other, and the man who perceives a superiority or capacity in a subordinate, and neither confesses it nor assists it, is not merely a withholder of a kindness, but the committer of injury.—Ruskin.

How calm and sweet the hour
When Christ to us doth speak!
We walk as His disciples walked,
As still His face we seek.
His voice we inly hear,
Our hearts within us burn,
His risen power He tells
And we His will discern.
—E. C. Bacon.

Our Christian religion is something for daily application and experience. It is not something to be resorted to in an emergency; not something to fall back upon in times of dire distress. On the contrary, it is a sustaining and tranquilizing influence to help out all along the way. It is required that the believer shall "grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ". This development should be from day to day.

EDITORIALS

Vol. 92. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 6, 1927. No. 32.

BISHOP WILLIAM CABELL BROWN

How impossible it seems to realize what has come so suddenly to us, that our great Bishop Brown is gone. For certainly he was a great bishop and a great Christian. As a missionary, as a scholar, as an educator, as a wise and courageous executive, as a leader in the councils of the Church, he was surely a worthy successor to the stately line of Virginia bishops.

But to some of us, he was great in another way—in the sincerity and loyalty of his thoughtful friendship.

His career was in many ways unusual. Going immediately on graduation from the Virginia Seminary to our Mission in Southern Brazil, spending some twenty years, the very heart of his active ministry, in that country, and then called to assist Bishop Gibson in the Virginia Episcopate, he rapidly came to occupy an outstanding place of leadership in the general Church. It was a fine testimony to the conspicuous abilities and the gracious and forceful personality of this attractive man.

As presiding officer of the House of Bishops, a most difficult post, Dr. Brown gave proof of these qualities that his fellow-workers in Brazil knew well were his, a calm and yet loving firmness and decision, and an unruffled patience and good temper. In his responsible position as assessor to Bishop Murray, the President of the National Council, Bishop Brown has rendered great service, and will be sorely missed.

But, perhaps, the service to the great Cause of the Kingdom, which was most characteristic of the man (though, of course, the present writer cannot claim in this to be entirely impartial), was what he was given to do as one of the founders and guiding spirits of our Mission in Brazil. He himself confessed that he looked back upon that unique, constructive work as that which gave him most satisfaction. He left a part of his very self in dear Southern Brazil.

In Brazil today, especially in beautiful Rio Grande do Sul, Dr. Brown's name is a household word; his praise is in all those simple churches. In many an humble home, in remote and primitive ranches out on the sweeping, billowy plains of Rio Grande, at the gathering of the family in simple fashion to erect the family altar, and to offer the heart incense of prayer and praise, those who claim him as their spiritual father, will thank God for him, sorrowing that they shall see his face no more in this life. A goodly number of godly preachers of the Word and dispensers of the Sacraments of redemption and life, men who for more than twenty years have exercised lovingly the ministry of reconciliation, speak of Dr. Brown as the Master—the wisest and most loving teacher of sacred truth that men ever had. The whole constitution and laws of that bright young Brazilian Church bear the stamp of his judicial and temperate mind. The cry for years throughout the Rio Grande has been, "Oh, when is Bishop Brown coming to visit his sons and daughters in the faith, as he promised to do"?

Alas, that promise may not now be realized, and we and they must await the "greetings on Canaan's happy shore

> "The knitting of severed friendships up
> Where partings are no more!' '

The constructive work of outstanding importance rendered by Dr. Brown to all the Churches in Brazil, was that in connection with the making of a new version of the Scriptures in Portuguese, and the translation into the same language of the Book of Common Prayer. In this work, of course, Dr. Brown had able co-workers; but on account of his exceptional preparation in Greek and Hebrew, as well as of his profound knowledge of the Portuguese language, he was given a leading part. In connection with this, it may be said that his command of Portuguese was so excellent that it was said by many, that in his speech and pronunciation he could scarcely be distinguished from a native Brazilian.

I need not speak of Bishop Brown's devoted dedication to the best interests of the Diocese of Virginia. Those more conversant with the facts, must tell of his brave insistence upon what he felt convinced to be for the good of the Church.

These lines are written by one who was privileged to know this admirable man in the intimacy that comes to close workers in a strange land—a comradeship that has no fellow. They are written with a poignant sense of personal loss. Our prayer is that God will graciously minister His tenderest consolations to our brother's dear ones. May his loyalty to the divine Master, a loyalty that saved him from losing patience or hope in the face of many perplexing and disappointing problems, in the midst of much disquieting questionings and challengings of primal and precious truths; may that same loyalty to Him who is the same yesterday and today and forever, be ours and enable us to hold fast the profession of faith without wavering. He that promised is faithful, and will raise up many of like mind to cleanse and defend His Church.

James W. Morris.

SUPERSTITIONS

Human reason separated from Faith and Love is the treacherous foe of both. Worship of it, acceptance of its supremacy and sufficiency, is the most debased, debasing and ridiculous of all superstitions, more exactly contrary than any other superstition to the plain commonsense of the plain people and the known facts. Savages in the wilds of Africa worshipping grotesque images were far more intelligent and worthy of respect than highly cultured Paris in 1793, worshipping, with bestial blasphemies and drunken ceremonial, a dissolute woman as goddess of Reason. The Negroes had learned from what they saw and felt that there was a power higher, stronger and wiser than they and sought to propitiate its favor. Paris, under teaching of apostles of Reason, glorified itself as final judge of right and wrong and maker of destiny and, with unconscious fitness, chose shameless and sordid dregs of humanity as representatives of its creed. That age of Reason, with its comedy and tragedy equally hideous and fantastic, lasted seven months, according to Carlyle. It is revived now in virulent form in Russia, in more or less cowardly and time serving disguises and equivocations in this country and elsewhere, in our schools, colleges and universities, magazines and newspapers, even in our churches. It asserts itself, blatantly and boastfully or with the feeble cunning of the consciously wrong and weak as "Liberal", "advanced", "broad", "progressive", while seeking to inculcate the narrowest and meanest of all bigotries and to lead us back to the darkness that shadowed the world before the light shone on the plain and the star glittered over Bethlehem.

Human reason has stoned the prophets from the beginning. Each onward step humanity has made has been a triumph of Faith and Vision and Love over worldly wisdom, over the reasoning of the profound scholars and the heavy thinkers, from the building of the ark to Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic. Human thought has obstructed human progress continually. Most of what has been done to increase the power and promote the welfare and happiness of our race has been by valiant defiance of the precepts of Reason, by achievement of what Reason taught was impossible, or after long mistakes and infinities of blunders, frequently by what we call accidents.

Proclaiming contempt for precedent and monopoly of the higher realms of thought, the slaves of Reason fetter themselves to what has been and is, bind themselves tightly to the material, stifle their souls, blindfold their spiritual eyes. Living, as all of us do, among miracles and mysteries and the inconceivable and the living, ever present evidences of creative and directing Power, they make ludicrous pretense of knowing all they insist that there can be nothing beyond the range of our knowledge, that nothing that has not been done by human means can be done, ignoring the constant recurrence of the undreamed of and impossible of last year, the familiar commonplaces of this. Rejecting the Bible, they give guesses based on glimpses of the past of our race and of whence and how we have come. The boldest of them does not dare predict what will happen tomorrow, aside from the ordinary orderly courses of nature, but they tell us that we came from pulp formed in stagnant sea water and must go presently to extinction, that the flesh that will be rotting food for worms is all there is of us. Asserting stern allegiance to logic, they are ludicrously illogical. The indisputable logic of Reason is absolute, narrow selfishness, isolation from all emotions, desires, hopes, purposes, outside demands of our own pleasure. Endurance of the pain and danger of child-birth and love of women for the children they bear, the love for country and cause that urges men to offer their lives for either, are directly opposed by Reason, which tells us that we are at the ultimate and have no obligations but to ourselves, no duty but to get through this life as comfortably as we may. Russia's rulers are trying now to put into operation this philosophy of Reason, making the wives and daughters public property, abolishing the home along with the Church, taking the babies from their mothers to be trained by the government to idolatry of Reason. Yet we are told that Reason is to contradict its own lessons and develop universal brotherhood. The primal, savage instinct for destruction is enlisted for reconstruction and the reign of Reason. Shrieking exultantly that we have no hope beyond this little life and no responsibility to any but ourselves, we are to develop universal fraternity and altruism.

History tells results. The few years of Christ's life made what we may call the reign of the inward trinity, Love, Faith, Reason. The years of the French Revolution gave us the rule of Reason alone. The Christ time climaxed on the Cross in agony and in establishment of beneficent dominion over the world, continuing to increase after nineteen centuries. The reign of Reason, drenched with blood of innocent and evil alike, each moment of it a new horror and crime, collapsed with the whiff of grapeshot and developed Napoleon. That chief product and highest priest of Reason led hundreds of thousands of men to slaughter and be slaughtered for his ambitions. His one hope at Waterloo was in the unreasoning Love and Faith he had won and did not deserve and his reasoning and planning landed him on St. Helena. The Saviour, meekly yielding His life, made consolation and hope and happiness for countless millions of all generations, living balm for bruised and stricken hearts, endless help and strength for the weary and heavy laden.

Worshippers of Reason continue to worship. They can not grasp conceptions of eternity, of infinity, of the space into which we look, of the beginning of things. They cannot explain how, nor why ants and bees and birds go home without landmark or guide, nor the unseen but all pervading power that holds the needle point to the North. They can not show the principle or place of life in a grain of mustard seed, a microbe, or an elephant. Yet, they assert final and complete knowledge, brand as superstition faith in the supernatural, belief in the testimony of eye-witnesses of the resurrection, confidence in a future beyond this life.

And Faith and Love live to sweeten and glorify the life here, to give happiness to humanity, to carry light and hope into dark places, serenely consigning to contempt and impotence the pitiful superstition of Reason worship. Then, when the call comes, the soul holding this trinity of Divine gifts flies on sure wing, straight as the homing bird, over all mountains of doubt, over sombre forests of fears, through the valley of the shadow and across the river—to home and everlasting rest and peace, contentment never to be disturbed.

Alfred B. Williams.

To love God is to love His character. For instance, God is purity; and to be pure in thought and look, to turn away from unhallowed books and conversations, to abhor the moments in which we have not been pure, is to love God. God is Love; and to love others till private attachments have expanded into a philanthropy which embraces all at last—even the evils and enemies—with compassion, that is to love God. God is truth; to be true, to hate every form of falsehood, to live a brave, true, real life—that is to love God.—F. W. Robertson.

WHAT IS FUNDAMENTALISM?

By the Reverend W. B. Riley, D. D.

DAILY newspapers often employ queer reporters. The man who is often interviewed must, almost as often, ask himself the question, "What are the requirements by which newspaper reporters are adjudged and employed"? They range all the way from ignorance to education, from dullness to keenness, from men of matchless tact to insufferable boors, and the daily press reflects that fact.

Leading magazines commonly voice writers of talent, but they have a strange method of treating mooted questions. Either they propose to employ only the pens that harmonize with editorial prejudice, or they give place to the opinionated who enjoy a peculiar literary pull. What could be more strange than the magazine course concerning "the war in the churches", or the fight between fundamentalism and modernism?

A dozen years ago, a great layman, Lyman Stewart of Los Angeles, placed in the hands of a competent committee a fund of $300,000, requesting that the same be used to publish a series of books dealing with the Christian fundamentals, and that the entire Protestant ministry of the world be made a present of the same. The inspiration for this undertaking Lyman Stewart received as he listened to a great sermon from the lips of Dr. A. C. Dixon, then pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, England. The publication and distribution of this series had been completed when Dixon and this writer were thrown together for days in the Montrose, Pa., Bible Conference. After long periods of prayer and conference, we agreed together to call the initial meeting that brought into existence "The World's Christian Fundamentals Association".

In its first meeting the last week of May, 1919, in Music Hall, Philadelphia, over sixty-five hundred fundamentalists gathered from different states, provinces and continents. Additional auditoriums had to be employed to accommodate the crowds, and at the end of that week the organization was a completed fact, and a volume, "God Hath Spoken", was ready for the press and the Fundamentalist movement was a new-born infant, but a lusty and promising one. The frontispiece of the volume reporting that convention week, carries the pictures of Dr. George E. Guille, Extension Worker of the Moody Bible Institute, Dr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, president and founder of the Dallas, Texas, Theological Seminary; Dr. A. B. Winchester, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto; Dr. Reuben A. Torrey, then dean of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles; Paul Rader, then pastor of the Moody Tabernacle, Chicago; Dr. J. C. Massee, pastor of the Tremont Temple, Boston; Dr. C. I. Scofield, editor of the Scofield Reference Bible, and famous scholar; Prof. W. H. Griffith Thomas, of Wycliffe College, Toronto; Dr. Wm. L. Pettingill, dean of the Philadelphia School of the Bible; Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York City; Dr. L. W. Munhall, author and editor of The Eastern Methodist; Dr. I. M. Haldeman, pastor of the First Baptist Church, New York City; President Joseph Kyle, of Xenia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, Missouri; Dr. P. W. PhilPott, then of the Gospel Tabernacle, Hamilton, Ontario; Dr. George McNeely, pastor of the Elizabeth Avenue Baptist Church, Newark, N. J.; Charles M. Alexander, the world famous singer and president of the Pocket Testament League, and the writer, W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Minneapolis, founder and president of the Northwestern Bible College. And yet, will you believe it, in all the magazine discussions of the last nine years, not one of these men, all of whom are still alive save Prof. W. H. Griffith Thomas and President Joseph Kyle, has ever been requested by a leading magazine in America to give, through its columns to the public, either a definition or a defense of fundamentalism. On the contrary, they have sought men to speak to this subject whose names are unknown to our circle and have never appeared on our membership list, and have palmed these off upon their readers as the exponents and even mouthpieces of fundamentalism itself.

The result has been that such writers as Rollin Lynde Hartt, confessedly a liberal, and even Harbor Allen, publicity director of the American Civil Liberties Union, our ardent enemy, have come more nearly to giving to the public some fair view of fundamentalism than have its professed, but unknown and almost unheard-of, magazine friends.

If the men prominent in this movement had not been men of the highest literary and scientific attainment, there would be some excuse for this strange course of the discussion. But in view of their outstanding eminence, it is up to the secular magazine world to make its own explanation.

When Luke sat down to write the gospel that bears his name, he said by way of introduction, "Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us . . . It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write . . . That thou mightest know the certainty of those things" (Luke 1:1, 3, 4).

That is, at least, one justification of my discussion of this subject. I have had to do with the movement from its inception, and speak now from eleven years' thought, observation and participation, for while this is our Ninth Annual Convention, it is eleven years since Dr. A. C. Dixon and myself formulated in our own minds and got ready to put before our fellow-believers the plans that produced the World's Christian Fundamentals Association.

To the question, then, "What Is Fundamentalism"?

It would be quite impossible, within the limits of a single discourse or article, to so treat the subject as to satisfy all interested parties. There are too many features of this Christian faith for one to attempt a delineation. But there are at least three major propositions that must appear in any adequate reply, and they are these: It is the Christian Creed, It is the Christian Character, It is the Christian Commission.

It Is the Christian Creed.

Fundamentalism undertakes to reaffirm the greater Christian doctrines. Mark this phrase, "the greater Christian doctrines". It does not attempt to set forth every Christian doctrine. It has never known the elaboration that characterizes the great denominational confessions. But it did lay them side by side, and, out of their extensive statements, elect nine points upon which to rest its claims to Christian attention. They were and are as follows:

I. We believe in the Scriptures of the old and New Testaments as verbally inspired of God, and interrant in the original writings, and that they are of supreme and final authority in faith and life.

II. We believe in one God, eternally existing in three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

III. We believe that Jesus Christ was begotten by the Holy Spirit, and born of the Virgin Mary, and is true God and true man.

IV. We believe that man was created in the image of God, that he sinned and thereby incurred not only physical death but also that spiritual death which is separation from God; and that all human beings are born with a sinful nature, and, in the case of those who reach moral responsibility, become sinners in thought, word and deed.

V. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures as a representative and substitutionary sacrifice; and that all that believe in Him are justified on the ground of His shed blood.

VI. We believe in the resurrection of the crucified body of our Lord, in His ascension into heaven, and in His present life there for us, as High Priest and Advocate.

VII. We believe in "that blessed hope", the personal, premillennial and imminent return of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

VIII. We believe that all who receive by faith the Lord Jesus Christ are born again of the Holy Spirit and thereby become children of God.

IX. We believe in the bodily resurrection of the just and the unjust, the everlasting felicity of the saved and the everlasting conscious suffering of the lost.

It would seem absolutely clear, therefore, that many of the liberal writers of recent years have never taken the pains to ask for the basis of our belief. Had it been so, an Old World writer could not have said of us that we held to "a flat earth", to "an immovable world", to "the circulation of the sun, moon and stars around the same every twenty-four hours", to "a canopy or roof overhead", and some New World text-book producers would not have been willing to assail immature student minds with similar absurd sentences.

This charge of ignorance in realms of science against the leaders of fundamentalism has about as much basis of truth as did the statement from the University professor that the author of the Tennessee anti-evolution bill had, upon learning that the Bible was not made in heaven and dropped down, expressed his regret that he ever wrote or advocated the passing of the bill.

Modernism, when it comes to deal with the fundamentals movement is suddenly possessed with a strange imagination, and if you want to know what the movement is not and who its leaders are not, read its descriptions of both. Certainly as to what we believe, the above declaration leaves no doubt, and only the man ignorant of the Bible, or utterly indifferent to its teachings, could ever call into question that these nine points constitute the greater essentials in the New Testament doctrinal system.

Fundamentalism insists upon the plain intent of Scripture speech. The members of this movement have no sympathy whatever for that weasel method of sucking the meaning out of words and then presenting the empty shells with an attempt to palm them off, as giving the Christian faith a new and another interpretation. The absurdities to which such a spiritualizing method may lead are fully revealed in the writings of Mary Baker Eddy and modernists in general.

When one is permitted to discard established and scientific definitions and to create, at will, his own glossary, language fails to be longer a vehicle of thought, and inspiration itself may seem anything or nothing, according to the preference of its employer. Professor Machen, of Princeton University, has properly exploited this procedure, and in his volume, "Christianity and Liberalism", has shown that while modernism still calls itself Christianity, it has nothing in common with the faith that for two thousand years has worn that great and honorable name, and as a religion it does not even belong to the same family with Christianity. With keen discernment he says, "In trying to remove from Christianity everything that could possibly be objected to in the name of science, in trying to bribe off the enemy by those concessions which the enemy most desires, the (modern) apologist has really abandoned what he started out to defend".

It is because the true fundamentalist utterly rejects that method that he remains and must forever remain a premillenarian. One of the leading opponents of fundamentalism—an outstanding man in the divinity department of a great university, logically declares it to be foolish to profess faith in the literal Bible and deny its teachings concerning the personal, imminent and premillennial coming of Christ.

There are men who would join us tomorrow if we omitted the seventh point from our doctrinal statement, and they marvel that we permit it to remain in our declaration, knowing its divisive effect. Our answer is, fundamentalism insists upon the plain intent of Scripture-speech and knows no method by which it can logically receive the multiplied and harmonious teachings of the Book concerning one doctrine and reject them concerning another.

The greater doctrines are not individual opinion that can be bandied about at pleasure. In the judgment of the fundamentalist they are forever settled in heaven. "Holy men" of God who "spake as they were borne along by the Holy Ghost", have told us the truth—God's truth—and truth is as unchangeable as imperishable. "Scripture cannot be broken". The "truth of the Lord endureth forever". "The empire of the Caesars is gone; the legions of Rome are moldering in the dust; the avalanches that Napoleon hurled upon Europe have melted away; the pride of the Pharaohs is fallen; the pyramids they raised to be their tombs are sinking every day in the desert sands; Tyre is a rock for bleaching fishermen's nets; Sidon has scarcely left a rock behind; but the Word of God still survives". And it not only endures forever, but it remains forever the same—the same in words, the same in meaning, the same in spiritual intent. God's work is incapable of improvement. The sun is old, but the world needs no new or improved one!

Fundamentalism is forever the antithesis of modernist critical theology. It is made up of another and an opposing school. Modernism submits all Scripture to the judgment of man. According to its method he may reject any portion of the Book as uninspired, unprofitable, and even undesirable, and accept another portion as from God because its sentences suit him, or its teachings inspire him. Fundamentalism, on the contrary, makes the Bible the supreme and final authority in faith and life. Its teachings determine every question upon which they have spoken with some degree of fullness, and its mandates are only disregarded by the unbelieving, the materialist and the immoral.

Fundamentalists hold that the world is illumined and the Church is instructed and even science itself is confirmed, when true, and condemned when false, by the clear teachings of the open Book, while Liberalism, as the New York Nation once said, "pretends to preach the higher criticism by interpreting the sacred writings as esoteric fables".

In other words, the two have nothing in common save Church membership, and all the world wonders that they do or can remain together, and the thinking world knows that but one tie holds them and that is the billions of dollars invested. Nine out of ten of those dollars, if not ninety-nine out of every one hundred of them, spent to construct the great denominational universities, colleges, schools of second grade, theological seminaries, great denominational mission stations, the multiplied hospitals that bear denominational names, the immense publication societies and the expensive magazines, were given by fundamentalists and filched by modernists.

It took hundreds of years to collect this money and construct these institutions. It has taken only a quarter of a century for the liberal bandits to capture them, and the only fellowship that remains to bind modernists and fundamentalists in one body, or a score of bodies, is the Irish fellowship of a free fight—fundamentalists fighting to retain what they have founded, and modernists fighting to keep their hold on what they have filched.

It is a spectacle to grieve angels and amuse devils, but we doubt not that even the devils know where justice lies, and the angels from heaven sympathize with the fight and trust that faithful men will carry on.

"THE ARCHITECT OF THE AMPHITHEATRE"

Great Caesar sent an edict forth
That he would build yet still Another Amphitheatre
To please the peoples' will;
For an architect he chose
A youth whose skill and fame
Had set the streets and homes of Rome
Loud ringing with his name.

With burning pride the young man took
The trust that Caesar gave,
Raptured that he should be acclaimed
Proud Caesar's proudest slave;
Then ever at his task he wrought,
And ever wrought his best.
From flush of dawn to flash of star
He knew no stay nor rest.

But in the stillness of the night
He paced the Appian Way,
To gather with God's hidden saints
To worship and to pray;
For he had learned to love the Christ
Who for his soul had died,
To share the fellowship of such
As served the Crucified.

He passed the hours in holy peace
With living and with dead,
He sang their simple hymns and heard
The blest Evangel read;
Then backward to his task he went,
A giant in his might,
Like one who had seen God and still
Was thrilling with the sight.

At last his mighty work was done,
The final circle laid;
Great Caesar sped his heralds forth
And proclamation made
That every Roman citizen,
Let him be what he may,
Should keep for honor's sake and his
A Roman holiday.

They came in all their grand array,
The Senate and the Court,
The soldier bands and howling mob,
To see the bloody sport;
But first Great Caesar bade them bring
With trumpet and acclaim
The man who built that circus vast,
To take his meed of fame.

They brought him in with shout on shout,
They took the robe he wore,
They clothed him in a richer garb
Than he had worn before;
They placed the chaplet on his head.
By Caesar's own right hand,
They hailed him then with cheer on cheer,
An honor to the land.

This function o'er, they cried again,
"Great Caesar give us sport,
Bring in the Christians, bring them in,
And let their time be short".
Great Caesar bowed, the gates rolled back,
And stopped with sickening thud;
Five beardless youths came calmly in
To seal their faith with blood.

They gazed upon the howling host,
They looked straight up to God,
And prayed for grace to tread the road
Their great Redeemer trod.
"Bring in the lions! Bring them in!"
Great Caesar bowed once more,
And soon the Prayer, the Hymn, the pain
And life itself were o'er.

The architect had seen it all,
Their calmness and their end,
Their farewell glance fell on his soul,
Like kisses from a friend.
He saw the wet and scattered sand,
The lion's clotted mane,
And shreds of spotless white all dyed
With deep, dark, common stain.

Then up he stood with stone-set face
Before the startled crowd,
And spoke the faith that filled his soul
In accents clear and loud:—
"I am a Christian, and I, too,
Will follow Christ till death;
I served and loved the Crucified
Jesus of Nazareth!"

Like lightning in its fearful speed,
Like lightning in its fire,
Ten thousand flaming eyes flashed forth
The fury of their ire;
And with a roar like thunder roll,
They cried with frantic breath:
"Then follow Christ the Nazarene,
And follow Him through death!"

They tore the chaplet from his brow
They rent his robe in twain,
They hurled him through the shrieking air,
To join his comrades slain;
And then with wild Hyena rage
They laughed, then looked and saw
The hero of their love and hate
Beneath the lion's paw.

But far above the Seven Hills,
Where Caesar was unknown,
Ten thousand times ten thousand saints
Stood singing near the throne;
Another soul has entered heaven,
Another fight was won,
Another saint stood waiting there
To hear the blest "Well done"!

BISHOP MANNING ON CONDITIONS IN RUSSIA.

The dark spot in the world at the present time is Russia, the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of New York, told the members of the American Club, in Paris, July 28.

"In Russia unspeakable tyranny and most brutal autocracy parades itself as freedom and progress," said the Bishop. "My own judgment is that our country has been absolutely right in its attitude in that matter in refusing to give countenance, encouragement or support to the Soviet Government so long as it continues to stand for its present monstrous attitude against other Governments of the world.

"We have nothing but good-will, God knows, toward the Russian people, but the way we can best help the Russian people and show our good-will is by withholding support from the present group of men who have the power.

"There is a growing desire for right and fair dealing between individuals. We have an illustration of it in the increasingly good relations between capital, and labor in the United States and we see the results of it in the sound and splendid attitude taken by our labor men in America against any and all forms of propaganda pertaining to communism."

Bishop Manning went on to say that while, unfortunately, there was still the possibility of war in the future, and reasonable preparedness was a necessity, the world had nevertheless reached a point where any nation wishing to start an aggressive war for mere conquest or speculation would have the whole of the civilized world against it.

"And if America, France and Great Britain stand firmly together, as please God they ever will, the progress of the world toward justice, right and peace is assured," concluded Dr. Manning.—New York Times.

Dr. Cadman says "Elmer Gantry" (Sinclair Lewis' carping at evangelicanism) "represents a huge ocean of mud"; contains "barnyard piffle" and "garage gossip".

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE

"Not to be Ministered Unto, But to Minister"—Matthew 20.28.

By the Reverend Arthur P. Gray

THE BROKEN HOME.

A VERY large proportion of the cases that call for relief by the community, are traced directly to what is called the broken home. Homes are broken by immorality, by divorce, by poverty, crime, and disease. There is never any question about the need for caring for the pitiful little ones who are the innocent sufferers from conditions for which they were not responsible. But Christian Social Service does not end with meeting the needs of these little sufferers after they have been thrown on the community.

The social worker goes deeper, and seeks to treat the causes that produced the need. How much better to prevent the need arising, than to wait until it has arisen, and then try to relieve it! Our Church has a Divorce Commission which is spending much time in an effort to determine what should be done about the divorce problem. The Departments of Public Health, federal, state and city, are doing much to reduce disease. Industrial conditions that have been the cause of much poverty, are being improved. It is being realized that many of the crimes that break up homes, can themselves be traced to broken homes, and to lack of early training in the life of the criminal.

Then, too, we look into the future, and realize that character-building, for the young people of today, will make for the successful home of tomorrow. We hear a lot about the wild flapper, and the speedy life of the young people of this generation. It may be well to consider, also, some of the trends of the day, looking toward an improved society in another generation. If the problems are greater now than ever, it is also true that there were never so many united efforts to solve those problems.

An example of some good work that is being done along these lines in one of our public schools, is described in a recent issue of The Witness:

In the West Des Moines High School the students have from time to time a Character Conference, with sessions on three days, at which commissions meet, discuss previously determined questions, and later report their findings to the whole group. On some commissions there are both girls and boys, and some have boys alone or girls alone.

A recent conference took for its theme Character Building, with Commissions on Leisure Time, Social Life, Honesty, Loyalty. Among the findings are:

That one should desire to spend from three to five hours at home each day in an effort to know better the entire family, as the years which one can spend with them are few.

That petting makes the finest relationships between boys and girls impossible, and leads to such serious consequences that it should not be indulged in.

That dating with a bunch eliminates the desire to pet.

That the ideal girl to go with (this from the boys' conference) is charming, unselfish, a good mixer, well mannered, sincere, and self-respecting.

That both the parents and the student should more earnestly strive for sympathetic understanding.

Miss Miriam Woolson Brooks is the Girls' Adviser of this high school in Des Moines, and when the National Conference on Social Service of our Church met in Des Moines this year, Miss Brooks was the principal speaker at a luncheon in the interest of the Girls' Friendly Society.

In the course of a most interesting address on Character Building, Miss Brooks quoted these lines by Elizabeth Lincoln Otis:

"AN 'IF' FOR GIRLS,
With Apologies to Mr. Rudyard Kipling.

If you can dress to make yourself attractive,
Yet not make puffs and curls your chief delight:
If you can swim and row, be strong and active,
But of the gentler graces lose not sight;
If you can dance without a craze for dancing,
Play without giving play too strong a hold,
Enjoy the love of friends without romancing,
Care for the weak, the friendless and the old;

If you can master French and Greek and Latin,
And not acquire, as well, a priggish mien;
If you can feel the touch of silk and satin
Without despising calico and jean;
If you can ply a saw and use a hammer,
Can do a man's work when the need occurs,
Can sing, when asked, without excuse or stammer,
Can rise above unfriendly snubs and slurs;

If you can make good bread as well as fudges,
Can sew with skill, and have an eye for dust;
If you can be a friend and hold no grudges,
A girl whom all will love because they must;

If some time you should meet and love another
And make a home with faith and peace enshrined
And you its soul—a loyal wife and mother—
You'll work out pretty nearly to my mind
The plan that's been developed through the ages,
And win the best that life can have in store.
You'll be, my girl, a model for the sages—
A woman whom the world will bow before."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question: What do you mean by the word "Social" in Social Service

Answer: "Social" means "for society at large", as approved to "individual". If one believes in the social gospel, he interprets the four gospels as teaching the building of a Kingdom on Earth, as well as the Kingdom Hereafter. Individual salvation is not the sole purpose of Christ's teaching. Social Service is primarily the effort to aid the weaker members of society, both by relieving their distress and by removing the causes that brought them into trouble.

Question: Do you know of any place where any kind of school or conference for social workers is conducted by our Church?

Answer: Yes, there are a number of such places. The Sweet Briar Summer School includes a course on Social Service.

Christ Church Cathedral in St. Louis has a Cathedral Day each month for professional social workers. There is a service in the Cathedral followed by a conference on matters of common interest, and a social hour. This is one of an increasing number of places where the Church is making special recognition of professional social work.

Then, of course, our National Conference convenes every year at the same time and place with the General Conference on Social Work.

IS IT A KEY TO THE SCRIPTURES?

By Dr. G. N. Luccock

MY friends gave me a book, called the "Key to the Scriptures". I wondered if the Bible was locked and needed a key. But I took the key and with it entered the palace of truth in the book which men reverently call the Bible. And lo! I found that the key only unlocked certain selected chambers, and when, by the aid of the key, I entered these selected chambers, I found that they had been previously prepared with the most strange, upside-down pictures of my Lord and Saviour, and I came away astonished at such reversals of what are the plainest portraits language can paint, as the sentences in the Bible naturally read.

Listen to my story and see if you do not feel the same way—ashamed to deny the Bible portrayals of your Lord and Saviour, the best Friend man ever had. Let us be quite clear that we are not discussing the merits or demerits of the system just now. That can come another time. Just now we are concerned with the one question whether or not we can trust this "Key to the Scriptures", whether "Science and Health" teaches the same things that the Bible teaches, or whether we must choose between them as a guide to truth. If people want to follow the teachings of "Science and Health", whether it agrees with the Bible or not, that is one whole problem by itself. But when people are asked to accept this textbook of Science as an interpretation of the Bible, that is another question, and to me, as a seeker after truth, the vital preliminary question.

So I entered the palace of truth, with my friends having the key. Immediately I said, "Show me the room where are the promises to those who pray". But I was told that room was kept closed. And when I asked if the key did not unlock all the rooms I got a decided "No". The key bearer even said that some of the Bible was a lie. Unspeakably shocked, I asked quite pointedly if it was really true that awful word was used in connection with one single verse of the Bible. The only reply was to direct my attention to "Science and Health", page 525, lines 25 and 27, where this Key to the Scriptures says of that part of the Bible which contradicts the foundation teaching of "Science and Health", "It must be a lie".

But I was bound to investigate further, and, returning to the subject of prayer, I asked if the advocates of this system did not believe in prayer. The answer was that they used the word, but not in the sense I used it; that they did not believe in asking God for help in trouble, that it was not necessary, for all they had to do was to take. Granting no little of important truth in that teaching, which also has always been taught by students of the Bible, I asked about the additional truth taught in the promises to those who ask, repeating many of the specific directions to ask, ask, ask. But the subject was peremptorily dismissed with the positive declaration that they did not teach people to ask God for things. "But," I said, "we are told in the Bible to ask and we shall receive, and you are asking me to accept your key as an explanation of the Bible. What I am trying to learn just now is, not whether your theory of prayer is true in part and woefully incomplete, but whether you are to be trusted as a teacher of the Bible. What are you going to say about those many, many sayings in the Bible about asking, and about those many examples in the Bible of people who did ask and got answers? People who in great and sore trouble called on God in just as definite petitions any child ever addressed to a parent, and were helped?"

But to this question there was no answer. "Well, then," I said, "take me into the children's room. I am greatly interested in the little ones. And there keeps ringing in my ears that old verse, 'Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace'. Show me."

Then the keeper of the key smiled and said, "We have something very beautiful in the Child Chamber of the palace of truth".

So we went in. But there was no child. And I asked for the child. And I was told that there was no child there, and referred to "Science and Health", page 583, lines 1 and 3, where children are called "Sensual and mortal beliefs; counterfeits of creation; material suppositions of life". But I reminded again, "We are not talking about your theory of children, horrible as it is. I do not wait here to remark upon it; I want to find out how far you are to be trusted as a teacher of the Bible. The Bible says, 'Unto us a Child is born'. What do you say?" Then I was referred to "Science and Health", page 109, line 24, where it is written that "When a new spiritual idea is borne to earth, the prophetic Scripture of Isaiah is fulfilled".

"But," I remonstrated, "you have taken away the child and substituted a spiritual idea, and you have introduced the word 'borne' for 'born', an entirely different word, and you have changed a definite event, namely the birth of a child, to an indefinite series of events, namely the renewedly given spiritual ideas. Do I understand that is your idea of interpreting the Bible"?

The only reply was a pointing to the open page of "Science and Health".

Not ready to give up, I said, "Take me to the room set apart for our Lord and Saviour. I'm a sinner, and I want to know the way of salvation, and I would see Jesus".

Then the keeper of the key said it would open that room, but warned me that I must be prepared for a heroic lesson. So we went into that room too. But I did not see Jesus. Jesus was not there. And I asked why. As nearly as I could understand the explanation, the name of Jesus stood in the way of the principle of "Science and Health". Being directed by the keeper of the key to "Science and Health", page 23, line 29, I found to my horror that the name of Jesus, and the command to believe on Him for salvation, had been stricken out; that the faith which accomplished salvation, instead of being a belief in Jesus, "demands self-reliant trustworthiness" (line 30, page 23). Where the name of Jesus is written in the Bible, "Science and Health" substitutes little dots like these . . . . and makes one of the most precious verses in the Bible read "Believe . . . . and thou shalt be saved", with the explanatory remark that the injunction which this text demands is self-reliant trustworthiness.

It was a heroic lesson, all right. But after I caught my breath I asked if that was not misrepresenting instead of interpreting the Bible. And then, with a most winsome smile, the keeper of the key said, "But you don't understand. You take my key and come into this room often, and by and by you will 'understand' that what you need is not to trust in Jesus, but to realize your own trustworthiness."

"But," I came back, "the Bible says that there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, and you have stricken that name out of the great salvation text, so pretending to explain the Bible. Let me say again, my one aim this morning is not to say anything either for or against your teaching, but to find out for myself how far I can afford to trust you as a teacher of the Bible."

"Let us try once again. Take me to the Resurrection Room. I want to know about that. My dear father and mother and sister, and little boy and girl are dead. Tell me about the resurrection of Jesus."

And then the keeper of the key, with the most ingratiating smile, said: "Ah! that is the most beautifully fixed-up room of all. We have a surprise for you here. Jesus was not dead at all. Does not that make you happy?"

"Make me happy? My father and mother and sister, and little boy and girl, whose baby smiles have been a haunting, holy memory for twenty years, have not been hiding in the grave. Why should it make me happy to be told that Jesus did not die? In His death and resurrection every grief-smitten heart has found comfort and hope in the great loss that comes to all. Surely, I must fail to 'understand' your book. Tell me plainly. I want to get exactly what you mean. This is no place for a double meaning of words. We are speaking of Jesus now, not that Christ which you differentiate from Jesus, but the identical Jesus whom the disciples companied with. Am I right in understanding you to say that this same Jesus was not dead at all, but alive and hiding in the tomb?"

For answer I was told to turn to "Science and Health", page 44, line 28. This is what I read there: "The disciples believed Jesus to be dead, while he was hidden in the sepulchre, whereas he was alive".

I then closed "Science and Health" and opened the Bible, and turned to page after page where in every possible way it is asserted that Jesus died. He Himself showed the disciples how He must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things and be killed. The soldiers broke the legs of the crucified thieves and omitted that custom in the case of Jesus because they found Him already dead. And similar statements abound throughout the sacred record. All over the pages of the Bible it is written that Jesus died and rose again from the dead. In "Science and Health" it is written as explicitly as language can say it that Jesus did not die.

Now the practical question is not just as to what we shall believe. The issue is more searching than that. There is involved a very definite choice between these two things: taking the Bible, in its natural and necessary meaning, as the guide of life, or taking the unnatural and impossible meaning given to the Bible by "Science and Health".

The Great Commission

PROGRESS IN BRAZIL.

In Southern Brazil, the number confirmed in 1926 was two hundred and ninety-five. This is the average for the last five years, and well above the average for the last ten years. The number of communicants has passed the 3,000 mark. It took eighteen years to bring the communicant list up to 1,000. Those were years of foundation-laying, and discouragement and yet of faithful hope. Thirteen years more were spent in bringing the list up to 2,000. They were years of slow but steady growth. In this period, communicants doubled; churches and chapels trebled; contributions more than trebled. It then took six years only for the communicant list to grow to 3,000. In this period again contributions have more than doubled and the value of property has grown to two and a half times what it was six years ago.

THE CHURCH'S WORK IN CUBA.

Bishop Hulse says that the outstanding feature of last year in the Church's work in Cuba was the failure of the Church at home to furnish the workers needed to carry on the work properly. "This, combined with serious illness among members of the staff, is responsible for the decrease in the number of official acts reported. Work which gave every promise of success if pushed has been abandoned or neglected through lack of workers.

"There are still inviting fields open to us, but in view of the shortage of men, it does not seem wise to extend the work further. For the present at least we must concentrate and do more intensive work.

"The lack of suitable buildings hinders this. We can preach and carry on service in any private house that can be borrowed for the occasion; and a large part of our services are conducted in private houses. But it is difficult to carry on clubs, Girls' Friendly Societies and schools unless we have proper buildings.

"The hopeful side of the work is seen in the increased number of scholars in our parochial schools, and the very considerable increase in the amount of school fees. The increase in the number of scholars has not cost the Council any more money in salaries, but has been made possible through the use of new buildings."

The Rev. R. F. Thornton started work at Sola, which is the railroad station for La Gloria and a growing town of about 2,600. He has two services here every Sunday, one for the Jamaicans and one for the Cubans. There is no other religious work being carried on here at present. We have been offered a lot on the public square if we will put up a building on it. At present we hold our service for the Jamaicans in Odd Fellows' Hall, which is likely to be blown away by the first strong wind; and the Cuban service in a moving picture palace back of a saloon, which does not commend us to the Cubans.

"Cuba is still suffering from bad economic conditions," the Bishop continues. "We are largely dependent on sugar and the price of sugar has been so low that it has been produced at a loss with consequent suffering on the part of everybody. In spite of this widespread poverty the offerings show a slight increase and our schools have grown considerably.

"For the future I am sure that our best policy will be to strengthen our centers and establish a school in connection with every center. We shall not be able to make much impression on the people unless we help to direct their education."

Death of the Rev. Francisco Diaz-Volero.

Since the above was written, a letter from Bishop Hulse has brought word of the death of Archdeacon Diaz, on July 17. He was Archdeacon for Cuban work, President of the Council of Advice, and for more than twenty years a faithful missionary of the Church in Cuba.

The Bishop says: "He was our outstanding Cuban clergyman, with a sense of initiative and responsibility, an indefatigable writer in behalf of the Church's position. Through his education and ability he opened many doors and obtained a hearing for the Church which would have been denied others. It will be difficult indeed to fill his place.

"His death came at the end of a long sickness. In the beginning he tried to fight it off and went about holding services as usual until I finally persuaded him to give the doctors a chance to cure him, and he entered a Sanitarium for a short time. There and later at home he bore the sufferings of eight months with Christian patience and his death comes as a blessed release."

CONDITIONS IN CHINA.

Mr. M. P. Walker, Treasurer of the Shanghai District, writing to Dr. Wood under date of June 15, says that he had written to Mr. Hollander, Treasurer of the Hankow District, asking whether to renew insurance on the Rev. Walworth Tyng's personal property in Changsha. Mr. Hollander's reply, in part, was:

"I called on the Butterfield Insurance agent today. He said the Company would be pleased to do the best they could for us, but evidence would be required as to how a fire started and would, of course, not cover riots or civil commotion. . . . We have heard that some labor union has occupied the Tyng house. They discovered Mr. Tyng's secret drawer in the wall in one of the rooms, broke it open and found all the keys, opened all doors, drawers and boxes. We have not heard what was destroyed or taken. At present the house is apparently empty. We have also been informed that Deaconess Stewart's residence in the school building has been visited by looters and most of her belongings stolen. There is no clergyman there now and we do not know just what is happening. Cary Fang had to flee for his life and now lives in Hankow. The property is in the hands of some of the Church members and school teachers. The Church building has been used as a propaganda hall and most of the furniture and fittings ruined."

Mr. Walker adds: "I think it gives you a very fair idea of conditions prevailing in Changsha at the present time.

"Word came yesterday that our workers all had to flee from Anking. I judge conditions there are very bad. We have also heard from Nanking that the Rev. T. M. Tong has finally had to get out of his residence in the old building used for the Divinity School. This is the first time that that has been taken over. The foreign residences have also again been occupied.

"As far as I can make out there is not a single hopeful sign which has appeared on the horizon."

Bishop Graves in a letter of June 20 says:

"You will be glad to have some items of encouraging news. On Whitsunday at All Saints, Shanghai, I confirmed a class of eleven. On June 11 I was present in the chancel of St. Peter's, Sinza, made an address and presented the diplomas to sixteen nurses: eight were young men from St. Luke's Hospital, five were young women from St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and two women and one man from St. Andrew's Hospital, Wusih. It was encouraging to see these neat and business-like nurses who had finished their training in our hospitals. We cannot be too thankful that in the general calamity which has befallen the work of medical missions in China, our hospitals in Shanghai have been able to continue their work. It seems incredible that any should be so insane as to destroy institutions which have been doing such an immense service to them, but it is a sad fact.

"On Trinity Sunday in the morning I confirmed a class of sixteen at St. Peter's, Sinza, and in the evening I confirmed one boy and three girls, the children of American Church people in Shanghai. The class was presented by the Rev. F. A. Cox."

The American Churches in Europe

The Annual Convention.

The Convocation of the American Churches in Europe, was held in the Guild Hall of the American Pro-Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity, Paris, on July 13 and 14.

On the morning of the thirteenth, the Holy Communion was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, the Bishop-in-Charge of the American Churches in Europe, assisted by the Very Rev. Frederick W. Beekman, D. D.

Beginning at nine o'clock Morning Prayer was said by Dr. Beekman, a full choir being present. Immediately after Morning Prayer Bishop Brent gave his first meditation, followed by the second one at eleven o'clock. There was an expression of appreciation by all the delegates, as well as others present, of the privilege granted them to listen to such words of encouragement and helpfulness.

At one o'clock luncheon was given in honor of the Bishop and delegates, by the hospitality of the vestry of Holy Trinity at the Union Interalliee.

The business session opened in the afternoon, delegates from all the parishes being present, except the Rev. Walter Lowrie, D. D., of Rome.

The clerical delegates were as follows:

The Very Rev. Dean Beekman, D. D., Paris; the Rev. Georges Gibbs, Canon of the Pro-Cathedral; the Rev. Harris Masterson, St. Luke's, Paris; the Rev. Everett P. Smith, Geneva, Switzerland; the Rev. George H. Kaltenbach, Lucerne, Switzerland; the Rev. Killian A. Stimpson, Florence, Italy; the Rev. H. D. Wadleigh, Alasio, Italy (Secretary of the Convocation); the Rev. James Sheerin, Munich, Germany; the Rev. Francis Burgess, Nice, France.

The lay delegates:

Mr. Waller, American Consul at Dresden; Mr. Curtis, Consul General at Munich; Mr. H. I. Keen, Treasurer of the American Churches in Europe; Mr. J. W. Spalding, St. James' Church, Florence.

The following resolutions were offered:

1. Submitted by the Very Rev. Dean Beekman:

Whereas, The members of the Convocation of the American Churches in Europe, having learned of the resignation of the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, D. D., Bishop-in-Charge of our European Churches in Europe, to take effect at the end of this calendar year, and

Whereas, We have come throughout the past two years, as during the anxious period of the War, to respect the high spiritual leadership, consecrated devotion and wise statesmenship of him who now as for many years, stands in the front rank of our Church leaders; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we express our deep and heartfelt regret at the loss we are about to sustain, and we pray that God will give him many years of health and strength, in which to lead in the cause of the Master, Our Lord Jesus Christ.

2. Submitted by Mr. H. I. Keen:

Resolved, That this Convocation request the clergy of our parishes and missions, to present to their congregations at different times during each year, a National Program, giving them definite opportunity of contributions to the support of this program.

Both resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The election of clerical and lay delegates to the next General Convention were as follows: The Very Rev. Frederick W. Beekman, D. D., and the Rev. Everett P. Smith as clerical alternate.

The lay delegate elected was Mr. H. I. Keen, and the Hon. Monell A. Sayre, as alternate.

The following members were elected on the Council of Advice. The Rev. Everett P. Smith, the Rev. Dr. Beekman, Canon Killian A. Stimpson. The lay membership: Mr. Herbert I. Keen, Consul General Curtis of Munich, and Mr. J. W. Spalding of Florence.

There was a very keen interest shown in the Bishop's address to the Convocation, when he said he hoped that after his report to the next General Convention, the Convention would see the real need of a resident Bishop elected for the American Churches in Europe.

As it was growing late in the afternoon, the Convocation adjourned, to continue the meeting of the several committees.

Evensong was sung by Dean Beekman and the splendid choir of Holy Trinity. The service was well attended, and the congregation and delegates were given a fine and interesting address by Bishop Brent on his various visitations, and conferences with the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Gibralter. In the course of his address, the Bishop wished it to be distinctly understood, that the American Churches in Europe are not established here for the purpose of proselyting, but to bring about friendly relations with all continental churches, and especially to serve Americans living abroad, and tourists who sojourn for a short while.

His earnest plea to the clergy was to visit diligently, and to know the people who are under their spiritual oversight. Also recommending them to study the Oriental viewpoint of Christ and the Christianity of our present day, especially that of India, China and Japan, in order that the Western mind might be better informed about their view, and learn something of inestimable value from their way of viewing Christ and the divided Christian Church.

The address was illuminating, as the Bishop is giving a great deal of his thought and time to this particular matter and sees the necessity of giving it a thorough study. He showed how and why a resident Bishop of the American Churches in Europe would have ample scope for exercising a careful diplomacy, in coming in touch with such important and vital questions. The meeting of the Convocation and meditations and addresses were inspiring, and have left a deep impression on those who were privileged to be in attendance.

After the service a reception was held in the rectory by Dean and Mrs. Beekman, who entertained the Bishop and delegates and other invited guests with their usual gracious hospitality.

THE BLUE MOUNTAIN CONFERENCE.

The second session of the Blue Mountain Conference for Church Workers opened at Hood College in Frederick, Md., on Monday, July 11, with a good enrollment, and continued through the early morning of Saturday, July 23. The Rt. Rev. Walter H. Overs, formerly Bishop of Liberia, presided, and the Rev. James O. S. Huntington, D. D., was Chaplain of the Conference, and the Rev. N. B. Groton, of Whitemarsh, Pa., its Executive Officer.

In 1926, a group of Episcopalians interested in religious education in Philadelphia found a similar group in Washington, all feeling the need of a summer school for Church workers on a more advanced basis than the conferences then in existence in this part of the country. With the cooperation of others of similar aspirations in Maryland and Pennsylvania, they got together and organized the Blue Mountain Conference, which had a successful session at Frederick last July. The same group planned a similar conference for 1927.

The Blue Mountain Conference is not responsible to any particular ecclesiastical authority in the Episcopal Church, nor does it cater especially to any class or party. It has the approval of the National Council, the Provincial Synod and the Diocese of Maryland within which it meets. The conference was greatly assisted by the people of All Saints' Church at Frederick.

Monday afternoon, July 11, was devoted to registration of students and the assignment of rooms.

After the first of the "sunset services", held on the campus, the formal opening of the conference was held in the Assembly Hall. Family Prayers were said at nine.

Beginning Tuesday morning, the first hour daily was given over to a course on "Personal Religion", conducted by the Rev. J. O. S. Huntington, of the Order of the Holy Cross. From 9:45 to 1:10 P. M., there were three periods of classes, with several classes in each period. The program was so arranged that workers of every kind found profitable courses in the subjects in which they were most interested.

Daily in the afternoons, representatives of various Church organizations held "office hours" under the trees on the campus. This was a novel feature of Summer Conferences and it proved to be a valuable one.

Representatives of the Church Army of England and several missionaries, from both the foreign and the domestic field, were guests of the conference.

The program of evening meetings was as follows:

July 11.—Opening of the Conference.

July 12.—Glimpses from the Field; addresses by the visiting missionaries.

July 13.—The need of symbols in the Church's worship; the Rev. F. W. Fitts, Roxbury, Mass.

July 14.—The Challenge of the Changing China to the Christian Church in America; the Rev. Bernard Y. T'sen, Kingtechen, China.

July 15.—Toc H. Rev. H. F. Sawbridge, "Padre", and Coleman Jennings, "Job Master", of the Washington Branch, Toc H.

July 16.—The Church's Challenge to Young People; Kercheval Smith, Baltimore.

July 17.—Sunday Evening Missionary Service; Bishop Overs.

July 18.—The Church and the Rural Problem; the Rev. F. D. Dean, M. D., Wilmington, N. C.

July 19.—The Church and the Negro; the Rev. Robert W. Patton, D. D., Church Institute for Negroes. A colored quartette will sing.

July 20.—The follow-up of the Bishops' Crusade; the Rev. C. E. McAllister, Newark, N. J.

July 21.—Play produced by the School of Religious Drama, under the direction of Miss Joy Higgins, of Boston.

July 22.—The Chaplain's Service.

A book-room was maintained where recommended text and reference books could be purchased. The athletic grounds and tennis courts were available for the members of the conference. Out-door activities were in charge of Mr. Marcellus C. Adams of Pittsburgh. There were several interesting exhibits in connection with the conference.

Some Interesting Gifts To The Washington Cathedral.

Contemporary portraits of Church of England dignitaries of the seventeenth century have been hung in the memorial wing of the Library of Washington Cathedral. These famous works of art are paintings of the Most Rev. William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury; the Rt. Rev. Lancelot Andrews, Bishop, successively, of Chichester, Ely and Winchester, who was chairman of the commission which translated the King James' Version of the Bible; and the Most Rev. George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, and one of the translators of the King James' Version of the Bible. The portrait of Archbishop Laud was painted by "Stone", a pupil of the celebrated Van Dyke.

The paintings were the gift of four trustees of the Cathedral, the Honorable Henry White, LL. D., former United States Ambassador to France; Charles C. Glover, Dr. William C. Rives, and James Parmelee. They form with the Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington, the gift of John Jay Chapman, the nucleus of the collection of historic paintings which will ultimately adorn the walls of Washington Cathedral Library.

Mrs. Ridgley Hunt, of Washington, whose collection of rare lace is of great interest to museum authorities and collectors, has presented the Cathedral with a strip of Spanish Needle Point Lace, dating about 1640, for the Great Altar of the Cathedral.

The strip of lace is eleven feet, seven inches in size, sufficient for use on the Jerusalem Altar of the Cathedral. It is exquisite in workmanship and beauty of design and Sir Caspar Pruden Clark, former Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, has pronounced it a genuine piece of Spanish Needle Point. The only known piece of similar Spanish Needle Point Lace, of this period, is in the possession of the Albert Victoria Museum of London, England.

Mrs. Hunt gave the lace in memory of her mother, Mrs. William Cruger Pell. of New York.

The early days of the Episcopal Church in Colonial America are recalled in the acquisition by the Library of the Cathedral of an original pocket case of metal, containing ordination papers dated 1773. These papers are four in number and set forth the theological abilities of the Rev. Thomas Read, rector of Rock Creek Parish, Maryland, in Colonial and Revolutionary times.

The Rev. Thomas Read was first curate, then rector of the ancient parish. His residence was near Rockville, Maryland. During the Revolution, according to tradition, he was an American sympathizer, although probably of English birth. The documents have been presented to the Library of Washington Cathedral by his great granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Lyman, wife of the Rev. Charles Lyman, minister at the Union Church Mission, Hankow, China. The other donors were Alfreda Post Carhart, Bertram Van Dyke Post and Wilfred McIlvaine Post.

The first document is a letter of deacon's orders, written on parchment, bearing the seal of Richard Terrick, Lord Bishop of London and showing that on September 19, 1773 he ordained Thomas Read to the diaconate in the Chapel of Fulham Palace, London. The Lord Bishops of London then had jurisdiction over the Church in North America, and candidates for priests and other orders had to go to London for the laying on of hands.

The second document is a letter of priests' orders, issued by "Richard Lord Bishop of London", on September 21, 1773. Evidently Thomas Read was a mature man and was anxious to be fully ordained before returning to America.

According to English law of the period, clergymen had to make declarations of loyalty to the Crown and to the Church laws so the third paper is a declaration of this nature by Thomas Read certified to by "Richard" of London and executed in his Bishop's Court.

The final paper is the Bishop of London's license to Thomas Read to perform the duties and offices of a priest of the Church of England in the province of Maryland in North America. This also was dated September 21, 1773. It is presumed that, armed with these documents, the Rev. Thomas Read set sail for the homeland where he was to win honor and to give valiant service in the Colonial Church in America.

The Funeral of the Rt. Rev. Wm. Cabell Brown, D. D.

Mrs. William Cabell Brown is returning with the body of Bishop Brown on the Steamship Minnetonka, which sailed from England Saturday, July 30, and is expected to reach New York on August 8 or 9. It is impossible at present to state the exact date of the funeral, which will be held in Richmond, on either August 9 or 10, pending the date of the arrival of the steamer. The Rev. Dennis Whittle, formerly rector of Luray Parish, Luray, Virginia, and now rector-elect of Emmanuel Church, Covington, Virginia, who has been spending his vacation in England, is returning with Mrs. Brown.

Conference of Parish Secretaries.

At the adult division of the Summer Training School, August 10-24, Sewanee, Tennessee, a special conference course for parish secretaries will be given. This conference will be opened by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., of St. Paul's School, Chattanooga, Tenn. Other speakers will be: the Rev. R. A. Kirchhoffer, of Christ Church, Mobile, and Dr. Loaring Clark, of the National Council.

Much time will be given to discussions led by those actively engaged in the work. There will be four secretaries present from some of the largest and best equipped parishes in the Province, who will outline work being done in their office and parish, giving practical suggestions as to the best methods of conducting the office of a parish secretary.

Those interested in secretarial work will find these conferences invaluable. Discussions will be informal and open to all. Those conducting successful offices are urged to be present and give others the benefit of their experience.

Mrs. Florence M. Tarrant, Church of the Advent, Birmingham, Alabama, will welcome suggestions and be glad to impart any information relative to this conference.

Alaskan News.

The Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, D. D., Bishop of Alaska, who left Seattle on July 12 for his tri-annual trip to the Arctic, will go as far as Nome on the S.S. Victoria and then catch the revenue cutter Northland from Nome for Pt. Hope. He expects then to go on to Pt. Barrow and visit different points that the revenue cutter will stop at between Pt. Hope and Pt. Barrow. There are several important points where missionaries have worked for some years and the Bishop wishes to visit them this year. He expects Archdeacon F. W. Goodman to join him on this trip between Pt. Hope and Pt. Barrow.

The Rev. John W. Chapman, D. D., rector of Christ Church, Anvik, completes his fortieth year of service at Anvik this year. Dr. Chapman has lost his most valued and helpful native worker, Isaac Fisher, who died in the flu epidemic. The mission at Anvik is trying to take care of the many children who have been left orphans by the epidemic.

If Bishop Rowe can possibly do so on his return trip from the Arctic, he plans to visit Anvik.

Return of Missionaries Requested.

A cable from Bishop Roots dated Hankow, July 29, informs the Department of Missions:

That the Bishop desires the return of the following missionaries now in the United States:

Deaconess Julia A. Clark of Ichang.

Miss Regina Lustgarten of Shasi.

He will assign them work in Hankow until a return to their stations is possible.

That arrangements for carrying on primary schools next autumn are progressing satisfactorily.

That high schools cannot open before February, 1928, at earliest.

That at St. Joseph's Middle School for boys, Wuchang, which has been used as military headquarters, an explosion has occurred causing serious damage amounting to $30,000 Mex

St. Joseph's is a school established under Chinese auspices as a feeder to Boone College. The Department of Missions makes no appropriations for its support.

Annual Convention of The Guild of St. Barnabas.

The annual meeting of the National Council of the Guild of St. Barnabas for Nurses will be held in Cincinnati, October 13 and 14. The local chapter, one of the largest in the country, will entertain the visitors in the beautiful buildings of the Church of the Advent, Walnut Hills, which have been generously placed at their disposal by the rector, the Rev. George C. Dunlap, D. D., and the vestry. A tea and a visit to the new Children's Hospital, the latest word in such institutions, will probably be one of the features of the convention.

Business And the Community.

Trinity Church, Madera, California, has planned a series of Sunday night meetings beginning in October at each of which a member of some profession is to discuss the question, "What is the business in which you are engaged doing for the permanent good of the community"?

The speakers include the judge of the Superior Court, the State Superintendent of Schools, the county librarian, a newspaper publisher, a motion picture theatre manager, an architect, a music director of the county schools, a county home demonstration agent, the county sheriff, and Bishop Sanford is to close the series.

Notice.

The Synod of the Province of New York and New Jersey is expected to meet in Rochester, New York, on November 15, 16 and 17, 1927.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. Geo. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.

Sesqui-Centennial of Little Fork Church.

The sesqui-centennial of Little Fork Church, at Oak Shade, Culpeper County, was celebrated with an all-day meeting, Junday, July 31. The services were conducted by the Rev. Kensey Johns Hammond, D. D., rector of St. Mark's Parish, and the Rt. Rev. W. L. Gravatt, D. D., Bishop of West Virginia, preached at each service and confirmed a class presented by Dr. Hammond.

A musical service was rendered by the vested choir of St. Stephen's Church, augmented by congregational singing, with Miss Mary Lee Somerville, organist.

All-day services are held each year at this old church, and are attended by many people from Culpeper and adjoining counties. The attendance Sunday is said to have outnumbered any previous event.

This interesting old church is the only one of the pre-Revolutionary churches in existence in the county and is regarded as a sacred shrine in the community. During the War Between the States it suffered greatly from the depredations of soldiers, but has since been restored with the building strengthened and the grounds enclosed. The work of repairing the edifice which was begun just after the war, by the late Bishop Peterkin, then rector of St. Mark's Parish, has been carried on by his successors, but the main part has been accomplished by the present rector, whose efforts have been untiring in promoting interest in the welfare and for preservation of the church.

The Annual Meeting of the Lamb's Creek Church Restoration Association will be held in Old Lamb's Church Sunday, August 7. Services will be conducted by the Rev. G. M. Brydon, who will also preach the sermon.

ALABAMA.

Rt. Rev. C. M. Beckwith, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. W. G. McDowell, D. D., Coadjutor.

St. Mark's Church, Troy.

On the Sixth Sunday after Trinity, the Diocesan Commission on Church Architecture, met with the congregation of St. Mark's Church, Troy, to discuss the possibility of a new plant, including church building, parish house and rectory. The discussion took place before the morning service, which was a celebration of the Holy Communion, with the special intention of seeking divine guidance.

At the conclusion of the service the vestry met, and asked that plans for the new plant be prepared and submitted.

The Rev. Thomas G. Mundy has been called to this interesting parish, and will begin his ministry the first of September.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. W. L. Gravatt, D. D., Bishop.
Rt. Rev. R. E. L. Strider, D. D., Coadjutor

St. Hilda's Hall, Charles Town.

St. Hilda's Hall has for some years been an object of interest and speculation as to the outcome of an individual venture. It is the growth of an idea where faith and freedom have won. If faith is the substance of things hoped for, then faith is the foundation of St. Hilda's and with such a foundation and such a name, growth was inevitable.

In the twelve years since 1915, the School has grown in reputation and value, because founded on experience, and because it began life with the background of Church History.

Few schools have had so many bishops as sponsors, and if we go back into the centuries these bishops can hardly be numbered as they aided and guided the venerable St. Hilda in her home and work at Whitby, England. To Bishop McDowell, of Alabama, this school partly owes her name and he preached the dedication sermon, September 19, 1915. To Bishop Peterkin and Bishop Gravatt, St. Hilda's owes its location and reputation in the Church and to Bishop Gravatt the School is indebted for his unfailing help and the plan to make it the Diocesan School of West Virginia. In its name, situation and its scholarly reputation he sees a powerful asset for the diocese.

It seemed wise to ask an option on the school in order to form some plan by which the Diocese could visualize the future. This was done two years ago and on July 15, 1925, twelve men met at St. Hilda's to learn of its value and to discuss its possibilities. This option is now due and the diocese finds itself unable to keep it up.

Twelve years is a reasonable test of the success of a school which today ranks with her older sisters of the North and South as a preparatory school second to none. Its work in college preparation is accepted and its pupils have made good in all vocations. The property itself consists of a large dormitory which might easily be made to receive one hundred pupils, and an up-to-date academic hall named for the first bishop of West Virginia and his venerable father, Dr. Joshua Peterkin, one of the pillars of the Virginia Church. With such a foundation no fear need be felt for the future of St. Hilda's, and the Church people of West Virginia are realizing the value of this training school for the Church of tomorrow.

Before the option was given the Diocese, a plan for a Foundation had been worked out, which plan may yet be fulfilled. The school continues under the able faculty with Miss Duval as head, and it is hoped that years of increasing usefulness is before it. St. Hilda's also has a rich background in the loyalty of "old girls" whose children are now entering as pupils. The Alumnae Association is alive, active, and far-reaching.

With a self-perpetuating board, and the same broad policy, it is believed its reputation will continue to grow as it has done annually.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

Lay Readers' School.

A School for Lay Readers has been planned for this diocese. It will be opened in the autumn. The committee appointed by Bishop Stires has completed its plans, and has reported to the Bishop. The Bishop is sending out a letter to the clergy announcing and commending the school. He urges the clergy to nominate as prospective candidates for the school their ablest and most earnest laymen. These men, says the Bishop, must be such as can give up a good deal of time to the training and the subsequent work, and they must be qualified by their own religious life to carry a real message to the people. They will be sent out, when trained, as the Bishop's Flying Squadron.

The School Committee will interview all candidates. Such as are accepted will be the Bishop's guests at supper on Monday evening, October 3. Beginning that night the school will have sessions twice a week for six weeks, at the Church of the Incarnation, Brooklyn. The curriculum is as follows: Outline of Bible History and Church History, by the Rev. A. W. E. Carrington; Instruction in Public Reading and in the Use of the Prayer Book, by the Rev. Frank M. Townley, D. D.; Selection of Suitable Sermons and assignment of books to be read, the Rev. George P. Atwater, D. D.; and Pastoral Work and Organization, the Rev. Duncan M. Genns. The course will be completed before Advent Sunday, November 27, and Bishop Stires will conduct a service for the commissioning of the successful candidates on that day.

An Interesting Summer Work.

Bishop Stires, at a special service held July 24, at the Church of the Atonement, Quoque, L. I., now in charge of the Rev. A. W. Carrington, of the Church of the Incarnation, Brooklyn, taking for his text the words, "The Gospel according to you", a sort of paraphrase on St. Paul's words, "According to my Gospel", showed that the way the populace is shifting into Long Island at the present time is one of the greatest movement of people now going on.

After giving statistics he showed that these people are putting all they have into their little homes and there is nothing left for churches. He deplored fact that there are so few churches for them, and so little being done about it; and begged for more interest and co-operation.

At this service the Bishop dedicated a tablet to Dr. Carter, for many years Archdeacon of Newark, N. J., and at one time rector of St. George's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was present at the first service held at Quogue, and for forty years attended at least one service, each summer, his last being their fortieth anniversary.

Dr. Carter's daughter has worked in China for many years, being now the wife of Bishop Gilman, of Wuchang, China.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Good Work Being Done at Holiday House.

Holiday House of the Girls' Friendly Society is beautifully situated on the Potomac River, near Mount Vernon, and is doing so splendid a work that all Church people in Washington would do well to journey in that direction and see for themselves something quite different from the average of its kind and something intensely interesting. Services are held there every Sunday afternoon in the memorial chapel by clergymen from the Diocese of Washington, or the Diocese of Virginia, and a Sunday School started there last summer was so successful that it was kept open all winter by the students from the Virginia Theological Seminary. Holiday House is a vacation home for young women and girls who perhaps find this an only opportunity to get away from the city for a brief vacation period. A report of Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Diocesan President of the Girls' Friendly, states that in the year 1926 the house was opened from April 1 to December 1, and during that time nine hundred and forty-one guests were entertained. Some of these remained for a week end, while some stayed as long as two weeks. A new well, costing nearly $2,000, has been completed during the year and this, with other indebtedness, was partially paid through the help of generous friends and the sale by the girls of pencils.

The Rev. Hugh F. Sawbridge, who has been in America for four months, helping the branches of Toc H already established here and who has been spending much of the time in Washington, has returned to England, and his address will be Toc H, Leicester, England.

Bishop and Mrs. Freeman have returned from their short vacation in Paris and London. After a few days in Washington, they went to Sorrento, Maine, where they are accustomed to spend the summers and where Bishop Freeman preaches regularly at the church there.

Georgetown and Christ Church, particularly received the news of the passing of Bishop Brown of Virginia with genuine sadness, because of its personal touch with this distinguished Churchman. Bishop Brown married Miss Dorsey of Georgetown, and the marriage service took place in Christ Church. They both have a host of friends in this interesting old part of the Capital City.

The Rev. Henry L. Durant, rector of St. Matthew's Parish, Hyattsville, Md., has accepted a call to become rector of St. Paul's Church, Louisville, Ky., and will leave shortly for his new post. Mr. Durant has been in the Hyattsville work just a little over a year and has so endeared himself to the people there that his leaving will be a source of regret to many in the parish. He took the work at Hyattsville after having served as rector of Grace Church, Georgetown, and before that served as assistant rector at St. Margaret's Church.

EAST CAROLINA.

Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., Bishop.

The rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd Parish, Wilmington, the Rev. John Benners Gibble, recently blessed a sterling silver Bread Box, the gift of Mrs. George A. Bishop and children in memory of husband and father, who entered into life eternal January 16, 1925. He was a devoted and faithful member of the Good Shepherd Parish and served as clerk of the vestry for many years.

Relief Work Among Flood Sufferers.

Just as we go to press, the following telegram is received from the Rev. Philip Davidson, rector of St. James' Church, Greenville, Miss.:

"Telegram from Bishop Theodore Bratton, Jackson, Mississippi, guarantees sufficient amount to inaugurate milk fund for White and Negro children in this district. Destruction of cattle, poultry and vegetable gardens by flood renders this relief necessary to prevent pellagra and child starvation. This work not covered by Red Cross."

Summer Work in Charleston.

The clergy of Charleston have arranged for their summer work and will be either on vacation or in their places according to the following schedule:

The rector of Christ Church, the Rev. R. H. Jackson, will leave on August 1, for Bennettsville to visit his relatives before sailing from San Francisco on September 3 for Kyoto, Japan. There he will report to the Rt. Rev. Shirley Nichols, Bishop of Kyoto, for assignment to his duties. He expects to be sent to a Language School for a year before he will be given charge of any work. Christ Church will be kept open if possible, until Mr. Jackson's successor is called.

The Church of the Holy Communion, the Rev. H. W. Starr, Ph. D., rector, will be closed during August. Since the middle of July Dr. Starr has been teaching, first at Camp Capers and then at the Valle Crucis Summer School, and when the Sewanee Summer Training School opens, Dr. Starr will be on duty there, too. He has been able to get back to Charleston for most of the Sundays in June and July, but the faithful lay-readers in his congregation have taken his place when he was unable to return.

The pulpit of Grace Church, during the absence of Dr. Way, was filled by the Rev. Malcolm S. Taylor, of Greenville, and the Rev. H. D. Bull, of Collect for the Transfiguration of Christ.

O God, who on the Mount didst reveal to chosen witnesses Thine Only Begotten Son wonderfully transfigured, in raiment white and glistering: Mercifully grant that we, being delivered from the disquietude of this world, may be permitted to behold the King in His beauty, Who with Thee, O Father, and Thee, O Holy Ghost, liveth and reigneth, one God world without end. Amen.

Collect for Eighth Sunday After Trinity.

O God, Whose never-failing providence ordereth all things both in heaven and earth; We humbly beseech Thee to put away from us all hurtful things, and to give us those things which are profitable for us; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Apart With Christ.

"Have you and I today
Stood silent as with Christ, apart from joy or fray
Of life, to see by His face;
To look, if but a moment, at its grace,
And grow, by brief companionship, more true,
More nerved to lead, to dare, to do
For Him at any cost? Have we today
Found time, in thought, our hand to lay
In His, and thus compare
His will with ours, and wear
The impress of His wish? Be sure
Such contact will endure
Throughout the day; will help us walk erect
Throughout storm and flood; detect
Within the hidden life, sin's dross, its stain;
Revive a thought of love for Him again;
Steady the steps which waver; help us see
The footpath meant for you and me."

Christian Unity.

Part I.

There is not any doubt about it, that the rank and file of our people in this country are not deeply interested in unity. There are outstanding leaders who are. Some few have unity as a passion; others have it as a very distinct purpose, and are giving considerable attention to it, but I fear, if my observation is correct, that the great majority of the clergy are not preaching unity from the pulpits. The people are living in a spirit of sectarianism. What we need is to create deeper interest and more intelligent thought.

Let me first present the ideal of unity. "That they may all be one even as thou, Father, art in me and I in Thee; that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou didst send me."

It is a mystical unity. It does not immediately express itself in terms of practice. Christianity, as you and I know it, is a wholly Western thing, and it needs more than anything else to be Orientalized. It is true that it was given to us by the Orient. It was rejected by the people who gave it to us. Immediately the West seized upon it and placed the imprint of its characteristics upon it. Now the time has come when, in the extension of Christianity, we of the West need that which the East and the East alone can give us. We are intensely practical, and unless we can express religion immediately in terms of tangible practice, we think we are losing time.. But behind all of that there must be the deeply mystical—I cannot find a better word than that—which expresses itself upward rather than outward.

The practical side that unity takes expresses itself in federation. I believe in federation. There is no one here who believes in federation more than I do, but I believe in federation only as one of the many steps that we must take before we can achieve the kind of unity for which we all hope and pray. The more catholic a church is, the more should it be ready to federate, and I am thankful that the Church which I represent has that degree of fellowship in the way that it now has; but let us make sure of this, that we are not using Christianity merely as a means to bring about certain definite ends in a practical way, in time, which we can tabulate, and which we can see quite readily if we look a little way ahead. I feel that our American pragmatism, because that is what it is, has led us to confuse the mere pursuit of the truth and of goodness as being the sole end of religion, which it is not. Beauty, truth, and goodness must all go hand in hand. Our belief in the truth is very largely pragmatism—that is true which works well—and so the kind of unity that we must seek for penetrates the whole realm of thought.

There must be in whatever unity that comes about, a unity of thought about Christ. When we talk about a conference on Faith and Order, we are entering that realm of thought which we must enter, if we are going to get anywhere near the heart of unity. In Protestantism nearly all the breaks that have occurred, nearly all the schisms that have come about, have begun in the realm of thought, in theological differences, and, therefore, it is idle and futile for us to maintain that provided we can establish practical brotherhood and fellowship and relationship, the way we think about things makes no difference. It makes an enormous difference. I look upon federation and such fellowship as comes about by federative effort, as accomplishing its chief function in bringing men together who otherwise would not come together. The practical issues seem to me wholly secondary, for after all, what is religion? Religion is full fellowship—fellowship with God, and fellowship in God with one another.

There is a real necessity of our considering the things that divide us, as well as the things that unite us. How can we look at our own country and rest satisfied with 202—at least that was the report at the last census—202 various, varying denominations, and the process of splitting still goes on, and that process of splitting is on the basis of differences of theological thought, and not differences in practice.

I would like you to consider with me a unity in the Christian Church which does not exist, and which I am afraid a good many of us are not very intelligent about. I mean the unity of the Roman Catholic Church, which has 320,000,000 adherents. Thirty-two nations are represented at the Vatican. Its mission work is its life. It has 13,000 priests at work in the mission field, that is, men who have gone out from Christianized countries to those that they are attempting to make Christian. In those same countries it has 24,000 sisters. All told, counting sisters, catechists, indigenous priests and foreign priests, it numbers 122,000 workers, and those people are all working together in a very real unity. In their proud record of their missionary enterprise they go back to the beginning of the thirteenth century.

Indeed, the pity of it is that most of us know about the Roman Catholic Church, and her missions, and her work, chiefly from controversial literature, and not from the literature which is produced by that Church itself. I should feel that one of the chief aims of Protestantism today should be to understand the Roman Catholic Church from a study that is based upon her own statements and upon her own literature, and not upon any second-hand literature that may come within our reach. That is what we expect of the Roman Catholic Church, that she should consider our positions (for they are many) from the standpoint of our own thinkers. How can we expect the Roman Catholic Church to do that—and she does it let me tell you—how can we expect her to do it, without ourselves, by deep study and careful reading, learning about her work and her life from her own literature.—Bishop Charles H. Brent.

The Shepherd Psalm.

The Shepherd Psalm stands unmatched for the depth and the simplicity of the truth which it proclaims—that the Lord cares for each child of His through every conceivable experience, as though it were the "onliest lamp He had".

Pastoral beauty hovers over the manger of the babe Jesus at His birth as certain poor shepherds came from under the stars on the Judean hillside, where they were watching their flocks, to pay Him homage. The pastoral thought and passion and practice drench the pages of the Gospel story. Without it the Evangelical message would be still born. Jesus seizes upon it to symbolize His most intimate and loving teachings. He spoke aloud in the exact terms of the unspoken language of His thought. His mode of thought was in allegory, symbol and parable. His speech is the window pane through which we see His mind in operation. So that He was not like the Good Shepherd. He was the Good Shepherd.

The last recorded words attributed to Jesus are couched in pastoral language in which He is evidently thinking of Himself as the Good Shepherd who has laid down His life for the sheep. "Feed my sheep—Tend my sheep—Feed my lambs," He says as He passes on to His representative disciples His highest function, His chief privilege, His supreme responsibility.

The story of Jesus, as we possess it, is largely a story of personal relationships worked out pastorally. His public ministry is fulfilled not up in a church steeple, but down among His people. If there are some fourteen instances of individual ministrations in the brief fragment of His biography which we have, there are intimations of countless others of similar sort. When He is alone it is for seasons snatched from service to refresh and renew His inner life by fellowship with God. He sometimes addresses multitudes, more frequently is He with His more intimate friends, and at other times He ministers to particular persons—the sick, the sorrowful, the seeking. He, the Good Shepherd, began by identifying Himself with His sheep so that He is but the foremost of the flock, the Lamb of God "as it had been slain" for the flock. Thus He becomes the representative layman. He never held office. He never sought it. His character was His office. He never wrote a book. He never asked that one should be written about Him. His vellum was the affections, the minds and the inner self of men. Here he inscribed His life and teaching in such wise that all the multitudinous waters of time can never obliterate it. So, behold the Good Shepherd!—The Rt. Rev. C. H. Brent, D. D.

Forces.

Elise M. Baker.

Deep buried in earth's fertile soil
The seed lies still beneath the toil
Of wind and rain, and patiently
Await the sun's sure alchemy,

That soon releases beds of bright
And gorgeous blooms. And from the light
One draws a crimson, one a blue,
Or softest pink of pearly hue;

And each a fragrance all its own,
Captured from innocence, and thrown
To him who hears the music swell
In silences where echoes dwell.

Within ourselves such forces lie:
The seed that thought has planted thrive in mind and soul. They beautify
Or mar the plan of destiny;

For through that subtle texture,—laws,
From daily circumstance each draws
A different hue. God grant our choice
Be love that others may rejoice.

The Gospel and the Poor.

When Jesus identified Himself to John the Baptist as indeed the Messiah, He used one striking phrase in the list of proofs: "The poor have the Gospel preached to them." Giving poor folk the glad tidings of redemption from sin by faith in the Son of God is the climax of the forms of service by which John was assured that Jesus is the Christ.

With rare exceptions, the first fruits of the Gospel's proclamation are among the so-called "common people". Paul comments on the few noble or wealthy persons who were joined to the Church during the first decades of apostolic preaching. Christianity reached and gained serfs, that is, the working classes of Rome, before it had more than an occasional convert from the patricians. Most of the European nationals obtained the first attracting reports of the religion they finally adopted from returned captives or travelers on commercial business. The common folk both demanded the faith and testified to its value after receiving it.

In modern China, before the "intelligentia" were attracted, a great number of laborers were lifted into self-respect and its resultant individual stamina by the missionaries of Jesus Christ. In India the earliest groups to give themselves to the Gospel's power were "untouchables". In Africa, Livingstone's Christian life and his message created centers of influence when tribesmen discerned the love of God for humble folk.

In all these ancient and modern transformations new character was builded from raw material as crude, unpromising and unsuspected as are those elements that are joined by ingenious skill into great structures, great machines and great inventions. The power of God is thus made manifest in the domain of the unseen, the domain of mind, morality and soul. One loses respect for any thinker who esteems progress but fails to appreciate the Christian religion. And only when deceived will the average person despise grateful obligations to Him who makes character out of the raw materials of savage mankind.—Lutheran.

Mistaken Ideas of Prayer.

Supremely important, as the subject of prayer is, yet if you meditate on it, you will realize that we have had, and we still have, in many respects, very wrong conceptions about it. You and I for years—even though we now realize our mistake—yet you and I for years have gone to God, pleading with Him, striving to change His mind, believing that if we prayed long enough and earnestly enough we should induce God by our supplications to give us something which otherwise He would not have given. Surely that is in a measure what our Lord warns us against. It is an absolutely incorrect idea of prayer, one which expresses a wrong attitude, and occasionally even yet, we shall find ourselves doing this, though we realize it to be wrong—because the old ideas crop up over and over again, and we do most easily the thing which we have done since we were children. Although we realize it to be wrong, subconsciously, that old thought, that old habit, comes up in the mind in the most unexpected ways. I have caught myself pleading with God to do a thing, when I knew in my heart that God wanted to do it, that He longed to do it. True prayer is not a matter of persuading God to give us the good, it is never a question of inducing Him to change His mind, to alter His will, or of making Him do something which He would not otherwise have done. This all expresses a fundamentally false view of prayer, and yet over and over again we go on doing this very thing, and only by repeated efforts can we eradicate this method of prayer from our hearts, our minds, our lives. It is wrong, for this reason above all others, that we cannot change God's mind; it cannot be done; and thank God that it cannot be done, for the mind of the Eternal God is always unchangeably good, at all times expressing perfect love. So true prayer can never be an effort to change God's mind or to induce Him to do something which He would not have done if we had not prayed. For what is prayer? Surely prayer is the offering and presenting to God the means whereby He can do that which He desires to do. That is why we ask, not to persuade Him, but to provide Him with the kind of mind and spirit which He can use in order to give us His good things. He tells us to ask. Why? He knows before we ask what we have need of. Then why ask at all, if God knows the need before we ask? Because by asking we express the first condition of prayer; we express the receptive attitude, one of desire, the condition of mind which is essential to the reception of the gift.—T. E. Rowe.

The Unheralded Great.

The daily press has emblazoned its pages during the last few days with the names of those who have accomplished the extraordinary in the annihilation of the Atlantic Ocean and the dominance of the air.

But there are great people all about us who go unheralded. Each of us can aspire to join their ranks in the quiet realization that the world will be just a bit better for our having lived in it.

In the "American Magazine" for June, Irving Bacheller says that once he heard an old Yankee farmer express his sense of the thing we call personality in the following manner:

" 'He's a little cuss, but there's a feller inside of him whose brow touches the sky. When I met him I was lookin' down, an' when I left him I was lookin' up.' "

We may not travel through the air and pierce the sky with the wings of a plane, but we can live our best in the presence of those with whom we come in contact and so encourage them to do likewise. We can elevate men in their thinking, and so to elevate them is to increase their possibilities for happiness and success. We can aspire with reasonable assurance of success to be among the unheralded great.

"When I met him I was lookin' down, an' when I left him, I was lookin' up." It is evident that this conversation was not about the weather but about the "whether"—whether a man has within him the native power to overcome the obstacles which life presents. One member of the conversation had convinced the other that he could make good. We would decorate him with the distinguished service medal of the unheralded great.—Nash Journal.

Compensation.

I have not had the lift of wings
To bear me o'er the thorny ways of life,
But I have felt the thrill of conquest
After long hours of bitter toil and strife.

I have not known a magic word
To drive away the hurt of care and pain,
But I have felt the swelling courage
That comes from singing in the storm and rain.

I have no gold or silver shield
To ward away the flying darts of death,
But I have that within my spirit
Which makes the priceless shield of living faith.

Rain Robin.

Robin red, robin red
Perched on a limb,
Lifting your liquid voice
High in a hymn;
High in a hymn of praise,
All through the rainy days,
Patient and pure.

Perched on a swaying limb
Out in the rain,
Teaching the aching heart
Freedom from pain;
Freedom from pain and tears
Wrought by the passing years;
Longing for love.

Lift up your liquid voice
Close to the day,
Robin red, robin red,
There where you sway,
There where you sway alone,
Spirit of gladness blown
Out of the sky.

High in a hymn of praise
Lift up your voice.
Oh, if your song were mine,
I should rejoice;
I should rejoice and sing
All through my sorrowing,
"God is my Hope".

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

The Good News of Jesus.

M. L. G.

When our Best Friend lived in Galilee there was not a hospital in the world. There was not a home for the insane, or the aged, or children, who needed care. There was no Red Cross, no education for most people, no mission or settlement work. The rich lived in abundance while the poor starved. The leper and the insane were thrown out to die. Rulers were cruel and used their power to crush the weak. The people lived in suffering and misery, not knowing that God was their Father, not even looking with any certainty to a life beyond this.

How astonishing then to those of His time to hear the Good News! To hear that God cared, even for the sparrow, and how much more for any child of His. To know that He meant men to walk free and upright, healed in body, mind and spirit. To discover, little by little, as they could believe it the wonderful truth that this Man—this Friend, Prophet, Messiah, was more than all; was indeed the Son of God, the great I Am, come to share their lot and fulfill their utmost need, the need of a Saviour in this lost world?

Would not you and I, if we had been there, followed with the multitude? Would we not have heard with hearts as glad His gracious words, and brought our sickness to Him to heal, and our sin to Him to forgive?

Then let us not grow so used to hearing the Gospel of Christ that we do not see the wonder and the glory of it. Let us remember that but for Him our world would be still as evil as the one He knew. Let us come to Him as freely as we would have in the old days, knowing He is the same, and His Good News is the best news we can hear every day of our lives.

Over the Roofs.

To Nina Lincoln, fresh from a big, roomy country home, the tiny flat seemed inconvenient and cluttered, while the view from its windows over the dingy roofs of adjoining dwellings was certainly a sad contrast to the outlook on gardens and orchards which she had enjoyed from babyhood.

After her father's death she and her mother had stayed on in the old home, taking a few summer boarders to help out a slender income, but now Mrs. Lincoln had followed her husband, and Frank, Nina's brother, having graduated from a dental college, had decided to open an office in the city. And so the big, white house under the maples was rented, and the two young people had taken up their abode on the top floor of the tall apartment building.

Nina had tried hard to make a pleasant home of the four small rooms, and they were really most attractive, but she could do nothing to improve the appearance of the surrounding housetops, where marauding cats and lines of flapping clothes were the only bits of life and color in the dull, drab monotony.

"I don't see how I can endure it very long," she said one day to sweet-faced Miss Abby Long, who had hobbled in on her crutches from across the hall.

Crippling rheumatism, which had confined Miss Abby to the apartment house for years, had not prevented her from becoming a good angel to the frequently changing tenants. From the first she had watched over wistful-eyed little Nina, proving as kind a neighbor as one could find even in the country, and the young girl had come to depend upon her for advice, and to miss her if she failed to pay her usual daily call.

"What is it you can't endure, dearie?" she asked now with her gentle smile.

"Why, the view," Nina answered. "Nothing but roofs, and roofs, stretching away for miles. If they were colored and gabled, as they are in the country, it wouldn't be so bad, but they're just flat patches of gravel and tar and bricks. They're hideous, Miss Abby."

"I know," Miss Abby replied, "and I used to feel just as you do about them, dear, but I don't any more. You see, I don't look at them now. I look at what's over them."

Nina lifted her brown eyes to a sky of vivid sunlit blue over which soft clouds floated.

"Yes, you can forget the horrid roofs if you look at the sky," she agreed. "That is, on a day like this."

"You can at any time," Miss Abby told her. "There's never a day when the sky isn't beautiful. Clear or overcast, in sunlight or in storm, it is wonderful to watch. And since I've made a practice of watching it, I don't mind the roofs a bit."

"I see," Nina said softly.

"And it's so about everything, dear," Miss Abby went on. "I've seen how homesick and lonesome you were—"

"Oh, I have been!" Nina exclaimed. "But I didn't mean any one to guess."

"You've been a brave girl," Miss Abby assured her, "and I don't believe anybody else has guessed, but I—"

"You're a darling!" Nina declared.

"I've had lots of trouble," Miss Abby said simply, "and, maybe, for that reason I notice other folks' troubles quicker than some. It's one of the compensations, I guess. Anyway, I knew you were unhappy, and I've been wanting to tell you the sky was there."

"It will help me with the roofs," Nina said thoughtfully; "but, Miss Abby, how can it help with the other things, missing the old home, and mother, and all?"

"Just as the tender sky is always above the troubled city," Miss Abby explained, "so the Father's tender love is always bending above our lives, and if we only remember to lift our eyes to it we shall surely find help and comfort."

There was a little pause. Then Nina spoke in a low tone.

"I've not been to church since I came to the city," she said, "and I've neglected my prayers and Bible-reading, too. I didn't seem to have time for such things, and sometimes I've felt it didn't matter. But I see now that I've been making a great mistake. I've been looking only at the roofs of life. Now, dear Miss Abby, I'm going to begin to look over the roofs."—Grace E. Craig, in Kind Words.

Sunny.

When John first brought home the little canary whom he named Sunny, it seemed as if the tiny creature would never calm down and get used to his new surroundings. If any one put a finger near his cage he would flutter around and beat himself against the bars in a pitiful fashion, panting on his perch for a long time after the intruder had moved away. But John, who loved birds, never for a moment doubted that he could remove the little songster's terrible fear.

From then on every time John came anywhere near Sunny's cage, he would start talking to him in a low soothing voice, each time getting a trifle nearer to the cage than the time before. After many weeks of patient work, John was rewarded by being able to put his hand on the cage without Sunny trying to get through the bars on the other side. The next step John took was to whistle as he came near the cage. Sunny would reply to this with chirping notes, which usually finished in a gay crescendo. In his own bird language he seemed to be happy that the burden of fear was dropping from him.

Like most canaries Sunny loved a piece of apple and this acted as a splendid medium for John to use in making friends. Sunny had now become so tame that when John stuck the piece of apple between the bars he would run along his perch and start pecking at it before John had removed his fingers. John always stood by to watch Sunny's little sharp beak dig holes in the apple while he generally said: "Like it, Sunny?" to which Sunny would reply in staccato notes as if saying, "Yes, yes".

After many months of training, John decided it was time to open the door of the cage and let Sunny fly around the room. It was amazing to see the tiny ball of yellow fluff walk toward the open door, stand there for a moment and then fly to the nearest picture on the wall or light on some object near by. John holding a piece of apple in his month, would follow wherever Sunny went, urging him in a gentle, coaxing voice to come and get the apple. At first Sunny would fly around trying to get the apple without getting too close to John, but without much success. He would fly off to light on something for a moment, but never lost sight of John and the apple.

After many unsuccessful attempts to get a piece of the apple, he finally perched on a ledge near where John stood and started to scold and scold, much to John's amusement who almost lost the apple by laughing. Then, as if realizing there was absolutely nothing to fear, his little throat expanded into a triumphant song and he flew toward John's head. With wings outspread, he stood poised as if wondering what to do next, and with a toss of his head hopped down to John's nose and started to eat the apple which he held in his mouth. To give him a surer footing, John held up his finger and Sunny gaily jumped on it, hopping back to John's nose to peck at the apple and then to his finger to eat it more comfortably.

It was very beautiful to watch the friendship between John and Sunny develop, and realize what love and patience can do to overcome fear. In fact, Sunny's fear was so completely overcome that he would allow John to pick up and put him in a small necked vase, where he would remain for a few seconds as if playing hide-and-seek, coming up quickly at John's whistle to perch on the edges of the vase. To put him back in the cage was an easy task, though he was never very anxious to be put back after playing a while.—The Presbyterian.

A Riddle.

I have a head, a little head,
That you could scarcely see;
But I have a mouth much bigger
Than my head could ever be.

That seems impossible you say;
You think 'twould be a bother?
Why, no! My head is at one end,
My mouth's way at the other.

I have no feet, yet I can run,
And pretty fast, 'tis said;
The funny thing about me is,
I run when in my bed.

I've not a cent in all the world,
I seek not fortune's ranks;
And yet it's true that, though so poor,
I own two splendid banks.

I've lots of "sand', yet run away;
I'm weak, yet "furnish power";
No hands or arms, yet my embrace
Would kill in half an hour.

You think I am some fearful thing,
Ah, you begin to shiver.
Pray, don't, for, after all, you know
I'm only just a river.

Seashore Friends.

It was Janet's first summer at the seashore, and the little girl was so happy that she felt just a tiny bit dazed. There had been the long ride on the train with the sound of the wheels click, click, clickety-click on the rails ringing in her ears until they made her feel sleepy. And then the sudden stop at a country station, not at all like the elevated stations in the city, but just a tiny yellow building.

The conductor had lifted her to the ground and Uncle Josiah had picked her up in his arms before she could even turn around. She had had the safest, most comfy feeling, as she nestled in his arms. But some one was yanking her by her skirt an dsaying "Hello". Uncle Josiah put her down, and then it was Nancy's turn to throw her arms about her and kiss her.

"Daddy brought me to the station to meet you," cried Nancy, breathlessly. "Isn't that fine?"

Of course Janet thought it was wonderful, and the little girls danced down the station platform their arms entwined about each other.

Now you never could guess what kind of place it was where Nancy and her father and mother lived. No, it wasn't a hotel. It wasn't what you might call a seashore cottage either.

Uncle Josiah drove them through the little country village, then down a long, winding road that skirted the inlet.

"Oh, isn't it lovely!" cried Janet, bouncing up and down on the seat. "Just look at those beautiful flowers in that yard."

"Yes, that's Miss Almira's garden," explained Nancy. "I do hope you will like our home."

"Please show it to me the minute it comes in sight," begged Janet.

Then, quite suddenly, they left the gardens and the grass and the trees behind them, and they were out on a great stretch of sand, driving along an oyster-shell road.

"Look, look!" cried Janet, excitedly. "Just look at that big, white house over on the point!"

Nancy laughed delightedly. "That's where we are going," she said. "That's the lighthouse."

"Oooo!" breathed Janet, too happy to say anything for a minute.

It was true. Uncle Josiah was the lighthouse keeper, and now he headed the horse and wagon in that direction They sped along over the sandy stretch and arrived with a great blast of the horn at the back door.

Nancy's mother came out and welcomed the little visitor heartily. She led her into the house and showed her the big, square room that she was to share with Nancy.

What wonderful days followed! Janet, never tired of hunting the shore at low tide for the queer little friends, as she called them, that came out of their hiding places. There were the horse-shoe crab, and the periwinkle, and all kinds of beautiful shells.

Sometimes she and Nancy would go out with big spoons and a pail and dig for clams. Nancy taught her to know the funny kind of hole the clam makes, and when she found one she would dig carefully so as not to break the shell of the clam, and then drop him into the pail. When they had enough, they would carry the pail back to the lighthouse, and Mother would serve steamed clams for dinner. My, how good they tasted!

At other times, when the tide would wash oysters ashore, Mother would go out and gather them, and then make an oyster stew.

One day Janet found a tiny yellow something-or-other in her stew.

"Oh, Auntie, look at this," she cried, trying to spoon it up.

"That's just a yellow crab, dear," said her aunt.

"But how did it get into the stew?" asked Janet.

"I will tell you about it. The crab was in the oyster," explained Auntie.

"No! Really? How could it get there, Auntie?"

"The oyster lives at the very bottom of the water, and when he is feeling very fine, he opens his shell and lets the water run through his house," Auntie went on. "Then along comes a big hungry fish. He sees that nice, fat oyster inside of the shell, and it looks mighty tempting to him. The oyster cannot see him, because he has no eyes. He cannot hear him, because he has no ears."

"Oh, dear, what does happen?" Janet was very anxious, and she forgot to eat entirely.

"This is where the little crab helps out. The crab has eyes, and he has legs, but he knows that the fish can swim faster than he can run. So he crawls quickly into the shell with the oyster, and the minute the oyster feels his presence, snap go the two edges of his shell together! The big, hungry fish has lost his dinner. So you see, the crab protects the oyster, and the oyster protects the crab. It's a sort of partnership. Now eat your stew, dear, or it will get cold."

Janet obeyed, but she couldn't help thinking of all the wonderful things there were to know about the seashore. —Christian Observer.

The Tears of the Stars.

One moonlight night I could not sleep,
I lay awake so long
That all the stars began to weep,
And the moon sang a sorrowful song.

I scrambled out of my warm little bed
And crept to the window sill,
While the song of the moon whirled round in my head
And fireflies shown on the hill.

And fireflies glittering on the lawn
Were really the tears of gold
Wept by the stars till the night was gone
And the crying moon was cold.

I stood quite still for hours and hours
And then crept back to bed,
And the tears of the stars came up from the flowers
And danced around in my head.

The Shadows in the Grass.

Albert and John were crossing a field on their way to see Frank when Albert saw the tall grass on the other side of the fence sway. Then little balls of white seemed to run through it, but before Albert could make out what they were they had disappeared in the brush, like shadows.

"Did you see them?" Albert called out excitedly to John, who had stopped by his side.

Hurriedly the two boys climbed the fence into the other field in search of the strange creatures. Under the trees they came upon Frank. The boys related what they had seen and asked their friend if he had seen the furry balls.

Frank did not answer their question. He only shook his head, as he was suddenly seized with a spell of coughing. When that had passed, he told them some wonderful news.

"I am going to the seashore for a whole month. I am to have a little boat, and when I come back we can sail it on the pond!"

The boys thought this would be great fun. Although they had only known Frank a week, they liked him. They hoped to have some happy times when he came back from the seashore.

"Will you boys carry my fishing basket over to William? I told him he might use it while I was gone," Frank now asked them. "I must hurry, for it is almost time for the train."

The boys said they would; so Frank took the basket from his shoulder, where it hung by a strap, and gave it to Albert.

Albert and John started off. The basket was so heavy, Albert thought there must be something in it.

"Shall we open it and see what it is?" asked John.

"We'd better not. The basket is for William, not for us," replied the other.

The basket seemed to get heavier at every step. As they passed the woodshed by Frank's house, they saw down the road the car that was taking Frank away.

"Let's leave the basket here. William can come for it himself," suggested John, crossly.

Albert would have been glad to get rid of the burden, but he shook his head.

"We promised to take it to William so we must. Let's rest a while, then we'll go on. Do you know, John, if any one met us, they would think we'd had a wonderful catch of fish!"

"Yes. And if they lift the basket, they'll be sure of it. There must be a rock in it to make it so heavy," chuckled John.

Albert laughed, too. He glanced at the basket that rested on the grass at their feet. He looked again, and this time his eyes opened rather wide. If there were stones in the basket, they must be very lively stones, for the basket was rocking back and forth.

"The stones are alive!" called out John.

The two boys drew closer, their heads just above the mysterious basket. Now a sound came from it—a squeak and a sniff.

"There's something alive in there!" cried John.

In two minutes more they were running up the road. William was out in his yard, and when the boys came near, John called out:

"Here's Frank's fishing basket. He is loaning it to you while he is away at the seashore."

"And we don't know what is in it, but it sniffs and squeaks!" added Albert.

William looked at the basket. Just then it rocked again. William threw the lid open and put in his hand. He brought ou a small furry ball, then another, then another. There stood three little guinea pigs.

Then Albert and John knew that they were the furry balls they had seen in the tall grass of the meadow.

"There's tags tied on their necks!" exclaimed John.

When the boys looked at the tags, they were surprised to see their names written there. Frank had given a guinea pig to each one of them.—Christian Sun.

RESOLUTIONS
on the death of
BISHOP WM. CABELL BROWN.

To the members of the Womans' Auxiliary of Christ Church, Alexandria, the news of the sudden death of the Rt. Rev. WILLIAM CABELL BROWN, D. D., of the Diocese of Virginia, has come as a terrific shock. While we keenly realize the great calamity that has befallen the Virginia Church, and the Church at large, in the loss of our beloved Bishop, the women of the Church know that they have lost a friend to whom they could go freely, confident that they would always receive help and sympathy. With his stricken family, we mourn, and pray that the Great Comforter will hold them very close to Himself, and in His own good time, help them to say "All is Well".

(Signed),
MRS. ELEANOR S. WASHINGTON HOWARD,
MRS. GEORGE R. BUDDIN, President,
MRS. C. E. NICOL, Secretary.
July 30, 1927.

RT. REV. WM. CABELL BROWN, D. D.

Resolutions.

We, the Clergymen and Laymen of the Northern Neck and Essex County, Va., in meeting assembled have heard with deep and profound sorrow of the death of our beloved Bishop, Rt. Rev. Wm. Cabell Brown in London.

We wish to extend to Mrs. Brown and his family our deepest heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement and assure them we feel deeply with them in this great loss to them, to the Diocese of Virginia and the Episcopal Church in the nation of our devoted Bishop. In sorrow we bow our heads and accept God's will and we praise Him for such a noble life.

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE

Georgetown. Dr. Way will take his regular vacation from the middle of August to the middle of September, during which time the Rev. Francis B. Wakefield, of Jacksonville, Florida, will be in charge of the services at Grace Church.

The Rev. Harold Thomas, rector of St. Luke's Church, spent June in Flat Rock, North Carolina, in charge of the Church of St. John's in the Wilderness. St. Luke's congregation is again joining with the Second Presbyterian for the evening services out of doors during the summer. Mr. Thomas will be in Charleston for the remainder of the summer.

The rector of St. Michael's, the Rev. A. S. Thomas, will spend his vacation in Brevard, North Carolina, during the month of August. St. Michael's Church will be closed while he is away, but as usual, the rector and vestry of St. Philip's have invited the congregation to worship with them.

During September the Rev. S. Cary Beckwith, of St. Philip's, will go to Cedar Mountain, North Carolina, for his vacation, and his congregation will join with St. Michael's at that time for worship.

The Rev. Carl S. Smith, rector of St. Paul's, will take his vacation during August, during which time the church will be closed.

The rector of St. John's, the Rev. A. M. Rich, will leave Charleston August 9 for Baltimore, to visit his daughter, getting back the first week in September. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Rich. While he is away the services at St. John's will be taken by the Rev. W. B. Sams, Mr. L. A. Prouty, and Mr. L. W. Barrett, except on the first Sunday in September, on which day the church will be closed.

Epiphany Church, Eutawville, had a Home-Coming Day on June 26, which was well attended. The rector, the Rev. A. W. Skardon, gave a history of the parish and spoke of the rebuilding of the old parish church. Since that day members of the parish and others have given towards the fund and the congregation is hoping to see work commenced in the near future. The parish church was destroyed by fire two years ago. After the service all went to Eutaw Plantation, where a picnic dinner was served.

The New Rector of Porter Academy, Mr. William S. Gaud, arrived in Charleston on July 1. He expects to remain at Porter's all summer getting things in readiness for the opening of the school in September. Meanwhile the school is being given a thorough cleaning and is being renovated, repairs are in process and painting will be done.

The Rev. Capers Satterlee, now at Clemson College, but formerly of this diocese, has sailed for Europe, accompanied by Kirkman Finlay, son of the Bishop of Upper South Carolina. The two young men expect to be away about two months and will visit England, Scotland, Wales and France.

R. H. J.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Francis Burgess has resigned the parish at Nice, France, to be succeeded by the Rev. Samuel McComb, who will take charge the first of October. Mr. Burgess will spend sometime in Florence, Italy.

The Rev. Henry B. Thomas, formerly student chaplain of Princeton University, who has accepted the call to Sherwood Parish, Baltimore County, Maryland, expects to take charge September 1.

The Rev. F. T. Barr, formerly in charge of Good Shepherd Church, Columbus, Ohio, has accepted a call to the Church of the Nativity, Price Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Rev. Herman R. Page, formerly of St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, who has accepted a call to be vicar of St. Paul's Mission, Oakwood, Ohio, expects to take charge September 10.

The Rev. Theodore M. Burleson, who was recently ordained deacon, is to be in charge of the mission at Cashmere, Chelan, Leavenworth, Maryvale, and Brewster, Wash.

The Rev. Arthur E. Cash, rector of All Saints' Church, Minneapolis, has accepted a call to St. Mark's Church, Anaconda, Mont., and expects to enter upon his new duties September 1.

The Rev. F. Wilcom Ellegor, formerly rector of the Church of St. Simon the Cyrenian, New Rochelle, N. Y., has accepted the rectorship of St. Philip's Church, Syracuse, N. Y.

The Rev. F. J. Compson, formerly of Sunbury, Pa., has accepted the call to be rector of St. James' Church, Brookhaven, L. I., N. Y.

The Rev. Clarence Stuart McClellan, Jr., rector of Old Calvary Church, Fletcher, N. C., has completed his plans for his trip to Europe, Africa and Asia with a sojourn of several weeks in the Holy Land. He expects to sail from Southampton, England, for New York about Easter, 1928.

ORDINATIONS.

On the Sixth Sunday after Trinity, July 24, 1927, in Christ Church, Tracy City, Tenn., his home parish, Mr. Robert Wayne Jackson was ordered Deacon by the Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Arthur C. Cole, who also read the Litany. The sermon was by the Rev. Erle H. Merriman, D. D., who also assisted the Bishop in the celebration of the Holy Communion. Mr. Jackson, a graduate of this year from the General Theological Seminary, will be assigned by the Bishop Coadjutor to mission work in the Convocation of Nashville.

The Bishop of Springfield ordained to the Diaconate in the Church of the Redeemer, Cairo, Illinois, on the Sixth Sunday after Trinity, July 24, 1927, Mr. Heber Williamson Weller.

The candidate was presented by the Ven. Charles Knight Weller, Archdeacon of Cairo, who also said the Litany The sermon was preached by the Rev. Carl Lathrop, who had been presented for ordination by Archdeacon Weller five years ago.

Mr. Weller has been appointed by the Bishop to the charge of St. Barnabas, Havana, and Trinity, Petersburg, Diocese of Springfield.

The ordination was most interesting, due to the fact that Mr. Weller is the sixth generation in line to enter the ministry of the Church. His uncle is the present Bishop of Fond du Lac, and his father, Archdeacon of Cairo.

In St. Mary's Church, Burlington, N. J., on July 10, the Rt. Rev. Paul Matthews, D. D., Bishop of New Jersey, ordained Philip Pollock Baird to the priesthood. The candidate was presented by the Rev. Canon C. S. Lewis, of Trenton, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Spence Burton, S. S. J. E., of Boston. Mr. Baird is to be rector of Holy Trinity Church, South River, N. J..

On June 24 Bishop Matthews ordained to the Diaconate Arnold E. Fenton in St. Luke's Church, Metuchen. He was presented by the Rev. Dr. John F. Fenton, rector of St. Luke's Church, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. Thomas F. Butler, of Utica, N. Y.

In St. Paul's Church, East St. Louis, Ill., on July 17, the Rt. Rev. John Chanler White, D. D., Bishop of Springfield, ordained Arthur Edward Marston to the Diaconate. The candidate was presented by the Ven. R. M. Gunn, rector of the parish, who also said the litany. The sermon was preached by the Rev. George Clark, of Pekin.

The Rev. Mr. Marston is to be assistant to Archdeacon Gunn at St. Paul's Parish.

The Upper Room.

I built my soul an Upper Room,
A place of prayer,
Where free from all disturbances,
From doubt and care,
Serene it rests;
And Thou, dear Christ,
Art always there.

God grant that when I leave that room
For tasks below,
The grace that I have found, may from
My spirit flow;
'Till those I meet build Upper Rooms
And thither go.

A MODERN CLASSIC AGAINST MODERNISM
The
LEAVEN of the SADDUCEES
By ERNEST GORDON
"The greatest broadside against Liberalism that has been put out in this generation"

An indictment of modernism on grounds of moral obliquity. . . . An interesting and important exhibit in the present controversy.—Chicago Evening Post (Literary Review).

I have read, marked and partially digested The Leaven of the Sadducees. This is grace after meat. . . . . Every statement is backed. . . . The Sadducee, like the snail, destroys the leaves of healing from the under side, hiding and gnawing.—Dr. O. Z. Gifford.

The Leaven of the Sadducees is a startling exposure of Unitarian designs on the evangelical churches of the United States. I think that all of us who have the ear of the public should seek to promote its wide circulation. If the facts which it contains are brought to the attention of the evangelical churches I believe they will be aroused to the most vigorous opposition to all these betrayers of trust.—Bishop Warren A. Candler, M. E. Church, South.

The most complete and convincing setting forth of the essential facts in the case of evangelical Christianity versus Modernism. . . . The saying, "the best defense is a rapid fire," is shown to be preeminently true by The Leaven of the Sadducees. I commend the book and bespeak for it the widest circulation.—W. Phillips Hall, President of the American Tract Society.

Written especially for the information of Ministers, Trustees of institutions, Fundamentalist leaders, Editors of the religious press, Teachers in seminaries, training schools, and colleges; and Christian laymen who are not informed of the real situation.

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

The easiest sin to commit may often be the hardest to repent of.

Wealth lies not in having much, but in needing little.

"He shall go before his enemy who can forego revenge."

"Let it be your first duty to teach the world that you are not of wood and straw; that there is some iron in you. Let men know that what you say you will do; that once resolved, you are not to be allured or intimidated."

Be thou like the bird perched upon some frail thing, although he feels the branch bending beneath him, yet loudly sings, knowing full well that he has wings.—Gasparin.

We are so sinful, Lord, so oft we fail,
And Thou forgivest in Thy mercy great,
May we, too, pardon, since our errors call
For Thy strange patience with our low estate.
—Selected.

From all the paralyzing can't of an unfelt devotion; from all the God-defying hypocrisy of an uplifted voice and a down-hanging arm; from all miserable mummery of a grand external ritual and a selfish un-Christ-like daily life, good Lord, deliver us! The only thing that Christianity wants just now is Christians.—Canon Wilberforce.

This is how men get to know God—by doing His will. And there is no other way.—Henry Drummond.

Such power there is in clear-eyed self-restrain
And purpose clean as light from every selfish taint.
—Lowell.

Instead of being psychoanalyzed and worrying over your 'repressions', you should turn your back on evil and outline a program of right living. You will not work out a finished Christian life by the end of the week, but you will have made a good start.—Dean Charles R. Brown.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it! if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principle, with a just fear of God and a love for our fellowmen, we engrave upon those tablets something that will brighten to all eternity.—Webster.

RUST

DeTocqueville, in his "Democracy in America", written in 1832—a book little read now, but well worth reading for its equally brilliant and instructive accuracy and inaccuracies of prediction and deduction—uses the symbol "individual egotism, which is the rust of society". Therein is insight and wisdom and much suggestion for practical thought. Metals and human minds actively and usefully employed escape rust.

Individual egotism is intensified selfishness and foolishness, permitted, cultivated and concentrated. A philosopher has defined vanity as the last infirmity of noble minds, the beginning of decay, forerunner of rust. It is the first and special infirmity of ignoble minds. Those who work faithfully and with real purpose have not the time to be vain. Those who apply the strength and possess the courage to direct and control and honestly use their own minds cannot be egotistical or selfish. Those who permit themselves to be obsessed by small ambitions, attainment of temporal temporary place or power or prominence, the getting of money for money's sake, the seeking of amusement or gratification of base or sordid desires, leave the larger and more important parts of themselves to rust and become not only useless, but soiling to all who touch them. Parts of us or the whole of us left idle gather rust as surely as unused iron. "An idle brain is the Devil's work shop" is an old, pithy maxim, but the Devil has no need to trouble himself to work in it. Left to itself, it surely rusts to selfishness, egotism and vanity to produce large or little sins and follies according to opportunity.

As with individual, so with society, churches, nations. Some of the richest blessings that have come to humanity have been by war, pestilence and famine; disaster, persecutions and martyrdoms of the righteous. These afflictions have roused to splendid action the noblest and most beautiful impulses and instincts. We pray to be delivered from them and when our prayer is granted and peace, safety and prosperity are given us we invite and encourage the calamity of rust, worse than any of the others. The fable of the strong and valiant dog made worthless when taken indoors and pampered fits with uncomfortable exactness of us, men and women, created with capacities for magnificent deeds in stress of danger or necessity and relapsing to insignificant things when left at ease. Jack Falstaff sagaciously pointed to a fact of our nature when he described his regiment of ragged reprobates as fruits of a calm world and long peace. In another age and country and with the other sex, Isaiah predicted woe and desolation for women of Jerusalem with nothing to do but make themselves comfortable.

Our country is strong, prosperous and at peace. Our Church is strong and prospering, fearing no persecutions or oppressions. Therefore, both are in danger and there is special need for all of us citizens and Churchmen to fight against rusting, individual egotism and selfishness, permitting our own interests and desires to monopolize our thought and work. "Mind your own business" is homely and sound sense, but if taken to mean that the welfare of neighbors, Church and nation is not part of our business it is abject cowardice and a treacherous sign post directing straight to the road to general ruin. Nineveh and Tyre and Babylon perished from wealth and power, apparent safety and resulting rusting away of individual patriotism, loyalty and virility as completely as did Sodom and Gomorrah under sudden rain of fire. The long procession of powers that have risen to supremacy and wealth and rusted to rottenness and obliteration is chronicled in the histories and spells urgent warning to us of here and now.

Individual egotism, envelopment of thought and purpose for ourselves, mean rust for Church, country and society. Deliverance from that peril may be won only by individual striving and self-searching and self-spurring by each man and woman of us in our varying places and spheres. Each of us has a share of the general responsibility for which we must account, evasion or neglect of which is treason to God and fellow man. The choice is with each of us. We may surrender to selfishness and spiritual and mental inertia and so rust ourselves and spread rust. We may, by ceaseless effort and self-discipline and self-denial, the price of success in all worthy endeavor, teach and train ourselves to be instruments and tools for the work of the Almighty. By sturdy resistance to inclination to indolence, by diligent and vigilant and faithful prayer and self-conquest, we can keep ourselves alive and doing. Active, thoughtful, loving interest in Church and country and community will save all of us from the rust which DeTocqueville ninety-five years ago foresaw as the danger coming on us from increasing wealth and strength. We have been delivered thus far. Some millions of us, each for himself or herself, fighting this rust, will make sure that country and Church shall go to the oncoming generations with power for the service of God and the advancement of mankind and energetic use of it continuing to increase.

Alfred B. Williams.

DIRECT APPEAL

We have listened to many sermons and addresses at the end of which we felt like saying, "One thing thou lackest". The address may have been very fine, and may have presented a very high ethical ideal, but ethical ideals save no one. The speaker tells people what they ought to do, but fails to tell them how they are to do it. It is a tragic fact in the lives of many today, both the nominal Christians and others, that they do now know where they may find power to have victory over sin and self.

The power that they need comes from Christ alone.

Ethics will not change people.

Christ alone can change them.

It is the entrance of His Spirit that can change the human heart. This change comes when they have met the conditions. They must repent of their sins and receive Christ into their hearts as Saviour. No amount of human effort can avail in place of this. For lack of this simple message, repent and receive Christ, hundreds of sermons and talks today are as fruitless as so much dead wood.

Many speakers and preachers never expect any results from their addresses. When St. Peter cried out in Jerusalem thousands turned to God. St. Paul created a stir whenever he preached, they fully expected that something would happen, and, as a result, many gave up their idols and their sins. Some men today can go through an entire lifetime without winning one soul for Christ.

Some act as though every member of the congregation were already perfect, and as though no one in the assembly before him had any idea of ever committing a sin. A man could be living with two wives, and could sit under some preachers without having his conscience even remotely disturbed. The writer heard of a case like that in one large congregation where a member of the congregation had been living in sin for months while the minister had never once thought of suggesting that there might be some before him who needed to repent and turn to God.

Even if some do suggest the possibility that there may be some who need a change in the congregation, they do not urge immediate decision. As a consequence some churches have never heard of a conversion, except in books. They say that a certain minister, who had never had a man converted under his ministry, borrowed a sermon from a minister who had them constantly. After he had delivered the sermon, a man came to him in great distress, his conscience aroused by what he had heard. Like the Philippian jailor he wanted to know what he msut do to be saved. The minister (more upset than the man) said, "I beg your pardon, but I did not mean to make you feel badly".

You who read this, how many have you won for the Master? One clergyman in the Church suggests that we should make the evening service an evangelistic one, and should give people an opportunity to come forward to the altar and consecrate their lives to God. We listened to a woman the other night who testified that she had found God after many years of wandering, when she had answered such a call at a mission in one of our churches and had gone forward to the altar rail to consecrate her life to God.

CHRIST'S TEACHING ON PRAYER

By Canon F. E. Howett

St. Luke 11:1-13.

THE privilege of prayer is the most wonderful, the most beneficent and most potential gift, apart from that of His only begotten Son and of the Holy Spirit, that God has bestowed upon His children. It can solve their problems, overcome their difficulties, banish their cares, heal their diseases, and procure for them every blessing they can possibly need, or that God Himself can bestow. By prayer we can move the arm that moves the world.

How necessary it is, therefore, to know how to pray. How greatly we need to make the prayer of the disciple of old our own, and say: "Lord, teach us to pray."

From our Lord's response to this petition, as contained in St. Luke 11:1-13, we learn at least four particulars in regard to prayer, namely: How to pray; What to pray for; When to pray; and what we may expect in response to prayer.

Let us study, then, Christ's teaching on Prayer.

In the Lord's Prayer we are taught both how to pray and what to pray for.

We have two versions of this wonderful prayer, one given by our Blessed Lord in His sermon on the Mount as recorded by St. Matthew (6:9-13), and the other given privately to an individual disciple, after our Lord Himself had been engaged in prayer. They would seem to have been given at least a year apart. They differ somewhat in their phraseology and content, but are substantially the same. From St. Matthew's version we learn that Christ would have us formulate our own prayers after this model, as He says: "After this manner therefore pray ye." While from St. Luke's version we are taught to use these very words, for His statement there is "When ye pray say".

Taking this fuller formula as given by St. Matthew, we find that the Lord's Prayer is divided into three parts, each of which demands our most careful consideration.

First, we have The Invocation: "Our Father which are in Heaven." To realize the full meaning of these words is to learn how to pray. There are four fundamental principles that must be complied with if our prayers are to be acceptable to God, and effectual for ourselves. Three of these have to do with the three Persons of the ever-blessed Trinity; the fourth has to do with our own attitude of mind and heart. To pray effectually we must make our petitions—

(1) According to the Will of God.
(2) In the Name of Jesus Christ; and
(3) By the enabling power of the Holy Spirit.

We must also (4) pray in faith. Now I want you to see that every one of these principles is involved and implied in the words of the Invocation to the Lord's Prayer. The very name, "Father" implies that those who use this prayer are God's children, and that relationship implies obedience to His will. Our Lord Himself so prayed: "Father if Thou be willing, remove this cup from Me; nevertheless, not My will, but Thine, be done." And He has taught us also to pray: "Thy will be done." St. John tells us: "If we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us: and if we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions we desired of Him." There is nothing that God will deny us if only this first condition be complied with. We may ask: "anything," "whatsoever."

Then if we would pray effectually, we must come to God in the Name of Christ. What are we to understand by this condition? Does it mean simply saying: "Lord, do this for Christ's sake?" It does mean that, but it means much more. To come in the Name of Christ means to come in union with Him, for the Name stands for the Person. The name is that by which the person is known. So when we come to the Father in Christ's Name it means coming in living union with Jesus Christ, through His intercession, depending upon Him and what He has done to procure every blessing for us. This is all implied in the word "Our". Has it ever struck you as strange that when our Lord gave His instruction as to private prayer, and when He taught an individual disciple to pray, He said: "When ye pray, say, Our Father?" Why did He not bid him say My Father? Simply because no one can pray that prayer, no one can ever come unto the Father but through Jesus Christ. As He Himself has taught us: "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." (John 14:6.) So when we pray this prayer intelligently and in faith we never pray alone. Christ always prays it with us, and therefore we must necessarily express it in the plural and say, not "my", but "Our Father".

Similarly the third condition of effectual prayer, namely, praying by the enabling power of the Holy Spirit, is also implied in the words of the Invocation, "Our Father", as it is the Holy Spirit alone Who can enable us to say, "Abba", which means Father, "for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us . . . according to the will of God." (Rom. 8:15, 26, 27.)

We see, then, what a wonderful thing prayer may be when it is real and effectual, calling into operation, as it does, each of the Persons of the Holy Trinity—God the Holy Spirit Who inspires, God the Son Who presents, and God the Father Who hears and fulfills the petitions that we make.

But there is a fourth condition, namely, Faith, and this, too, is implied and brought out in this simple invocation. St. Paul tells us (Heb. 11:6) that, "he that cometh to God must believe that He is and that He is the rewarded of them that diligently seek Him". This means much more than merely believing that there is a God. It means that when we pray we should believe that God is present to hear and to answer our prayers, and that we should trust Him so to do. Hence we are taught to say "Our Father Which art in Heaven", because heaven is the source and reservoir of every blessing, as St. James tells us: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father" (James 1:18); and God would inspire us to look up with confidence to Himself, asking large petitions and expecting large answers. "Have faith in God. For verily, I say unto you, that whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea, and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them" (Mark 11:22-24).

And now let us pass on to notice the second part of the Lord's Prayer, namely: the Petitions. You will observe that they are just seven in number. I shall never forget how wonderfully God illuminated this prayer to my own heart and mind by the realization of that fact. I had prepared a sermon on the Lord's Prayer, and was on my way to preach it, when suddenly the question came into my mind: "How many petitions are there in this prayer?" I saw at once that there were exactly seven. I said to myself, then, this must be a perfect prayer, for seven in Scripture is the number that means and indicates perfection. I had never thought of it so. As a matter of fact, I had regarded the Lord's Prayer as somewhat inadequate and insufficient. I never dreamed before that when you have prayed this prayer you have prayed in germ for everything it is possible to pray for. As I realized the number of the petitions, I asked myself another question: Will this seven respond to the general usage of this number in Scripture, namely: does it divide itself into its component parts of three and four? and I saw at a glance that it did. Three is the number of Divine manifestation as seen in the Triune Name of God (Gen. 3:15), in the Aaronic benediction (Num. 6:24-26), and in the Tersanctus (Isa. 6:31 and Rev. 4:8), while four is always the number of the earth and of man, as found in the four divisions of mankind (Rev. 17:15), the four corners and the four winds of the earth (Rev. 7:1), and in the four great world empires of Daniel 2 and 7. A glance will indicate that these seven petitions are plainly divided into three and four, showing that together they cover the whole field of Divine purpose, as well as of human need. But still a further question arose in my mind, I asked myself: Will each individual number in this mysterious seven respond to its numerical significance? and as I looked at the prayer once more, I saw that it did. The first three petitions give us the Divine side of this wonderful prayer, they are all Godward—"Thy", "Thy", "Thy", while the last four give us the human side, and are all manward—"Us", "Us", "Us". Let us examine each petition separately.

"Hallowed be Thy Name." This manifestly is the petition of God the Father in which we pray that we may be enabled to discharge every duty that we owe to Him. "Thy Kingdom come." Who is the King? By whom is the Kingdom coming? Is it not by Christ? He is God's King (Psa. 2:6). When He came into the world they asked, "Where is He that is born King"? (Matt. 2:2). And when He died they wrote over His Cross, "This is Jesus the King" (Matt. 27:37). In this brief petition of but three words we pray for the accomplishment of every purpose for which Jesus came to earth, and for which He is now waiting in glory. What did He come to do? The parable of the pounds (Luke 19:12) tells us: "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for Himself a Kingdom and to return." That was the supreme purpose for which Jesus came and suffered and died and rose again, and now intercedes in heaven. It was to purchase and gather out the subjects for His Kingdom and He is coming again to establish that Kingdom and to reign. So this is not only an evangelistic but a missionary petition, as well as a prayer for the speedy coming of our Blessed Lord to reign on earth. In it we pray that souls may be born again and so enter into Christ's Kingdom (John 3:3-5), that that Kingdom may grow and spread until the number of His Elect is made up that He may take unto Himself His great power and reign. But that does not exhaust the meaning of this marvelous petition. It carries the work of Christ to a finality, for we must not forget that we are praying: "Our Father . . . Thy Kingdom come," and St. Paul tells us that Christ, having reigned till He has put down all rule and all authority and power, will deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that God may be all in all. Beyond that point it is impossible for us to pray so far as the work of Christ is concerned.

"Thy Will be done in earth as it is in heaven." By whose power may we do the will of God? Who is it that works in us both to will and to do of God's good pleasure? Is it not the Holy Spirit, the third Person in the blessed Trinity? So this is evidently the petition of the Holy Spirit. Now when God's will is done on earth as it is being done by the holy angels in heaven, will not the work of the Holy Spirit be then accomplished? So we see that this petition, too, prays to a finality.

"Give us this day our daily bread." This is the central petition of the seven. It is the heart of the Lord's Prayer. It is the first petition on the human side. But what are we to understand by "daily bread"? Does it mean simply wheaten bread? It could hardly mean that for Our Lord has told us that: "Man doth not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). The bread, then, is Christ, Who is not only the Living Word (John 1:1), but also the Living Bread (John 6:35). I may add as corroborating this interpretation that the word "daily" in this petition is found nowhere else, either in the Bible or in the Classics, except in the Lord's Prayer. Jerome translates it literally by the word "supersubstantial"—"Give us this day our supersubstantial bread". It includes the wheaten bread, too, however, as well as every other needed blessing, for "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things". Thus in this first petition on the human side we pray that man's first and supreme need may be met. If we have Christ we have everything (1 Cor. 3: 21-23).

But turn now for a moment to the last petition on the human side, "Deliver us from evil", or the Evil One. These two petitions are really one, expressing as they do the positive and negative sides of the same truth. When we are finally and forever delivered from Satan and sin, where shall we be? It will matter little whether on earth or in heaven; it will be heaven then, and glory for all the redeemed. So you see this prayer on the human side, spans the whole of human need and there is nothing to pray for beyond that.

But now notice the completeness of these four human petitions as a whole. You know there is not only a Divine Trinity, but there is a trinity in man. He is tripartite. He has a body, a soul, and a spirit. Moreover the three Persons of the Holy Trinity bear relationship to the three constituents of the human trinity. God the Father is related to the spirit. He is the "Father of Spirits" (Heb. 12:9). He is the "God of the spirits of all flesh" (Num. 16:22, 27:16). When Jesus died on the Cross He prayed: "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit" (Luke 23:46). God the Son is related to man's soul. He is the Shepherd and Bishop of souls (1 Peter 2:25). He made His soul an offering for the sin of our souls (Isa. 53:10, 12), that He might redeem them. And God the Holy Ghost is related to man's body. "Your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost" (1 Cor. 6:19).

Thus we see that this prayer covers every need that man can know and that God can give. Bread, both spiritual and temporal, for the body; forgiveness, with all its blessings, for the soul; and victory, final and forever, leading to glory eternal, for the spirit. We see, then, that this prayer leads us to pray that we may be enabled to discharge every duty that we owe to God—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, and for the supply of every blessing that we need for our whole being—body, soul and spirit. It is, therefore, absolutely perfect. However much our own individual prayers may fall short, if we add this prayer to them, as we should, we shall make them complete.

Let me add a thought from the Rev. S. J. Andrew's valuable work on "Christianity and Anti-Christianity"—a thought that may be of value, especially at the present time. He says there seems to be good reason for believing that the clause, "Bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the Evil One" (R. V.), refers to the great temptation and to power of Satan, at the time of the end.

Just a word or two with regard to the Doxology or ascription of praise. The Revised Version of the New Testament compels us to retrain it, for praise is ever the marginal note to the effect that "many authorities, some ancient, but with variations add 'For Thine is the Kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever, Amen' ". While the revisers omit it we feel that the spirit of the New Testament compels us to refrain it, for praise is ever the concomitant of prayer, and surely, when we have prayed the Lord's Prayer appreciatively, realizing its scope and fullness, we shall long to render this due meed of praise to the gracious Giver of every blessing. And so we shall say, "For Thine is the Kingdom", for the work of Christ comes first in human experience, and we thus praise Him for all He has done. "And the power," for it is by the power of the Holy Spirit that every blessing we have received has been ministered to us, and we thus praise Him for all His grace and goodness. "And the glory," for God the Father is the Supreme Source and Giver of all things and we would render to Him glory for ever more, Amen.

In this wonderful discourse, our Lord proceeds to teach us also when to pray. He does this by way of the parable of the importunate friend. In this parable three persons are brought before us. It is needful to see clearly to whom they each refer and whom they represent. First, there is the friend who comes at midnight, who is starving, and, as the marginal reading gives it, "out of his way". He represents the poor lost and benighted sinner. He comes to one who should be able to help him in his need, and who should be able to minister to him Christ, the Bread of Life. But, sad to say, for while he might have had an all-sufficient supply for his needs he has allowed the whole day to pass without replenishing his own store. He represents the Christian out of communion, the Christian who should be a burning and a shining light for Christ, but who is nevertheless powerless through lack of prayer. The Friend to whom at last he goes, driven by his sense of need, and who is abundantly able to help him and give him as many loaves as he needs, is God our Heavenly Father, who is not only willing, but able to do for us exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think. Christ would teach us, then, "that men ought always to pray and not to faint" (Luke 18:1).

The concluding verses of this passage show us not only how we ought to avail ourselves of this gracious privilege of prayer, but what we may expect as the result if only we do. "And I say unto you, Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you". Here you have an illuminating acrostic. Taking the first letters of the words, Ask, Seek, Knock, we get ASK. To ask implies a single petition. To seek means persistent petition, and to knock repeated petition. So should we pray. And if we do, how encouraging and unlimited are God's promises of answer. "For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? Or, if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? Or, if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye, then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him."

IN FAVOR OF HARMONY

By the Reverend John S. Littell, D. D.

Rector of St. James' Church, West Hartford, Conn.

I.

WILL you let me say a few words in favor of harmony in the Church? A famous literary person once said he saw no reason why people should not be of one religion if they talked together every day. That is extravagantly hopeful. But it states the case for mutual understanding, indicating the gains we have coming to us when more people are well-informed and when our leaders are drawn together in a friendly spirit for the adjustment of misunderstandings and differences.

Our leaders may well mean not only those who go to Lausanne or the General Conventions, but the representatives of the Church in local communities. From great conferences we may expect a great deal. But nothing will avail for our communities of people without local understanding. The task of securing harmony which lies before us is probably far more huge and difficult than most of us imagine. But it is not a greater task than many of those undertaken and accomplished in recent years by science and industry.

I have a very little daughter who is struggling hard with data and processes. She is feeling her way towards mental processes such as that which leads to the result that if two melons cost twenty-five cents, four will cost fifty cents, and that adding two bears and four pigs makes six animals. One must be infinitely patient with people who are in pursuit of data and mental processes. We know that when we deal with children. And there is much reason to impress it upon our consciences that we require an equal patience with those who are extending their data and mental processes into fields of the highest and widest importance. Leaders easily get beyond the reach of the crowd. And as easily they get out of the range of each other. Patience and conference are essential preliminaries to harmony.

Your readers have noticed a great example of well-informed and sympathetic consideration of matters affecting our own Church in the syndicate articles by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the leading Congregationalist. His work is of a type calling for imitation.

We show at our worst when we fall so far as to misrepresent each other. If we are to have an era of reconstruction in Christianity we must claim from our leaders the utmost care in giving us a frank, fair and well-informed discussion of questions which are of concern to us.

Now and then it comes to one who is eagerly anxious to find in our leaders only the soundest and finest guidance, to confront an incident which shows that our standard of teaching is not high enough. May I give some illustrations a well known Catholic leader writes in The Living Church (July 9, page 331): "The dogma of the Immachlate Conception of our Lady and the dogma of her Assumption can be held as matters of pious opinion. There is a mass of accumulating argument in favor of these dogmas. But they have no warrant of Scripture, or of ecumenical authority, and they may not be taught as necessary to salvation." Now, in this quotation, the word we should expect to find is "evidence" and not "argument". It makes little difference who argues or how much, but what counts is the character of the data used in the argument. An indefinite statement of this kind does not lead anywhere and, therefore, is not worth making.

A Protestant lawyer writes in your columns (June 25) to substantiate his prophecy that in our Catholic Propaganda "the next step will be the substitution of the Roman Missal" for our liturgy. Rather jubilantly he says: "Now comes some documentary evidence." He quotes the "Holy Cross Magazine" in a statement that the Roman Breviary in an English translation will be used and sold by the Order. Every one knows the Mass is not in the Breviary, so this evidence does not apply to the case, and the proof is not made as intended. If the Order wants to praise God seven times a day as the Psalmist did, instead of twice a day as provided in our Prayer Book, their desire and their rule may serve as a spur to the devotion of those who omit even the twice a day. But it is hard to see how all the rest of us are in any position to forbid the intent of superior devotion on the part of those who wish to give their lives to union and common order in the undistracted and recurrent practice of prayer and praise. The Roman mass or some form of bad practice might be laid to Holy Cross members on proper evidence. And the Order may be held subject to criticism. But the Breviary will not serve the purpose of proof for which the lawyer has used it.

It would be easy to give other examples. But let us close with a principle. If we will have controversy, let it be with the highest standard. Our data and processes should be perfect. We should understand each other. The world is, as it always was, full of difficulty and portent. The hope of the Church for glorious service is greater now than ever before. Understanding is a means to harmony and harmony is a condition indicated by Our Lord for the success in His and our work.

II.

In the pursuit of harmony, there is no matter which can come before us which is more significant than the Holy Communion. It is strange that this which is intended to bind us to God and to bind us into unity together should be a matter of dissension. To a very great extent this is due to misunderstanding and mis-statement. If we are to work successfully and in harmony we should all do our best to clear away the misunderstanding and to avoid every mis-statement. To do this, we must get a firm grip of our data and mental processes. It is not an unusual thing to hear ministers of our Church accused of teaching the Roman dogma of Transubstantiation. We ought all to be perfectly clear in our minds before we think such a charge is true or repeat it in connection with any one. What does it actually mean? The dogma of Transubstantiation was decreed by the Roman Church in the year 1215. The Roman definition of Transubstantiation was not accepted by the other great part of the Catholic Church, the Eastern Orthodox. In the English Church, assuming that it was locally decreed there at once on its acceptance by the Churches subservient to Rome, it had a short run—only about three hundred years. Before 1215 it probably was accepted in effect, but it was not in force as dogma and any one might give to the Sacrament some other interpretation without regular cause for censure. Transubstantiation was a Roman development or definition of the words of Institution of the Sacrament found in the first three Gospels and in St. Paul. St. Paul and the Fourth Gospel add interpretative words. And in early Christian life we have this of A. D. 117, or before, from St. Ignatius: "They abstain from the Eucharist and from prayer, because they confess not that the Eucharist is the flesh of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who suffered for our sins, Whom the Father, of His goodness, raised up again." In our own Church today, the thought is expressed most clearly in the Thanksgiving after Communion and in the Prayer of Humble Access. The expressions of next importance in the Prayer Book are the definition of a Sacrament, in the Catechism, as an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace given unto us, etc. We have the Prayer of Consecration, which is addressed to God and not to the people. As supporting signs we have our hymns and the common structure of our Churches. Contrast with all this the Zwinglian Protestant custom. Any one might sit in a group at a table and talk with them about the Crucifixion and break bread and pass the cup; that was all. How entirely our own Church has kept off and away from this interpretation there is no further need to show. In the neighborhood in which I live, the modern Protestant denominations give little to hear of Communions. Those closest to our inheritance show most interest in it, as Lutherans and Methodists, averaging say once a month. The more extreme Protestants increase the infrequency. Almost all our Churches celebrate every Sunday. In the long years since Hartford was the original preserve of American Orthodox Congregationalism with its Seminary and its citizenship majority and prestige, it has actually allowed our Church to enter and to surpass it in the strength of parishes. I do not know what can be the cause of our progress unless it is our Sacramental gifts. However little some of us may have appreciated them or used them, we all in common have them. And in spite of our Revolutionary Tory sympathies which are still being freely played up against us we have managed to grow in numbers and in appreciation of the Sacramental privilege.

Now, that is our situation. And we who are most careful to teach according to, but not beyond, the authorization of the Gospels and St. Paul, the Prayer Book and the Hymnal, are sometimes accused of teaching or holding—as we do not—the Roman dogma of Transubstantiation. Now, in the interests of harmony amongst us, I ask you to go back to your books of authorization and to read the evidence carefully and to consider what you find there, and to take care how you use the word Transubstantiation in connection with your brethren of the ministry of this Church nor to hand about the charge of disloyalty. It seems to me that those who receive the Sacrament each Lord's Day and each Holy Day are more loyal to the leading of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America than those who receive the Sacrament once a month or two to six times a year. And the clergy who give their people a fair opportunity every week are more loyal to our own Church's leading than those—if such there still be—who give but one opportunity a month. It springs from Zwinglian experience that the bread and wine are tokens of the Body and Blood of Christ. From our experience and teaching we reach to the greater truth that the Body and Blood of Christ are the tokens of the Love of God. This indeed is Catholic. But it is not Romish. Let evangelicals and Prayer Book lovers take notice where harmony lies in this matter, and let us have an end of the suspicion of the loyalty of those who believe in the real presence of our adorable Lord and Saviour, in just the way in which He has promised to be present with us. Let us be justified in preferring His service to all others on any Lord's Day in the year. And as for Morning Prayer, let us all be thankful for all those who can and do say it as the Prayer Book title indicates it should be said, "Daily", and with it the intercessions and prayers which so well become the Christian and the pastor.

III.

If we were to have canons of Harmony, one of them might be that we should not posit a conflict where a conflict does not actually exist. We must expect our leaders to win our confidence in this respect. We may be quite sure that in this our leaders ardently desire to succeed. But it is far from an easy matter. For example, we might start a line of thought with an item in an editorial of yours on June 25. The Catholic Churches of the East, Eastern Orthodox, are in close agreement with ourselves. Separated from us from ages, they have kept steadily on in the old tradition handed down to them with a Christianity non-Roman and non-Papal and, on occasions of contact, very strongly anti-Papal. On major and secondary Christian matters they are our natural allies, agreeing with us in loyalty to primitive Christian truth. In some things of minor importance they have taken a line of their own which is not like ours. In forms they differ greatly from us as you would expect East to differ from West. You have spoken of the Eastern Church remaining in a fossilized state through the ages, unblessed by revivals or any visitation of the Holy Spirit. Now here I think we have a conflict made up where really there is none. I do not see how any of us can say that the Eastern Churches have been unblessed by any visitation of the Holy Spirit. Revivals they may not have had as we understand revivals. Fossilization they may have had in their larger corporate aspects as history is wont to picture them. But these aspects are not the true history of the Church. The true history is in the life of the parishes and people. They were living and working under economic, educational and other conditions very different from our own and very unfavorable to them. This may account for exterior fossilization. But has there not been a reality within? Those who have read "The Mother of All the Churches", published twenty years ago and presenting conditions before the Revolution, or Stephen Graham's Russian sketches, or met good Armenian and Greek Christians, or as I have, given last Communion to dying Greeks and let their Churches for Oriental services, had acquaintance with their priests and the confidence of their laymen, known of the heroism of the Armenians and the maryrdoms of the Russians, cannot be harsh in our judgments of these our brethren. In fact, I think some of us look up to them as truly great Christians. You trace their spiritual condition to their rejection of the double procession of the Holy Spirit. Many of us believe the East was right in not accepting this late amendment to the Creed and also that there was and is no real difference between us, in principle, though there by this slight difference in a word (filioque). But there was never that deep and strong conflict which you picture as rending the Church of God "over a diphthong". That conflict was long before. We may well give the Catholics of the Oriental Churches our friendship without the cloud of any of the considerations which you have advanced.

Coming nearer home, the great conflict over a diphthong is worth our attention. It determined whether Our Lord Jesus Christ is Divine or not. The diphthong was not much smaller than a minus sign. It makes some difference in your calculations whether you put in the minus sign or leave it out. So did that diphthong. One way it meant Our Lord was God and the other way it meant He was a God-like created being. If the latter, one would not worship Him with Divine worship, or pray to Him. Nicea, with vivid characters in the contest, with complex situations and after a long struggle, took the first position. The Divinity of Christ was the Catholic position and Nicea took it and the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States of America takes it. Each of us takes it every time at Communion we say the Nicene Creed. Thank God!

Some years ago, Bishop Brewster, of our Diocese, attended a meeting of the Protestant ministers of Hartford and vicinity, and spoke on Church unity. He said our plan of unity was based on the acceptance of Our Lord's Divinity, and cited the Nicene Creed. The leading men spoke against this condition, and none of those present supported it. One man said he could not accept the Son as of one substance with the Father, because he did not think God had any substance at all. Now, this man could understand you if you said that you quoted the substance of some one's remarks. He was used to this application of the term. But he did not take it in that this was nearer to the Greek meaning than if one were to say that substance meant wood or stone or water or gass. It was due to that failure to comprehend the term in Greek which stood for the underlying reality that these men unanimously opposed the Nicene statement of the Divinity of Christ which this Church of ours accepts. Some, no doubt, of those present, I know surely that some of them, would adhere to no statement of Our Lord's Divinity. To them, union with us would be possible only if we dropped the Divinity of Christ. Others habitually used prayer to Our Lord as one could only do to Him as Divine. By not understanding the Creed, they lost a valuable aid in worship and teaching. Here is a story, Nicea, full of vivid dramatic interest to those who know it and can tell it, as Canon Bright used to tell it at Oxford. It is of vital importance and it gives our local leaders a leadership in faith and towards unity, dispelling the semblance of difference between us and many other Christians, and offering them the aid to harmony and unity which they should have in the Nicene Creed.

WHAT IS FUNDAMENTALISM?

By the Reverend W. B. Riley, D. D.

PART II.

But to our second assertion:

IT IS THE CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

CREED alone is neither competent nor convincing. Creed, in the abstract, is cold and dead, but creed incarnate constitutes Christianity as positively as the Word incarnate constituted the Christ.

Christianity roots in a creed and fruits in character. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It was that truth that James sought to set before his brethren centuries since, "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? . . . Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. . . . A man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works". In fact, that is the only faith that is ever seen. If the other exists at all, it is forever invisible and ineffective. The longer one lives and the more closely he observes upon his fellows, the more profoundly is he impressed with this truth.

Years since, I produced and employed an argument in connection with the anti-saloon campaign that I thought logical and effective. I now believe that it was extremely faulty. I used to say that "the true prohibitionist is the man who votes the prohibition ticket. He may be drunk the day before and drunk again the day after election but if he sobers enough to reach the polls and cast a vote against the infamous thing, he has proven himself a true prohibitionist. The man who votes against prohibition may never have tasted liquor in a lifetime, and yet his vote proves him a friend of intemperance". Both sides of the argument were faulty. The fact is that the true prohibitionist is the man who combined a vote against the saloon with sober living, who incarnated his creed in his daily conduct; for the first man, by his patronage of the saloon, proved his willingness to have it continued, and the second man, by his vote for the same, united his influence with the conduct of the first, and both of them proved that creed apart from conduct is not sufficient and that conduct apart from creed is not adequate. He is not a true Christian, then, whose conduct is exemplary, but who doubts or denies the Christ and disputes the revelation to be found in His Holy Word. He is merely a "Behaviorist", and in nine cases out of ten behavior is a product of Christian principles and practices set before him by a faithful Christian father, or a godly mother. And he is not a Christian who holds tenaciously to each and every one of the thirty-nine points of the Westminster Confession, or adopts even the ninety-seven theses of Martin Luther, but who, in spite of his orthodoxy in creed, is heterodox and bestial in conduct.

The man who combines an unshaken faith in the authority and integrity of the Bible with an aggressive uprightness in conduct, is the man who approaches, in some human measure, the perfect copy in the Christ life, for in His words the most watchful enemies were unable to catch Him, and against His works no worthy objection was ever urged. Even His enemies were compelled to admit, "Never man spake like this man" (John 7:46), and to question, "Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works"? (Mt. 13:54).

Herbert Booth, the youngest son of General Booth, published a few years since a book entitled "The Christian Confederacy", in which he plead, as only a Booth can plead, for the combination of high contact with correct creed. Of that combination Booth said, "The times are ripe for it, and nothing else will do. We must cry with the utmost boldness, 'This way for a fight to the finish, a fight that asks no quarter from the world, the flesh or the devil'. No cowards wanted here! No clever compromisers with the treacherous spirit of the age; no cunning contrivers who practice the art of 'holding the truth in unrighteousness'; no renegades who hold back their gospel weapons from attack while doing the 'popular' works which win the applause of men; none who doubt God or Jesus, His only begotten Son, or His everlasting Gospel or His ever-present Spirit. Keep out, all of you! The object of this Confederacy is to raise up and gather a host whose faith shall be a challenge to the world's unbelief, whose happiness in the service of God shall put to shame the pleasures of the worldly Christians who go down to Egypt for their enjoyments, whose voices shall be raised in the churches and throughout the world as a protest against the cringing doubt which covers itself with ambiguous and plausible phrases because it is afraid to show its face in the open; these are the heroes we want"!

The proofs of fundamentalism, then, are not in words, but in deeds. This has been the conception of fundamentalists from the first, for while the World's Christian Fundamentals Association, as an organization, is but nine years old, Christian fundamentalism has back of it two thousand years of glorious history.

It was fundamentalism that produced the book of Acts. You will find every essential feature of our creed in Peter's sermon at Pentecost, even to the Second Coming.

It was fundamentalism that conquered the Roman Empire, and in one hundred years revised the conduct of men and brought in established laws of righteousness, including regard for the Sabbath, the rights of the Church in the state, and the recognition of law vs. anarchy.

It was fundamentalism that challenged corrupt Rome in Martin Luther's time and called out a people whose clean and wholesome conduct became the condemnation of foul papal practices, and turned the thought of the general public from the coercive measures of a corrupt Church to the intelligent and voluntary service of the King of glory.

It was fundamentalism that faced the heresy of Deism one hundred and forty years ago, and in an open and fair field fought the battle to the finish, and slew that infidel monster as effectually as Saint George was ever imagined to have trampled the dragon.

And it was fundamentalist evangelists who so uniformly led the common people back to the "faith once delivered" as to practically bury atheism out of sight for one hundred years.

But, to battling fundamentalism has forever added building. Of all the colleges that Congregationalism, of nearly one hundred years ago, contributed to America, commencing with Harvard in the East, dotting practically every state in the Union with at least one, fundamentalism built the entire line. The same remark applies to the Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist institutions known to the whole American Continent.

In Chicago a few days since, Arthur Wells, vice-president of the Santa Fe Railroad system, handed me an excerpt from that memorable after-dinner speech of James Russell Lowell when he had been both preceded and profoundly stirred by infidel utterances, and in the course of which he said, "Whatever defects and imperfections may attach to a few points of the doctrinal system of Calvin, the bulk of which is simply what all Christians believe, it will be found that Calvinism or any other ism which claims an open Bible and proclaims a crucified and risen Christ is infinitely preferable to any form of polite and polished skepticism which gathers as its votaries the degenerate sons of heroic ancestors, who, having been trained in society and educated in schools, the foundations of which were laid by men of faith and piety, now turn and kick down the ladder by which they have climbed, and persuade men to live without God and leave them to die without hope".

Of what value is our boasted accomplishment of mechanical and electrical and chemical discoveries, if, while they are contributing to our material prosperity, they are more rapidly still undermining our morals. The whole doctrine of evolution is not only lacking a single illustration in the processes of nature, but it is being disproved by the program of man, for mechanical invention resulting in moral decay, is not even progress, but degeneration instead. Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome—each of them reached a climax of material development and then deliberately committed suicide by moral degeneracy.

Certain advocates of evolution are beginning to fear the repetition of history, and even Henry Fairfield Osborn utters his warning, "Our age needs the lofty moral teachings of the Bible", and follows it with a sane statement, "Our youthful confidence in the powers of reason has been shattered; like Icarus, we have taken our flight, and the wings of reason have ceased to sustain us".

The future of fundamentalism is not with claims, but with conquests. Glorious as is our past, history provides only an adequate base upon to build. Fundamentalists will never need to apologize for the part they have played in education; they have produced it; for their relationship to colleges and universities and theological seminaries, and all forms of social service, they have created them!

Even Walter Rauschenbusch, famed higher critic as he was, pertinently asked, "Has the Church not lifted woman to equality and companionship with man, secured the sanctity and stability of marriage, changed parental despotism to parental service, and eliminated unnatural vice, the abandonment of children, blood revenge, and the robbery of the shipwrecked from the customs of Christian nations? Has it not abolished slavery, mitigated war, covered all lands with a network of charities to uplift the poor and the fallen, fostered the institutions of education, aided the progress of civil liberty and social justice, and diffused a softening tenderness throughout human life?

"It has done all that, and vastly more. The influence of Christianity, in taming selfishness and stimulating the sympathetic affections, in creating a resolute sense of duty, a staunch love of liberty and independence, an irrepressible hunger for justice and a belief in the rights of the poor, has been so subtle and penetrating that no one can possibly trace its effects. We might as well try to count up the effect in our organism of all the oxygen we have inhaled since our first gasp for breath. In so far as humanity has yet been redeemed, Christianity has been its redemption."

Rauschenbusch dared not say, what history demanded of him, that each and every one of these conquests has been the fruit of fundamentalism. But even that is not enough! Now that modernism has come in to filch from us these creations of our creed, we must either wrest them from bandit hands or begin and build again.

In the last few years; in fact, since the modernist highwayman rose up to trouble the Church and snatch its dearest treasures, it has shown itself as virile as the promise of Christ, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it", ever indicated.

Today there are one hundred schools and colleges connected with our Fundamental Association, some of which have escaped covetous clutches of modernism, but most of which have been brought into being as a protest against modernism itself. Their growth has been so phenomenal as to prove that the old tree is fruitful still, and that the finest fruit is to be found upon its newest branches, orthodox Churches, fundamentalist colleges, sound Bible training schools, evangelical publication societies, multiplied Bible conferences and staunch defenders of the faith in ever increasing numbers in each denomination. In fact, so fruitful is our movement that the Christian Register, the one clear mouthpiece of modernism, is not only alarmed, it is discouraged, and says, "Protestantism is in eclipse. Christianity enters a new dark age. The modernists who arose in the various denominations to fight fundamentalism and to bring new freedom to the Churches have all retired; their movement has collapsed; victory rests with the fundamentalists". While Harbor Allen, in a recent magazine article on "The War Against Evolution", makes a kindred concession as to the triumphs of fundamentalism. There is in my possession at this moment a communication from one Rev. Henry G. Ives of Unity Church, Amhurst, Mass., a radically resentful review of my book, "The Blight of Unitarianism", and it contains compliments to be appreciated. For instance, speaking of the President of the Fundamentalist Association, he says, "This opponent happens to be a big man, and he has millions trotting behind him", and he also voices his alarm after this manner, "This man wakened me up! If we Unitarians are not loyal to our gospel of the twentieth century Christianity, the Christianity of the sixteenth century will either take its place or other hands than ours must carry the torch". We beg leave to correct our brother at one point only, leaving to other writers the certainty of criticism for what he has said of us. We suggest to him that it is not the Christianity of the sixteenth century that will whelm modernism in every form, but the Christianity of the first century—in fact, the Christianity of all centuries, that will continue to bear the torch that has ever dispelled darkness and it will exalt Him who is the Light of the world.

Before passing from this point let us remark that the greatest menace to fundamentalism today is not the outright modernist. It is that middle-of-the-roader who is milking his denomination with one hand and every wealthy fundamentalist approachable with the other, in behalf of what he maintains will be "a new fundamentalist theological seminary", but who, when once the bucket is filled, will walk away with the same to turn it over, again, as has been so often done, to the enemies of Christ. It is this course, employed by not a few in the last five years, that makes it difficult for the sound fundamentalist institutions to secure help from those who believe with them.

Mark what I tell you. Five years more will fix theological affiliations to such an extent that these hypocritical pretenders will be branded forever as they deserve, and the institutions over which they preside will be passing through the same court procedure that Andover endured for years, to have the final and supreme decision rendered against their covert and cowardly course, and the clash of true fundamentalists, living and dead, turned again into those channels of education for which its donors resolutely intended.

ENGLISH PRAYER BOOK REVISION.

Mr. Editor:

Through the courtesy of a friend, who escapes my thanks by remaining anonymous, the Southern Churchman is being sent to me, and I need hardly say that I, like every one else, cannot read it otherwise than with respect. It is to the benefit of the Church that every school of thought should be fairly represented; and it is therefore with no cavil at the policy of your paper that I venture to comment upon the article on English Prayer Book Revision, by "Iconoclast", but only because of certain misapprehensions in that article which ought not to be allowed to pass without criticism.

If the cry of "no popery" and the continued representation of the whole Catholic Movement as Romanizing suits the temper of "Iconoclast" the only harm it can accomplish is the destruction of any capacity in him for discrimination. But the mis-statement of fact and the confusion of issues in his article are everybody's business.

In the first place, in his attempt to foist the Prayer Book of 1552 and the shifting opinions of Cranmer upon us as the Olympian and final utterance of the Anglican Reformation, he has, in one point, at least, over-reached himself. For the American Prayer Book, in the Eucharistic Canon (which is, of course, the vital matter) has as its source, not the English book of 1552, but the Scotch book of 1637, which is substantially the Canon of 1549; and with this, as every one knows, Gardiner professed himself satisfied.

But what of Cranmer's views? To begin with, the first part of "Iconoclast's" quotation has a doctrine nothing short of Zwinglian; but the last part of it illuminates clearly a fact which more modern scholarship has already thrown into relief, namely, the murkiness, not only of Cranmer's own opinions, but of the theological atmosphere generally at the end of his life. The discussion of the Sacrament in the Lord's beginning, December 14, 1548, in which Cranmer and Tunstall were the chief disputants, shows unmistakably the difficulty at that time of finding any position between the denial of a Real Presence and the assertion of a carnal Presence. The attempt to find such a position was clearly made by others, as for example, Sampson of Lichfield, who, "though he refused to accept Cranmer's doctrine, objected to the word 'transubstantiation', thought the new book (of 1549) 'very godly', and added that he never thought Christ's Body in the Sacrament to be present 'so grossly as divers there alleged' ". As between Cranmer's and Tunstall's opinions, Calvin's "virtual Presence" would be more in line with Catholic feeling. The attempt to apprehend a spiritual but veritable Presence has been the task of later Anglican theology, though even Ridley, at that same discussion, asserted that "the bread of Communion is not mere bread, but bread united with Divinity, as a burning coal is more than a coal for there is fire in it".

But after all, it is not a question of Cranmer's views, any more that of Andrewes', or Pearson's, or Laud's, who might be set against him, and who had the added merit of speaking more authoritatively for the Church when once she had had time to take stock of her position. The real point—and that of which "Iconoclast" takes no account—is that the corporate mind of the Anglican Church has, as a matter of history, moved steadily away from the position of 1552, and that every revision of the Prayer Book, both in England and abroad, has been part of a process of recovery in the direction of the book of 1549.

The victory of Knox, Bucer, Hooper, and the Council, in forcing a denatured book on the Church was short-lived, and its fate epitomized in the career of the Black Rubric, which, I suppose, should have been part of our "glorious Protestant inheritance". Curiously enough, that Declaration was introduced surreptitiously at the last minute, over the protest of Cranmer himself, and was contemptuously dropped in the Elizabethan book, to be reinserted in 1662 with its fangs drawn by men of notoriously "high" sacramental opinions.

Moreover, the elimination of the Declaration, and the reinsertion of the traditional Words of Administration were mere symptomatic of a changing attitude and prophetic of what was to come. For the mind of the Church could not properly be expressed, and its latent catholicism reasserted until the country and the Bishops, to say nothing of the Queen, had had ample opportunity to see Protestantism at work in the propaganda of the Puritans. It was precisely "Iconoclast's" doctrine of the sole sufficiency of Scripture which animated the Puritans; while the Church in her struggle against the extinction which the Puritans planned for her, was driven more and more to assert the authority of ecclesiastical tradition. The fact is that the English Reformation is to be understood, not in the confused flare of Edwardine commotion, but in the light of the deliberate self-consciousness which reached a reasonable measure of maturity between 1559 and 1600. When Andrewes spoke for the Church against the Puritans, in his sermons, and against Rome, in his controversies with Bellarmine and Duperron, he spoke for a Church that had come to know its own mind, and, moreover, with a conceded authority which few men have enjoyed.

Through all this time the Anglican Church has been finding herself, as she has grown to international prominence, and "Iconoclast" deludes himself in supposing that the present revision in England of the work of Romanizers who follow the terrible Pusey. In any case, facts are facts; and the combined forces of the extreme Catholics and the Protestant Alliance have not prevailed to stop the passage of the new book in the Church Assembly by an overwhelming majority.

July 25, 1927.

The letter following was sent to the Southern Churchman from London, England, by Bishop Brown three days before his death.

To Whom it May Concern:

I am writing this to introduce Mr. William A. Powell, a son of a former beloved clergyman of the Diocese, and when a boy a pupil of mine at the Episcopal High School near Alexandria. Mr. Powell has undertaken, together with other work, to secure subscriptions for the Southern Churchman.

I need not speak of the past traditions of the Southern Churchman, as they are well known, and they have secured the services of the Rev. Pembroke W. Reed as Editor-in-Chief, who will, I am confident, be faithful to these traditions and will face the problems of the day unafraid and with open heart and mind.

I cordially commend Mr. Powell and the Southern Churchman to your favorable consideration.

Faithfully yours,

(Sgd) WM. CABELL BROWN,
Bishop of Virginia.

You are having good time fighting competition and darn fool laws and making your bank grow, staying young and alive because you are in the fight.

I envy you because you have ambition to grow and win. You are the livest banker in the State, in fact the only one that has a rep. of an original idea. Go to it. Luck to you.

A TRUE WITNESS OF THE FAITH.

Dear Mr. Editor:

My good friend, W. H. Parker, whose article appears in your June issue, was kind enough to send me a copy.

I receive a large number of periodicals (more than I can properly digest) and also see "The Churchman" occasionally, but on thus seeing the "Southern Churchman" for the first time, I rejoiced much that there was found therein a true witness of "the faith once for all delivered unto the saints".

The rising tide of the forecasted apostasy is surging all about us; yet the world sleeps on. Would that the ministers of all the denominations might awake to the solemn situation, especially those who have departed from the Word of Truth as raging waves of the sea foaming out their own shame. Can it be possible that those who minimize the blood-bought way to eternal glory are blind to the warnings of their own eternal doom. Gal. 1:9; Rev. 21:8.

I congratulate you on being one of our Lord's faithful witnesses, and my best salutation is in Heb. 6:10, and may he use your Journal mightily until the days of His grace shall end and the wrath of His righteous judgment break forth.

Very sincerely,
(Sgd) J. T. BOUGHER.

DEFENDS THE BIBLE.

Mr. Langbourne Williams,
Richmond, Va.

Dear Sir:

I like your article in the Southern Churchman, a copy of which you gave me in your office, and thank God heartily for every man who defends the inspiration of God's blessed Book, the Bible. In these days of human smartness, usurping the place of divine authority in so many places. May the great God sustain and assist you in the bold steps you take against this American Sanhedrin composed of modernists, evolutionists, etc., who are sitting in judgment on Jesus and His words and condemning Him again as of old. I would humbly repeat the words of St. Paul: Stand fast in the faith and having done all stand, and God will be with you.

I have about exhausted the supply of gospel tracts you paid for, "A Full, Perfect and Sufficient Sacrifice Oblation and Satisfaction for the Sins of the World, the Blood of Jesus", and have gone again to the printer to get an estimate on 50,000 more, which by using the plates already linotyped, can get them done for about fifty cents per 1,000—or $23 for 50,000—a little less than fifty cents per thousand.

I shall place the order for them as soon as the Lord enables me to do so.

C. H. GOOTEE.

THE POWER OF THOUGHT

WHAT is man that Thou art mindful of him. Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet."

Jesus said: "He that believeth in Me the works that I do, shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do."

Thought is the intelligence which is collected by the brain for the mind to work on. Thought is a silent but radiant force, and should we fail to catch its gleams from the infinite mind as it flashes its vibrations before our eyes, or cease to allow the light of God's countenance to shine through us in expression of His glory, then we have repudiated by deed the plan of the mind of our Creator.

Thought produces energy and energy creates force, which in time produces action and motion.

"There is not an impulse nor an emotion that has not back of it the sustaining power of the mastermind—yet, there is given to man an endowment which allows him to regulate this power in a way that will enrich his life, and through an individual initiative sustain his particular charm and expression."

Speech is a cultivated talent. Thought is nature's method of communication. Each thought has its corresponding tone of voice—the thought of love its tone, and the thought of hate its tone. Very few people think original thoughts—that is, thoughts that they draw from the great source of intelligence.

Psychologists tell us that the third strongest characteristic of the subconscious mind is to follow the multitude, or it might be said, the easy thinkers.

Dr. C. W. Emerson said: "The language of tone is the language of spheres; it is the language of the universal world; it is the language of the angels."

The life of man is governed by three influences: personal thoughts, the thoughts of others, and circumstances.

History tells us that at the siege of Buda in 1625, the garrison was in the direst straits, the scurvy had become epidemic, and there seemed to be nothing left to do but surrender, and no doubt it would have done so had not the Prince conceived an idea and save the day by the exercise of thought, or trained mind power. It is said that he sent an officer to announce to the men that he had secured an infallible cure for the dread disease, and that he would personally administer the remedy to each man. He gave each man a few drops of the precious fluid, and at the same time impressed upon them the value of its efficacy. It is said the effect of this thought upon their minds was instantaneous and they were all cured, the garrison made whole and in a few days able to fight for victory—not a drug but the power of thought, the fluid being nothing but pure water.

"As a man thinketh so is he."

In the domain of the mind, distance and density of matters are not recognized. Therefore, one portion of physical matter can as easily be influenced and controlled as another. All men are made of the same material and are governed by the same law.

"Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels. Thou hast given him dominion over the works of Thy hands."

By thought we not only shape and control physical bodies, but we also, in a degree, form and control the bodies of others. Does not history tell us that the woman who sat for weeks watching painters decorate the interior of the Cathedral became the mother of Michael Angelo, the great artist? History also tells us that the mother of Napoleon, before his birth, constantly visited the battlefields, studied military tactics, reviewed and experienced with her husband the life of a soldier.

Our environment and the condition of our lives, both physically and financially, are the results and expressions of the thoughts of those around us, and those near on distant, with whom we have dealings.

Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury said:

"When I turn to contemplate the works of nature, I am struck with the admirable systems of compensation, with the beauty and nicety with which every department is poised by the others; things and principles are meted out in direction the most opposite, but in proportion so exactly balanced and so nicely adjusted, that results the most harmonious are produced. Nay, philosophy teaches us, when the little snow-drop which in our garden walks we see raising its beautiful head to remind us that the Spring is at hand, was created that the whole mass of the earth from pole to pole, and from circumference to center must have been taken into account and weighed in order that proper degree of strength might be given to the fibre of every little plant, and that the observation of the unerring laws of the plant life are so accurately established that the construction of this little plant is such as to require that at a certain stage of its growth the stalk should bend and he flower should bend its head that an operation may take place, which is necessary in order that the herb should produce seed of its kind; and after this its vegetable health requires that it should lift its head again and stand erect."

And yet with such perfect adaptations, such exquisite adjustments in the natural laws, and such accuracy in the controlling of the elements, without the guiding thought of human mind the flowers of the field would grow into an unrecognizable wilderness.

"An ethereal sea ebbs and flows, surges and washes hither and thither, carrying its whole virtue into every creek and inlet which it bathes."

"To this sea every human house has a waterfront. Every truth is a power. Every idea from the moment of its emergence begins to gather material forces—after a little while makes itself known. It first works on thoughts, then on things; makes feet, and afterwards shoes; first hands then gloves; makes men and so the age and its material soon after.

"The history of the world is nothing but a procession of clothed ideas. As certainly as water falls in rain on the tops of mountains, and runs down into valleys, plains and pits, so does thought fall first in the best minds, and runs down from class to class, until it reaches the masses and works revolutions."

"Great men are they who see that mental force is stronger than material force; that thought rules the world" (Emerson).—The Richardson Review.

A DESCRIPTION OF JESUS.

Written by Publius Lentullus, President of Judea, in the Reign of Tiberius Caesar, to That Monarch in Rome.

Under the above title a tiny booklet appeared in 1913, and was speedily snowed under by war literature. It had this preface:

"The following was taken from a manuscript now in the possession of Lord Kelley, and in his library, and was copied from an original letter of Publius Lentullus at Rome. It being the custom of Roman governors to advertise the people and Senate of such material things as happened in their province, in the days of Tiberius Caesar, Publius, President of Judea, wrote the following epistle to the Senate concerning the Christ".

Then comes a description of the personal appearance of our Saviour, which is so respectful and so beautiful that we feel sure it will interest readers:

"There lives at this time in Judea a man of singular virtue whose name is Jesus Christ, whom the barbarians esteem as a prophet, but His followers love and adore Him as the offspring of the immortal God. He calls back the dead from the graves and heals all sorts of diseases with a word or touch. He is a tall man, well shaped and of amiable and reverend aspect; His hair of a color that can hardly be matched, falling into graceful curls, waving about and very agreeably couching upon His shoulders; parted on the crown of His head, running as a stream to the front after the fashion of the Nazarites; His forehead high, large and imposing; His cheeks without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with a lovely red; His nose and mouth formed with exquisite symmetry; His beard, and of a color suitable to His hair, reaching below His chin and parted in the middle like a fork; His eyes bright blue, clear and serene, look innocent, dignified, manly and mature. In proportion of body most perfect and captivating; His arms and hands delectable to behold.

"He rebukes with majesty, counsels with mildness, His whole address, whether in word or deed, being eloquent and grave. No man has seen Him laugh, yet His manners are exceedingly pleasant; but He has wept frequently in the presence of men. He is temperate, modest and wise. A man for His extraordinary beauty and divine perfection, surpassing the children of men."

The Great Commission

BUDAPEST-WARSAW CONFERENCES, 1927.

From some twenty countries a hundred or more workers among Jews, men and women, came together last April in Budapest and Warsaw, to consider the vitally important subject of the Christian message to the Jews. Dr. John R. Mott presided at both the conferences.

The Rev. D. S. Newgewirtz, of the Montreal Jewish Mission, says, in The Montreal Churchman: "In itself it is a notable event that so many representatives from diverse countries and churches should have met together and come to real agreement on so many salient points. For although the delegates were united in a common purpose, there were so many natural diversities of standpoint and outlook that one might well have despaired of reaching any practical results. On a single day of the conference, for instance, speeches were delivered in English, French, German, Yiddish, Hungarian and Polish, and yet the great love of Jewish evangelization united such disparate elements into a real unity."

One of the most informing and alarming discussions centered around the unoccupied fields. Speaker after speaker drove home the lesson that there are millions of Jews who have forsaken their own religion and are yet untouched by any Christian agency. There was a desolate sense of the inadequacy of all present operations in face of this pressing need. Following from this, it was vividly shown what a social, political, and religious danger unconverted Jewry might become, if, having given up the bonds and sanctions of their own ancient religion, the Jews should be left without Christian teaching.

There is an urgent call to individual Church members everywhere, to consider afresh their responsibility to Jewish evangelization. A knowledge of the modern problem with its opportunities and dangers must be made general.

A special point was made of situations where Jews are resident in parish areas in Christian lands. It was urged that evangelistic work should be undertaken on their behalf by the local churches and agencies. It is fatally common for churches to neglect the needs of the Jews resident in their own parishes.

It was declared again and again that the most evident stumbling-block to Jewish work is the imperfect living of nominal Christians.

TWO WEEKS WITH THE ARCHDEACON OF UTAH.

Two weeks' work for the Archdeacon of Utah, in June, outlined by request, began with a trip from Provo, where he is in charge of St. Mary's Church, to Logan, in the northern end of the state, one hundred and thirty miles each way, to take over the work from the Rev. Allen Jacobs, who was leaving for the Cathedral in Reno.

Next came a trip to the Coal Camps at Helper, where he hopes to build a church this summer. Helper is the center of some two dozen or more coal camps on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, about ninety miles southeast of Provo. There are quite a number of Churchmen in these camps. The larger part of the population is composed of miners from the British Isles who are more in sympathy with our Church than with the denominations. The Home Missions Council of Utah some years ago asked us to promote work there.

The following Monday at daybreak Archdeacon Bulkley started on a three hundred and thirty-mile drive through the hills and across the desert to Ely, Nevada, where he arrived at five P. M., to meet the Bishop, returning from the Church Congress at San Francisco, and take him to Ibapah.

Then followed one hundred and ten miles to the Ibapah Indian Reservation, in Western Utah. There are a couple of hundred Indians on the Reservation. No religious work has been done there. The agent, Mr. Briganze, is anxious to have us take services there and it is planned to do so.

Then back, two hundred and seventy-five miles across the Salt Desert and Wendover Road to Provo, to get ready for Sunday. This, Mr. Bulkley says, is not much more than ordinary summer work.

The Assyrian School in Mosul closed in June, for the summer, with a ten days' examination, oral and written, and a distribution of diplomas and prizes.

The Rev. John B. Panfil, American chaplain at Mosul, writes: "There were three hundred and seventy-one children admitted during the whole year, including fifty-two girls. Thirty of them left the school during the months of April and May, some going to Russia or to the villages. One hundred and eleven presented themselves for the final examination. They were scared after the first day when they saw strange people coming to examine them. I invited many notables of Mosul, English and Arabs, to come for the purpose. In general they did well, and I am sure that next year, in view of such an examination, they will be more assiduous in their studies. Mr. Jardine, the Administrative Inspector, gave diplomas to four boys. Other British officers and Lady Surma distributed prizes. At the end, ice cream was served to the children. A big courtyard, granted to us for the occasion, was filled to capacity with invited persons from Hosul and Assyrians. The local papers commented sympathetically about the Assyrians in general."

THOSE WHO WALK IN SILENCE.

Josephine Tighe.

Too plainly, So!
I heard Fate snap her fingers in my ears;
And then, ah, then, I never heard again.
The drums are muffled, evermore, for me.
The wistful peep of tiny birds is stilled,
Gone is the sound of wind in pungent pines;
Forever hushed the lap of waves that quarrel
In white-capped lines.

Muted always
Those slender strings taut on my Harp of Life!
I only know the morn is drenched with song
When I can see the lark's deep-throbbing throat.
Constantia singing of her love for me
I sense but by the glory of her eyes—
But, Oh, what lyric, liquid music wells
In those dear eyes!

Church Intelligence

China News Bulletins.

Cables have been received on August 4 as follows:

From Bishop Roots:

Recommending that Miss Coral Clark should plan to work in the United States for the present.

Asking that Miss M. G. Cabot should return to the Church General Hospital, Wuchang, in September.

Asking that Miss Martha Boynton be appointed as secretary in succession to Miss Couch, and that she come out in September and begin studying the language.

That Miss M. J. Ravenel, of the Church General Hospital, return if her health is satisfactory. It is probable that Miss Ravenel will have to delay departure as in May our medical adviser reported she should have nine months in this country.

From Bishop Graves:

Reporting that the Chinese families that have been occupying our mission residence on Lion Hill have been forced out and the residence occupied by others. The cable does not state whether the residences have been taken over by the army. This seems likely in view of previous experience at Wuhu and elsewhere, and in view of the concentration of troops of the Hankow Government along the Yangtze preparatory to taking Nanking, in accordance with the purpose announced by spokesmen for the Hankow Government.

From Bishop LaMothe:

That the Rev. Y. T. Kong, rector of St. Peter's Church, Honolulu, died August 1. Many China missionaries who have passed through Honolulu will recall Mr. Kong and his admirable work.

Warning.

I would be glad if you would caution the clergy of our Church against Harry C. Pannill. This man claims to be traveling in connection with a matter concerning the Order of Elks and is appealing to the clergy on the ground of lack of funds.

While his request for assistance is small, I understand he actually has in his possession a considerable amount of money, although claiming to be destitute. The Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of the B. P. O. E. writes that that fraternity recognizes no financial, moral or fraternal duties to this man.

Rt. Rev. W. A. Guerry, D. D., Bishop.

The Rev. R. H. Jackson Leaves Charleston.

The Rev. Roderick H. Jackson, who has completed his third year as rector of Christ Church, Charleston, preached his farewell sermons to the congregation on Sunday, July 31. He will enter foreign missionary work in Japan, for which he volunteered during the Bishops' Crusade last winter.

Mr. Jackson made many friends during his stay in Charleston, who wish him every success in his chosen field. His final services here were very largely attended and appreciation of his work at the church was expressed by appropriate gifts.

The congregation at Christ Church grew substantially under the Rev. Mr. Jackson's charge. He was director of the Daily Vacation Bible School at Porter Academy in 1926 and again this year and was signally successful in this work. A farewell gift from the school, which is in session now, was also given to him.

VIRGINIA.

Rt. Rev. H. St. Geo. Tucker, D. D., Bishop.

Burial of Bishop Brown.

Marked by the simplicity which he desired and which characterized his life, the funeral of Bishop William Cabell Brown, D. D., was held at St. Mark's Church, Richmond, Va., Wednesday, August 10, at noon. Interment was made in the church-yard of Emmanuel Church, Brook Hill.

The body was met in New York by the Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, the Rev. G. M. Brydon, the Rev. W. D. Smith and the Rt. Rev. John Gardiner Murray, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

Bishop H. St. George Tucker had charge of the services, assisted by Rt. Rev. W. L. Gravatt, D. D., of West Virginia, and Rt. Rev. B. D. Tucker, D. D., of Southern Virginia. Seated in the chancel at St. Mark's were Bishop Lucien Kinsolving of Southern Brazil, Bishop Beverley D. Tucker of Southern Virginia, Bishop Robert C. Jett of Southwest Virginia, Bishop John B. Cheshire of North Carolina, Dr. W. D. Smith and the Rev. James W. Morris.

The National Council was represented by Dr. John W. Wood, who is Secretary o fthe Department of Missions.

All of the clergy of the Diocese were present and acted as honorary pallbearers. Active pallbearers were: the Rev. W. H. Burkhardt, D.D., the Rev. W. E. Cox, Dr. E. L. Woodward, Frederick D. Goodwin, Robert B. Nelson, the Rev. William J. Morton, D. D., Dennis Whittle and W. Roy Mason. The other honorary pallbearers, consisting of lay members of official boards and those especially selected by the family are as follows:

James Caskie, Judge R. Carter Scott, Lewis G. Williams, A. R. Hoxton, of Alexandria; Gardner L. Boothe, of Alexandria; John B. Minor, John Stewart Bryan, Murray M. McGuire, Robert Beverley, of Essex County; John M. Taylor, Ivey F. Lewis, of University; Walter W. Chamblin, of Lessburg; Blake T. Newton, Westmoreland County; R. T. Morrison, Luray; R. Diocesan Days.

The Diocesan Department of Religious Education, of which the Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, of Wytheville, is Chairman, is perfecting its preparations for a series of "Diocesan Days", which are to be conducted at a number of points in the diocese.

A group of speakers will go to each place and these will address the gatherings on various phases of the Church's work. The list of speakers includes: For Religious Education, the Rev. Messrs. J. Manly Cobb, S. Janney Hutton and D. L. Gwathmey; and Mrs. Anna M. Davidson. For Missions, the Rev. Messrs. John F. Coleman and Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., and Mr. Thos. A. Scott; for Social Service, the Rev. Messrs. Roland J. Moncure and Arthur W. Taylor; for the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. W. H. B. Loving, Mrs. John A. Muse, and one or two others.

The schedule which has been adopted is as follows: August 16, at Bristol; 17, at Big Stone Gap; 18, at Dante, and 19, at Marion. August 23, at Radford, 24, at Bedford, 25, at Madison Heights, and 26, at Lexington.

Bishop Jett plans to be present on some of these occasions if he can find it possible.

Bishop Jett is the preacher on the first two Sundays in August at St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, Michigan; he having consented to take these services at the request of the Very Rev. Herbert L. Johnson, Dean of the Cathedral.

The Rev. Carleton Barnwell, rector of St. Paul's Church at Lynchburg, spent this summer's vacation in Bermuda.

The Rev. Thomas Deane Lewis, D. D., rector at Amherst and Clifford, is, together with his family, spending the month of August in his native County of Essex, Virginia. He is making his headquarters at Tappahannock on the Rappahannock River.

The Rev. G. Otis Mead, rector of Christ Church, Roanoke, spent the month of July at Warm Springs, Va., While there he conducted services in the local Episcopal Church, which has been dormant for the past two years. His own pulpit in Roanoke was occupied by his son, the Rev. Lynne B. Mead.

The Rev. Alfred R. Berkeley, rector of St. John's Church, Roanoke, is spending the month of August with his family at Saluda, N. C. The Rev. Sidney L. Vail, Secretary of the Diocese of Louisiana and rector of the Church of the Annunciation, New Orleans, is supplying at St. John's in Mr. Berkeley's absence.

The Rev. Warren W. Way, rector of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., is at St. John's Church, Waynesboro, in Southwestern Virginia, for August. Mr. J. J. Ambler, Jr., a candidate for Orders and student at Virginia Seminary, had charge of St. John's during June and July. Mr. Ambler is spending August in England and will resume his studies at the Seminary in September.

Young People Hold Successful Camp.

Camp East Carolina, the first young people's camp ever undertaken by the Diocese of East Carolina, was held in the Cumberland hills, near Fayetteville, N. C., from July 7 to 17, and its success encouraged all who have taken seriously the young people's welfare. The site was temporary; but the diocese expects to select a permanent site before the camp meets next summer. The Rev. Frank D. Dean, M. D., of Wilmington, N. C., directed the camp; the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, D. D., was present four days and gave several lectures on Personal Religion; the Rev. J. N. Bynum, of Belhaven, N. C., was chaplain and made several practical addresses; the Rev. G. F. Cameron, of Ayden, N. C., lectured on the Life of Christ. Miss Frances Hoyt, of Williamston, was elected executive secretary of the young people's work for the next year to succeed Miss Ann Milton, of Wilmington, resigned. A total of seventy boys and girls attended the camp; and indications are that a much larger number will attend next year.

Clergy Conference.

A conference for the clergy of East Carolina will be conducted at Wrightsville Beach. September 20, 21, 22 and 23. The Rev. Dr. W. H. Milton, of Wilmington, will lead in the discussion on the Ministry of Today; the Rev. Walter R. Noe, of Wilmington, the Fall Program; and Bishop Darst, Evangelism.

News Notes of Interest.

A special home-coming was held in St. George's, Lake Landing, N. C., July 31. The Rev. A. C. D. Noe, of Erwin, N. C., a former rector, preached.

Bishop and Mrs. Darst are spending their vacation at Hubbards, Nova Scotia. They will return to the diocese about September 10.

Mr. Hugh W. Knight, who has been in charge of the work at Plymouth, has been transferred to the Aurora Field, which includes Holy Cross, Aurora, St. John's, Bonnerton, and Redeemer, Edward.

The Rev. G. F. Cameron, of Ayden, will spend his vacation in New York City.

The Rev. Stephen Gardner, of Washington, spent the month of July at Blowing Rock, N. C.

The Rev. and Mrs. England, of Farmville, are spending August in Washington, D. C., and the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

The Rev. Walter R. Noe, of Wilmington, conducted a week's mission at Chocowinity, beginning Monday, June 20.

The Rev. Howard Alligood, who has been rector of the missions adjacent to Washington, N. C., took charge of St. Philip's, Campbellton, Good Shepherd, Tolar-Hart Mill Village, and Christ Church, Hope Mills, July 15. His new address is No. 10 Third Street, Tolar-Hart, Fayetteville, N. C.

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Milton, of Wilmington, N. C., sailed for England, July 16. They will visit England, Scotland, and Northern France, and return the first week in September.

The Rev. Charles D. Malone, a retired clergyman of the diocese, died recently in Louisburg, N. C.

The Rev. and Mrs. James E. W. Cook, of Greenville, N. C., sailed July 16 for England, where they will spend several weeks visiting relatives. They will return about August 31.

The Rev. W. J. Loaring-Clark, D. D., National Missioner, is spending several weeks in Wilmington, in the interest of the work of the National Commission on Evangelism. He has given Sunday services to St. James, St. John's, and St. Paul's, Wilmington; Trinity, Lumberton; St. Matthew's, Maxton; St. Stephen's, Red Springs; St. Philip's, Southport; and Grace Church, Whiteville.

The Rev. J. M. Taylor, formerly of East Carolina, now rector of the Holy Comforter, Miami, Fla., visited friends in the diocese during his vacation in June and July, after an extensive motor tour through the North. He says that his church and congregation have practically recovered from the effects of the hurricane that swept through South Florida last September.

Mrs. Victor Shelbourne, of Washington, N. C., has been appointed vice-president of the Woman's Auxiliary, and president of the Edenton Convocation.

Mrs. Fred Outland, of Washington, N. C., has been appointed chairman of the Department of Christian Social Service of the Woman's Auxiliary.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Historic Stones Presented To the Washington Cathedral.

Three historic stones were recently placed on exhibition in the entrance to Bethlehem Chapel at the Washington Cathedral. They are the Sinai stone from the Chapel of Moses at Mount Sinai, an ancient manna pot in the form of a huge stone bowl, and the Columbus stone from the Island of San Domingo. The Sinai stone was presented by Colonel Robert M. Thompson of this city. It came from the traditional site which is considered sacred by the Jews as the spot where the Ten Commandments were handed down to Moses. Centuries ago the site fell into Christian hands and the little Chapel of Moses was built there. Through all the vicissitudes of the Crusades and the ravages of the Turks this chapel was considered inviolate until it was destroyed by Germans during the World War. Colonel Thompson was given the stone as a token of appreciation of the abbot for his help in restoring the chapel. The Cathedral authorities plan to cut this stone into slabs and place the slabs in the pavement before the high altar of the Cathedral so that the priest when reading the Ten Commandments will stand on stone from the site where Moses is believed to have received them thousands of years ago.

The Columbus stone was the gift of the late William E. Curtis, world traveler and author, who received it from an old priest in the partially ruined church at Santo Domingo, which dates back to the time of Columbus and was the first Christian Church erected on the American continent. It had been part of the church.

The Jewish manna pot was presented by the Rev. S. Harrington Littell, American missionary, who received it from the Rt. Rev. William C. White, Anglican Bishop of Honan, China. The manna pot was given Bishop White by a community of Chinese Jews in the western part of China, north of the Thibetan border. These Chinese Jews, who are Chinese in appearance, are believed to be descended from some of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel, about whose fate there has been so much dispute in history.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

An Active Assembly of The Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Recommendations for the coming year given to the members of the Long Island Chapters of St. Andrew's Brotherhood are:

1. Regular chapter meetings.
2. Regular attendance at assembly meetings.
3. Proper observance of St. Andrew's Day, November 30.
4. Taking part in the National Corporate Communion on the first Sunday in Advent.
5. Reading and discussion of the Brotherhood Magazine, St. Andrew's Cross.
6. A Church attendance campaign in every parish where a chapter exists, and also in the parish nearest you, this campaign to be in Advent.
7. Careful study and use of Mr. Palmer's book, "The Ministry of Laymen".

The annual report, of which this is a part, and in which we find these recommendations, lists the chapters in the three Archdeaconries, Brooklyn, Queens and Nassau, and Suffolk County. There are eight active Junior Chapters, and twenty-four active Senior Chapters.

The report stresses the fact that every chapter in the diocese was represented at the great Washington's Birthday meeting, when over five hundred men and boys were present at the Corporate Communion at St. Thomas' Church, Brooklyn, and the breakfast which followed and at which Bishop Stires was present and made an address, as did also Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Under assembly meetings the report suggests not a large number of meetings, but a few well-planned ones, making each individual to feel himself responsible to come, and bring others with him.

The report summarizes special meetings, as the splendid meeting held at All Saints', Bayside, where one hundred and fifty men and boys were present to listen to Mr. Duff Maynard on the Seamen's Church Institute; another at the Church of the Holy Apostles, Brooklyn, and still another at St. Gabriel's, Hollis, where the rector, the Rev. Mr. French, sounded the keynote of the Bishops' Crusade.

Under finances it is stated that they closed with a small balance.

The Assembly did splendid work at the various crusade centers, as they acted as ushers at the great noon meetings held at the Albee Theatre, when Bishop Stires made his daily address to a congregation, numbering from 1,300 to 2,600 people, and the Brotherhood, both of Brooklyn and outlying parishes were most helpful in preparation for these. Commendation is given the work of Mr. Frank Du Moulin, Field Secretary of the diocese, for following up chances for chapters, visiting present chapters, and taking care of much of the Brotherhood correspondence.

The report closes, "When the Bishop's Lay Readers' School goes into operation this fall, let us all respond to the call and do our very best. God has abundantly blessed our work in the past, and with His guidance in the future, let us go forward."

This report is signed by William F. Leggo, President, and Howard Cashmore, Secretary.

Building Activities on Long Island, still are on the increase. At St. Peter's, Rosedale, under the Rev. J. W. Burras, a rectory and garage are to be built at once.

At. St. John's, Springfield, the Rev. W. Gordon Craig, rector, they are expecting to occupy their new church and parish house, the first Sunday in September.

At Belle Harbor, St. Andrew's-by-the-Sea, the Rev. Baxter Norris, in charge, they have purchased a plot adjacent to the church, one hundred by one hundred, for a parish house and rectory.

A delegation of Scottish Church leaders will be welcomed at a great service to be given at the Church of the Redeemer, Brooklyn, Sunday evening, October 16. Provost Hill, of Aberdeen, will speak. The occasion commemorates the consecration of the first American Bishop in Scotland. Bishop Seabury grew up as a lad in Long Island, was lay reader at Huntington, L. I., and rector at Jamaica, L. I. Some of his descendants are now living in Brooklyn, as well as out on the "Island".

"Foreign Missions" says Dr. Lacey, of Brooklyn, "are at our doors; that done at Bohemiaville, L. I., is the only work of the kind in the American Church; St. Peter's (one of our oldest churches), is now the Syrian Cathedral. St. Michael's fell into the hands of the Ukranians. The Little Country Churches.

Harold V. Smedberg.

The little country churches in their settings wild and rude,
By the brink of brawling torrent, or in tangled, verdant wood,
Know the lack of man's adornment, cushioned seat and carven pew,
For their riches are not earthly and their worshippers are few.
Yet their neighbor-thrushes carol sweeter than great organ-peal,
And the peace of God indwelleth there to soften and to heal.

The little country churches boast no massy, buttressed walls,
Richly-pictured votive windows, serried, oaken choir-stalls;
No chimes ring from sky-flung towers, calling men to praise and prayer.
In the little country churches all is simple, scant and bare.
Few they own of the possessions man can coffer or award;
But their garniture is finer. 'Tis the souls they've won for God.

Bless the little country churches whose good priests devoted go.
(Ah, the weary miles they journey 'mong their people, to and fro)
All unrecompensed by money; all unrecognized by fame;
Comforting, pursuading, pleading to the glory of His name:
Urging sinners to well-doing, spreading news of God Most High;
Showing men the way to live and teaching men the way to die.

Bless the little country churches where the humbler people come;
They show no array of columns, ne'er uphold a splendid dome:
But God's sunlight gilds the altar, and His breezes filter through,
As His wildflowers make an incense for the chancel and the pew.
And if these folk be uncolleged, yet God knows them to be wise
In that kinder, holier wisdom born of love and sacrifice.

An Angel Stood By Him.

When the Council forbade preaching, Peter made immortal answer declaring that his final allegiance and supreme duty was to God: "We ought to obey God rather than man." Now this unswerving allegiance has again brought him into the grip of opposing power. Herod seeking to make favor with the Jews first beheaded James. Seeing that it pleased the leaders, he reached forth for the head of the movement, Peter, and placed him in prison intending after Easter to "bring him forth to the people"—for death. "But prayer was made unceasingly for him by the Church, and an Angel delivered him, and Herod is thwarted in his bloody purpose of gaining favor and, almost parallel to Haman, is himself smitten with horrible death. There is power, wonderful power in united unceasing prayer on the part of the Church, yes, even of individuals.

Fidelity to right has often led men into danger and on to death. Yet it remains an outstanding fact: "The path of duty is the path of safety". The world has a long roll of heroic souls who have nobly faced danger and gone on to death in that path. It is sickening to read the record of ignorance and prejudice besetting men honestly striving to serve God in finding paths of truth. The roll of martyrs begins with Jesus, and shines with the names of James, Peter, Stephen, and thousands more as the ages roll the world from darkness to light—each martyr made safe in undying immortality through fidelity to his supreme allegiance.

It is currently supposed that today with advanced knowledge and growing intelligence men may obey their conception of supreme allegiance with condemnation by the powers that be. We think in these enlightened times that power is on the side of right. Is it? Not always, even in America. True, heretics are no longer burned at the stake, but the will to burn is found often flaming in the hearts of good men in power toward men honestly differing with them concerning truth. Intolerance still lives. Martyr fires of ostracism still burn men at the stake of opinion.

Preachers who preach fearlessly against evils that rule in the lives of leading members are made to move on, sometimes forced to get out. With some it is more than a figurative burning at the stake, crucifixion or beheading.

Advocates of national and international policies of righteousness not infrequently become unpopular. Just now there are attacks upon the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America because of its effort to lead the Churches in righting national and international wrongs.

There are, too, men who are pilloried for raising questions concerning things long believed and held sacred. Doubtless there are mere sensationalists among these. But there are, too, honest seekers after truth and right. We should be very careful lest we treat such as Pharisee, Sadducee and Sanhedrin treated Christ, as Herod treated James and Peter, as the Roman hierarchy treated thousands in the days of the Reformation, and as the Reformers, in the day of their power, treated those who claimed simply the same right of intellectual liberty and that of following the dictates of their own consciences in worshipping and obeying God.

There is resurgence of the days of the martyrs just now in China. We may well enroll the names of our missionaries in that land in the long roll of martyrs, all ready in the path of duty to return leaving their loved work to seeming destruction or remain facing every hardship and peril, even death, as seems most to the glory of God.

And the Chinese Christians, what of them? Story after story of fidelity on the part of these seeps through. The heroism of the Chinese Christians has saved, at the risk of their own, lives of many foreign Christians. No incident more worthy of immortality than that of one in the hands of soldiers threatened with loss of life unless he would renounce Christianity who stood firm and whose fearless courage won such admiration that he was freed. We need not record the name here as hundreds more are as worthy.

The Angel of the Lord stood by Peter once and delivered him from death. Later, according to tradition, Peter in the path of duty was crucified fulfilling the sketch of the end of his life as outlined for him by Jesus beside the Sea of Tiberias when restoring and recommissioning him. None the less in that final issue, the Angel stood by him! God answered prayer then and answers it now as truly as when the Angel delivered from death. Sometimes answer and deliverance come not from but through death. It remains eternally true, "the path of duty is the path of safety". The Angel of the Lord stands by in no other path.—Southern Christian Advocate.

The Real India.

Here is a picture of India, from "Delhi", the paper of the Cambridge Mission to Delhi:

With the coming of the hot weather and the migration of a large number of English residents to the hills, the real Delhi seems to emerge. The "English" shops are closed, the streets are free from the many motor cars, which throng them all the cold weather and very few Europeans are seen anywhere. India again possesses her own and the west is less blatantly in evidence.

The city is looking most beautiful; in all the public gardens and open spaces are great flowering trees of flaming red, and mauve, and yellow, looking just as if they sprang from a giant's flower garden. If the days are hot and burning the nights are still cool for the most part, and exquisitely lovely—nights of deep blue skies, lit by moon and stars, of dancing fireflies and of refreshing breezes.

In the early morning on the way to church one meets streams of men and women on their way to the banks of the Junna to bathe in the sacred waters, a constant reminder of the hold of Hinduism. At sunset, the Mohammedan may be seen in public gardens, on the railway platform, in the compound, in the mosque, bowing himself in prayer, a witness to the fact that Delhi, once a stronghold of the Mogul Emperors, is still faithful to the prophet.

In this true and real Delhi, the Indian Delhi, the work of the mission community goes steadily on. Perhaps the vastness of the task before it is more obvious, the need for the upholding prayers of those at home more urgent, as heat and fatigue mean more strain on the workers, but the issues stand out in greater clearness.

Under the Eaves.

Helen Bayley Davis.

I peeped into her little attic room,
And through the dormer window,
Kissed my hand at a chuckling aspen tree
That waved its boughs at me!

I rocked the empty cradle under the eaves
With its faded patchwork quilt,
And paused beside the red-cheeked waxen doll
In a corner against the wall—

Smiling at me with staring, glassy eyes
As though it guarded a secret . . .
At midnight, does it skip and dance and whirl
With the ghost of a little girl?

The Law of Christ.

Most of life is simple. Our duty is generally plain. Our path is marked out for us by common sense, by judgment, or by the experience of the race. But there are crises when the way is not so clear. Then, if we are wise, we pause and ask if there is not some law to apply in this case. As a matter of fact there are three laws, each of which is capable of very general application to human conduct.

The first is rather difficult to define, but is deducible from such a piece of literature as the Fifteenth Psalm. It has been called "The Gentleman's Psalm". And it describes an admirable character, "a very perfect gentle knight". What do we get out of such a Psalm? The picture of a man who always acts with due consideration for the rights and feelings of others. The second law may well be called the philosopher's law. Immanuel Kant long ago put it into specific form: "So act that if the principle of your conduct were to become universal, the result would be beneficent." This has been called the principle of universal conduct.

The third law, and incomparably the greatest, is the law of Christ. He gave many advices, many directions, but only one commandment. He criticizes no other law, but He offers this as the completion of every other. The sum and substance of Christ's social message is, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself". When Christ speaks of love He speaks of love as a motive, not merely as a sentiment. The love of Christ helps us to see in others our kinsmen. It embraces the whole race within its wide sweep. This is love that would lift the world to God; it is love that lifts burdens which others turn away from; love which transforms lives, homes, cities, states.—Rev. C. C. Albertson.

The Timid Child.

We all admire a boy who is brave and courageous—one who is not afraid of football or in fact of anything—but not all boys are naturally fearless. Sometimes this trait of character must be encouraged and cultivated.

I know a little boy who was naturally timid and shy—afraid of the dark, afraid to climb, afraid of certain boys, afraid to play the rough-and-tumble games that other children played. He would come home from kindergarten day after day, crying, and when questioned, would say that the other boys had chased him. He often went around the block to avoid meeting some of them.

His mother realized that she must help him to cultivate courage if he were ever to be a self-reliant man. She taught him to defend himself when necessary. She told him not to begin a fight, especially with a child smaller than himself, but to stand up for himself, when attacked. He learned this lesson slowly, but in a year's time could hold his own with the other boys and, to his mother's regret, would sometimes even start a fight.

The fear of the dark she handled very carefully. When he was old enough to occupy a room of his own, for a time she allowed him to have a light in the hall near his room. Then sometimes she would turn out the light, and always when he called would turn it on again for a short time. One night he surprised her by saying that he guessed he didn't want a light any more.

As he grew older, she bought him roller-skates, then ice-skates, anything that required self-mastery and control of the muscles. Next came a baseball and bat, and finally, though she disliked the game, a football. At first he would play with the ball only by himself; then one or two other boys were allowed to play with him; soon he had his regular team. Of course, this brought a lot of noisy boys to the yard, endangered the windows and spoiled the lawn, but it was worth it all, for it taught the boy valuable lessons, and he became almost fearless in the game and gloried in a black eye or a lame leg received while playing.

The first summer they went camping he was afraid of the water. His mother bought him a bathing suit and encouraged him to paddle along the shore. She never allowed the older children to frighten him or coax him beyond his depth. Gradually he came to like the water and though he has not yet ventured to swim, he has an ambition to do so.

This mother encourages and praises her son when he performs any act of courage and gradually but surely he is developing into a self-reliant lad. Moreover, she teaches him that the truest courage is shown in doing a thing, when occasion demands, even though one is afraid. This, of course, really is the highest form of bravery.—Mrs. Luther C. Smith.

Needs of the Times.

More and more it becomes clear that, to conserve the cause of our Lord as He has committed it to us, strong, open organization and outspoken yet loving words out of a true spirit of love, are now needed. All will be safe if we can be endued with power from on high to preach the Gospel so that the multitudes of hungry hearts will be fed and filled with the peace of God.

We must keep definitely in mind that not the soundest doctrine apart from a living experience of the presence of our Lord can meet human need. Sound doctrine must be maintained. No earnestness of life, not even burning desire for better things, can be a substitute for the truth. I learned that fact on the banks of the Ganges while I watched those undoubtedly earnest, sincere, deluded people, unnumbered thousands of them, putting their trust in what was false. They met all the ceremonial requirements in a serious devout manner, yet not one eye into which I looked sparkled with joy, not one face lost its hopeless sadness. There can be no substitute for the truth. That alone can make us free. Along with sound doctrine must be personal trust in our blessed Lord.—Bishop Collins Denny.

The Fly in Church.

My aunties on each side of me are kneeling in a line;
I wonder if their hassocks are as full of pins as mine?
I think they must have asked the hens to teach them how to perch;
I'd like to rub my knees, but that's called fidgeting in Church.

I found a fly in Church today—a fly who'd hurt his wing;
It happened just as every one was standing up to sing
"There's a Friend for little children up above the bright blue sky"—
I might have been so good if they had let me keep that fly.

I thought of such a lovely game—I didn't fidget then—
The fly must walk across my book before I counted ten;
But just as he was nearly there the Man said, "Let us pray".
And Aunties shook their heads at me, and brushed my fly away.

The pew is very dark and high, and I am very small,
And Auntie's say it's wrong in Church to look about at all.
I think the window's open where the glass is painted red,
For I can feel a scrap of sky that's shining on my head.

Oh, Friend for little children, You were once as small as me,
You know how very, very dull a child in Church can be,
And if You're hiding just above that tiny patch of sky,
Be sorry for a little boy—and send another fly!

—Jocelyn C. Lea, in London Spectator.

The Friendship of Jesus.

The friendship Jesus offers is like a human friendship in one respect—you can start very simply and the friendship will grow and grow as you get to know more and more of Him. It is like a human friendship in another thing—you could not have close friendship with some one with whom you had nothing in common, whose tastes, desires and ideals were entirely different from your own; and so to be a close friend of Jesus Christ you must at least want to live as a Christian should live. You may think you can never be good enough to come up to Jesus' standards, but that is not required. If it were, no one could ever have His friendship.—St. Andrew's Cross.

The body and all that nourished it, the soul and all the Word of God for it, are under law. And law governs every person in body and spirit, and in all their relations. There is no escape. In Christ all are fulfilled. There is no failure at any point or in any relation. He is the fulness that filleth all in all. —Lutheran.

Blessing Little Children.

Around the feet of Jesus
The little children played.
Upon the thirsty verdure
The olives cast their shade.

The children romped and shouted;
The Master loved their noise,
And shared the mirth that rippled
From laughing girls and boys.

And then He told them stories
Of prophets and of kings,
Of wild beasts on the mountains
And timid pasture things,

Until they wended homeward,
Content to joyful rest;
And thus by their dear Master
The children all were blessed.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

The Patience of Jesus.

M. L. G.

"I didn't think," said a little boy to his mother, who asked him why he hit his brother, "My hand just went out before I thought."

Poor little boy! He has a long lesson to learn, the lesson of patience. If we think over the hasty words, the careless hurts, the unkind manner, that have kept our record from being as clean as we meant to make it, we shall see that what we lacked was patience. It takes patience, more than almost any other quality to make a good teacher, or doctor, or mother. Even a little child, making a house of blocks, needs patience, to replace the block that slipped, to correct one that is misplaced, before he joyfully puts the topmost one on, and runs to call Mother to look.

Think of the patience of Jesus, and remember that patience means a mind under the control of a strong and steady spirit. Jesus in the carpenter's shop, knowing the Father's business awaited Him, yet He must wait the Father's call; Jesus teaching the twelve, who must have tried His patience so greatly with their blundering beginnings, their quarrels among themselves and their misunderstanding of Him; Jesus before Pilate and Herod mocked and scourged and silent; Jesus on the way to Emmaus, explaining to the two bewildered disciples the reason for His life and death.

If we would be like Him, let us run with patience the race that is set before us!

Jimmie's Birthday Brother.

"Hello! 'V' you got a mother?"

Just behind a big iron fence rail, huddled in the snow beside a snowy bush, Jim caught sight of a tiny lad of five years or so, with big blue baby eyes.

"'Course I have," said Jim proudly. "Why, haven't you?"

"Nope," said the owner of the red head, "but I wish'd I had, 'cause today's my birthday." Then the blue eyes looked as if they were going to cry.

"That's queer," said Jim, "for tomorrow's mine. Say, I'm late for school already. Can you be here after four?"

"We're playing hide and seek. They've lost me. P'raps I can get lost then, too."

That was the first time Jim had ever spoken to any boy from that big building called an Orphanage. He always thought that orphans were a little different from other little boys. They had their hair cut shorter. They walked in rows. And sometimes they were all dressed in little suits so much alike that you could hardly tell one from another. But this little fellow wasn't different at all, except that he hadn't any mother.

That afternoon when Jim and Sammy met again, they soon became fast friends.

"You look so like our Buddy who died last winter," Jim told him after they had talked awhile over the iron fence. "I think my mother'd like to see you."

So it was that Jimmie coaxed his mother to put his birthday dinner one day early, so that he and Sammy could celebrate together.

Almost as soon as Sammy had his big coat off he was gathered up in Jim's mother's arms. Jim noticed that she, too, noticed how much the little fellow looked like the child that she had lost.

"Tell me about your mother, dear," she said, as soon as she had him on her lap, sitting beside the big wood fire.

"It's awful when a fella's going to bed. The day time isn't bad," said little Sammy, "but at night I miss my mommy something awful."

"But there are lots and lots of other little boys to keep you company," Jim heard his mother say to try to cheer the little fellow.

"Even the biggest boys of all say they wish they had their mothers back to tuck them in at night." And a little tear rolled down the pink chubby cheek.

"You precious darling," said Jim's mother, hugging the wee boy close. Then with a little start she said:

"This isn't getting dinner. Jimmie, dear, you may light the big blue candles, and Sammy here may light the tiny ones that come later on the cake."

As they sat down to eat those big blue baby eyes settled themselves on two blue candles, and wouldn't look away. Sammy clapped his little hands and cried with delight:

"See the p'etty blue sticks all burning on the top."

Blue had been the color little Buddy loved, and Jim saw his mother watching Sam as if she wanted to hug him again. Then, when it came his turn to light the "baby sticks", little Sam was so excited, that Jimmie had to hold his hand to make the match go straight.

But after dinner was the best of all. Jimmie's mother brought down Buddy's toys. Then, without a word, daddy and Sammy were on their knees building a fairy castle out of blocks. Mother looked on with such a happy face as Jimmie had not seen since Buddy had gone away.

When the telephone rang a little later Jim's mother jumped up quickly. "Time for Sammy to go home," she said, on coming back.

"Nonsense," said daddy, "we've only just begun to play."

"This my home," said Sammy, with a little mischief in his eye.

"I shouldn't wonder if it is," said Jimmie's mother as she pushed Sam's quite unwilling arms into his wolly coat.

It wasn't till the next day Jimmie understood what mummy meant. In the evening the doorbell gave a sudden clang.

"You'd better go, Jim," said his mother.

Jim opened the door with a sweep. As he did so something tiny ran and hid itself behind the tall dark lady who was standing on the step.

"I brought you a birthday present, Jim," the tall, dark stranger said.

Before Jim knew what had happened, wee Sam had rushed from behind the lady with a "whoop" and was tangled up already in Jim's legs.

As Jim looked about quite dazed, his mother came out, too.

"A birthday brother, Jimmie. Daddy and I have settled it all with the matron. I think we wanted Sam as much as you as soon as we had seen him once."

And when the boys at school were curious, and asked Jim who Sammy was and where they got him, Jim would always laugh and say, "Why, he's my birthday brother". More than that they never learned.—Selected.

When John Had to Decide.

"Mother," said John Roberts, one Friday morning as he started off to school, "I've never asked Billy Dobson out here to spend a Saturday, and he wants to come so bad. May I ask him?"

"What sort of a boy is he?" asked the mother.

"Well, he seems to be a good-hearted chap," answered John, a little nervously, remembering some of the things he didn't like about Billy; "but he looks kind of neglected, and I know he wants to come the worst kind."

John's mother smiled. She knew he was to be trusted, so she said: "Certainly, dear; bring him out if his mother is willing."

"His mother is dead," said John, choking over the words as he thought of their meaning.

And then John's mother stopped and kissed his hair as she said: "Be sure to bring Billy with you tonight, if they will let him come."

That was how Billy came to be at Oak Ridge, for that was the name of John's home Friday night John's father played games with them, and his mother read them a story. When she went up to show Billy his room she had made everything ready for him as carefully as if he had been her own boy.

Saturday morning the boys were raking the leaves in the yard when they broke the rake, and John's mother said they could go to the store and get another one.

John telephoned to the store, and the man told them that the rake would cost thirty-five cents; but his mother didn't have the change, so she gave him a dollar to get the rake.

When they got to the store the man found he had made a mistake and the price of the rake was twenty-five cents instead of thirty-five.

"What are you going to do with the other ten cents?" Billy asked eagerly, and John replied shortly: "Take it home. What do you think?"

"I wouldn't," said Billy; "you bet I wouldn't. Your mother thinks the rake cost thirty-five cents, and she wouldn't care, and besides, she won't ask anything about it."

For answer John laughed good-naturedly in order to keep from saying anything rude to Billy, and then turned to go home.

"Aw, come on kid, I want some candy," said Billy, beginning to whine.

But John kept on his way.

Then Billy tried a new game. He went up to the storekeeper and said: "Give me ten cents worth of stick candy."

The storekeeper gave it to him, and when Billy got the bag he stuck a piece of candy into his mouth at once and said: "John's got the money to pay for it."

John looked up and heard what Billy had said and saw what he had done. He knew that if he asked his mother for the ten cents she would gladly give it to him, and he also knew that she would not ask about it anyway; but John was honorable to the very core of his being. He knew that Billy was his guest and that he was partly responsible for Billy's doing on that account, and he didn't want the storekeeper to take the candy back and so lose what Billy had eaten. Just for a minute then he remembered that, no matter how kind his mother might be about the matter, the money he carried was not his own; so he said to the merchant: "I am sorry that Billy ordered the candy, Mr. White, for I have no money of my own with me; but if you will charge it to me, I will pay you out of my next week's allowance."

"Certainly, John," said the merchant; "I am very glad to do it for you."

Billy was listening and thinking all of this time, and when they were safely outside of the store he said: "John, I'm ashamed of myself, and I'll bring you that money to school on Monday," and he did.

Billy wanted to be as trustworthy as John was, and that is one way that a friend can help a friend.—Boys and Girls.

Bird House Town.

"Where shall we build our nest?" asked Mr. Bluebird when he had finished his soft song. It was Mr. Bluebird's wedding song. And all the time he sang it he was looking at Mrs. Bluebird sitting at his side.

"Where shall we build a nest?" he asked again in cooing tones.

"Mrs. Wren was telling me of a lovely place to build a nest," said Mrs. Bluebird shyly. "She is going to live there and it isn't far away."

"Where is it?" asked Mr. Bluebird.

"It's only on the next street. The boys have put up little houses on the trees to rent to Bluebirds and to Wrens. The birds here call it Bird House Town. Mrs. Wren is sure we'd like it. But she says the houses are renting quickly, and if we don't go soon there'll be no chance."

"It looks as if we'd better go at once," said Mr. Bluebird. "Let's make that our wedding trip."

So Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird flew to Bird House Town for their wedding trip. Up and down they flew and chatted with one after another of the Wren or Bluebird family.

"They're lovely houses," every bird kept telling them, "but you must decide at once, for there are just two left."

And very quickly Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird flew to look at the two remaining empty houses in Bird House Town.

The first house they examined very carefully. "It is beautiful," said Mrs. Bluebird. "That little door is perfect with its wide ledge for the babies to stand on before they dive into the air for the first time."

"Yes," said Mr. Bluebird, "and that tree is nice and large to hide us from intruders."

"I don't think any place could be much nicer," said Mrs. Bluebird then. "Let's move right in."

"I'll first fly over just to look at the other house. You may stay and watch this one in case some other bird may come and rent it before I get back," said Mr. Bluebird.

"Perhaps that is wise," agreed his wife, "for we must choose the very best we can for the tiny bluebirds."

Before Mrs. Bluebird had finished the last words, Mr. Bluebird was already calling her to come and see the other house.

"Come and see, come and see!" he called from a tree branch not far from the tiny house.

Mrs. Bluebird knew that she must go, for he would never let her leave the doorstep where she sat unless he liked the other better.

"He has good taste," she kept thinking, "I'd better go and see, at any rate."

"Look at the door," was all that Mr. Bluebird said when Mrs. Bluebird reached the branch where he was sitting.

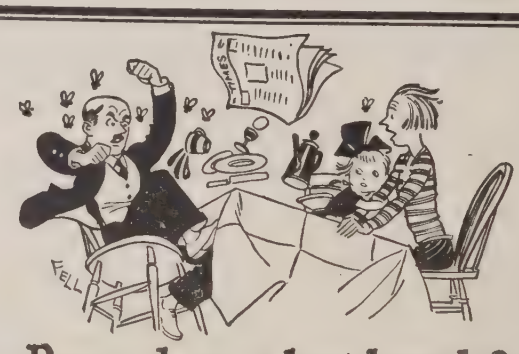
Mrs. Bluebird looked at the door. She thought it was not nearly so pretty as the door of the other house. It was very plain and rather small, and the doorstep not quite half so wide.

"I'm quite sure I like the other better," sighed Mrs. Bluebird, disappointed. "Let's hurry back before it is taken."

"Look again," commanded Mr. Bluebird. "Look on the doorstep."

Mrs. Bluebird had been so busy looking at the width of the doorstep that she had not noticed the tiny bundle of something white upon the step.

"What is it?" she asked, going over to have a closer view.



"It's our wedding breakfast," said Mr. Bluebird, following her.

"How do you suppose it got there?" asked Mrs. Bluebird, nibbling at a crumb.

"Look up at the sunroom window," said her husband.

There at the window Mrs. Bluebird saw two shining eyes and the happiest, kindest boy's face that she had ever seen.

"He put it there. I know by his face he put it there," she chirped. "Let's move in at once. I'd rather have a house with a small door and only half

Deaths

MRS. LOUISA FONTAINE WASHINGTON CHEW.

The passing to the Home Above of MRS. ROGER PRESTON CHEW means the loss of the head of a clan, closely bound together by the ties of kindred and by the memories of a long and varied past.

Mrs. Chew was the eldest of the children of Lieutenant Colonel John Augustine Washington, the last private owner of Mount Vernon. Her mother was Eleanor Love Selden, daughter of Wilson Carey Selden, of Exeter, Loudoun County, Virginia.

The Washingtons, the Warners, the Lees, the Balls, the Randolphs, the Bollings, the Loves, the Seldens, the Alexanders, the Careys, the Blackburns, the Ludwells—these were among the families to whom she was related by descent. In character, in ideals, in loyalties, she was a typical Virginia gentlewoman, she had not so much the pride as the sense of obligation of distinguished ancestry.

Mrs. Chew was born at Mount Vernon, in the room in which Washington died, on February 19, 1844. Her childhood was spent in the old historic home

In 1859, Colonel Washington deeded Mount Vernon to the Association, which has since cared for it with so much reverence. The Washington family was moved to Wareland, Fauquier County. The death of her mother left Mrs. Chew still a young girl, the eldest of seven children. To her loving care and to the inspiration of her life her brothers and sisters owed more than can be expressed.

In September 1861, Colonel Washington, who served on the staff of General Robert E. Lee, was killed in the defense of his country. In the home at Wareland, his daughter, Louisa, sixteen years old, had the care, not only of her young brothers and sisters, but of a large number of kinspeople, women and children who were refugees.

Mr. Richard B. Washington and his wife took charge of the orphaned household. At Wareland and at Blakeley, Mr. Washington's home, near Charles Town, the family faced the hardships and even the perils of war. There was a call, even upon the young for sacrifice and for heroism. To these Louisa Washington responded with a courage and a dignity, amazing for one of her years. These experiences went to the making of a character and of a personality, which for fidelity to the highest ideals of life have been rarely equaled.

On August 15, 1871, she became the wife of Colonel Roger Preston Chew, who succeeded Ashby in charge of the artillery of Stuart's Corps.

Colonel Chew was the pupil and friend of Stonewall Jackson and his service made a brilliant chapter in the history of the Confederate Army. They made their home in Charles Town. After Colonel Chew's death his wife and children lived in the house which had been long a centre of refinement and from which went out helpful influences to all who came in touch with it. Mrs. Chew was a lover of books, of trees and flowers, of birds and, above all, of children. In the quiet of her home she unconsciously wielded a power for good, which helped the lives of all who knew her. Modest and retiring, not seeking leadership or notoriety, but simply living the life of a Christian woman, she gave strength and courage and high aspirations to all who met her.

An earnest follower of Christ, a faithful member of His Church, as mother and sister, as friend her sympathy and love enriched the lives of others.

She met weakness, and sickness and pain with the same patience and unfaltering courage with which she had faced the hardships of war and the vicissitudes of life.

On the first of July, as the sun went down in the West, she passed peacefully into the great beyond.

The Christ of whose presence she was ever conscious, as she journeyed along the paths of earth, was very near her, with His rod and staff to comfort her, as she entered The Valley of The Shadow of Death, and she went with Him to the joy and the brightness of the home above.

Mrs. Chew is survived by her youngest sister, Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, and by three children, Roger Preston Crew of Bayonne, New Jersey, Christine, wife of Brantz Rozel of the Shenandoah Valley Academy in Winchester, and Margaret Preston.

She was laid to rest by the side of her gallant husband and of two dear little children who had gone before, in the quiet God's Acre of old Zion Church. Her memory will long abide in the hearts of all who knew her, as that of one for whom they give God thanks. She herself has gone to be forever with the Christ, in that blessed home, where she sees Him face to face, and where she has once more those whom she loved long since, and lost awhile.

St. Paul's Farmers' Conference.

The annual event of the year for Brunswick County—the St. Paul's Farmers' Conference—came off Thursday and Friday. Eight hundred men and women attended the two days' session and discussed matters appertaining to their social, moral, educational and material welfare. The conference was organized twenty-three years ago by the Rev. Dr. James S. Russell,, Principal of St. Paul's School, and a few other farmers of the county. Only a few of the organizers are still living. Dr. Russell, H. C. Green and Thomas H. Butts are among the living. Dr. Russell was elected President, H. C. Green Vice-President, W. H. Haines Secretary and Thomas H. Butts Treasurer. With the exception of the Treasurer, who has removed from the county, these officers have been elected successively for twenty-three years.

The conference as its literature states is "a non-political, non-sectarian body, whose only object is to encourage our people to buy land, build homes, educate their children and become good citizens and useful members of society". Thursday's session was given over to reports on home and community conditions. The consensus of replies showed many communities growing in whole or part food supplies for man and beast, at least one cow, poultry and a fair proportion of women, who sold butter, chickens and eggs sufficient to buy small household necessities. Most communities reported good church buildings, but service, with few exceptions, once a month.

The feature of the afternoon session was the annual address and review by President Russell and the "Live at Home" conference conducted by Vice-President and County Agent H. C. Green. President Russell's address emphasized the importance of growing a sufficiency of foodstuffs for man and beast first, and then the market crop; the evil of going into debt for non-essential things; importance of sending their children to school regularly; providing needed creature comforts; elevation of the social and moral atmosphere of the home; obedience to law and order; payment of poll taxes and possession of pure religion. In giving statistics of land ownership he referred to the fact that when the conference was organized less than 40,000 acres were reported and not a single improved school. Now the report of the Auditor of Public Accounts and the land books of the county showed an ownership of 66,680 acres of farm land valued with the buildings thereon at $1,192,636, and town lots and buildings valued at $44,505, making a total assessed realty value of $1,237,141, the greatest assessed value of Negro-owned land in any county of the state. The report showed that Brunswick stood first in the number of Rosenwald Schools, fourteen in number. These schools cost over $30,000, of which the people contributed $10,000 according to figures given out from the Superintendent's office and the Rosenwald people.

The night session was featured by free movie films loaned by the U. S. Agricultural Department. These reels were supplemented by films of St. Paul's School, showing its various activities, shown through the courtesy of the School.

Friday morning executive sessions of the men and women were held. The afternoon was "Woman's Day". The women of the conference held their annual session and presented an enjoyable program. Mr. George E. Majette, Director of Agriculture, St. Paul's School, conducted a helpful conference on "Soil Improvement and the Care and Raising of Poultry". Friday night regular moving pictures were shown by the Athletic and Entertainment Management of the School, which conducts moving picture shows weekly. The officers of the conference are: President, the Rev. James S. Russell, D. D., LL. D.; First Vice-President, H. C. Green; Secretary, W. H. Haines; Treasurer. J. B. Travis.

Among the visitors to the conference were: the Rev. Mr. Shands, Moderator of the Bethany Baptist Association; Randall Ruffin, County Agent, Greenville County; the Rev. Mr. Floyd, Roanoke,, J. H. Hicks, State Deputy, National Ideal Benefit Society, and the Rev. J. E. Hines, all of whom gave interesting and helpful talks.

Bishop Nicolai's Visit.

Bishop Nicolai of Ochrida, Serbia, who preached at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Sunday morning, August 7, is in America as the guest of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, and of the American Jugoslav Society. The purpose of his visit is to acquaint Americans with general conditions in the Balkan States. He expects to be in this country three months, traveling as far west as Chicago. Dean Robbins of the Cathedral is chairman of the appointed reception committee; among others included are President Nicholas Murray Butler, Elihu Root, Charles E. Hughes, President Hibben, Rodman Wanamaker, Bishop Manning, and the Rev. Dr. Stetson.

Memorial Services to Dr. Huntington.

The eighteenth anniversary of the death of the Rev. William Reed Huntington, D. D., was observed by a memorial service held in Huntington Close at Grace Church at noon on Tuesday, July 26. Dr. Huntington succeeded Bishop Henry Codman Potter at Grace Church, and was the rector there for twenty-five years.

Mission at Calvary Church.

The personal witness mission, held the last week of July at Calvary Church, the Rev. Samuel Shoemaker, Jr., rector was well attended and a splendid interest manifested. Clergy and layfolk, men and women, testified in brief and impressive talks to the spiritual reality that has come to them through the ministrations of Calvary Church.

An Appeal For the Fresh Air Homes.

This season's last appeal for help for its fresh-air work recently went out from the office of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, 38 Bleecker Street:

"Although the season is well advanced," states the appeal, "there are many women and children still waiting to go to the Society's country homes in New Jersey and Connecticut. More tired because they have waited longer, several hundred women and children are still hoping to go for two weeks in the country air. Can you not help give them an interlude of relief before the long grind of the new year starts?"

According to the Rev. L. Ernest Sunderland, D. D., Superintendent of the Society, $23,143 is required to finance the Society's summer work. Of this approximately $17,000 has been raised.

"If we can keep our fresh-air homes open a few weeks longer, we will be able to take care of all those waiting on our list."

All checks should be made to the order of Harry P. Robbins, and mailed to the Society's headquarters, 38 Bleecker Street, New York City.

Personal Notes

The Rev. Lynne B. Mead, rector of the churches at Madison Heights, Boonesboro and Schuyler, in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia, has announced his acceptance of a call to the rectorship of St. Peter's Church at Huntington, West Virginia, effective September 15.

The Rev. Walter R. Noe, Executive Secretary of the Diocese of East Carolina, has been appointed treasurer of the diocese to succeed Thomas D. Meares, who died June 3. Mr. Noe's address is 507 Southern Building, Wilmington, N. C.

The Rev. Howard Alligood, who has been rector of the missions adjacent to Washington, N. C., took charge of St. Philip's, Campbellton, Good Shepherd, Tolar-Hart Mill Village, and Christ Church, Hope Mills, July 15. He will live in Tolar-Hart Mill Village, which is a suburb of Fayetteville.

The Rt. Rev. Warren L. Rogers, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Ohio, is spending his vacation in Europe, and will probably attend the World Conference on Faith and Order.

The Rev. Sidney A. Matthews took charge of St. Philip's, Southport, N. C., August 1.

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Percy T. Fenn of St. Mark's Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Fenn's sister, Miss Mary Mills, will sail on the SS. Arabic on September 3 for a year of rest in Southern Europe All mail should be sent care of the American Express, 2 Rue du Congres, Nice France. Dr. Fenn has resigned St. Mark's after a rectorate of seven years.

On one occasion I met a mountaineer on a by path and asked him what he was then doing. "Wuking for the same ole Coperation, the old 'oman and the chilluns". So am I, as you see.

When compelled to give up Missionary work in the mountains by bad health of myself and wife I sought out this near Colonial Church—it sent a delegate to Council in 1779—set off here in the country by itself and continued the Missionary work.

The Church and Rectory, after thirty years without a Rector, have been renovated and restored at a cost of $2,500, all paid—but it has about exhausted our resources.

The pressing need for Rural Work are Parish Houses or halls for conferences, lectures, recreation, etc.

Please help us to get one for St. Luke's. Send checks to me.

Yours still in the work,

Thoughts For the Thoughtful

Every possessor of light is a debtor to those who sit in the dark.

God measures the work of His servants by faithfulness and not by figures.

Souls are saved by those who give their whole souls to the service.

The more extensive our work for Christ the more intensive it will be.—Ex.

"Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant."

The devil wastes no time on the man who has ceased to pray.

"A good man is the final evidence of the grace of religion. If God can save one man from sin, He can save them all if they will let Him."

The man who cannot wonder, who does not habitually wonder and worship, is but a pair of spectacles behind which there is no eye.—Carlyle.

It seems to me that a large part of the troubles and mistakes of our pastoral life come from our having too high an estimate of men's present condition and too low an estimate of their possibilities.—Phillips Brooks, "Lectures on Preaching".

O master workman of the race,
Thou man of Galilee,
Who with the eyes of early youth
Eternal things did see,
We thank Thee for Thy boyhood faith
That shone Thy whole life through;
"Did ye not know it is my work
My Father's work to do?"
—Stocking.

"The life which we are meant to lead under the dispensation of the Spirit who has been given for our guidance into Truth, is one which does not take us out of the world, but keeps us from its evil, enabling us to live a heavenly existence on earth, and so to span over the chasm which divides us from heaven."

Faith is nothing else than reason grown courageous—reason raised to its highest power, expanded to its widest vision. Its advent marks the point where the hero within the man is getting the better of the coward, where safety, as the prime object of life, is losing its charm and another Object, hazardous but beautiful, dimly seen but deeply loved, has begun to tempt the awakened soul.—Jacks, "Religious Perplexities".

S. D. Gordon in Quiet Talks on Service, "that on a farm the yoke means service. Cattle are yoked to serve, and to serve better, and to serve more easily. This is a surrender for service, not idleness. There are two bows or loops to a yoke. I know there is Somebody else on the other side. And if we will pull steadily along, step by step with Him, all will be well, and by and by the best results and largest will be found to have come". Such companionship makes Christian service blessed. Let all Christian workers take courage.

Vol. 92. RICHMOND, VA., AUGUST 20, 1927. No. 34.

WHY?

The solemn stillness in the church is broken as kindred and friends stand silent, listening. "I am the resurrection and the life". The words mingle with the sound of the slow steps of pallbearers as the body is borne along the aisle to the altar and gave assurance from Divinity to humanity of the most magnificent of all benefactions.

The mother turns from the newly-made grave of her child suffering the bitterest agony and grief that mortal may know, her heart torn and straining to break. Answering to her desperate yearning and need comes the loving promise and invitation, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven". Healing balm, sweetly soothing comfort, the promise of the Almighty Father and the pitying Saviour that all shall be well with the child and that presently there shall be glad reunion where there shall be no more parting, nor tears, nor heartaches.

Come the skeptic, the ultra-modernist, the atheist. Come the dry-as-dust professor, the callous student, crammed with unconsidered and undigested reading on vague theories. Come hungry publicity seekers, eager to pose and be talked of, professional cynics, cynical because unable to measure anything except by their own tiny standards and limitations, the village and small-town infidel, seeking by blasphemies to obtain distinction he fails to earn otherwise. All these unite in laboriously garrulous clamor to demonstrate to the bereft and mourning that there can be no resurrection, no life better or higher than what we have here. They strive zealously to convince the stricken mother that her passionate longing and yearning are vain, her faith and hope but idle fallacies, that of her child there is and can be nothing but the heap of bones in the small casket underground.

Man or woman burdened with cares and sorrows, toiling with tired feet on steep hills of the long highway from childhood to age, sore from the wounds of disappointments, defeats, disillusions, read and hear, "Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest". Those who have lived and toiled through years in which each day brought new pain or fear, whose ways have led over stony paths and through desolate wilderness, take joyfully into their souls the thought that when the strife and striving and troubles are ended they shall be led to green pastures by still waters and shall know rest never to be broken, happiness undimmed and endless peace. Burdens are lightened, strength is renewed, heavenly radiance and beauty shine through the darkness, courage and faith banish all temptation to despair.

Come, then, the learned professors, the profound philosophers of nothingness and preachers of emptiness, to prove by ceaseless and vociferous repetition that the victory of the grave is complete, that for the sting of death and parting there is no alleviation. With strange eagerness they assume the task of showing the weary and heavy laden that for them there shall be no rest but extinction, the toil-worn and stricken that there can be no compensation for wrong and injustice borne here, no reward for brave and patient endurance, steadfast allegiance to duty, right and righteousness.

There never has been nor can be cruelty more cold-blooded or unprovoked than this. Bigots of religion who have used rack and stake and thumbscrews had, at least, the pretext of belief that their victims were trying to mislead on the road to salvation. Savages torturing prisoners avenge themselves on foes. Governments and leaders butchering their fellows plead the necessity for self-preservation. Persons to whom a weeping mother has given no cause for enmity or fear busy themselves to inflict on her torture of the soul far more deadly than any that can assail the body by wresting from her the comfort and hope to which she clings.

Why do the writers and talkers of varying grades assiduously attempt such work? No disease but their's is characterized by horrible desire to infect all other people. So far as they tell, they offer nothing to replace what they seek to destroy.

The Salvation Army workers in the slums, the humble, obscure preachers far in the mountains, the Sisters of Charity everywhere, representing opposite extremes of doctrine, work ceaselessly and successfully to lessen the sum of human misery and sin. Some scores or hundreds of persons, proclaiming their own intelligence and superiority, work ceaselessly to lessen incentive to human virtue and to multiply the sum of human woes by destroying the one sure and lasting consolation and solace. Their work is not largely successful; but why is it undertaken?

Emperors and empires and frantic nations have warred against the Christian faith. It has grown and spread through nineteen centuries since its Founder languished and bled on the Cross. Its enemies have crumbled and perished. It stands today the guiding and dominating influence of the dominant peoples, the final compelling power and refuge, the court of the world's last resort, appeal and hope when passions and follies of men threaten world ruin. Why, then, the ceaseless effort to undo the good this faith clearly has done and is doing, to beat down and blot out the comfort and rest and joy it gives where they are needed most sorely, the inspiration it gives to glorious achievement, the beauty and light and gladness it bestows. Why?

Alfred B. Williams.

WITH GOD AND HIS PEOPLE AT KESWICK, ENGLAND

Nestling amid the mountains in the far-famed lake district of England, Keswick has been for fifty-two years the gathering place of perhaps the most consecrated group of Christians to be found anywhere. It is truly a unique gathering. Fifty-two years ago the Vicar of St. John's Church, Keswick, met with about one hundred people there, to be guided by the Spirit into the claiming of their full privilege in Christ. Perhaps a statement of the themes unfolded by the speeches this year will define the scope and purpose of this movement—heart-searching, heart-cleansing, consecration, the Spirit-filled life, and service. Every year for a full week, for fifty-two years, now a full year, the meetings have been held, and God has wonderfully blessed it, not only with an increased attendance, but with changed lives, recruits for the mission field, and spiritual fruits that eternity alone will reveal.

As we write under the stress of travel, we may be pardoned the somewhat disconnected jotting down of impressions.

There is a large tent capable of seating nearly five thousand people with comfortable seats and loudspeakers so that the speaker is easily heard in any part of the tent. To us a cause for wonder was the crowd surging toward the tent, a mighty army with Bibles, chiefly young men and women with sturdy tread, elastic with zeal, making for the tent to listen to a deeply spiritual unfolding of the Bible on holiness. Do your own contrasting here with the average Church service. Quietly all are seated—there is no jostling, no confusion. Like trained soldiers these soldiers of the cross, in so many of whom self is dethroned, are seated. Hymns of only the purest devotion with all the familiar, stately tunes are sung while they are coming in. Then there is quiet. The Chairman arises and gives out the opening hymn and this sea of humanity singing in true unison of spirit raises a mighty chorus of praise to God. Then follows a beautiful prayer by one on the platform and the address. Look at the wrapt attention of the uplifted faces—there is no claptrap oratory—it is expositive, just simple, straightforward Spirit-filled teaching from God's Revelation concerning sin, self, and the Saviour. For an hour they are fed with the bread of life. Then the benediction and they disperse for a short intermission and return later. The speakers drive the wedge in deep. There is heart-searching—people are turned "inside out" as one expressed it and later by streams and on mountain sides agonizing struggles are going on while one is entering into the blessedness of the Life that is Christ and the Holy Spirit works His transforming work. There is an avoidance of anything to jar on one. The hymns are of the highest order. There is no striving for emotion, but yet all hearts seem to be under the dominating control of the blessed Holy Spirit. May we add, too, that the rugged fibre and the sterling steadiness of the British character give tone and substance to the atmosphere. The speakers inspire by virility, clearness, and simplicity but, above all, by Scripturalness, and the power of the Spirit.

Christ is exalted—so much so that under one of God's devoted servants a few years ago the people were so moved as to rise as one man, interrupting the speaker and singing, "Crown Him with Many Crowns".

There is a quiet restfulness amid the scenery upon which Nature has lavished her best—a beautiful vale amid the green hills, with a limpid stream babbling by green pastures and a peaceful lake at the end of the town. Bright sunshine and a perfect temperature combine to lead thoughts heavenward. Like an orchestra well-trained with no discordant notes, the Convention strikes a high note and holds it, shutting out the intrusion of discordant thoughts or feelings.

Emerging from the tent, signs of well-known missionary agencies meet the eye—London Tract Society, Scripture Gift Mission, C. M. S., Protestant Truth Society, and well-known publishers with book stalls presenting a tempting array of the best books bearing on the Bible and the spiritual life. As one thinks of the fifty-two years of this movement, and the associations recall some of the great spiritual leaders who taught here, such as Bishop Moule and Dr. Griffith-Thomas, and when we realize the number of lives here brought face to face with the Risen Christ and sent out to all parts of the world to work for the Master, something of the great influence that this movement has had on the world comes home to us. With convicting spiritual power blows are being dealt at sin of selfishness, secret habits, unyieldedness, pride, temper, and other evils, with the result of transformations taking place here in this lovely region, apart from the world, and under the reign of truth and prayer. At night an open-air meeting is held in the Market Place where a young clergyman, who has been doing a great work among the students at Cambridge, presides and calls on a number of young men, students, soldiers, returned missionaries, and others who mount the rostrum and with fire and straightforward sincerity tell of how Christ satisfies them and give a ringing call to accept Him.

We wish that we had space to tell of the two great prayer meetings at 7:00 A. M. each day, one for the missionaries and the other general. One of the most beautiful addresses we have ever heard was given one morning on Mary sitting at the feet of Jesus. In the prayers that followed many expressed their desire to break their alabaster box of love and devotion for the Lord Jesus. The addresses were all most satisfying and helpful. Mr. Russell Howden's forceful appeal to make Christ King seemed to us about the strongest message of the Convention. But for clear, incisive, and comprehensive teaching on the Holy Spirit, Dr. Scroggie's masterly address made one feel that there was nothing more to be said, while the captivating eloquence of Mr. Mac Beath formed a vivid portrayal of the subject of service that for loyalty to Scripture teaching and grace of language with its tumultuous flow of poetic imagery left one praising God for such an inspiring message. Dr. Inwood moved us deeply and he was greatly used of God.

Keswick, likes Palestine, has lakes and mountains. Immortalized by the poets, we believe that its true glory is to be found in the marvelous work of grace which these conventions have been the means of bringing about. For a week it is the centre of spiritual activity unparalleled. Early in the morning the street is astir with streams of people going to the prayer meeting, whence pulsating waves of spiritual power are to go to the ends of the earth and are focussed upon the Tent with its great number of young people to be worked on. As one walks down the streets there are banners indicating the headquarters of the different missionary fields, South America, Africa, China, Moslem World, India, etc. Here meet the battle-scarred veterans of the Cross, the hosts of spiritual yoemen, true heroes of the Faith. While at breakfast an evangelizing group of young men pass singing hymns,—everywhere people are seen carrying their Bibles, kindness and purity and glory written on many faces.

The great volume of praise from such hearts cannot but inspire. One is struck with the absence of distractions. The speakers speak as those charged with responsibility and the ego is entirely absent.

The work of the Convention is not confined to the time spent in the tent. Far up on the mountain-side among the rhododendrons or perhaps at the lake-side, or at some house party, groups are facing the issue in prayer and by the help of some servant of God the sermon is being applied. There is a grandeur about the cloud that kisses and envelopes the mountain as it has done for a few days, but there is a greater glory—a light that never was on land or sea—that has transfigured these mountains with a heavenly loveliness, for they are the scene where many a life has entered into the blessed secret of the all-conquiring power of a risen Christ.

The writer was blessed in attending a parlor meeting in the interest of the Bible Churchman's Missionary Society. It is the missionary society of the Evangelical wing of the English Church. A fine old English Admiral, a deeply consecrated man, presided. They were truly of one accord in one place. The great drama of spiritual conflict and victory is told in a way that transported one from all present surroundings. A missionary, broken in health, a devoted soldier of the cross, tells of the problems in India, of the attack of the enemy, and with agonized entreaty pleads for reinforcement by more prayer at home, closing with the praise notes of victory in the field. Others tell of battles with self to enable them to heed God's call to the mission field and urge other young people present to let Christ use their lives in this work. They walk by faith. God's Word is the telephone; they call central in heaven; they gain access by the blood of Christ. Doubtless there are many such meetings. The town is controlled by spiritually-minded people. As you walk home from the meeting at night God's praises are being joyfully sung in homes as one passes. The Holy Spirit has the right of way, and so it is a case of speaking to selves in Psalms and hymns, etc. It is a spiritual atmosphere and evil thoughts take flight.

There are gray-haired men and aged women; there are stalwart youths and blooming maidens; there are Japs and West Indians; there are all parts of America represented and English from all parts of the world, and all denominations coalesce under the one banner at the gate of the tent, "All One in Christ".

Praise God for Keswick—for what it has done, is doing, and by His grace shall do.

It's the last night. A searching message from one grown old with God, a veteran who, like an old violin mellowed with age, pours forth spiritual melodies. He sees surging conflicts in many hearts. As he speaks a mighty volume of prayer is going up. Some absent themselves from the meeting to pray. It is a spiritual Armageddon. The hosts of God are descending on the souls beleaguered by Satan, and when the hymn is given out at the close of the sermon and that vast assemblage joins in singing a hymn of consecration and, in response to the appeal at the line which indicated personal surrender to Christ, raised their hands, a note vibrant with exaltation shot through every heart and the bride of Christ appeared truly "fair as the moon, clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners". The moist eye, the handkerchief relieving pent-up emotion, the tearful young woman tenderly being dealt with by a loving Christian sister, were evidences that the praying host had routed the enemy, and the victory was won. It was the realization of Frances Havergal's lines, the truth of which was reiterated from God's Word.

"In full and glad surrender
I give myself to Thee,
Thine utterly and only
And ever more to be."

We have not space to tell of the wonderful testimony meeting at seven A. M. on the last day and of the most impressive offering of lives for the mission field at a meeting later in the day.

Truly Keswick is a mercy seat, a meeting place with God.

"There, there on eagles' wings we soar,
And time and sense seem all no more,
And heaven comes down our souls to greet,
And glory crowns the mercy seat."

WHAT IS FUNDAMENTALISM?

By the Reverend W. B. Riley, D. D.

PART THREE.

THERE is not a week but brings us some report from foreign fields of division on the field itself over the promulgation of "another gospel", "which is no gospel"; of foreign mission schools that scoff Moses and exalt Darwin; that reduce Christ to the level of a man and degrade Him to the descendant of a monkey, and of mission secretaries that hold to scorn the precious blood He shed, and denominate the declaration of it, "the gospel of shambles".

Oh, the tragedy of it all! However, it takes hold of the heart of believers as they think of "the cup of salvation sent" to the Japanese and learn that some man or woman has, while wearing the name of missionary, put into that cup the deadly poison of modernism and made it to effect for those who drink of it, no redemption, but an epilepsy of Darwinism.

The Bible Champion of January, 1927, truly said, "The liberalistic movement in our Christian Church is not a mark of normal and healthy growth. It is a case of pathology, and it threatens to become more and more virulent. If it is not cured, the disease will sap the very life of the Church".

Think of theological seminaries, endowed to the extent of millions, and still pleading with fundamentalists to give them more, training the children of Trinitarian believers in the Unitarian philosophy, and sending them forth to pulpits at home and abroad! It is to this non-spiritual, anti-Christian and insane procedure that fundamentalism objects. Holding absolutely to the authority and integrity of God's Word, it believes itself commissioned by the risen Christ to "teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. 28:19), "to preach the Gospel to every creature", baptizing them that believe as assurely saved.

That commission is to make disciples and not denominationalists.

A disciple is a man taught—an instructed believer. We properly translate our commission, "Go ye, therefore, and disciple all nations".

The history of the rights of denominationalism might be an interesting study, but it would clearly demonstrate no divinity. There is nothing in the New Testament to advocate or even justify its existence.

The Bible is not a book so difficult of understanding as to separate men into factions. The trouble is they have come to it with their prejudiced opinions, with their fixed philosophies and have tried to find in its sacred pages the difference of inherited heresies, and denominationalism has been the result. Is it any wonder that this modern Diana is now being discredited? And shall we marvel if she suffers the same fate that befell the Diana of the Ephesians? Should we be surprised if we find that ecclesiastical officials, who have financially profited at this false shrine, call together men of like occupation and salary with themselves, and say, "Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth. Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone in Atlanta, but throughout all America, and even to the end of the world, these fundamentalists are persuading and turning away much people, saying that denominationalism is not divine, so that not only our craft is in danger to be set at nought, but even the great denomination itself may come to be despised, and her magnificence destroyed."

Strangest of all things, the very men who are now seeking to save denominationalism do not seem to realize that they have taken the very steps that lead the way to her destruction. The explosion of the Interchurch Movement was a blast that loosened every denomination foundation. By the wild attempt to combine in ONE people whose creeds were utterly antagonistic; to unite together those who held the Church authoritative, and those who held the Bible authoritative, and those who held their own inner conscience authoritative, they produced the elements that affected explosion. Just as chlorine and hydrogen exposed to light, produce an instant and destructive blast, so this Darwin-conceived attempt to ignore the great fundamentals of the Christian faith, and bind in one body Unitarian, Trinitarian and atheist, when the light of God's truth was turned upon it, exploded the whole machine, erected for the production of this combination. And while certain high officials have found soft ecclesiastical positions upon which to land, millions of dollars went up in that smoke, not one fragment of which has ever been found.

It is practically the same men, ecclesiastical potentates, who have put their heads together and have agreed upon the division of fields at home and abroad, the cooperation of laborers irrespective of what views they might hold or what gospel they might preach, reducing even the gospel itself to a negligible quantity and asking nothing other than a cooperative endeavor in drawing salaries, enjoying offices, thinking out programs, pulling off feasts, and fleecing the uninformed in behalf of a world scheme that gives no promise to the world itself. In nature and character such a scheme is a thinly disguised enemy of the Gospel of God's grace and the true Church of Christ.

Some of us have seen enough! Our hearts are sick with the sight! We know that our denominationalism means nothing to us but a deception. It seems to bind into a brotherhood men that have nothing in common but a brand of the same name, when the great truth is that in every evangelical denomination (and as we profoundly believe, even in Rome herself are some), there are thousands, hundreds of thousands, and millions upon millions of men who are practically in faith and heart ONE, and who ought perhaps, without longer delay, to surrender up to the modernist-marauders these institutions, now uniformly manned by unbelievers, as a liability and not an asset. As a new organization we could then go forth as brethren in the Lord, as poor, perhaps, as were the original disciples, but believing His Word and trusting His blood, declare afresh the mission of the Church of Christ and continue the task, undertaken by the apostles, twenty centuries ago, of preaching the Gospel to every creature and hastening the day of the coming King.

Who are my brethren? Baptists? Not necessarily, and in thousands of instance, NO! My Brethren are those who believe in a personal God, in an inspired Book, and in a redeeming Christ.

(The End.)

OUR CHURCH ILLS DIAGNOSED AND REMEDIED

By George F. Klipstein, M. D.

THE Bishops' Crusade is an admission by the leaders of our Church that there is something wrong with the Episcopal Church, and the Crusade is also proposed as a cure for the wrong. It has shown us that there is something wrong for which we are all responsible. Now, as a layman who loves his Church and has been sorely distressed for some years because of its lethargy, I want to take a few minutes to suggest some possible causes from the standpoint of a layman. We have heard time and time again from the pulpit, various theories advanced as to the cause for the decline of religious growth in the churches and among the masses; and it is a well-known fact that since the great World War catacysm, that there is a marked growing disregard for the Church and its leaders. There is a very general feeling among the people that entering the pulpit or the pew causes a very small, if any change in the individual, either in his mode of living or his conduct toward his fellow-man. His membership in one church or another matters but little, the result is about the same. From the time of the Apostles down to the present, certain individuals have separated themselves from their fellows, and are supposed by earnest study of the Word of God and continuous giving of themselves to prayer and holy things, to become more truly and thoroughly righteous; and living upon a higher plane become leaders of their fellow-men in all that pertains to the Kingdom of God and our better living. Now is there anything in the clergy that can have any bearing on our present condition? Next the vestry, then the other members of our own beloved Episcopal Church. I wish it distinctly understood that I am giving my own views, having no reference to any one pastor, church or people, but that it is the result of a close study of our Church wherever opportunity has permitted me carefully to observe its condition.

Is the clergyman living upon a plane so high that, by his walk and conversation among men, he is known by all, that like Moses he has been with God, and in consequence is surrounded with that something indescribable, which makes you feel that you are in the presence of a child of God? Or do you only recognize him by the cut of his collar? Gentlemen, this is a very pertinent question. Does the clergyman always give the true message? Is his sermon filled with the Gospel of Christ? Do not politics, science, medicine, and legal dissertations enter too largely into his discourses? Does he not forget that we are living in an age of general education, such as the world has never before known, and in consequence we are a nation of thinkers, and when we desire information along these lines we seek men who are experts. When we come to the House of God, we want what the mother begged her minister son for, "To speak a good word for Jesus". We want an unfolding of that Book of Books by one who believes in fact and truth that it is the Word of God, and not a compilation of fables and fairy tales.

Bishop Freeman, during the last six weeks, has expressed the same idea when he said: "The great need of the Church today is more Gospel and less professional preaching." When one comes to church on the Sabbath day, if he has been faithful to his home and his business during the six days, he is tired of the flesh pots and he craves a message that will lead him to higher planes of thought, that will make him a better, a purer, and a holier man, and frequently, all that he gets is a feeble attempt at a sermon, only a half-hearted interpretation of the Scripture; because the pastor in some instances has been so unsettled by the so-called higher criticism, or in fact and in truth, has never sounded the heights and the depths of this Blessed Book, or made it a part of his very being, the inexhaustible riches of this Treasure House, and what he does not himself possess, he cannot pass on to his fellow-man. Then again the solemnity, beauty and value of our service is frequently lost through the rapidity and indifference with which it is rendered.

Some years ago there was in our city an Episcopal clergyman, one of God's gifted children, and though I was only a child when he died, that saintly face was indelibly impressed upon my memory, that tonight, in memory's urn, there are hallowed associations which can never be effaced. He was the child's friend. He possessed the marvelous gift of being able to call each child of his Sunday School by name. He was a man of strong personality, and such a close student of the Bible that his reading a chapter would unfold to the listener a wealth of beauty, that the average reader seldom attained. Years after his death I was present in the church when a eulogy was delivered upon this man, by one of the most learned men of the Diocese of Virginia and, in the course of his remarks, he said that when he was a student at the Theological Seminary he frequently attended this clergyman's church, and the most powerful sermon he ever heard was this clergymans' rendition of one of our morning lessons. The inspiration, the uplifting power that is capable of being developed by the proper rendition of our beautiful ritual I do not believe is always fully appreciated by the clergy; and oh! to them who have once felt its inspiration, how horribly is their mental attitude disturbed by the parrot-like manner in which this beautiful service is so often rendered. Simply perfunctory.

Then, again, the clergyman relying upon the service, sometimes makes little or no preparation of his sermon. Upon one occasion, which I shall never forget, the pastor turned to a party of us just before entering the church and said: "I have not the least idea what I am going to talk about tonight"; and do you wonder that some of us said on our way home, that in fact, he had said nothing, he only talked. Did that man realize that he was an ambassador of the greatest King that the world has ever known? If he had been acting in the capacity of an ambassador of an earthly potentate, would he have dared to deliver his message unthought-out and unprepared? The earthly potentate concerned matters only temporal, things that are fleeting; whereas, an Ambassador of Christ represents the things of time and eternity.

Then, again, the motive of seeking pleasure is cited in many pulpits as the compelling influence to join church; when the truth of the matter is that the world is pleasure crazy. Life is not one calm sweet day. No cross, no crown. "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," said our Master; but that does not mean that there is no yoke and there is no burden. It is easy compared with the yoke and the burden borne by the unregenerate. It is a very serious question in my own mind whether we are not making a grave error in trying to get away from the old Puritanical interpretation of the proper observance of the Sabbath and allowing that pendulum to swing so far that we are desecrating that hallowed day, and instead of its being God's Day, it is in fact and truth the devil's day. Under our present method it is a day of increased labor and a demoralizing rush for increased pleasure of all kinds; not in any sense a day of rest; so that there is not left either time for a closer walk with God, or the rebuilding of the waste tissues of the body consequent upon six days of toil and stress. Our present method of living is in direct violation of God's holy command, and we must pay the penalty. Oh, I know some man will say that it is plainly stated in the Bible that if your ox should get into the ditch on the Sabbath you must take it out. In using the words of another I would say that if that ox continually got into the ditch on the Sabbath, I would kill the ox, or fill the ditch. I will observe the Sabbath.

The drawing power to be stressed for church attendance should be love and duty. Is it possible to conceive that anything except love and duty could have caused our Lord and Master to have passed those three years of His Ministry. Then, again, the pulpit is frequently asleep and literally dead, and they do not know it. You cannot have a live church unless you have a live, consecrated leader.

Now, as regards the vestry. In selecting a vestryman, very often too much attention is paid to his attitude toward men rather than as to their relationship toward the church. It makes no difference what a man's intellectual or financial standing may be, if he is not intensely interested in things pertaining to the Kingdom of God, if his membership in the church has not made him love to study God's Word daily and do a man's part in advancing Christ's Kingdom, then, in my judgment, that man assuredly has no business accepting the responsible position of vestryman. He is not only failing to perform his obligation, but he is taking the place that one more interested is prevented from occupying. The man who tells me that he is too busy to attend service, too busy to read and study the Bible, I want to tell him that he is the most self-deceived individual in the community. In the first place, when he makes that statement, he acknowledges a gross amount of ignorance concerning his own bodily needs, that he ought to be ashamed of. God, in fashioning him, has so arranged His immutable laws that rest on the Sabbath is demanded for his bodly recuperation; and just in proportion as we obey or violate those laws do we reach or fail to reach the full stature of manhood in Christ Jesus. Man is made in God's Image. He is called A Temple of the Holy Ghost; in my judgment, it is a very serious matter how he cares for that temple. I think if we would give that statement proper thought we are doing many things today that we would not do and it is a very sad fact that no man, outside Christ's ennobling nobling Grace, takes proper care of his body.

After practicing medicine forty-six years, I stand before you and make the broad assertion that no man outside the influence of the in-dwelling Spirit of our Divine Redeemer leads a clean life. Intellectuality is no safeguard. Education is no protection, it only intensifies the capacity for evil. Do you doubt it? Then come with me and carefully examine a body of men that of all others ought to take the best care of their bodies, and they are the medical men. Does not the medical man, as a rule, stand high in the intellectual world? Has he not spent years and years of study in ferreting out the cause and the prevention of disease? Has it not been through his instrumentality and his alone that all of the great advances in the prevention and cure of disease have been effected? Has it not been through his indefatigable work that the span of life has been advanced ten or more years within the past thirty years? Outside the influence of Christ's religion upon man, has not the medical man done more than all other instrumentalities combined in advancing the happiness and prosperity of the nation at large? Yet this same medical man, marvelous boon to suffering humanity, uninfluenced by the restraining power of Christ's Holy Word, he indulges in many known vices with an abandon that cannot be exceeded by the most ignorant of men. "Naughty but nice," holds as complete sway over him as any one else.

There is no more striking demonstration of the above statement than the well-known fact that few men, in spite of their knowledge of the deleterious effect, are greater slave to nicotine and alcohol than are some men in the medical profession. After giving this subject the most careful consideration, I do not believe there are any two poisons in the pharmacopeia that are more surely destroying the manhood and womanhood of the nation than are the ones in tobacco and alcohol. I say tobacco first because its insidious injury to the brain and nervous system, not only lowers our capacity for the best mental work, but it so disturbs the muscular system that any medical man with a practiced ear can recognize what is known in medicine as the "tobacco heart", and there is no drug so craved, or that gives more temporary relief than alcohol.

You will never enforce prohibition until you abolish its companion dope—Nicotine. Dr. Fordice Barker, one of the most prominent physicians of New York, stated in a public address that in consequence of the present excesses of the men and women of the cities that our race would soon become a nation of neurotics, if it were not that we had the country to call upon.

Unless I have read the mind of the people incorrectly, there never was in the history of the world such a longing for the true interpretation of the Word of God as there is today, and never was there a time when it was more sorely needed; but this need of the people can only be met by one who is in deed and fact a child of God himself. I believe if the Divine Message is not more prayerfully and carefully delivered many who are at present attending church will resort to their newspapers and radios, or will go to other churches and our pews will still remain empty. We may have all the Crusades. We may establish all sorts of leagues, but unless we devote ourselves more to prayer, unless we make this Blessed Book more a part of our very being; unless we go out and by personal touch bring into the church our fellow-man, we will accomplish nothing. Again too much attention is paid to the ornate adornment of the buildings and to the professional work in the choir and too little attention to the Spirituality of the church. The first essential to every church's growth is a properly conducted Bible class. The Bible is a treasure house whose riches are not yielded by simply a little surface work. You cannot make a success of this class by simply making the leader an interrogation point. That leader must have a personal acquaintance with Christ. He must make the Bible a prayerful study. He must feel and know by a personal experience that the interpretation is true or he never can become a successful leader. Fellow Vestryman, permit me to make one suggestion. If you have not already done it, make prayer a part of your life's work. Ask God's guidance before you undertake any important work. Take my word, it is the greatest co-partnership you ever entered into. This is no theory. This is a fact. I have tested it for forty years.

IS THE BIBLE GOD'S WORD?

WILSON vs. HOLMES

THE most serious and insidious attacks upon the Bible once came from unbelievers, atheists and men who loved to create a sensation by attacking the citadels of truth. None of the Ingersolls and others destroyed the faith. The Word remains as the sure foundation after generations of assaults by skeptics and cynics and unbelievers.

Today the most danger to the Bible and Religion does not come from its open foes. It can meet and vanquish all such. The enemies to be dreaded are sometimes found in the pulpit, preachers who still minister at holy altars, giving the people whe are hungry for the bread of life nothing but stones. The latest and most dangerous is the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, who rattles around in the pulpit of Community Church on Park Avenue, New York. He told his congregation that the Bible is useless except for a few pages of the New Testament, that the religion of the future will have nothing to do with Jesus, no use for the Bible or for any church. He declared that "Jesus never rose from the dead", and that "all the sum and substance of Christian belief has been destroyed by science" and "we don't need the Bible, every man can write his own Bible". Here are a few of his statements:

> Why should we be satisfied with the damaged goods of the New Testament? After you have rescued a few pages from it the New Testament is useless. Its psychology is hopeless, its morals are outworn. Today we need another such genius as Paul to do the work that he did, but there is no such man. There is not a first-class man in the Church today; the first-class men go into science, business and the arts.
> In the minds of many Christianity and religion are identical, but that is not true. There are true and beautiful religions in portions of the world where the name of Jesus is never mentioned. Religion in the real sense of the word springs from the hearts of men, from the ages of human experience. We don't need the Bible; every man can write his own Bible.

Dr. Holmes outlined the religion of the future. Negatively, he said, it will have nothing to do with the Bible, but will look to the heart of man; it will have nothing to do with Jesus or any other individual prophet, and it will have nothing to do with any Church or Creed, but will be as free as the air.

Positively, he continued, the new religion must bear in mind that truth is ever changing and never final, and that truth is found by man and not revealed by God.

He compared the Christian minister of today with a man who replaces the stones of his house one by one until not a stone of the religious edifice remains, the original house being Christian doctrine, and added:

> The preacher should take the raw material of science and, laying it on his altar, mould it into a thing of beauty. Then, after it has served its temporary purpose as a work of art, he should smash it, throw it away and go again to the laboratory of the scientist for new raw material.

If such profanation had been uttered outside the pulpit, it would not have been quite so shocking. It shows that in a cult of present day unbelievers, not honest enough to give up "the livery of heaven" the Bible is no longer a guide and a light. Such preachers no longer believe in the Way, the Truth and the Life, and they are seeking to destroy the faith of those who listen to their attempt to remove the ancient landmarks.

Let us contrast the wiser and better conception of the Bible by the utterance of a great scholar who had dipped into science and all learning, accepted all that science had to give, and still held fast to faith in the Bible. Woodrow Wilson, writing to the young men entering the World War, said:

> The Bible is the word of life. I beg that you will read it and find this out for yourselves—read, not little snatches here and there, but long passages that will really be the road to the heart of it. You will find it full of real men and women not only, but also of the things you have wondered about and been troubled about all your life as men have been always; and the more you read the more it will become plain to you what things are worth while and what are not, what things make men happy—loyalty, right dealing, speaking the truth, readiness to give everything for what they think their duty, and most of all, the wish that they may have the real approval of the Christ, who gave everything for them—and the things that are guaranteed to make men unhappy—selfishness, cowardice, greed and everything that is low and mean. When you have read the Bible you will know that it is the Word of God, because you will have found it the key to your heart, your own happiness and your own duty.

When Mr. Wilson was inaugurated President of Princeton, in his inaugural address he warned young men, while alert for what was new or true in science, against giving up "old drill, the old memory of things gone by, the old schooling in precedent and tradition, the old keeping of the faith as a preparation for leadership in the days of social change, and he declared, "We must make the old humanities human again". He was no foe to science. He welcomed its instruction, but he stood against its monopoly in college life. "Science," he said, "has given us agnosticism in the realm of philosophy and scientific anarchy in the field of politics."

When a preacher says "every man can write his own Bible" and "we don't need the Bible", he may have a place in the world. But it is not in the pulpit.—News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C.

Labor Sunday Message, 1927

(Prepared by the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, for use on Labor Sunday, September 4, 1927.)

The Church and Labor hold many common ideals. The Gospel of Jesus the Carpenter, which is the foundation of the Christian Church, rests upon the love of God, who is the Father, and the service of all men, who are brothers. The social ideals of Labor rest upon the essentially religious principles of service and sacrifice, of creative work, of brotherly friendliness, and of social justice. In the support of these common ideals, Labor and the Church stand together.

On this Sunday, devoted to the cause of Labor, it is appropriate for every Church to reaffirm its support and allegiance to the common moral issues to which both Labor and religion are committed. The Church holds that human personality is sacred, and opposes all forms of exploitation and human degradation. It protests against the employment of children of tender years in denial of their right to growth and education, and the employment of men and women for over-long periods of labor. It stands for the payment of wages sufficient both to sustain and to enhance life, the right of workers to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and protection against unemployment and occupational accidents and diseases.

It is fitting, too, that every Church should continually affirm its belief in the application of the principles of Jesus in every industrial relation. The spirit of goodwill expressed in advancing forms of industrial cooperation can reconcile the differences between management and men, and eliminate the human and material wastes of conflict. That these statements are not vague ideals, but are actual programs coming to pass, is shown by the proposals of the American Federation of Labor for cooperation with management to increase efficiency and production, and by the growing number of instances where Labor and management are actually working together for these same purposes.

Unceasing concern for the lot of the workers, their wives and children, is the inevitable expression by the Churches of that love which led Christ to turn to the multitudes and to become the passionate advocate of their welfare. The labor movement is the self-conscious organized expression of the workers' struggle for a more abundant life. It is impossible for the Church of Christ to devote itself passionately to the welfare of the masses of the people and not to have sympathetic relations with organized Labor. This does not mean that the Church should become partisan, but rather that it must fulfill the commands of Christ in expressing His intense human interest. In fact the Church has a right to expect the support of its members, in principle at least, in its efforts to lift the status of the under-privileged. In striving for the better life for them the Church finds itself touching elbows with Labor, and they together may perform a great service in the promotion of a more just and brotherly order in America.

Book Reviews

JESUS ONLY—THE FINAL AUTHORITY AND CENTER OF UNITY: Published by Benjamin Samuel Varjabedian. The Homestead Press, Des Moines, Iowa.

In this book the author presents a reaction against dogma unsupported by the life. It abounds in a wealth of inspirational teaching, not only from Christ, but also covers a wide range of the best Christian preachers and teachers of all time. In these days of profession without practice, the book utters a needed note and ought to stimulate and arouse those who have sunk into a languid aquiescence with debased standards of living. The stress is laid on obedience as the means of entering into the consciousness of Christ. Like many reactions, we are inclined to think that notwithstanding a soul appreciating and reflecting such a wealth of inspiration, the book is not safe in its theological position.

The author ignores dispensational truth; he verges on universalism, and applies the evolutionary process when he tells of the world movement when humanity will have finally become "The Son of God". When he says: "Human nature is but the reflection of the Infinite and Eternal God", he contradicts God's Word in 1 Cor. 2:14: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." All doctrinal foundation, creed and sacraments are to go, and we rest on the teaching of Jesus only. But doctrine and life can no more be divorced than soul and body in this life. Phillips Brooks' words are sublime in this connection, "Doctrine must be kept active by life; life kept deep by doctrine". accepted Christ, was a Christian, so that we have the Unitarian position of salvation by character, and, therefore, Christ need not have died.

His soteriology is sadly lacking and he has fallen into the so-called Trench apostasy that a man is saved by dying for others. On this account Lincoln, who never never accepted Christ, was a Christian, so that we have the Unitarian position of salvation by character, and, therefore, Christ need not have died.

The deification of humanity, a cardinal note of the present apostasy, is noted in quoting Ella Wheeler Wilcox: "He who loves mankind more than he loves himself—may be anyother Christ. We all may be the Saviours of the world if we believe in the divinity which dwells within us."

It is to be regretted that with much that is so admirable, the book should have such glaring faults, but its sad omission and the changes rung on Christ incarnate in humanity make it a dangerous book if we are to accept the whole teaching of Scripture.

NEW COURSE OF CHURCH SCHOOL INSTRUCTION.

The Rt. Rev. C. M. Beckwith, D. D., Bishop of Alabama, has just issued a new course of instruction for Church Schools, to be known as The Church School in the Book of Common Prayer.

Bishop Beckwith is a recognized authority on the Prayer Book, and is the author of the Trinity Course of Prayer Book Instruction, which was published some years ago, and extensively used in certain sections of the Church.

The Bishop's new course represents a lifetime of thoughtful study, and is published at the oft-repeated request of clergymen who have used it, and proven its practical value.

The Bishop's thesis is that in the Church School the Church has instituted a school of influence, rather than of instruction. He holds that the Churchman, of whatever age, learns chiefly through the practice of the worship laid down in the Book of Common Prayer, with the minister as instructor, commissioned by the Church. He may call to his aid such persons and books of instruction as can best illustrate and interpret that worship. The Church School is the logical agency for this interpretation; the Book of Common Prayer is the logical text book. Mature persons of right character and judgment, of proven loyalty and thorough knowledge of the Church, are the logical faculty.

The course is designed to provide definite Church instruction along definite Church lines, to win our younger members to regular attendance upon public worship, and to stimulate their love for the services of the Church. It opens the book of Common Prayer, and clarifies its teaching in a wonderful way.

The course consists of four grades, exclusive of the infant department and the Bible class. In these grades are taught respectively: The Church Catechism, the Church Year, the Book of Common Prayer and Church History. Grades One and Two have already been issued, and Grade Three will soon be off the press. Copies may be ordered from the Paragon Press, Montgomery, Alabama.

DAILY NOTES ON THE SCRIPTURE PORTIONS

By the Reverend W. Graham Scroggie, D. D.

THE SCRIPTURE UNION.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21—ST. MARK 6:30-44.

Subject Title: A Picnic on a Hillside Overlooking a Lake.

THE MESSAGE.

THE first year of our Lord's ministry was one of obscurity; the second, was one of popularity; and the third was one of opposition. The third year begins with today's lesson. The feeding of the five thousand is the only miracle recorded by all the Evangelists, and therefore our attention is especially called to it. In the Fourth Gospel it is the occasion of Jesus' discourse on the Bread of Life (6:22-65). Notice how the circumstances arose (30-32). Verse 30 connects with verse 7. It is well to be with Jesus before we start out in His service (3:15); and it is well also, that we return to Him, and tell Him all, when we have finished (30). The Master is not unmindful of our need of rest (31): He Himself needed it, and took it (John 4:6). But rest is only for a while (31); we must soon return to the task. Our lesson shews that the task may invade our rest-time; and if it does, we must not complain (33), but have compassion on the restless and the hungry (34). The great cry today is—feed the people, but Jesus began by teaching them (34, 37). In a miracle full of instruction let us note a few points only. (a) Verse 36 exhibits at once the disciples' charity and their want of faith. They felt for the people, but never thought of feeding them; and when that was proposed, they saw only the difficulty (37). How expert we all are at raising difficulties! How slow we are to learn that difficulties present opportunities! (b) Jesus always uses means wherever they are available (38). (c) In all the Master's work there was method (39, 40). Do all things decently and in order. (d) Do you always ask a blessing at meal time? (41). Mark, He took, and looked up, and blessed, and brake, and gave. The reason why we are not more freely given to men, is that we are not yet properly broken. (e) With meagre means possibly 20,000 people were fed and filled that day. Jesus can do much with little (41-44).

Today's Thought: "Break Thou the Bread of Life, Dear Lord, to Me."

MONDAY, AUGUST 22—ST. MARK 6:45-56.

Subject Title: After the Feast, the Storm.

THE MESSAGE.

Jesus sent His disciples away; then He sent the crowd away; and then He Himself went away (45, 46). Everybody gone, and the night creeping on, Jesus has a heart-longing for His Father, to be alone with Him. Do you ever feel like that? I'm sorry for the Christian who lives his whole life in the limelight. Mountains are great places for worship (46). If you have not a closet of your own, go to a mountain, or to a moor; or, if there is nowhere else, behind a hedge in a field, and you will find God waiting for you there. If Jesus needed to pray, how much more do we (46). The Master must have been praying with His eyes open, for He saw His disciples on the sea, and saw that they were in trouble (47, 48). They were doing their best, but were making no headway; yet Jesus did not go to them at once, not until the fourth watch (48). Sometimes He leaves us to prove us; but He will come at last; toil on until He comes. But be sure and recognize Him when He does come (49). Why should we be troubled at the presence of the Master? (50). Listen to His reassuring word, "Cheer up; it is your Friend; don't fear". The reason why we so often fear is because, like these disciples, we have failed to learn a previous lesson (52). We shall never speak the language until we learn the alphabet. This story is both history, parable, and prophecy. Our Lord, in heaven praying for us, sees how contrary are the winds, and in the watch which ends the night He will come to us, and for us, and bring us to the eternal shore. "Roll on dark stream, we dread not thy foam; the pilgrim is longing for home, sweet home." Refreshed by prayer in the mountain, Jesus returned to His work in the plain (53-56): and as many as touched Him were made whole. "Oh, touch the hem of His garment, and thou too, shalt be free; His saving power, this very hour, shall bring new life to thee."

Today's Thought: Cheer Up! He is at Your Side.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23—ST. MARK 7:1-16.

Subject Title: True and False Religion.

THE MESSAGE.

1. The Visit of Scribes and Pharisees to Capernaum and its Motive (1, 2). After the Passover Feast, these religionists went all the way from Jerusalem to watch the behavior of Jesus and His disciples, in order that they might find fault. In a world like ours we cannot but see faults in one another, but we should never look for them. Remember, that whereas the blameworthy are always faulty, the faulty are not always blameworthy. If you are a fault-finder, read Matt. 7:1-5, where you will find your latest portrait. A speaking likeness, isn't it! 2. A Parenthesis (3, 4), detailing the tradition concerning ceremonial washing. These things the Pharisees received to hold: somebody set this fashion, and they, like a lot of sheep, followed it. 3. The Attack (5). The tradition of the elders? Oh! Take off your hats to these men. Tradition; ah, that's it: tradition, not truth. When they asked, Why? they little knew how good a reason Jesus had (15). 4. The Reply (6-13). Jesus lashed these proud pundits with their own law: only He did not call them pundits, but hypocrites, worshipping with their lips, and rebelling with their hearts (6). But their worship was in vain (7); and so is yours, if you do as they did. They laid aside what was worthy, and laid hold of what was worthless (8). They treasured the sand, and threw away the pearls (9). Observe what Moses said is the commandment of God (9, 10). That is what the modern Scribes and Pharisees deny. But what is the use of denying facts? Jesus particularizes to their confusion (10-13). The traditions of the elders are not merely of simple human origin, but of sinful human device. Pretending to observe the law, they outrage it. So do people who sing the praises of God on Sunday, and cheat or slander their neighbors all the week. It is easy to neutralize by one's life what is confessed by one's lips. Jesus turns to the people (14), and shews that the only true religion is heart religion (15-23). Notice the thirteen forms of evil which proceed from the heart.

Today's Thought: "Keep Thy Heart, for Out of it Are the Issues of Life."

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24—ST. MARK 7:24-37.

Subject Title: "That the Gentiles Should Be . . ..Partakers of His Promise in Christ" (Eph. 3:6).

THE MESSAGE.

The ministry of Jesus at this time was in foreign parts (24), on account of the growing opposition of the Jews. He entered into an house. Has He ever entered into yours? Have you ever invited Him (see Luke 24:28, 29). He would have no man known. Today men are crazy on self-advertisement: Jesus was content just to do good. 1. Healing of a Demon-possessed Girl (25-30). As the Jews are rejecting the Messiah, He turns to the Gentiles (Acts 13:46). If you refuse the Saviour, there are others who will welcome Him. His house at last will be filled (Luke 14:23), even though you be not there. Mark's Gospel tells of not a few children who were in great need of Christ (cf. 5:23; 9:17). Are there any children who do not need Him? Don't yours? There is faith outside all the churches, though we may be slow to discover it, and, perhaps, unwilling to acknowledge it (Matt. 15:28). What we should observe in this foreign woman is, her devotion to, and desire for, her child: her confidence that Christ could give her what she wanted, although she had never before seen Him (25); her determination to secure the needed help; her ready wit; and her unique triumph. "Yes, Lord." Was not that a masterstroke? At the end of the day there will be many surprises for you and for me. 2. Healing of the Deaf Mute (31-37). Mark only tells this story; and from the minute details given it is clear that Peter witnessed the miracle. Observe the many ways in which Jesus performed His miracles: sometimes from a distance (29); sometimes by a word of command (9:25); and rarely, as here, by elaborate means (33, 34). The means were never artificial, but divinely adapted to each particular case. Are you deaf to the Divine voice? Then you will also be dumb in the matter of witness. First, really hear, and then you will speak (37).

Today's Thought: "He Hath Done All Things Well" (37).

THURSDAY, AUGUST 25— ST. MARK 8:1-13.

Subject Title: Giving (1-9) and Withholding (10-13).

THE MESSAGE.

1. It is instructive to compare the two Miracles of Feeding (1-9; 6:33-34). In both, the multitude, the disciples and Jesus figure. Both miracles were performed while Christ was a Refugee. In both everybody was satisfied. In both there was a surplus of food. In both it was Jesus' compassion for the people which prompted the act. In both the disciples were consulted; and in both they saw only a difficulty. In both Jesus sent the people away. Neither of the miracles did the disciples understand (17-21). These are comparisons; but there are contrasts also: one day, and three days (6:35; 8:2); five loaves and two fishes, and seven loaves and a few small fishes; wicker-baskets (kophinoi), and large hand baskets (spurides); twelve of the one, and seven of the other were filled with food remaining; five thousand men fed, and four thousand. Trace other comparisons and contrasts, and see if you can discover Christ's principle of action. Perhaps the most astonishing thing in both is the obtuseness of the disciples (17-21). "The mighty interpositions of God's hand in former passages of men's lives fall out of their memories. Each new difficulty appears insurmountable, as one from which there is no extraction; at each recurring necessity it seems as though the wonders of God's grace are exhausted, and had come to an end" (Trench). We say, "How could they be so blind"? Is our understanding readier, and our perception clearer? I have said that the most astonishing thing is the disciples' dullness; but no, it is the Saviour's patience. 2. Sign-seekers (10-13). There were people then, and there are people still, who are ever craving for signs of one kind or another, in tongues, or "healings", or something else. These, like Gideon, are better known by their fleece than by their faith (Judges 6:36-40). It is not signs we need, but sense to act on what we already know (John 5:46, 47: Luke 16:27-31).

Today's Thought: Try and See in Every Difficulty an Opportunity.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26—ST. MARK 8:14-26.

Subject Title: Blind Spiritually (14-21) and Physically (22-26).

THE MESSAGE.

1. Misunderstood)14-21). Through all the ages no one has been so misunderstood as Christ. He felt the pain of it all through His earthly ministry; and that pain was the more acute seeing it was by His friends that He was so often misunderstood. Here, the disciples misunderstood their Master in two ways: (a) they thought He was speaking literally of leaven; and (b) they thought He was blaming them for having only one loaf. As a matter of fact He was doing neither. Jesus taught truth by means of figures, but these men stuck at this figure. Leaven in Scripture represents that which is evil. The leaven of the Pharisees was hypocrisy; of the Herodians, worldliness; and of the Sadducees, unbelief (Matt. 16:6). These are spreading evils of which disciples in all ages must beware. Then, again, Jesus does not blame them for having so depleted a larder. But He does rebuke them for their lack of understanding of Him, with Whom they had been long enough to khow that He was to be trusted. This speech of Jesus (17-21) is unique in this, that it is interrogatory throughout; it consists of ten questions. He reminds them of the two Feeding miracles, and uses the two words for basket (19, 20: see yesterday's message). To these ten questions the disciples give but two replies, and each in one word only—twelve: seven. The word of rebuke had gone home. 2. Enlightened (22-26). Though the disciples did not understand Jesus, He was the great Enlightener of the eyes, alike of body and soul. This miracle is recorded only by Mark. It is one of the few miracles performed gradually. Jesus touched this man's eyes a second time (25). Is your vision misty? Do you not want to see clearly? Read 2 Peter 1:5-11, and especially verse nine. When you do see clearly, you will bring to Jesus people who are still blind (22). The first touch justifies; the second, sanctifies.

Today's Thought: "Perceive Ye Not Yet. Neither Understand?" (17).

SATURDAY, AUGUST 27—ST. MARK 8:27-38.

Subject Title: Confession of Christ.

THE MESSAGE.

Today's lesson presents—1. A Sublime Confession (27-30). Place: Caesarea Philippi (see map). Time: a week before the transfiguration (9:2). Occasion: Jesus is about to reveal solemn facts to His disciples (31). The Master begins at the circumference with His question, men (27), and then comes to the centre, ye (29). The question brings us to the very heart of things, and therefore is the question of questions. The Person of Christ—that is the key to history, and the soul of the Gospel. But men will make Him out to be anyone other than He is (28). They all went into the past for an explanation of Him (28). But He is essentially of the future. The utmost to which they could reach was a resurrection (28), but He was a Revelation. The world's interpretations are all wrong, however good: what will the Church say? (29). Peter's reply is the first adoring confession of the New Testament Church. Peter is ever to the front (cf. 29, 32). Thou art the Christ. Read the fuller account in Matt. 16. Jesus' question, which has been put, and ever must be put, all down the stream of time, admits properly of only one answer; and the truth of His Person confessed has ever been the spring of the life of His Church. Read verse 30, and say why. 2. A Startling Disclosure (31-33). He began to teach them. This is the first clear prediction of the Passion. Mark the three points in this disclosure —rejection, crucifixion, resurrection (31). The glory always gilds the cloud. Get thee behind Me, Satan (33; cf. Matt. 4:10). This is the great and age-long temptation, to obtain the crown in some other way than by the cross. 3. A Solemn Warning (34-38). Christ, Who had said nothing of the manner of His death (31), now hints at it, a cross (34). The world has a cross for every Christian, and Christ has a crown for every one who will carry that cross. Deny; take; follow (34). The whole world is put in one scale, and your soul in the other, and the world scarcely weighs. Study here, profit, loss and exchange (36, 37).

Today's Thought: Am I ashamed of Christ?

Letters to the Editor

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

Mr. Editor:

Now that we have a Church Journal which stands for "The Faith once delivered to the Saints", and the infallibility of the Holy Bible, will you kindly answer the following questions which the infidel modernist never tires of asking: (1) When, where and by whom was the Canon of the Old Testament settled, as we now have it in our Bibles? I say "as we now have it", for the Roman Church includes in its Canon the books known as the Apocrypha.

(2) Why did those who gave us the Canon reject such deep-spiritual books as Ecclesiastes, and the Son of Serach, and retain such books as Ecclesiastes and Esther, which has not the Word God in it, nor any reference to Him?

(3) An infallible book must, of course, have an infallible text, and is it true that the Word of God, as we have it in our Bibles, is made up by a comparison of texts containing more than a thousand variations? A rational answer to these questions would lift a burden from the mind and heart of many a believer. These questions seem to have escaped Bishop McIlvaine's attention, as he never alludes to them.

Or should we meekly accept our Bible on faith, never raising such sceptical questions? But that would lead on to Romanism if we consistently carried out that principle.

E. H. WARD.

Hot Springs, Va.
July 13, 1927.

August 8, 1927.

The Reverend E. H. Ward,
Hot Springs, Virginia.

Dear Mr. Ward:

Your letter of the thirteenth received.

One of the greatest troubles with the Church, in my opinion, is that there are a lot of people that have mistaken their calling in going into the ministry when the Lord called some one else, and there are many wolves in sheep's clothing occupying pulpits in the Church when they should be earning their living by the sweat of their brows by daily labor rather than by performing mental gymnastics through their acrobatic performances in the pulpit and elsewhere.

If you do not believe in the inspiration, authority, and credibility of the Bible as being the Word of God, you owe it to the sincerest honesty to retire as a minister of the gospel and avoid any possibility of playing the part of the Greek horse in Christ's Church. "An atheist's laugh is a poor exchange for Deity offended," and those persons who cannot subscribe one hundred per cent to the Nicene Creed and the Apostles' Creed have no right to call themselves members of the Episcopal Church. If you do not believe in the chart and compass of your boat, just get on some other vessel where you can be in perfect accord with the pilot.

What does it matter when, where, or by whom the Old Testament books were gathered together? We have good reason to think that the work was done by Ezra under Nehemiah's direction, but what has that to do with the divine authority of the books? Our authority is Jesus Christ, the Lord. He regarded the Old Testament as God's Word. He thought that "It is written" ended every religious question.

We know that our Old Testament is the volume that Jesus knew and studied. He referred to the Old Testament under the threefold division common among the rabbis (Luke 24:44, 46). Josephus, Philo, contemporary with Him give our books. The Septuagint Version, supposed to be as early as 200 B. C., does the same. It is undoubted that our Lord had for His Bible our Old Testament books and some others. St. Paul and the other Apostles quote them profusely and regard them as of divine sanction. (See especially 2 Timothy 3:15-17.) And the modern Jews throughout the world honor and use our Old Testament and no other books.

The Apocryphal books were never in the Jewish Canon, nor were they considered part of the Bible by any Church till the Council of Trent included them in the Canon. We include the canonical books and exclude the Apocryphal because that was done by our Lord and His Apostles and by the Jewish Church of our Lord's time.

We believe in the divine inspiration of the Old Testament because our Lord so teaches.

We may ask many puzzling questions as to why God does things in one way rather than in another. We may well say we do not know why by God's guidance some books were excluded and others included. Why God chooses to order or to permit many things, we may, without prejudice to what we know that He does order, say we do not know.

May it not be, for ought we know, that the cynicism and materialism of Ecclesiastes, so characteristic of the brilliant and wornout voluptuary, Solomon, were needed to teach certain things that God desired to emphasize in such fashion as no other writing and writer could well do. It may be, too, that the non-pious, fierce, and blood-thirsty patriotism of Esther and Mordecai was needed for God's picture of the people chosen to be the human ancestors of His Son. The Story of Israel is the Story of Redemption —of God's Redemption—and he is a bold man who would presume to decide how best that story should be developed.

Not all facts and statements and actions, recorded by divine inspiration though they are, are approved. David's sin, Job's impatience, Judah's wickedness, Peter's denials are given as accurately by God's inspiration and guidance; the authors were led by God's spirit to record these things. They are needed for the complete story. They teach high morals by contrast, and so the books cited by you as apparently unworthy of God's inspirational guidance may be needed to complete and fill out the great story, which was preparatory to the unmatched wonder and mystery, the wonder and mystery not only of the world, but of the universe, the self-revelation of God Himself in His Incarnate Son.

This surely is a cavil that ought to be outworn. It is the favorite recourse of the Romanist, seeking to compel to have an infallible pope, to tell us what the infallible book is. Of course, Bishop McIlvaine and the old writers had thought on it. The answer is easy. The many thousands of variations do not change or modify in any material respect any doctrine necessary to salvation. The message of salvation is plain amidst all the variations. The least accurate of the translations and versions convey sufficiently God's truth. The variations are nearly all matters of no import—the order of words, little omissions, etc. No vital teaching is affected. The book was inspired of God to convey the truths of His Salvation in His Son, not necessarily to be entirely free from little modifications. The foundation truths necessary to salvation are open and plain to every humble and docile student. Multitudes of matters are obscure, mysterious, doubtful, awaiting to be clarified by passage of time, growth of knowledge, development of God's providential plans. And this is well. But God's salvation, the cause of it, the method of it, the end of it, the happy results of it hereafter, are plainly seen on the sacred page.

Our Lord said: "If any man is willing to do the will of God, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself." Wrong thought vanishes before right will.

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Yours very truly,
LANGBOURNE M. WILLIAMS.

China, June 30, 1927.

My Dear Friend:

You will never know the joy, relief, positive gratitude, with which I raised my eyes to my Father when I opened my copy of the Southern Churchman of May 21, which reached me yesterday. I have suffered at the thought of having no Church paper, for I am an old-fashioned Episcopalian, having still my membership in ————, South Carolina, the place of my nativity. I believe in all that CHRISTIANITY has always stood for, and nothing more, or less. Years since I refused to have The Churchman come to me, that paper having the way of most New York publications, and have been on the verge of cancelling my subscription to this paper. But God has been better to me than my fears, and you give promise of redeeming the time, for surely the days are far spent. It is hideous enough to be forced to watch many so-called missionaries go down before the sweeping destruction of the enemy, but I feel particularly injured when such people come from the South. One looks for more loyalty from our section, somehow. God bless your every effort. Humanity needs nothing but the simplest of gospel messages. I wonder if by any chance you are the happy possessor of a great book (both as to quantity and quality) which has recently come to me, "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message", by Davidson and Aldersmith, published by William and Norgate, Ltd., London. I think no one in your position should fail to possess himself of this marvelous book, written for this day and hour. My husband and I have sat up for many nights trying to study it and get out of it as much as our small amount of gray brain matter will allow. The perusal of The Great Pyramid will help you to defend our blessed Lord, and the Word of God, leaving no room for discussion. . . . .

We are here as refugees. ———— is the port of and the ships in harbor give us a feeling of comparative safety. Some of the missionaries from the interior are passing through fearful trials, some have lost their lives for His sake. Do not believe what you hear of the "Nationalist Spirit". It simply does not exist, could not, in China. This movement is nothing more or less than anti-foreign and anti-Christian, as will be clearly developed later on.

But now is the time to look up "for our redemption draweth nigh", without a doubt.

Yours in this blessed hope,

A MISSIONARY.

LETTERS OF APPROVAL.

August 1, 1927.

Mr. Langbourne Williams,
Richmond, Virginia.

My Dear Mr. Williams:

. . . You will not misunderstand, I am sure, my saying that I am rejoiced that you have charge of the Old Southern Churchman—the good grandmother of us all!

Among other things we can now pass the dear old paper on to other readers as was the old habit, now well-nigh fallen into disuse, without fear of disturbing the recipient's faith in things religious, but sure that they will receive something to their souls' health and comfort.

———— was with me when he got the news of your purchase of the paper and he well-nigh shouted, of which I told him I would write you, but he hurried up and wrote to you first, so that helped to delay this letter till the cause I have in mind provoked it. He and I were of the I feel sure that many of your friends and more still of same mind, though I was not so enthusiastic. However, the dear old paper are rejoicing that the policy—aye, and principles of the old paper are being restored and that it takes its old-time, well-earned place of leadership in the true evangelical influences in the Church. . . .

But forgive this long letter and believe me, a well-wisher for you and the dear old Southern Churchman, and

Your friend, very sincerely,

A COUNTRY MINISTER.

AN APPEAL: NOT A CRITICISM.

Mr. Editor:

Having noted in recent copies of the Southern Churchman that certain churches were closed for a month or more, during the absence of the rector, may I presume to offer a suggestion?

No one realizes the need for our overworked clergy to have a period of relaxation and recreation more than I do, but I cannot believe it right that the individual Church should be closed.

I realize furthermore the difficulty in securing clerical assistance; many small parishes could not afford to place such an item in their rather limited budget.

As an humble layman, may I give expression to this slogan: "Our Church must be kept OPEN!"?

With the laymen of our Church awakened as they have been by the Bishops' Crusade, why should they not step forward and in their humble way do their part as lay readers?

Many of our dioceses have been subdivided and are not as large as they were; good roads have shortened the distances.

Would it not be possible for our Bishops to create a Commission on Lay Readers, with an active chairman who could gather a group of such men for such emergency service.

May I be pardoned if I presume to mention as an example, illustrating the practical working of such a plan?

I realize that ours is a small diocese, territorially speaking (Washington), besides the nation's capital, we however have four adjoining counties; in order to reach certain points a distance of eighty or ninety miles must be traveled. The Laymen's Service Association of our Diocese realizing the great challenge of answering the above slogan, two years ago, offered to supply licensed lay readers to any church desiring such assistance. The chairman of this committee had little difficulty in selecting a group (fifteen) of well-trained, earnest men who were willing to carry out this service. Last summer fifty-one church services were conducted and churches kept open. During the present season every Sunday four to seven members of this group have responded to the call.

If it is impractical to make this a diocesan matter, I cannot but feel that in every neighborhood of a group of churches, one or two laymen could be found who would readily respond if called upon.

I rejoice to note that the great Bishop of the Diocese of Long Island has sounded the keynote, and as a consequence "A Lay Readers' School" will be formed in the near future.

I wish time might be sufficient to quote the expressions from the men who have ventured, hesitatingly at times upon this great privilege. Do not wait to be called by your rector to such service, but go to him and offer yourself under his instruction.

No man can perform such an obligation, without becoming a most devout follower of the Master.

Faithfully yours,

LARKIN W. GLAZEBROOK, M. D.

2022 P. Street,
Washington, D. C.

Referring to the above letter from Dr. Glazebrook of Washington, we are in hearty sympathy with his views, and we believe that God is going to give some of these ministers, who are now taking one, two and three months' holiday, a permanent holiday outside of heaven when they depart from this world.

Few business callings in the United States give their employees more than two weeks' holiday, and the ministers of the Gospel, engaged in the most vital calling on earth, should limit their holiday to two weeks as is customary with other vocations. LANGBOURNE M. WILLIAMS.

WORTH THE PRICE.

King George, Va., August 1, 1927.

Southern Churchman,

Editors:

Through the kindness of a neighbor your valuable paper is passed on to me and I want to say that "Thoughts for the Thoughtful" and the splendid editorials in one copy alone are worth the price of the paper.

Such articles as "Altitudes" by Alfred B. Williams should be broadcast through a syndicate for the enlightenment and inspiration of the nation.

Every sentence is fraught with eternal truth which stands out as a stop-look and listen sign to parents, schools and churches.

It is true that erroneous ideas of education, success, and money-making methods are making our country semi-pagan and it is high time to take higher "altitudes".

L. G. BOGGS.

We seem to give back to Thee, dear God, who gavest Him to us. Yet as Thou didst not lose Him in giving—so we have not lost Him by His return. Not as the world givest Thou, O Lover of Souls. What Thou givest, Thou givest not away, for what is Thine is ours always if we are Thine and Life is eternal, and love is immortal, and death is only a horizon, and a horizon is only the limit of our sight. Lift us up, Strong Son of God, that we may see further; cleanse our eyes that we may see more clearly; draw us closer to thyself that we may know ourselves nearer to our beloved who are with Thee; and while Thou dost prepare a place for us, prepare us for that happy place that where they are and Thou art we, too, may be through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Church Intelligence

Blue Mountain Conference.

A total of two hundred and forty-two persons, including the faculty, enrolled as members of the second Blue Mountain Conference, which closed its session at Hood College, Frederick, Md., on July 23. These represented twenty-four dioceses and six missionary districts. These figures alone prove the success of the conference, which was slightly larger than that of last year. The conference is unique in two ways: first, it is not managed by any particular diocese or group of dioceses, but by a self-appointed governing body; and second, because it eliminates the more elementary courses and strives to give new and wholesome material to those who are already somewhat experienced in the work of the Church.

The high standing of the faculty and the diversity of the courses offered attract the large number of students. Most of these come from the Diocese of Pennsylvania, where the conference had its origin, and which maintains no summer school of its own. A good many of those listed are from the town of Frederick, and, indeed, the fine cooperation of All Saints' Parish, Frederick, has from the beginning added wonderfully to the success of the conference, and is frequently commented on. Others come in considerable numbers from the neighboring dioceses, of Maryland, Harrisburg and Washington. But, as the figures show, there are students from nearly every part of the East, some coming from as far as Massachusetts.

The faculty also is representative of many groups. This year, the Rev. Dr. Foley, the Rev. Dr. James and the Rev. Percy L. Urban, represented the seminaries; Bishops Overs and Strider are on the faculty, the National Council sent three of its specialists, and Mr. Ernest Piper, Educational Executive of the Diocese of Michigan, brought a quite new point of view. Then the missionaries and visitors, all of them experts in some field of the Church's work. There was Bishop Creighton of Mexico and the Rev. Mr. T'sen of China; workers from Liberia and the Philippines, and from Japan. There were members of the English Church Army and from Toc-H. These and many others held "office hours" under the trees on the campus of the college every afternoon and were surrounded by inquirers anxious to learn more of their particular contribution to the advancement of the Kingdom. The evening lectures, covering nearly every phase of Church activities, added a remarkably broadening influence to the whole conference.

Two new features of this year's conference should be particularly mentioned. One was the school of religious drama conducted by Miss Joy Higgins of Boston, and the course on Church Music by the Rev. A. V. Bennett of Philadelphia. Both were most successful and attracted a large number of students. Before the end of the conference, the drama class produced "The Coming of Our Lord", by Katherine Tynan Hinkson, which had never before been given in this country.

As is true at all summer conferences, the intellectual stimulation is really secondary to the spiritual. "Personal Religion" is the keynote of the Blue Mountain Conference, and the Rev. Father Huntington, of the Order of the Holy Cross, is chaplain of the conference and the leader in creating the spiritual atmosphere which surrounds life at Frederick. There is a daily early Celebration of the Holy Communion, which is very generally attended. There is a daily evening service, and compline before the hour of evening quiet. The whole school attends regularly Father Huntington's morning lecture on "Personal Religion".

The Blue Mountain Conference has received words of commendation from the National Council, from the Synod of the Province of Washington in which it meets, and from a host of bishops whose people profit by its sessions. It may with confidence be now considered a permanent activity of the Church in the Atlantic States.

China.

The China Medical Association has collected some figures regarding hospitals in China, in the eleven provinces under Nationalist rule, quoted in the Shanghai Newsletter:

More or less normal under permanent staff, foreign or Chinese...	38
Under temporary arrangement with Chinese staff	68
Closed	55

There are a few hospitals in these provinces not included in this list, mostly small. It is probable that these would need to be added to the "Closed" list.

"It is no little satisfaction to know that sixty-eight hospitals are running under temporary arrangement with the Chinese staff but too much must not be made of these figures. In many cases the staff is inexperienced and hardly qualified for the heavy strain thus thrown upon it. Financial difficulties of a very grave character have also to be met, and it is not likely that more than half of these can survive for any very long period. Among them also are four that, though still running, have been seized by the military. These are without exception large hospitals and the work now done in them is probably of an extremely poor quality. We know of one of which we are told that the doctors, both foreign and Chinese, have been expelled and the medical work is being done by male nurses in their place!

"The list of hospitals closed includes two that have been completely looted, probably many others have suffered to a less degree, and one has been destroyed by bombardment."

Of the work in Changshu, the Rev. Y. C. Wu writes, on June 10:

"The compound buildings and Proctor School have been very little damaged. Some benches, pupils' desks and clothes are either lost or used as fuel.

"The evangelistic work is now resumed. We have Sunday services and callings maintained all through this period. Some of the meetings stopped for a time, but now every kind of work is resuming as usual. Our boys' day school and the girls' day school are both opened all through this period without interference. It is close to the end of the term. The teachers think that the local government will not care about te primary schools and there is no trouble from these young children."

The Rev. T. K. Shen writes from Hsiakwan:

"Catechist K'o Liang-hsien who went to Puchen on the eighteenth found the place in a most wretched state. Many uninhabited houses were looted clean by soldiers and the poor people of Puchen. Fortunately, Mr. Ma Mo-tsen (assistant in the country work around Puchen), stayed there all through the Fengtien occupation, so that chapel furniture was saved. One trunk of Mr. K'o's at Puchen was looted of its contents. Mr. Ma lost his clothing also."

The Rev. Dr. Ancell tells of a visit to Yangchow made by the Rev. Mr. Kuo:

"Desiring to see for himself the condition of the Mahan Compound, Mr. Kuo went boldly in on the excuse of seeking a certain officer. He found that the buildings have all been very hardly used, doors and windows broken, and practically all furniture destroyed. Even stoves had been broken and thrown outside. The Ancell's piano had been removed to the Assembly Hall and was being used from morning till night. Emmanuel Church was used as a barracks and was filthy. Some furniture was still about, but the altar and the organ had both been removed. Mr. Kuo entered none of the buildings and even outside was repeatedly challenged, but extended his walk widely through the place. The Mahan School furniture had been mostly destroyed, much of it having been used as fuel. He glanced into the school office and saw there the two safes, both broken open.

"Mr. Kuo had planned for his Sunday in Yangchow only one service with Holy Communion following Morning Prayer. But hearing on arrival that there was a prospect of interruption he circulated notice on Saturday night that the Communion Service would be held early. Even on such notice there were twenty-six persons in attendance; and at Morning Prayer, which passed without the threatened interruption, more than forty attended.

"Mr. Kuo had hoped that on this trip he might be able to make arrangements for returning there with his family; but it now seems that the time has not come for him to do so. He encountered one group of officers who were distinctly unfriendly, and almost threatening. During the days while he was in Yangchow there was a fresh access of anti-Christian activity, the streets being placarded afresh with "Down with the Church!" posters. So while he will go there from time to time for services and for attention to business matters, I have advised him not to take his family back yet.

"Mrs. Nyi, the matron at St. Faith's School, an intrepid soul, has stayed on in the school throughout the occupation and her staying has clearly been the means of preventing the destruction of property there. While the soldiers were occupying the Tung Kwan premises the catechist, Mr. Chi, and his family were limited in quarters to the three upstairs rooms in his house, even their kitchen being denied to them.

"We learn of a new use for a roll top desk! Mrs. Ancell possessed a fine oak roll top desk. When the soldiers took Mahan School for barracks they used the roll top as a scrubbing board and the desk itself for chopping their vegetables!"

Dr. Ancell adds: "I feel it a tribute justly due to express the deep regret which the entire Yangchow staff, both Chinese and American, feel for the sad loss of Mr. Liu Han, the Chief of Police, who in April was shot down because he refused to produce on the oral demand of some private soldiers certain prominent residents of the city who were accused by the soldiers. The Sheng Kung Hui has through many years enjoyed the friendship of this exceptionally able and intelligent official, and from him has received much friendly help in various times of need. Among his last acts were the provision of an official escort for our ladies when leaving in March, and his attention to certain arrangements whereby our Pien Ming School property was protected from military occupation. The interests of China were ill served in this brutal incident."

Letters have been sent to all the Bishops in China telling them of the proposal to re-open the Central Theological School in the autumn in Nanking. If it is not possible to open the school in that city, plans will be made to house the school on the St. John's Compound.

Plans also are being made to continue the Theological School in English at St. John's and four students have already signified their intention to return.

North Tokyo and the Tohoku.

Four Japanese deacons were advanced to the priesthood last year in the Tohoku District, and there were two ordinations to the diaconate in the District of North Tokyo and one to the priesthood.

There were three consecrations of churches during the year at Mito, Wakamatsu and Kukatsu. Two parish houses were dedicated, one at Shimodate, in the District of North Tokyo, and one at Koriyama, in the Tohoku.

The confirmations were more than double those of the previous year, there was an increase of fifty per cent in the number of baptisms, and reports from nearly every station tell that attendance at services shows an encouraging increase.

The work is handicapped severely by want of equipment. Only the most urgent needs are printed in the Program for Advance Work and none of them have been answered as yet.

"There are no people more impressed by decent appearances than the Japanese," says Bishop McKim. "If they see us worshipping in a little, unattractive hut on a back street they think we show but little respect for the great God whom we ask them to honor, love and serve.

"We are struggling with insufficient force and equipment at the following important places in the Tohoku District. I take them in order as we enter the Tohoku, from Tokyo:

"Shirakawa, a large town where we have neither land nor buildings.

"Koriyama, a flourishing city where we have land and parish house, but no church or rectory.

"Taira, no land or buildings.

"Morioka, a city of 50,000 people, a large educational center where we have a good lot, well located, and a parish house, but no church building.

"Odate, a good lot and kindergarten building, no church.

"Noshiro, a lot and parish house.

"Akita, well-equipped with the exception of a church, which is a much-felt want in a large city of attractive buildings.

Hachinohe, land and parish house, no church.

"Tsuruoka, neither land nor buildings, our people worshipping in a little dark building on a back street A good lot could be bought for $4,000.

"Yonezawa, a city of 30,000 people, where we have a lot and parish house, a church is badly needed.

"All of these cities range from 10,000 to 60,000. There are many other smaller places where we have Christians but no resident worker, which should be occupied. I have mentioned only those in which a catechist or priest is resident."

The Ooba Jo Gakuin, the training school for kindergarteners and mission women at Sendai, has been in a flourishing condition, with the dormitory full to capacity. Each year there are as many applicants as can be admitted. Its graduates are admitted to teach in kindergartens licensed by the Japanese Government, and are a real aid to the evangelistic work of the Mission.

"The North Tokyo District," Bishop McKim says, "is like a slip taken from a parent tree. When the Diocese of Tokyo was taken out of the former District of Tokyo, in 1923, about one-tenth only of its strength was left for North Tokyo. It has been hard for this infant to realize that it has a distinct identity of its own, but there are encouraging indications of increasing vigor and activity. New work has been begun at Kiryu, Sano, Oyama and Kanoma. None of these have equipment of any kind, either land or buildings, rented houses only. New churches should be built as soon as funds are available at Urawa, Omiya, Takasaki, Shinmachi, Ashikaga, Tochigi, Tsuchiura, Hachioji, and Sukegawa. To these should be added the new stations mentioned above."

A Churchman in Lancaster.

A Churchman finds in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, much food for thought. This town of the Red Rose, while York, not far away, represents the White Rose, of Old England, combines many quaint and curious qualities with modern, bustling, American utilities. Here in the streets walk Amish, Dunkards, Mennonites in strange and picturesque distinctive costumes, while vast factories, manufacturing tobacco, cotton, linoleum, watches and what not, attract young people from all parts of the land to assist in the work.

President Buchannan lived here befor the War Between the States; Thaddeus Stevens lived here and founded the trade school which bears his name. To go further back, General Hand of Revolutionary times was a citizen, and is buried in the churchyard of St. James' Church, which had a pre-revolutionary history, and whose cemetery reminds you of Christ Church, Alexandria, and Bruton Church, Williamsburg, in the antiquity of the dates on the tombstones.

When in Rome, Italy, several years ago, I officiated in Trinity Church. The Rev. Dr. Nevin, who built that beautiful edifice (whose rector is now Dr. Walter Lowrie, whom I knew during the year he spent in New York in charge of Calvary Church), came of a family from this part of the world, and Miss Blanche Nevin left a number of artistic memorials in the town of Lancaster. She lived at a historic old place near Churchtown, where we have a church a century or two old. Ethelbery Nevin, the musician, was of the same family. To the Northwest of Churchtown, a few miles, is historic Ephrata, where two hundred years ago German Baptists built a Brothers' House and a Sisters' House and lived the monastic life. Practically monks and nuns, although Baptists, they made by hand nearly everything they used. The houses were roofed with a sort of thatch and mud. Three stories and an attic characterized the Sisters' House. Near the houses, the State of Pennsylvania has erected a monument commemorating the burial place of a large number of American soldiers who died in the Revolutionary War, many of whom had been nursed and befriended by these monks and nuns. West of Ephrata is Lititz, where the Moravians have had a settlement for a century or two. West of Lititz is Manheim, where we have a church, and where lives the Rev. Azael Coates, who is rector, also, of the church at Mt. Hope. Three times have I been out to Mt. Hope, where there is the beautiful historic dwelling of the Grubb family. From the Conewago Indians Peter Grubb leased the use of the red dirt "as long as the grass grows and the water flows". The red dirt is filled with iron. Cannons for Washington's army in the Revolutionary War were made out the iron from this same red dirt.

South of Cornwall, and Lebanon, and the iron region, lies Elizabethtown, on the Harrisburg pike, where English Episcopalians settled, and southward, Donegal, settled by the Scotch-Irish. One feels like saying in Lancaster and in Lancaster County what St. Paul said to the Athenians: "I perceive that ye are very religious." And then one thinks of Manning and Brent and the rest at Lausanne, and ponders on the seventeenth chapter of St. John, or of St. Paul's plea: "There is one body, and one spirit, and one hope."

Yesterday I saw the biggest dam I ever saw, at Conewingo, across the Susquehana. A vast valley will be flooded with the pent-up waters and that mysterious force of which Franklin and Edison have said man knows so little, will flood Philadelphia and other places with light, and other manifestations of energy.

But a greater dam was once erected amid the surging waters of men's lust and greed and hate. It was the character and the claims of Jesus Christ. From it a mysterious force has flooded the world. Five hundred millions and more feel the weight and the might of this immeasurable power. A million spires attest its reality. Every discovery of modern science was made possible by the light that emanated from it. The very universe itself acknowledges the sway of its potency. It is the greatest, the highest, the most immutable force known to intelligence. It is the love of God, which was revealed in Jesus Christ our Lord!

Rt. Rev. Robert C. Jett. D. D., Bishop.

Dr. Ward Recovered.

It is with the greatest pleasure we announce that the Rev. E. H. Ward, D. D., has regained his health and resumed his work as rector of St. Luke's Church, Hot Springs.

Dr. Ward suffered quite a severe illness last March and it became necessary for him to be away from his parish a great deal of the time since then, recuperating at Atlantic City and other points.

Collect for Tenth Sunday After Trinity.

Let Thy merciful ears, O Lord, be open to the prayers of Thy humble servants, and, that they may obtain their petitions; make them to ask such things as shall please Thee; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Collect for St. Bartholomew's Day.

O Almighty and Everlasting God, Who didst give to Thine Apostle Bartholomew grace truly to believe and to preach Thy Word; Grant, we beseech Thee, unto Thy Church, to love that Word which he believed, and both to preach and to receive the same; through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Shout For the Battle, David!

Sorrow of saints is sorrow of a day,
Gladness of saints is gladness evermore:
Send on thy hope, send on thy will before
To chant God's praise along the narrow way.
Stir up His praises if the flesh would sway,
Exalt His praises if the world press sore,
Peal out His praises if black Satan roar.

A hundred thousand lies to say them nay.
Devil and Death and Hades, threefold cord
Not quickly broken front thee to thy face;
Front thou them with a face of tenfold flint,
Shout for the battle David! never stint
Body, or breath or blood but proof in grace,
Die for thy Lord, as once thy Lord for Thee.

Christian Unity.

Part Two.

I know how easy it is to generalize. I think it is one of the most facile and most fascinating and most fatal of all intellectual practices. We have done a lot of generalizing in connection with the matter of unity. It is such an easy thing for men to generalize and say, "Oh, what is the use of creeds; there is no relation between creeds and actual life". Now, need I take time to show the fallacy of any generalization? I do not think I do need to do it. If I wanted a very practical illustration to show what an intimate relationship there is between creeds—I do not say faith, but between creeds and works, I would simply point to the recent conference held in Stockholm on "Life and Work". Time and again we had to remind ourselves that we were not dealing with the theoretical side of religion, but with the practical side, and one chief reason why such small results—small compared with what we hoped for—came from that conference, was because when we would approach some practical question, we would find that lying behind it there was some divergence of thought in relation to the person of Christ on which we could not reach a common practical conclusion; and so the great Christian ethic remains undiscovered.

I have in a very feeble way given you some conception at least of what I mean by Christian unity—that it must not be limited; that it must be something so tremendous as to lie above and beyond all concrete conceptions that we may be able to give it; that we must include the whole of the Christian Church.

How are we to reach unity? This Christian Unity foundation is an illustration of the method—by research and by conference. I was quite impressed in reading Colonel House's letter, to find how simply he approached his plan to unify Europe. I think that he expressed himself in some such way as this, that he saw no reason why the affairs of the nations should not be dealt with in just the same way that private people dealt with their personal matters, in other words, by personal touch.

There is no other way, and so we are living in a day of conference, conference rather than controversey. I myself have seen little value come out of controversy, whereas I have seen much good come out of personal contact and fellowship of conference.

In controversy you try to impress upon those whom you are opposing, your own judgment and your own ideas. You are out for war and out to win the war; whereas in conference, you are anxious to get sympathetic understanding of the other man's viewpoint, in order that you may reconcile your views, if possible, with his. I have been in many conferences, so-called, but comparatively few have recognized the true meaning of conference. There was the old controversial tone, the old desire to make your own position so strong and so clear that you would sweep everybody else off his feet; whereas, of course, the true position in a conference is a receptive position, a position where your ears are open for anything that you can find that will bring out the strength of those with whom you disagree. That is good tactics anyway. Many a great general has won his war because he has given due credit to the generals opposing him for the strength that they possess. Human conceit is so common that we are apt to match what we believe to be our strength against all the strength that any other bodies may present, but in conference one must endeavor to get the spirit of humility, to remember that we are all seeking for the one end, and to try to find just where the spirit of God is, in order that we may establish contacts.

If we are going to have an effective conference, I believe we must popularize this movement—World Conference on Faith and Order. As my experience tells me, it is not the clergy who are the ultra-conservatives; it is the laity, and they are ultra-conservative because in large measure they have never been taught. Take the average minister of a congregation. He is cramped in his life. He is left too much alone, and consequently his people are not enlightened as to many great movements, such as the one we are now considering. I wish that every commission of every church that is entering into the Conference on Faith and Order could appoint one person who, between now and the time of the conference would give the whole of his time, going up and down the country, among the various congregations, teaching the people just what we are after, what our ideal is, and what our method is to be.

Like everything else that is worth while, it means hard digging and hard work, and we must be prepared for it. I hope I am not unduly criticising my own fellow countrymen when I say that our temptation, at any rate, is to cling to ideals as long as they do not present great difficulties, but the moment they do, we are apt to drop them like hot potatoes, and I could mention in the past eight years quite a number of political movements where the ideal came from America, was accepted by people abroad, and then America dropped the whole matter. I hope that is not characteristic of us. I think that we are a people who are very quick to catch a vision, but my experience in the last eight years has made me very doubtful whether we are able to retain that vision, and to stick to the hard work that is necessitated if we are going to put the vision into practical effect.

If all the churches believe in Christ, why cannot they stand together and proclaim Christ with a common voice? It is because they think so differently and as a result this dreadful thing has happened to Christianity. Instead of Christianizing the nations, the nations have nationalized Christianity, and Christianity today has relatively small influence in the nation. Indeed, the nation is ready at any moment to lay down terms for all Christians to obey, without regard as to what the Christian ethic may be on that subject, and I say now as I said in Stockholm, I would just as soon burn incense to an ancient Caesar as I would to a modern state, and I will never burn incense to a modern state. Until there is a living unity of Christianity, the nations of the world cannot walk in the light of God's Kingdom—that is the amount of it. We can do as a great many people seem to think it is the sole duty of Christianity to do; we can win individuals here and there to a belief in Christ. We can create some small-sized saints. But we cannot mould or shape according to the Christian ethic the life of a country, and if I read Scripture aright it was that very thing that Christ enjoined upon His disciples before He ascended into Heaven—that they were to go and convert the nations, until the nations of the world became the Kingdom of the Lord—Bishop Charles Brent.

Ideals in the Making.

Easy it is for the young generation to catch from their elders, the prejudices, the bigotries, the closed minds which make the business of moral progress for mankind so needlessly hard. Sad as it is to see the adult mind shut forever against penetration by any more liberal outlook, it is sadder to see this attitude passed on to the young.

Though many of the most carefully prepared lessons bring little result, nevertheless, what good effects do come from them are eminently worth the effort. Each one of us, perhaps, can recall some word which at some time or other helped him. It may have been a formal address or sermon; it may have been a simple conversation; it may have been a book which did exercise an influence upon our acting and thinking.

The essential thing is for father and mother to reach an understanding about the kind of morals they want their young people to take into their lives. Consider how much good or ill children learn from one another and from grown-ups, consciously, or otherwise. On every hand they are being taught what it might be better for them not to be told. The real problem is not how the child is to be taught but who is to do the teaching.

Much can be done by sensible parents to hold up the ideals of the better modes of sex relationship and to point to the fallacies in the popular theories of individualism and self-expression. The leading thought should be that some day the young people are going to know the finer experiences of marriage and parenthood and that they should be prepared for the true comradeship by practicing the reserves which characterize every fine-grained nature.

Some day the young people are going to college. Their experience may be mixed or of little important benefit, or, on the other hand, they may be of permanent good. Everything depends upon what they come prepared to find. What they seek out for themselves can be considerably influenced by what their parents make interesting to them.—Dr. Henry Neumann, in "Children, The Magazine for Parents".

Whisperings.

Helen Bayley Davis.

Oh, to walk the road at dusk,
Under a pale, spring sky,
With a slim moon, white as a silver tusk,
Mounting high—high!

To sleep beneath a wild plum tree
Whose petals, frail as lace,
Flutter and lightly fall on me,
Covering my face.

Oh, to lave in the cool, wet grass,
To thrust my hand in the soil . . .
The open road is not mine, alas,
I must toil!

But every day on my window-sill,
A pigeon comes to rest,
Bringing me tints of the sky, a hill,
And dawn on his breast.

The Foundation of Our Christian Life.

Faith! Hope! Love! What tremendous words! How much bigger they are than any definition! For the deeper experiences of the soul cannot be confined within the shell of language. Even St. Paul, who in opposition to the Judaistic claim that circumcision was necessary for salvation, developed his doctrine of justification by faith, nowhere attempts exactly to define that great word. Usually with St. Paul faith is the life of Christ in us, and is equivalent to our becoming partners in Christ's overcoming energies. Faith to St. Paul is being baptized with Christ, suffering, dying, and rising again with Him. Therefore, St. Paul is able to say, "Yet I live, and yet no longer I, but Christ liveth in me: and that life which now I live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself up for me". (Gal. 2:20.) In this view of faith, as the spiritual union of the soul with Christ, St. Paul was followed by St. John; both these noble mystics teaching that faith is Christ within us leading us by His Spirit.

There is another great aspect of faith. As we study our Lord's teaching and life we perceive that Jesus habitually looks upon faith as a deed, a great and courageous venture—the venture upon God. To Jesus faith means to act on the assumption that God guides, cares, and works for the best. As Dr. F. R. Horton puts it, "Faith is the fling of the soul on the Unseen Power from whom the soul came".

To the Christian, life is largely an act of faith. Convinced that God is in events making things work out for good, he acts on the conviction that there can be no ultimate failure for anything that is in harmony with God's will. So he goes forward never wavering, never despairing, a man of faith.

Hope! Another great word that no definition can unlock. Hope is the twin brother of faith, and is so like it in many respects that they can hardly be told apart. Hope is that buoyant gift from God without which many lives would know nothing but tragedy. Profoundly sensitive though the Christian must be to all the woes and ills of our time, weighed down by griefs and burdens that are almost too many for us, it is possible to keep a corner of unwrinkled serenity in our hearts where hope may take up its lodging. Thence comes the saving sense of humor and the perception of what is comical even in the rough and the hardness of the daily toil. Thence comes laughter, not a smothered laughter, but a laugh of the whole man from head to heel. No adversity can triumph over this mighty hope. "The only thing to do when it is raining is to let it rain," and to think often of the sunshine that will soon be out again. For to fret during a storm is to unfit oneself for the duties that throng upon one when the clouds have passed away. So radiant hope will comfort us in the midst of anxiety by the thought, "This also will pass, and in the meantime God gives me courage to be cheerful".

Love! The greatest word of all! Greatest because love is the mother of both faith and hope! Greatest because God is love! A tremendous thought! A tremendous word!

Christianity proclaims the supremacy of the love that seeketh no selfish reward or honor, that knows no arrogant pride and withholds from others no word of praise, a noble, generous forgiving love that neither the bitterness nor scorn of opponents can change to prejudice or hatred.

"If I have all the gifts of a revivalist and have not love, I am merely a braying trumpet, or the clapper of a bell. Though I am a preacher and know all God's secrets, and all the theology there is, and though I believe in God so much that I can remove mountains, but have not love, I do not count. Though I spend all my income on philanthropy, though I am ready even for the stake, but have not love, there is nothing in it. Love does not take offense, is always trying to do good turns to others. Love is not jealous, does not swagger, does not stand on its dignity, always behaves like a gentleman, never plays for its own hand, does not get peevish, sees the best in others, always champions the other dog, is glad when other people find the truth, never loses courage, never loses faith, never loses hope, always sees it through to the end. Love never lets you down. If it is sermons, they will be out of date; if it is emotionalism, it will stop; if it is theology, it will be superseded . . . . These are the three things which stand the test: faith, hope and love, but the biggest of these is love."

To live in love—that is the Christian aim. Although the assassin's bullet or the cruel cross is often the reward which humanity offers her heroes and her saviours, although love sometimes seems mutely helpless before injustice and cruelty, faith and hope know that finally love must triumph and that he who builds on love's foundation erects an imperishable structure. For love, like God, is eternal.—Canadian Churchman.

The Skeptics.

Louis Deschamps.

The skeptics are the trouble-makers between two friendly neighbors, religion and science. The true scientist is religious because he studies reverently. The truly pious person is not hostile to science because his faith is so real that facts are acceptable, and theories known as such. But philosophy has been seized by shallow minds resembling drunken troopers pillaging an art gallery, and skepticism is the name given to their jeers. The skeptics are the disgruntled losers in the philosophical race. They indulge the easy manner of savants to conceal their disgust at finding nothing worth while in their own personal experience. To refuse to believe anything may be the result of trying to believe everything. Belief is more than intellectual—it is the product of experience. Some people have such sheltered lives of ease that the verities of life are mere formulas, rather than deep personal convictions. To question is to seek truth, but skeptic defies truth from a preconceived attitude of self-satisfied negation. Skepticism is intellectual sensuality. The mind is sated with intoxicating thoughts of egotism until the sneer of discomfort becomes habitual. Skeptics shrewdly exploit our human frailties by the dread lash of ridicule, or the subtle power of sham.

As I Love Curlews.

Julia Walcott Cockcroft.

All day the surf's been diligent
In beating hard the sand
Where now, the pensive curlews come
To think a while, and stand
In waters spread so silvery thin
I think the sea must care,
That twilight brings sandpipers down,
And love to have them there.

One now I see—a silhouette
In sun's dull westering,
I'm sure is thinking sweetly of
Some tender, birdly thing.
Last eve I saw him flying low
And heard him softly call.
Oh! can it be, for these dear birds
This world's the end—and all?

For the Young Folks

Loveliness.

Once I knew a little girl,
Very plain;
You might try her hair to curl
All in vain;
On her cheek no tints of rose
Paled and blushed, or sought repose;
She was plain.

But the thoughts that through her brain
Came and went,
As a recompense for pain,
Angels sent;
So full many a beauteous thing,
In her young soul blossoming,
Gave content.

Every thought was full of grace,
Pure and true;
And in time the homely face
Lovelier grew;
With a heavenly radiance bright
From the soul's reflected light
Shining through.

So I tell you, little child,
Plain or poor,
If your thoughts are undefiled,
You are sure
Of the loveliness of worth;
And this beauty not of earth
Will endure.

—Maria Locey, in St. Nicholas.

LITTLE TALKS ABOUT THE BEST FRIEND.

Jesus as a Guest.

M. L. G.

Our Lord Jesus seems to have loved a gathering of friends. In His parables he used the marriage feast to express the meeting of God with His people. The Shepherd who brings home the lost sheep, the woman who finds her coin, call their friends and neighbors together to rejoice with them; the Father prepares a feast in his joy on the return of the Prodigal.

We have no recorded instance where Jesus declined to break bread wherever He was asked, whether with the condescending and half-scornful Pharisee, or with publicans and sinners. He blessed with His presence the house of Zaccheus the hated as well as that of His friends in Bethany. He did not demand a feast. "Only one thing is needed," He gently told Martha, who fretted because Mary would not leave His talk for the table.

Yet a feast it must have been whenever Jesus was present. To hear His voice in blessing, to see His hands break bread, was enough to assure the bewildered disciples at Emmaus that their Guest was indeed the Lord. The table talk turned to heavenly things. Some of the greatest of His sayings were fragments of conversation at table. Even the discourtesy of His host when He dined at the house of Simon the Pharisee was turned to good account, and Judas' grumbling at the use of Mary's ointment.

Let us learn to think of Jesus as much in our pleasures as in our cares. Turn from any pleasure seeking that we know to be unworthy of His friends. Be generous and unselfish in sharing our good times, and remember that He is as truly with us in our happiness as in our sadness, and like any good friend the Best Friend knows how to rejoice with those that do rejoice.

In Old Mr. Mallard's Shop.

"Be careful of the little ship, Marjorie, it's very fragile and I wouldn't have it broken for anything. I've had it ever since I was a little girl about your age, and I've taken it with me everywhere I've been."

"Yes, I will, grandma. I love it, it's so darling. But where did you get it?"

"Why, haven't I ever told you about my ship and old Mr. Mallard who carved it for me? I thought you knew all about that."

"No, but I wish you'd tell me now."

"Very well, dear. It isn't because the little ship is valuable in itself that I treasure it so, but it's the only thing I have left from my childhood. And whenever I look at it I have such happy memories of those days when I lived with my father and mother and brothers and sisters in the big yellow house at Lancaster, that it means a great deal to me."

"And are you the only one of them living now?"

"Yes, but I have my children and grandchildren, and that's a lot to be thankful for. You remember I've told you I was the youngest in our family. There was one sister named Margaret and another, Anne, and my brothers were Albert, John and George. We all played together and had great times with the other children who lived in the neighborhood. Sometimes, though the older girls didn't want me with them and would try every way they could to get rid of me."

"Oh, I know what you mean, grandma. I'm the youngest in our family too."

"Well, one day when we girls were together and they didn't want me any longer, they tried everything they could think of to get me to leave them, but I just wouldn't budge an inch and they got so angry they didn't know what to do. Finally Margaret—she was the oldest of all—looked up the road where we were playing, and pointing to some one who was coming down, cried out, "Oh, girls, run, as fast as you can! Here comes a Gipsy"!

"Now, that one word 'Gipsy' was enough to make me run like the wind. For I was always a timid child, and there was nothing in the world I was so afraid of as Gipsies."

"Why, what do you mean, grandma?"

"Well, of course, Gipsies don't mean anything to you, living in a big city the way you do, and they're not nearly so common now anywhere as they used to be. But years ago in the country these people, dark-skinned, dark-haired men and women, in picturesque clothes, wandered about from town to town, living in tents, telling fortunes, and selling baskets and other things that they made."

"As I was saying, as soon as Margaret said 'Gipsy' I started running, so fast that nothing could have stopped me, and I never looked behind me to see who was following. I knew I wasn't going in the direction of home, but the next best place was old Mallard's shop and toward that I went and didn't stop until I fell down on his steps all out of breath."

"But who was Mr. Mallard and what kind of shop did he have?"

"Oh, he was the dearest old man that ever lived, and next to our own fathers we children of the neighborhood loved him best, and I especially. He was a carpenter by trade and had a little low shop where he made doors and blinds and pieces of furniture. It was fascinating to watch him at his work, and we used to like to take the long shavings from the wood he was planing, and play they were curls. He could tell the most wonderful stories and on rainy days we'd all collect there and listen as long as he was willing to talk. I can remember some of his stories even now."

"Will you tell them to me?"

"Some day, perhaps, when there's more time, but I shall have to help your mother after I finish this story. Just as I fell down on his steps Mr. Mallard came to the door and seeing me lying there said: 'Why, Clarissa Bartol, what ever is the matter with you? Come up here and tell me all about it'.

"As soon as I could get my breath I began talking, and as he looked up the road, he said: 'Why, I don't see any Gipsies and the girls have disappeared, too. There's old Mrs. Longley coming down this way with a basket on her arm. Perhaps Margaret thought she was a Gipsy, but I'm rather inclined to think she wanted to frighten you so you'd run away and leave her and the older girls to play by themselves. Wasn't very nice of her, though, was it? Now you come right into the shop and we'll see if we can find something pleasant to do'."

"But was it a real Gipsy?"

"No, it was, as he said, just Margaret's way of scaring me to get rid of me, as she admitted afterwards when mother asked her about it. But once I was in the shop with my good friend I forgot all about the Gipsies and Margaret and everything else but what he was saying to me. 'How would you like me to carve you something?' he began. 'I've got some nice new soft wood that's just the thing. What shall it be?'

"I didn't know what to answer him, so after a little he said, 'How about a little ship like the one I was telling you of last week that I crossed the Atlantic in when I was a boy? Maybe I can's finish it today—but I can start it'.

"So he took out his jack-knife and a smooth piece of white wood and began whittling. I sat up on a high bench watching him, and as he worked he talked and told me of his home in England and his family and the good times they used to have together. The minutes passed so quickly that I didn't realize the morning had gone until my brother John stood in the doorway and said he had come to take me home for dinner."

"But how did he know you were there?"

"Oh, all the family always knew I was at the shop if they couldn't find me anywhere else. I didn't want to leave Mr. Mallard or the little ship that was almost finished, but the old man said he couldn't spend any more time on it that day as there was work he must do. But he promised that as soon as he could, maybe that night, he'd varnish it and make the sails and in a day or so it would be ready for me to take home and put with my other toys. Children those days didn't have as many as you do now, and so I think we treasured them a great deal more. I know I did that little ship."

"I don't wonder, grandma, it's so lovely. But how did he ever make it so perfect? It's exactly like a big ship."

"Oh, he was a real artist and should have been carving beautiful things in Italy instead of having to be a carpenter in a little New England town. But he was happy at what he was doing, and made everybody else happy, so I guess it was all for the best the way it was. For, after all, happiness is the best thing in the world, isn't it, Marjorie?"

"Yes, grandma, and I'd like to hear more about old Mr. Mallard very soon."

"You shall, dear, and if you're very careful, you may keep the little ship on the bureau in your room as long as you stay here."

"Oh, thank you, that will make me very happy, and that's what you want me to be. I guess that's why you told me this story, isn't it?"

Perhaps so. Now come, we must help your mother get supper."—Gertrude F. Scott.

A Song for Being Busy.

If you were busy being kind,
Before you know it, you would find
You'd soon forget to think 'twas true
That some one was unkind to you.

If you were busy being glad,
And cheering people who were sad,
Although your heart might ache a bit,
You'd soon forget to notice it.

If you were busy being good,
And doing just the best you could,
You'd not have time to blame some man
Who's doing just the best he can.

If you were busy being true
To what you know you ought to do,
You'd be so busy you'd forget
The blunders of the folks you met.

If you were busy being right,
You'd find yourself too busy, quite,
To criticize your neighbor long,
Because he's busy doing wrong.

Jolly Mr. Wind.

"I don't like the wind!" cried Betty, as she lay in her little bed, waiting for her nap to come along, while she listened to the wind "woohing" about the house.

"You don't!" said a weenty voice that sounded so like a chime of bells that Betty sat right up in bed, to see a dear little Butterfly Fairy teetering on the brass bedpost.

"No," she repeated, "I don't like it. It rattles the windows and makes the trees squeak. I wish it would never blow. I don't see what it's good for!"

"Dear me!" cried the Fairy. "Come!" And in a moment Betty found she, too, was a Butterfly Fairy with silvery wings floating far away.

"See that boy crying?" asked the Fairy. "His kite won't fly. You didn't like the wind and it stopped blowing."

"It's a beautiful kite," said Betty. "Looks like a bird."

"Yes, his uncle sent it from Japan."

"I wish the wind would blow. I'd like to see it fly."

"You would?" asked the Fairy. "Then watch."

The fairy wand swept the air, the wind began to blow, the bird kite spread its wings and soared higher and higher, while the boy shouted with joyous laughter.

"It's a lovely game," said Betty. "Show me some more things the wind can do."

Betty and the Fairy floated on, and presently paused above a group of children gazing sadly at some wee boats lazily rocking at the end of a stream.

"How unhappy they look," said Betty.

"Yes, they are very poor and have few toys. Their father carved them each a little boat; the mother made the sails. Today they were to celebrate a birthday by sailing them, but a certain little girl didn't like the wind, and it stopped blowing."

"Oh, make it blow. I'd love to see the boats sail!" cried Betty, and in a moment the wind began to whistle its merry tune, the sails filled, and the boats glided along so fast that the boys had to run while they held tight to the strings lest the boats sail far from shore."

"Don't they look pretty!" cried Betty. "Just like sea gulls."

"Indeed they do; but we must be off."

As they floated above a certain village, Betty exclaimed, "Oh, how untidy it is!"

"Yes, because you didn't want the wind to blow. The wind has a fine broom and tidies up the world as nothing else can."

"Let it sweep the streets. I'd love to see it," said Betty.

"The wind is a cheery body. It always sings as it works," said the Fairy, and they listened to its song while it swished its great broom about, sweeping the dust and papers in a swirling mass far away, leaving the village streets as clean as a whistle.

"Isn't it lovely!" cried Betty, clapping her hands. "I didn't know it could really sweep."

"There is no end to the things it can do. Come over here where you can see that line full of soggy wet clothes. If the wind could blow for a while they would quickly dry, and that little mother could take them in and sprinkle them ready for tomorrow's ironing. If it doesn't blow, her work will go wrong all the week, and then she just can't take the children to the circus Saturday."

"Let it blow!" cried Betty, and in a moment the clothes were gayly flapping in the breeze, while Betty watched, amazed to see how fast they were drying.

"See that flag!" she said presently, as they sped onward. "Doesn't it look beautiful fluttering so gayly."

"Of course, but it's the wind that tosses its colors about; and see the clouds, they look like a flock of sheep tumbling around on the blue sky; and do you see that splendid gold rooster on that barn? You can almost hear him crying, 'Cock-a-doodle-do, the wind and I show you when to plant your grain and what to do today because tomorrow it will rain'! It is most important for the farmers to know what the weather is to be, and the wind tells them as the rooster rides on his merry-go-round. In Holland almost everything is done by the windmills. If the wind didn't blow Holland would be sad indeed."

"I wish I could see the wind," said Betty. "He is so splendid."

"That's one reason why he is so splendid, because you can't see him. I want to show you one more beautiful thing the wind can do. It can play beautiful music, the sweetest you can imagine. Come."

Wonderingly Betty followed, to see presently a dear little boy sitting on a porch near a window in which was placed an aeolian harp. The child sat patiently waiting, with such a wistful little face that Betty asked, "Why is he so sad"?

"He can not see the beautiful world. Some one gave him this harp, but it can not play unless the wind blows. Listen!"

"I don't wonder that he wanted to hear it," said Betty. "I never heard such beautiful music!"

They listened for a while to the harmony breathed forth from the wind-swept strings. Then Betty found the music had done its work; the boy was asleep with such a smile of peace and joy that she whispered gently: "I love the wind. I hope it will always blow. I love to feel it kissing my cheeks, and I am so glad I know about it."

"Of course you are. He is one of the busiest of Mother Nature's children—a jolly rollicking fellow, and we just couldn't get along without him."

As the Fairy talked they were floating towards home, and soon Betty found herself snuggled in her little bed listening to the "wooh-ing" sounds.

"It 'ha ha ha's' every time it does one of those splendid things; and now it's singing me to sleep," she murmured as the drowsy eyes closed and the wind song grew more and more gentle and finally died away.—Storyteller's Magazine.

In the Rose Garden.

Nina was out in the garden one bright morning—the beautiful rose garden with many colors and kinds of roses blooming everywhere, and the long, white path that led under arches and past drooping bushes up to the great house. Nina had thought it the prettiest and most wonderful place in the world when she first came with her mother to stay at Uncle Anson's, but she was growing tired of it now.

"There's nothing to do, and nobody to talk to," she said this morning, as she walked up and down. "I'm tired of just roses."

"Oh-h! I wouldn't ever be tired of 'em!" said a small voice near her.

Nina turned quickly, and there, looking over the gate, was the little, round face of a boy.

"Why, where did you come from?" asked Nina in surprise.

"From home—'way down the road," answered the boy. "I come here 'most every day to see the roses, and then I go home and tell mother 'bout 'em. You see she has to make the sewing-machine go all the time, so she can't come herself, but she says it rests her to hear about 'em—bushels and bushels of 'em and the green grass. She says when I tell her about them she can 'most see and smell 'em."

"Well!" said Nina, wondering at that way of enjoying roses. "Didn't you ever take any home? Of course you couldn't, though, unless— Wait a minute and I'll get you some. Yes, I can," she added quickly, as the little boy seemed half frightened. "Nobody cares how many I pick."

Pink roses, white roses, great crimson roses and yellow roses—Nina picked all kinds to fill the eager hands held out for them. "I want your mother to see them all," she said, "and tomorrow there'll be fresh ones for you—I'll ask uncle's housekeeper, though I know it's all right—so you must be sure to come."

Nina watched every day for her lit-

COMMON SENSE

After all success and financial independence and the worth while things are due to an exercise of common sense, not genius nor luck.

All nature gives us examples of saving. Reasoning people select a safe place and save just like bees and animals.

Such a place to save is the American's Income Building Plan, particularly as it yields a larger return counts (6 per cent on units than ordinary saving ac- of $100.00) and is secured by first mortgages on improved real estate.

tle visitor, and they grew to be good friends.

"They don't wither all in one day," said the boy, touching the pretty leaves lovingly, "so my mother divides 'em into smaller bunches and gives 'em to folks that don't have any. My, but there's one poor, lame girl that's glad to get them! Mother says that's what we ought to do with things—pass 'em on."

Nina went slowly into the house that day busy with a new thought.

"Mrs. Harris, don't you think I might tie up some roses every day when we drive into town, and give to the children we see in the street?" she asked the housekeeper. "When people have good things they ought to pass them on, don't you think?"

"Bless the girl!" laughed the housekeeper. "Yes, indeed, honey, do it. It'll be good for the roses, good for the children and good for you."

In that way Nina found a flower path to new friends and something to do.—Ruth Cody.

From an "Eye Witness in Korea":

"The southern part of Korea is almost inundated with lepers, and at the present time there are three large leper asylums supported by the mission to lepers I had the privilege of visiting two of them.

"It is a sad sight, but wonderful spiritual blessing has been manifested amongst the lepers and by far the larger number of the patients are truly converted. Directly one is converted, he seeks to lead his companions to Christ.

On my way out to one of the asylums, there met us a little girl of some twelve years of age, who kept falling down before us and trying to kiss our clothes, begging to be taken in. She was a leper.

"It is the hardest duty of the superintendents to refuse cases because there is no room! The girl followed us all along the road, crying aloud.

"We inquired into her history and found that her father was an inmate—a leper; where the mother was nobody knew. The girl was alone and had been sleeping for months anywhere she could find a corner.

"It so happened that one patient had left that day, so there was room for just one, and it was most touching to see the joy of the father and especially the little maid when she was told that she could come in for treatment.

"Chaulmooga Oil is the chief medicine used as an injection, and the results are wonderful. The disease is stayed and the patients are enabled to leave the asylums, so far as one can see, to all intents and purposes, cured; although it is only time that can prove whether the cure is permanent.

"The greatest joy is that most of the cases leave to be witnesses for Christ."

Deaths

RATHBONE: Died, suddenly, July 29, 1927, at Lausanne, Switzerland, KATHERINE McKIM RATHBONE, wife of Henry G. Rathbone, of Liverpool, and oldest daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Randolph H. McKim, of Washington, D. C.

MRS. CHARLES S. McNULTY.

Died, in Roanoke, on Monday, August 1, 1927, in the 48th year of her life, ANNA AYLETT McNULTY, wife of Charles S. McNulty and daughter of Major and Mrs. William A. Anderson, of Lexington, Va. Burial was in the Lexington Cemetery on Wednesday, August 3d. She leaves five children, Frances, Anne, William, Mary Louise and Charles.

Her death was sudden and the news of it was a shock to the community and her friends everywhere.

Mrs. McNulty was of unusual charm; a splendid well furnished mind, a character of marvellous sweetness and force. The testimony of those who have always known her intimately is that in childhood, girlhood, young womanhood and maturity she ever showed sweet, loving consideration to all; sympathetic, kindly attention to parents and elders; always interested and active in things worth while and was an unconscious guide for companions toward the higher reaches of life and happiness. She loved her church and was a force in the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

Her life shone brightest as wife and mother, her home reflected her beautiful spirit and she was always gracious and tender in her family and with her large circle of friends. Her loss is great and the consolation is that she has been taken to the glory of Life Everlasting.

A large family connection and many loving friends stood with aching hearts and bowed heads as the body was committed to the earth according to the sacred rites of the Church, and the hymn, "Peace, Perfect Peace", was sung.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

CHURCH INTELLIGENCE

Mr. Franklin to Visit the Diocese.

Mr. Lewis B. Franklin, Vice-President and Treasurer of the National Council, has consented to come to Southwestern Virginia for a series of conferences with vestries in September, the discussions to center around the general work of the Church at home and abroad.

According to present plans the arrangement of the conferences will be as follows:

On Friday, September 16, Mr. Franklin will be guest of honor at a supper in Staunton, at which will be present the members of the vestries and men's clubs of the two Staunton churches and of St. John's at Waynesboro and, it is hoped, Churchmen from other nearby places.

On Saturday, the seventeenth, there will be a similar supper with the vestrymen and men's clubs of the two Lynchburg churches and adjacent parishes.

On Sunday, the eighteenth, Mr. Franklin will address the congregation of St. John's Church, Roanoke, at the Morning Service, conduct an afternoon conference with the Churchmen of Roanoke and Salem and, at the Evening Service, speak in Christ Church.

At these conferences it will be possible for a large proportion of the men in this Diocese to meet and hear Mr. Franklin and discuss with him the various problems in the missionary work of the Church.

A Sunday-School Class Goes Camping.

During the last week in June Mrs. T. Boyd Brown, a teacher in the Sunday School at St. John's, Wytheville, took her class for a camping trip on the Newberry farm, near Kent Station, East of Wytheville. The outing was greatly enjoyed by the members of the class and a number of their friends.

The Rev. Devall L. Gwathmey, rector of St. John's, held a preaching mission at Grace Mission, Appalachia, in July. On the Sunday he was away from his own church the Rev. J. Haller Gibboney, Jr., conducted the Morning Service at St. John's. In the evening Mr. Otto Simmerman made a report to the Young People's Society on the Summer School at Sweet Briar, which he had attended as the representative of the Society.

The last Friday in July the members of St. John's Sunday School enjoyed their annual picnic at "The Turn Hole" on the Lee Highway, west of Wytheville.

WASHINGTON.

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop.

Two Episcopal clergymen, who have been the preachers recently at the open air services at Temple Heights, held on Sunday afternoons, are the Rev. E. Pinkney Wroth, rector of Christ Church, Georgetown, and the Rev. Clyde Brown, rector of the church at Woodside, Md. Temple Heights is located at the intersection of Florida Avenue and Connecticut Avenue, and the services are under the general direction of Rev. John C. Palmer, Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Order. Ministers of the different denominations are invited each Sunday to preach.

The preacher at the open-air service, Washington Cathedral, on Sunday afternoon, August 14, was the Rev. A. Gayner Banks, Director of the Society of the Nazarene.

The meeting of the Diocesan Pageant and Drama Society of Washington, which was to have been held recently at the residence of Mrs. Marie Moore Forest, on Seminary Hill, Alexandria, when the members were invited to have luncheon and spend the day, has been postponed until further notice. This Society is planning intensive work during the coming year in preparation for the General Convention of the Church to be held in Washington, October, 1928.

The Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Parish, is spending his vacation in camp in the Shenandoah Valley with the Rev. Giles B. Palmer, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Westhampton, Richmond, Va.

The Rev. James H. W. Blake, rector-emeritus of Christ Church, Georgetown, and Mrs. Blake, are visiting their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Vinton Blake in Akron, Ohio.

LONG ISLAND.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Stires, D. D., Bishop.

The Bishop of Long Island has been devoting the summer Sundays to the large summer communities on Long Island. On June 26 he visited Trinity Church, Greenport, and confirmed forty persons. On the following Sunday, July 3, he celebrated the Holy Communion and preached in St. Andrew's Dune Church in Southampton. Here, in the course of his sermon, he called attention to the large number of rapidly-developing communities on Long Island, especially in Queens, and asked the members of the congregation to consider, as they looked over the square miles of standardized houses with no church spires arising in their midst, whether that significant fact did not challenge their Christianity and their patriotism. A member of the congregation wrote an article describing the effect of this statement and the Bishop's appeal, which was printed in four or five of the larger New York papers, and in thirty or more papers of Brooklyn and Long Island. One result of that sermon and of the publicity which was given to it has been the setting aside in at least a dozen communities of desirable sites for new churches.

On July 17 the Bishop preached in the morning at Bridgehampton, in the afternoon at Hampton Bays, and at night in St. John's Church, Southampton, where he confirmed forty persons.

On Sunday, July 24, Bishop Stires preached in Quoyne, greeted here as in all the other summer communities by a congregation which filled all available space. Again in Quoyne, great interest was expressed in the Bishop's plan for the building of new churches in the new and rapidly-growing communities. He has been assured of strong cooperation in the development of his plans. On Sunday, August 21, the Bishop is to preach in St. James' Church, St. James, L. I.

The Bishop's health is excellent and he declares that the more intimate contact with these large summer congregations has been an encouraging and exhilarating experience. He believes that much good for the Church and the diocese will result.

At St. James' Church, St. James, L. I., of which the eVn. William Holden, D. D., Archdeacon of Suffolk, is the rector, they are making a feature of their Sunday evening services, and to this end are having some notable men as their preachers. On August 14, the Rev. Philip J. Steinmetz, D. D., of Philadelphia, was with them, and on August 21, the Rt. Rev. Frank Cerighton, D. D., Missionary Bishop of Mexico, is expected.

Teh Rev. Samuel C. Fish, rector of St. John's Church, Southampton; St. Ann's, Bridgehampton; St. Mary's, Hampton Bays, and the new mission at Westhampton, all of Long Island, is recovering from the effects of his recent serious fall, in which his arm was broken, and his head badly cut.

Bishop Nicolai, of Jugoslavia ,was the preacher at the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L. I., on Sunday afternoon, August 7.

Personal Notes

The Rev. William Way, D. D., rector of Grace Church, Charleston, S. C., has been elected the director of the American Peace Society for the State of South Carolina. Dr. Way has been President of the New England Society of South Carolina for ten years, and for a time President of the Charleston Rotary Club.

The Art of Living Together.

Unless the world learns the art of living together, the world is not going to get anywhere, either in its thinking or in its doing. We have learned the art of fighting together, either along with each other or fighting against each other, and we have learned the art of dying together. That was done and done remarkably well recently, but the art of living together is much more difficult, and we have not yet learned that art, but we must, or there is no possibility of the world's reaching any goal whatsoever. Where there is the will to dominate on the part of the individual or the nation, it is impossible for people to live together in the right way. Similarly, there is the spirit of self-determination, than which there is no more destructive agent. When each people or each nation takes unto itself the power to live as an isolated, self-determined unit—in that way lies madness; it is but the wedge that will split asunder and destroy the whole world.

Unless the different colors and races learn the art of living together, there is a grave possibility of war, far more terrific than the Great War. If we are to have one goal for one world, then we must have that goal such that every part of the world will be working toward it. When we talk of the white race and all its great achievements, we must remember what the rest of the world has done—that there was a great Chinese nation before we had clothes, and that Japan was a power long before there ever was the Christian religion. We must try to see the best in each other, and not the worst; we must discover the plan of open diplomacy and of meeting together to discuss our differences. There will be sharp differences at first, of course, but out of these will come the art of living together. When we see that in making a world we need the idea of this race, the note of that race, the color of another race, and the civilization of still another race, that we need all to make up the picture, then, and then only, shall we have learned the art, the divine art, of living together.—Archdeacon Fotheringham, in "The Advertiser", London, Ont.

Conversion.

I believe that the explanation of conversion lies in the actual advent of the Spirit of God into the heart of a man, when he opens his heart to God. Conversion is not God's overwhelming of a man without his own consent: there is a human element of cooperation in conversion. We have our own share in our conversion. And it lies in exposing ourselves to God, in going where people believe in God and talk about Him, where religion has achieved the element of contagion. And it lies, deeper still, in one day turning to God with all our hearts in unconditional surrender of our wills. In one sense, a man cannot will his own conversion: but he can fulfill the conditions, he can give himself, and all of himself. He can do what the Prodigal did, he can arise and go to His father and confess his wrong. He can make the surrender of himself. But surrender is not conversion. True conversion is the thing which God does for us, the work of grace in men's souls. You cannot explain the transformations of lives which you may find wherever Christ is preached with power, except upon the basis of a Presence not oneself, the presence of a Great Other, the presence of the Eternal God. No power less strong, less all-comprehensive, can work so mighty a change, and hold us to it through all a subsequent life-time. Utterly without force, with only the pressure of His own love, God makes His entrance "where He can find one humble heart wherein to dwell". What wonder men are driven to call it "the miracle of conversion!"—From Sermon by the Rev. S. M. Shoemaker, Jr.
